On leaving the institution, Doctor Crannell takes from it not only an honored and beloved president, but also the gently honored and beloved superintendent of the women's training school. For many years or more Mrs. Crannell has held that position with an efficiency, a wisdom, and a grace that have brought admiration and affection. She has been at once the spiritual leader, the capable director, the tireless worker, the tender mother. Her resignation brings grief to many.

It is superfluous, perhaps, to give an account of Doctor Crannell's life and activities. Graduating at an early age from Dartmouth college, he served as school principal for several years before receiving the call to the ministry. His preparation for service was made at the Rochester Theological seminary. After three signally successful pastorates, at Baldwinsville, N. Y., Corning, N. Y., and Topeka, Kans., he accepted leadership of the new seminary at Kansas City. The school at that time had a faculty of two full time and two part time teachers, an enrolment of five students, and a single building for its home. He has toiled through the labor and heat of the day, and leaves it now with a faculty of eight full time teachers, five instructors, 114 regular students, and three fine new buildings on a beautiful twenty-acre campus. During all the pressure of seminary work he has continued the writing that has made him and the seminary together nationally and internationally known. Doctor Crannell is the possessor of a mind at once profound and pellucidly clear, blessed with the happy faculty for analysis and condensation and a literary style that is clear, cogent, and beautiful. As exegete, sermonizer, and essayist, he is without superior.

His successor has not been chosen as yet, and until he is found, Dr. B. R. Downer, head of the department of Hebrew and Old Testament, will serve as acting executive.

Berkeley Divinity School Commencement

BERKELEY Baptist Divinity school held its twenty-first commencement May 2-4 in the conscious strength of its attainment of its "majority."

The educational sermon was preached by the Rev. George W. Phillips in the Tenth Avenue church, Oakland, on "The Cosmic Christ." The missionary sermon was preached in the First church, Berkeley, by the Rev. Gordon Palmer, D.D. of the class of 1913 on the theme "The Demand of God and Civilization."

The annual meeting of the board of trustees was held on Monday, May 3, when President Hill reported that the $100,000 campaign was within $21,000 of attainment. The library has been greatly enhanced through the acquisition of the library of the late Rev. Joseph P. Philips through his family. The bequest is to be known as the Rev. Joseph P. Philips Memorial Library. Rev. Sanford Fleming, B.D., M.Th., of the class of 1924, who has just completed a year of graduate study at Yale university was elected to the chair of Church History. Professor Fleming will commence his courses at the opening of the next semester in August.

On Tuesday afternoon, May 4, the San Francisco Bay Cities Union held its conference in connection with the commencement exercises, Rev. Lorentz I. Hansen presiding. Rev. E. L. Spaulding gave a report on "Our Alumni: Their Fields and Work." An address on "Preaching" was delivered by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, D.D., of Boston.

The graduation exercises were held in the first church of Berkeley, Rev. E. A. Hanley, D.D., pastor. The scripture was read by Prof. Henry Topping, M.A., of Yokohama, Japan, and prayer was offered by Prof. George T. Tolson, D.D., professor of Church History in the Pacific School of Religion. The commencement address was delivered by Dr. Herbert S. Johnson on the theme "Shall Christianity Be Superseded?" The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon the Rev. James Whitcomb Brougher, D.D., pastor of the First church of Oakland and the Rev. James S. West, pastor of the First church of San Francisco. The degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon Cecil T. Axworthy, A.B.; Pik Kum Chau, Graves Theological seminary, Canton, China; Harry M. Gromer, A.B.; Arthur W. Johns; Chester U. Strait, A.B.; and Jesse L. Smith, A.B. Three of these are graduates of the University of Redlands and will return for graduate study in the Divinity school next year. The degree was conferred upon Rev. Chester U. Strait "in absentia," owing to his having been called to meet an urgent need in Burma during his senior year. The Rev. Pik Kum Chau, pastor of the Chinese church in San Francisco has accepted the call to the chair of Systematic Theology in the Graves Theological seminary, Canton, China, and will commence his courses in the coming semester. The Berkeley Divinity school is now represented on the foreign field by ten of its former students, nine of whom are graduates.

The twenty-first anniversary was marked by the spirit of grateful satisfaction for the steady development of the school in the growth of its student body, enlarged faculty and increased endowment, and the friends of the school confidently expect that its expansion will speedily be in a position more adequately to meet the rapidly increasing demands of the Pacific Coast states and the calls from the Orient for a highly trained ministry. President Hill is being congratulated upon having led the Divinity school from its inception, sans hasta, sans resta, to a stable position of usefulness with the promise of an expansion adequate to the opportunities and demands for theological education on the Pacific coast.

The Rochester Banquet

BY HENRY B. ROBINS

NO ONE privileged to attend the banquet of the Rochester Theological Seminary, held in the social room of Calvary church on Friday evening of convention week, could fail to be impressed. One could weigh as well as count, for not only were there present many of the outstanding leaders of the denomination, but they were also present to the number of nearly 300—the largest recorded attendance in our history.

President Barbour presided, and our host, Dr. Wm. S. Abernethy, pastor of the Calvary church, bade us cordial welcome. As always, the time available for toasts was but too brief. Yet, within that time there were no less than ten speeches. Doctor Barbour brought the company present down to date on the proposed consolidating of Colgate and Rochester seminaries, making it clear that the future is dependent upon the cordial understanding and support of the alumni of both institutions. Doctor Beaven, president of the board of trustees, went farther into the ideals and purposes which Rochester holds for the future. Professor Robins spoke for the faculty, of whom, besides the president and himself, Mr. Ewell and Professor Wood were present. Doctor Brougher, newly-elected president of the convention, spoke of his task and purpose of denominational conciliation. Rev. Manning E. VanNostrand, president of the alumni association, presented the appreciation which Rochester alumni have of Rochester ideals. Dr. John H. Strong's presence and tender response revived old memories precious to us all. Ambrose Swazey, veteran and victor by faith, cheered us all by his words. Prof. William Allen Wilbur of Washington, old-time friend and classmate of President Barbour, brought felicitous greetings. And Dr. Frederick E. Taylor, long a friend of Rochester and an intimate of her president, brought the speaking to an effective climax.

There was a certain reminiscent note in the speeches, but throughout it was evident that Rochester is living in the present, not in the past, and that she is facing the future with undaunted purpose. Not the least memorable feature of the occasion was the singing, led by Mr. Percy S. Foster of Washington, song leader for the convention. Many of the old favorites were sung, but chiefly "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," to the tune of "Diadem," and our Rochester hymn, "Rochester, Our Rochester."

The Bukers Introduced to the N. B. C.

BY J. C. ROBINS
May 28, 1926

SOMETHING over a year ago, I received a letter from a young man, saying, "You probably don't remember me, but I was one of your aides at the Student Volunteer convention in Indianapolis. It may help you to remember me if I remind you that I am the champion mile runner of America. I am to run one more race in San Francisco, the Fourth of July, 1925, and then I wish to go to the most difficult mission field in the world. I wish to talk to you about it, and I want more than twenty minutes of your time."

It happened that I was going to Boston within a few days so it was possible for me to arrange to meet this young man there. When he came to my room at the hotel, I said to him, "How did you get into this running game?" He replied, "I found I could run when I was in college, and I became the champion of Bates college, then the champion of the state of Maine, then champion of New England, then champion of America, which admitted me to the Olympic team, and I won third place in the Olympics." Then he said, "Would you like to see me run?" Of course, I said that I should, and together we went to one of the tracks back of the state house in Boston, and I watched him as he ran the half mile in two minutes, seven seconds.

We returned to the hotel, and he said, "Now, where will I go as a missionary?" I told him of a far distant field on the border of Burma and remote West China, among the Lahu and Wa people, sturdy mountain tribes, where there has been a great in-gathering—17,500 having been baptized and received into the church there in the last five years. I told him of the persecution and hardships of that field, and he said, "Mr. Robbins, do you think I am the man for that difficult work?" I said, "Let us pray together about it." We knelt together in that hotel room and prayed, and when we arose from our knees, he said, "Do you need a physician in the same field?" I said, "We certainly ought to have a doctor there." "My twin brother is a doctor; will you take him?" he asked. I replied that I should have to see him first, and he said that they looked so much alike that I should be unable to tell them apart.

He invited me to come over to his home and meet his wife, his brother and his wife, and his father and mother. I found it possible to do this, and so I made the arrangement to meet Dr. and Mrs. Richard Buker, Rev. and Mrs. Raymond Buker, and Father and Mother Buker in their home.

I told them frankly and plainly of the isolation, hardship, and danger of this field, back as it is twenty-three days from civilization in the heart of the mountains of West China. Mrs. Richard Buker looked up and said, "Mr. Robbins, you have not painted a very bright picture I said, "No. All I can promise you is isolation, loneliness, hardship, sacrifice, suffering." Then, I am ashamed to say I had to add (for I try to be honest and frank with all our missionary candidates) "I cannot promise you that the denomination will support you adequately." At those four young people said to me, "We will go."

Raymond Buker won his race in San Francisco last Fourth of July, and the young men will be interested to know that his time for the mile was four minutes, nineteen seconds. Upon his return to the East, he called upon me in my office in New York, and told me that he had received a very attractive offer to coach the track team in one of our middle-western universities, at the salary of $3000 a year, and that he had also had a call to a little Baptist church in Maine at the salary of $1500. He asked me which offer he should accept, and I said, "Buker, do what you think is best." Later I received a letter from him, telling me that he was preaching in this little town in Maine and having the time of his life in preparation for his work in West China.

Obituary

MRS. SARAH ALLMOND SMALLEY

Following an operation for removal of tonsils, this talented and winsome personality passed from the scenes of this life to eternity on Wednesday, May 19, at Clifton Springs sanitarium and clinic, Clifton Springs, N. Y. It was while seeking better health that she might continue active service for the Master that she submitted to the operation which hastened her end. Her sudden departure comes as a shock to many friends in the associations, churches where her husband, Rev. Charles F. Smalley, has been pastor. All who know her in the beauty of her Christian character, and her ceaseless activity in behalf of world-wide evangelism are assured that though she rests with the Lord, the influence of her life will continue. Funeral services were held in Calvary church, Irwin, Pa., and at the home of her brother, C. M. Allmond, Wilmington, Dela.

Here, There and Everywhere

MRS. BESSIE WINGREEN died recently at the age of ninety-five at her daughter's home in Chicago. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. James R. Shanks at Princeton, Ill. Mrs. Wingreen was one of the quiet saints whose influence has been great. She became a Baptist Christian in Sweden when a girl. At times she walked fourteen miles to a secret meeting of Baptists. She knew the meaning of persecution.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Auburn, N. Y., has extended a call to Rev. George Montgomery Reid, of Scranton, Pa. Mr. Reid will begin his pastorate at Auburn the middle of June. Dr. C. S. Savage, of Rochester is acting minister during the interim.

DR. JOHN R. SAMPEY, for forty-one years professor of Old Testament interpretation at the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, and Miss Ellen Wood of Birmingham, Ala., were married by Dr. Edgar Y. Mullins in Birmingham, Sunday,

May 16. They set sail, May 22, for Rio de Janeiro as volunteer evangelist missionaries to that South American public. Doctor Sampey is not going out as an official missionary of the Foreign Mission Board, although his scheme has the endorsement of the board. He is not to be the official evangelist of the missionaries or churches in Brazil for he has also refused to allow these to defray any part of his expenses. To know how Doctor Sampey has spent his life is to know that he hasn't laid anything aside worthy to be called a small fortune, yet he is taking from his life-time saving the expenses of his trip. Doctor and Mrs. Sampey plan to preach soul-winning sermons with the assistance of an interpreter, from one end of Brazil to the other.

EVANGELIST R. R. RICHARDS is now located at Grand Island, Neb., after more than three years of satisfactory service in South Dakota. Former secretary S.

law and secretary Barton speak in commendation of his work. He is available for work in Nebraska or adjoining states.

THE WEST PARK CHURCH, Cleveland, has been making fine progress under the pastoral care of Rev. Forrest L. Fraser, formerly of Newark, Ohio. This church, among the younger and very promising fields of the Cleveland Association, classes for men and for women have been organized, both temporarily meeting together for the study of a "Harmony of the Gospels" under the direction of the pastor, who is an expert in the use of the crayon in illuminating these lessons. The weekly meeting has taken on new life, has an increased attendance, and the membership is finding rich interest and inspiration in the "Studies in Bible Truths" which the pastor is conducting. Since last November the Bible School, Mr. Charles Barker, superintendent, has experienced a growth of nearly 70 per cent in enrolment and attendance. Among the thirteen who received the hand of a fellowship at the last communion service were eight members of the Bible school. The attendance at the evening service of the church is so increased that the seating capacity of the room is taxed to the utmost, and a new and larger building will soon be a necessity.

JOHN H. CHAPMAN, prominent Baptist layman and formerly president of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, died at his home in Oak Park, Ill., May 30.

WALTER DANIELS, a student in the Divinity school of the University of Chicago, was licensed to preach by the First church, Oak Park, Ill., of which he is a member, on a recent Sunday.

HAROLD STANLEY STEWART began his ministry with the First church of Oak Park, Ill., on May 23. His former charge was the Tioga church, Philadelphia.

THE BAPTIST offices were busy with callers from the West on the occasion of so many delegates going to and returning from the convention in Washington.

WALLACE BUTTRICK, connected with the General Education Board for a quarter of a century and in his early ministry pastor in New Haven, Conn., St. Paul, Minn., and Albany, N. Y., died of cerebral hemorrhage, May 28.

THE NORTH CHURCH of Camden, N. J., has rededicated its organ which is a gift to the family of the late F. Wayland Aer. Notable recitals were given by L. Tertius Noble of St. Thomas' church of New York City, Mr. Rollo Maitland, formerly of Antwerp cathedral, and by A. Firmin Swinnin. This organ is one of the finest in New Jersey.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Waterloo, Iowa, had the combined patriotic organizations at the morning service on Memorial Sunday and in the evening Pastor R. E. Williamson delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the high school. It is estimated that 1000 persons were present.

REV. CHARLES DURDEN of the First church of Bloomington, Ill., will conduct Sunday evening services in Miller Park each Sunday during June and July. All the downtown churches will unite in a Sunday evening service on the lawn of the Presbyterian church.

REV. AUGUSTINE S. CARMAN of the Northern Baptist seminary at Chicago, preached on May 30 in the pulpit of his son, Rev. Ray S. Carman of Joliet. Eighteen were baptized on May 23, making fifty persons baptized since the dedication of the new edifice.

MR. HOWARD G. ROUNDS, son-in-law of Evangelist E. S. Stucker, will on Aug. 1, begin his work as pastor's assistant and director of young people's work with Pastor W. A. Elliott in the First church of Ottawa, Kans.

MRS. C. F. SMALLEY, wife of Rev. C. F. Smalley of Cavalry church, Irwin, Pa., died at Clifton Springs sanitarium in New York on May 19. Supt. W. C. Chappell of Pittsburgh, Pa., conducted the funeral services. Interment was at Irwin.

FIVE NATIVE KOREANS and two others from their native land were present and had part in the midweek service in the First church, Seattle on May 25. The Salvation Army put on the program. Judge King Dykeman presided.

THE WEST WASHINGTON summer assembly will be held at Burton on Aug. 3-13. Thirteen teachers are announced for regular courses.

EIGHT HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN thousand dollars will be required to erect the new building of the First church of Cleveland, Ohio. Of this amount, $600,000 is to be secured by subscriptions. Two conditional pledges totaling $150,000 have been received. The new building will be built on an eight acre lot facing three streets. The auditorium will seat 800, Sunday-school auditorium 400 and the educational unit will care for 1000 pupils in the most modern type of structure. This edifice will care for the combined bodies of the First church and the Cleveland Heights church. The beautiful and historic building of the First church at East 46th and Prospect sts., will be sold.

DR. JAMES S. KIRTLEY supplied the pulpit of the North Shore church, Chicago, on May 30.

TEMPLE CHURCH, Los Angeles, Calif., Dr. Birney S. Hudson, associate pastor, has about fifty organized departments. The budget adopted for 1926-1927 calls for $130,000 divided equally between current expenses and missions.

PULPIT SUPPLIES for July and August in the Lake Avenue church of Rochester, N. Y., include Rev. W. S. K. Yeaple, Hon. Clinton N. Howard, Dr. Avery A. Shaw of Brooklyn, N. Y., Dr. C. Wallace Petty of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Dr. Edward Holyoke of Providence, R. I.

DR. GEO. E. BURLINGAME has been invited by the First church of Oakland, Calif., to become assistant pastor and executive secretary to begin on Sept. 1. The church carries a budget of $35,000 for current expenses and $16,500 for missions. Dr. J. W. Brougher is the pastor.

DR. OTTO S. RUSSELL, pastor of the First church, Santa Ana, Calif., was elected president of the Southern California Convention at its recent meeting at Pomona.

FRANKLIN COLLEGE had as the preacher of the annual missionary sermon at its ninety-second commencement, Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of Boston. The baccalaureate sermon was by Rev. C. W. Gilkey of Chicago.

EVANGELIST D. F. NYGREN is stated supply for the summer in the Swedish church at Sioux City, Iowa. Beginning in September he will conduct evangelistic meetings in Nebraska, Kansas, Wisconsin and Illinois. His present address is 1011 Tenth St., Sioux City, Ia.

THE NEW edifice of the church at Boulder, Colo., was dedicated on June 6. It is one of the finest in the state.

ABOUT EIGHTY new members were given a reception by the deacons and trustees of the Temple church of Chicago on June 6. This marks the end of Pastor J. H. Hughes' first year with this church. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were sent to Washington as the guests of the church.

AT THE SEVENTEENTH annual commencement of the University of Redlands, Calif., the baccalaureate sermon was by Rev. Lincoln A. Ferris and the graduation address by Judge Benj. F. Bledsoe. President Duke conferred the degrees.

REV. EDGAR WATSON of the Carmel church of Detroit, Mich., has resigned because of ill health. During the past seven months the membership of the church increased from seventy-eight to 143. The Bible school has been more than doubled in attendance.

REV. GEO. W. JOHNSON has just completed six months as pastor of the Birkett Memorial church of Detroit, Mich. There have been ninety-two additions to the membership in that time, many coming by baptism. The Sunday school attendance is above 500 and the church has a junior choir of fifty.

REV. E. M. ROBERTS was duly ordained by a regularly called council at the Black Hills Baptist Association at Rapid City on May 18. Rev. C. A. Stephens was moderator, Rev. R. J. Lloyd, clerk, and the sermon was delivered by State Secretary J. L. Barton of South Dakota. Mr. Roberts is pastor at Owanka, S. D.

REV. D. L. WOODWARD has completed five years of service as pastor of the church at Marion, Ind. Over three hundred new members have been added and many improvements made in the property. Pastor Woodward has held many positions of trust and honor in the life of his community and was sent as a delegate to Washington by his church.

BROWN UNIVERSITY has created a new office, that of student counselor and director of religious activities. Mr. O. T. Gilmore, now taking work for a master's degree in Columbia university, has been appointed to fill the position. He will have an office on the Brown campus and be in daily touch with the students. The infirmary will be enlarged and an added effort will be made to care adequately for the mental, spiritual and physical health of the student body.

REV. DONALD BRYAN CLOWARD was ordained at the Dewey Union church, Rochester, May 16. Sermon, Prof. George Cross; prayer, Prof. Earl Cross; charge to candidate, Dr. C. A. Barbour, and welcome to the ministry by Rev. Fred E. Dean of Greece church.

THE CHURCH at Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich., has regretfully accepted the resignation of Rev. Thos. B. Marsh. Resolutions expressing the deepest affection and confidence were adopted and sent to several periodicals and to the brethren in England where Pastor Marsh will reside for an indefinite time.

REV. HAYES MORGAN BRAKER was ordained in the Ogden church, near Rochester, N. Y., on May 19. Sermon, Rev. Jas. S. Braker of Springfield, Mass., father of the candidate; prayer by Prof. Earl Cross and charge to the candidate by Dr. A. E. Isaacs of Rochester, N. Y.

WICHITA, KANSAS, First church now has a membership of 1902. There are 1704 enrolled in the Bible school with an average attendance for the year of 959. Current expenses last year were $24,448. Gifts for missions were $19,733.

REV. CHAS. CARTER ROADARMEL was ordained at the Atlantic Avenue church, Rochester, N. Y., on May 19. Moderator, Rev. E. E. Dierks; sermon, Prof. H. B. Robins; prayer, Rev. Frank M. LeBar; charge to candidate, Dr. Wm. E. Witter, and welcome to ministry by Prof. F. O. Erb.

THE FIRST CHURCH of El Dorado, Kans., was dedicated May 16-23. Dr. George Truett of Dallas, Tex., preached daily. Rev. Ray E. York and others assisted. Dedication sermon was by Rev. M. O. Clemmons. Cost of building estimated at about $100,000. Pledges taken total $115,000. There were twenty-five persons baptized. This edifice has 25,000 square feet of floor space and is the largest in Kansas. The pastor, Rev. M. O. Clemmons, has been with the church seven years.

DR. HARRY WALKER VINCENT of Toledo, Ohio, preached for the Calvary church of Minneapolis, Minn., on May 23.

THE CORNER STONE of the new auditorium-gymnasium at Grand Island college was laid on June 3 with appropriate ceremonies. Dr. H. C. Whitcomb of Omaha delivered the address on "The Christian College and Community Leadership." The new building is 88x120 feet and will contain complete gymnasium equipment and well planned arrangements for auditorium use.

AT THE ANNUAL Americanization fellowship banquet in the First church of Elmira, N. Y., arrangements were made on June 8 to seat 100 new Americans with 100 older Americans. Rev. H. C. Burr is pastor.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Bellevue, Pa., Rev. Fred T. Shields, minister, has received 220 new members in less than two years. Conversions are frequent and the prayer life of the church is well organized.

STATION KTBA is the property of the Tenth Avenue church of Oakland, Calif., Rev. G. W. Philipps, minister. This station is one of the most powerful on the Pacific coast, having an energy of 1000 volts. It broadcasts on a wavelength of 240 meters. There is a complete program for every week, a daily hour of prayer, special programs directed to Australia, to the Hawaiian Islands and to North America. Hundreds of requests are received monthly for special prayer and many cases of conversions are resulting from the broadcast word.

THE FORMAL LAYING of the corner stone of the chapel of the University of Chicago occurred on June 11. The chapel, which when completed will be the outstanding structure on the Midway campus, is located at East Fifty-ninth street at Woodlawn avenue. Prof. James Hayden Tufts delivered the address.

MISS LOUISE ROBINSON HEATH, daughter of Secy. Hugh A. Heath of Massachusetts, has been appointed head of the department of philosophy at Hood college, Frederick, Md. Miss Heath is a graduate of Mount Holyoke college and for the past two years has done graduate work at Radcliffe.

TWELVE ADDITIONS at Fairbury, Neb., in May marked the opening of the ministry of Rev. William Park, the new pastor there. Ten of the new members were received by baptism.

"HOME-COMING WEEK" will mark the seventy-fifth anniversary of the church at Marengo, Ill., Rev. A. C. Riley, pastor. The committee in charge, E. B. Standish, chairman, is anxious to get into touch with all former Marengo members and friends. "Kindly advise the committee of the address of any former members," is the request of the pastor.

A Plan of Approach for Lay Evangelists

BY HAROLD DICKINSON GERMER

SO long have churches depended on mass methods of evangelism, and so few individuals have felt called to present the message of the gospel personally, that we have nearly lost not only the technique of approaching people with the evangelistic message, but even the ability to state simply and clearly the terms of the gospel. This personal approach, reduced to its simplest terms, involves preparation, proclamation, and persuasion.

Every personal religious experience is a valuable preparation for the personal evangelist. The bearer of such a message must be above reproach. More than this, his religious experience should be so vital that he can speak from strong personal convictions. Let his supreme quest be God's kingdom and righteousness and he will be able to speak with an evangelistic passion. But without depth and reality of experience the more formal steps of preparation for personal work will be unavailing.

For more immediate preparation each personal worker ought to maintain personal prayer list, prepared weeks in advance and used daily. Aside from the value of the divine resource enlisted in the prayer exercise there is a valuable element of confidence inspiring to the worker who prays, and has the assurance of divine cooperation.

It is of considerable importance that the lay evangelist make a preliminary diagnosis of the character of the one to be visited. This diagnosis will of necessity be very incomplete in some cases but there are certain characteristics so evident that we need not be at a loss for some definite way to approach each life's needs. To the suffering we can offer a Father who sympathizes. For the weak we can offer strength. For the despairing we have an offer of hope, present and heartening. To those caught in mean and materialistic aims we can bring a worthy and inspiring goal. To youth's idealism we can present a challenge high and holy that will call forth their best. It seems that there is no unworthy human desire that is not rebuked, nor worthy aspiration that is not satisfied by the gospel. We find some blind, some weak, some ignorant, but all needing the Way.

But all our careful planning may leave us without confidence in our ability to present the message. That we might have this we should make it a practice to pause to realize the presence of the Master, strengthening us and directing us in the work.

To introduce our subject will be difficult. But this is really less difficult than to keep to the message until a conclusion is reached and decision won. An announcement of the campaign and purpose of the visit will both introduce the subject and prevent diverting talk. Any resentment that might arise will be quickly eliminated by an assumption on the part of the worker of interest and sympathy on the part of the one interviewed. A statement to the effect that a general visitation of the whole constituency of the church is being made will prevent any resentment that might arise from a feeling that the one interviewed is singled out. A favorable atmosphere is so important that these steps leading to it must be studiously made. A smile is our strong ally. We may also add words showing our own deep interest, more in the person than in the campaign.

After definitely presenting our reasons for making the call, the next step should be what I have called "driving the wedge." This is simply the injection of one or more reasons why the one interviewed should become a Christian church member. Three reasons are always pertinent, and should always be the command of the worker. First, because God cares, has blessed us, has sought and is seeking us with a heart pained at our prodigal waywardness; we owe him our allegiance. Second, because we need him so, because we cannot but men and women God intended we could be without his help, because he offers life more abundant; we must seek him. Third, because we do not live alone and are socially responsible, because a son or daughter or friend or little one looks to us dependently; because of others we must be his disciples. With some such entering wedge we can bring the gospel story to minds that have even failed to heed because the story lacked freshness for them.

A simple and clear statement of the terms of the gospel then becomes appropriate. We may assume that it is a familiar story to the listener, but one that is worth repeating. In the first place we must show the universal and particular need of a power that can save us from sin. The second step is that Jesus Christ we have such a Saviour. The third step is that we can appropriate his grace by simple trust in him. The parable of sheep and shepherd illustrates beautifully the whole plan. The story of the call and response of Matthew shows in simple form the process of conversion to discipleship.

The aim of the visitor should be no less than to bring the one interviewed into full relationship with the church. Some hesitate at church membership. In such cases it is important to point out the importance of the church in the life of Christianity and of the individual Christian. The church was within the intention of the Master who bound his disciples together. The church serves to nurture individual Christians, and provides a place for their training and growth mutually. It is also a great saving body, working our Lord's unfinished task delegated to us and which we are able to do better because we have united our efforts and resources in the church. The church is indispensable, and challenges our loyal devotion.

Our diagnosis of the individual in preparation for the visit will help us now to add a few well-chosen words of persuasive force. One is not moved to act from motives of reasonableness alone. Our presentation should satisfy some need or quicken some desire. We must show that it pays and satisfies.

The attitude of the visitor and the use of a decision card, if tactful, will greatly help the decision. Too much presumption will prove objectionable, but we are more likely to fail through not expecting a favorable response than from too much confidence. We ought to have such a conviction of the reasonableness of our message that we expect responsiveness always. With some form of decision card in hand we may address the questions of the card to our friend personally in such a way that the response is at least made natural. "I suppose you acknowledge," and, "Are you willing to?" are convenient introductions to the questions we will ask. Even if the desired answers have been given, a proposal to sign the acknowledgment will be appropriate. When we make serious decisions we customarily seal them with our signature. Is there a better way for friend to respond to friend today?

The fitness of the present time must be maintained in the face of a disposition frequently met to put off the decision. It is not likely that a delay will help the decision, and a delay tends to make the decision harder. We may say

The Northern Baptist Convention

(Continued from page 590)

Mission Society, however, the Bible Union group offered a substitute list of nominations as follows:

President, Chas. R. Brock; vice-president, David Alexander; second vice-president, Minor Stephens; secretary, Wm. B. Lippard, and treasurer, Geo. B. Huntington. Board of managers: Curtis Lee Laws, John Roach Straton, Joshua Gravett, R. S. Beale, G. W. Cassidy, John F. Frazier, J. S. Arthur, B. S. Fellman, H. Stewart Tillis, and John Gunn.

The tellers reported 1708 voting for the nominating committee's list, 481 for the substitute ticket, with 221 scattering votes.

Dr. F. L. Anderson gave a resume of the report of the Foreign Missionary Society. He said in part: "We have reason to sing unto the Lord a new song, for he hath done marvelous things. We may have sown in tears, but we have reaped in joy. The ingathering has been the greatest in our history, 22,460 having been received by baptism. In the Telugu country more have been baptized than in any year since the great revival under Doctor Clough in 1870. We cannot doubt that Christianity is gaining a larger grip on the world. Even in China the revolution has accomplished more than any incident in Chinese history. It has stabilized Christian China.

"The board adopted all of the recommendations of the committee appointed to investigate the status of missionaries in the employ of the Society. In a supplementary communication the investigating committee requested the board to investigate the cases of eight missionaries without implying that they are necessarily unsound. Of these three were sustained, three resigned and two are still pending. One who had had no theological education was allowed a year for study in a theological seminary and is later to be examined by the board. The board stands for an inclusive policy within the limits of the gospel, but the gospel is not considered a creed. There is a diversity in our fellowship. The living voice of the denomination is decisive. But we shall not harry our missionaries with inquisitions into their opinions. However when any man has seriously departed from the gospel we shall deal with him. But charges must be more than hearsay.

"At Seattle the board notified the denomination that withdrawal from whole fields would be necessary, unless larger resources were provided. In the Lone Star offering the board received a mandate against withdrawal. While the Lone Star fund was over-subscribed, the deficit in the budget left the society in that to delay is for the time at least a rejection.

Whatever the decision, prayer is appropriate. It adds solemnity to a response and in a measure prevents a closing of the question where there has been no response.

much the same condition as last year. We are still obliged to cut off what the situation demands, and as little as necessary. Great praise is due our heroic missionaries during this trying period.

"Still we should not be discouraged. 'Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.' God is with us. The word is now 'Steady'—not an inch more of retreat. The unified budget may be over-subscribed. A deep revival is needed which will make sacrifice sweet and enable us to build the kingdom of God."

The convention came to the hour which never fails to evoke enthusiasm; it was the time given the foreign missionaries who in seven minutes each were asked to gather up the impressions and experiences of seven years. Each brought the salient facts of the country or section in which he worked. Rev. G. S. Jury of Judson college spoke of the need of education in Burma. Of ten Christians, seven are Karens. The Burmans regard Buddhism as the national religion; Christianity is to them a foreign religion.

Rev. S. A. D. Boggs of Assam brought the encouraging report of 9000 baptized in the Garo hills. Obligated to abandon one field, the native Christians carried on; 300 were baptized in this field. From earliest days, missionaries have proclaimed the fact that national leadership must supplant leadership from abroad. Hence there is great need of training these leaders.

Rev. J. A. Curtis of South India spoke of India as a land of rural life rather than cities. Now we have nearly 88,000 members, with 21,400 in Sunday schools. India has only 219 churches, this small number being due to small native leadership.

Dr. J. H. Franklin introduced three men from China and Japan, two of whom spoke briefly. They were H. C. Ling from China, and Messrs. Nikai and K. Watanabe from Japan.

E. H. Gleist from South China, the center of the demand for native Chinese control, detailed the program of transferring authority from foreign to native leaders. A large Chinese council took over the direction of the churches and the missionary now serves under Chinese leadership.

D. G. Graham of West China told of the heroism of Christians under persecution from the student class who charged them with lack of patriotism. So far as the missionaries were concerned, not one station had failed to be under siege and many had been looted.

F. M. Derwacher spoke of the outstanding problems of Japan; the demand for reconstruction in consequence of the earthquake, the need of a college and for an enlarged number of missionaries to take places of those permanently or temporarily withdrawn.

Rev. E. W. Thornton of the Philippines told a story of student evangelism. Holidays find the students forming Sunday schools. Sixty students have gone out and 500 children have come within hearing of gospel.

Rev. Henry Richards received an ovation when Doctor Franklin brought him forward and introduced him as the man who led in the great revival in Banza Manteke.

The last speaker was Rev. Joseph Clark who has returned after being forty years in the Congo valley. Dr. Clark said that in the absence of educational equipment they were doing simple evangelistic work in the field. The fruitage is a church membership which in working and giving surpasses the members of the churches at home.

At this point Dr. James Stifler of Evanston, Ill., offered a resolution of appreciation of the devotion of our missionaries and of confidence in their service.

The closing hour was given to a memorial service for Dr. H. S. Greene, who was pastor of Calvary church in this city nineteen years ago, and who had much to do with the formation of the Northern Baptist Convention. The speakers were Doctor Hobart, a college classmate, who paid tribute to Doctor Greene's great personal qualities, and Dr. Charles W. Needham, formerly president of Columbian university, who spoke affectionately of Doctor Greene as pastor of the great church with the building of which he was so largely concerned.

Friday Evening.

"Paying the Price for a New World," shown on the screen and interpreted by Rev. W. W. Dyer of Rangoon, was the opening message Friday evening. It was the session for the consecration of missionaries and the crowd was on hand. The opening song service which, on this occasion as throughout the convention, was conducted by Mr. Percy J. Foster, brother to Dr. Allyn K. Foster, rose to the occasion. A quartet from the First church, composed of Mrs. Moss, soprano, Miss Fleur, contralto, Mr. H. C. Williams, tenor, and Mr. Chas. W. Moore, basso, with Miss Gertrude Smallwood at the piano, sang with rare beauty "Some Blessed Day." Mrs. Ethel Holsclaw Gawler, with Mr. Foster at the piano, sang "His Eye Is on the Sparrow." An interesting coincidence is that at the meeting for the organization of the convention held in Washington nineteen years ago, Mrs. Gawler (then Miss Holsclaw) sang, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Foster.

With Pres. W. C. Coleman in the chair, Dr. James H. Franklin offered prayer and Dr. Charles W. Gilkey of Chicago delivered the missionary address of the evening. His purpose was to interpret to Americans the new attitude of India towards Christ and Christianity, and to indicate the bearings of that attitude on the problem of missionary methods. Having spent some months in India last year as Barrows lecturer on Christianity, and having come into intimate contact with educated Indians, he spoke from an intimate understanding. He showed that the people of India have come to distinguish clearly between Christ and western Christianity; are beginning to understand and welcome him as like themselves an Oriental; are observing a difference between the practice of western peoples and the spirit of Jesus, and are questioning by what right we assume to bear his name. The speaker raised the serious question how far Christians of the western world, and particularly of America, are going to so understand Jesus as to interpret him to the awakened religious understanding of India. He is sure that this cannot be done in terms of western ecclesiasticism and traditional creeds. It can only be done by a clear and true exhibition of the spirit of Jesus himself. It is significant that the new missionaries introduced later in the evening to be sent out this year generally seemed to sense the new situation throughout the whole East. At the close of his address a cablegram of greeting was received from the Baptists of Japan, signed "Tenney."

Mrs. Goodman, president of the Woman's Foreign Society, called Miss Mabel Ray McVeigh, candidate secretary, to introduce appointees of the society for the field. Of ten fields that call for at least one worker each she said, only six can be supplied because of a lack of funds. In fact the society desired to send twenty-eight new missionaries which are needed at this time. Each of the six under appointment was introduced and called to the front to speak a few words, recounting impressions and purposes. Every statement was a simple declaration of self-dedication to a task whose magnitude was fully realized and welcomed. Miss Esther J. Ehnbold goes as a nurse to the Belgian Congo; Miss Flora Ernst, nurse, to Iloilo, P. I.; Miss Dorothy Campbell, hospital worker, South China; Miss Helen Benjamin, hospital work, Nellore, India; Miss Grace Maine, educational evangelism, Burma; Miss Ethel E. Nicholas (a licensed preacher), Assam.

For the parent society, Dr. C. Brooks called Dr. Joseph C. Robbins to introduce the following appointees: Herbert M. Lamson who goes to Shanghai Baptist college; Miss Ruth L. Harris, secretarial work, West China; Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Hathaway, Africa; Glen Willis Tuttle, medical, field not yet designated; Charles C. Roadarmel, Mr. and Mrs. August A. Berg, Bengal Orissa; Mr. and Mrs. Bengt I. Anderson, Assam; Misses Lois and Louise Darow and Miss Lucy Wiatt, Rangoon, Burma; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, agricultural missionary work; Melbourne Wells Boynton, teacher of English, Rangoon; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Buker and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Buker, Kengtung district on the Burma-China frontier.

The Messrs. Buker are twin brothers. Richard goes as a medical missionary. Africa calls for eight, but funds are available for only one. The need in Bengal Orissa is so great that the small group of missionaries on the field provided only for their own salaries for the sending. Mr. Roadarmel, whereupon the society felt itself bound to send Mr. and Mrs. Berg in addition. Mr. and Mrs. Young home after several years spent in the Kengtung district, are preparing to return. Mr. Young, who is the son of the veteran missionary, William Young, that field, gave a thrilling account of the recent turning of thousands to Christ among those hills. Rev. M. C. Massey, fifty years a missionary in Assam, was received with a standing salute by the audience.

Each of the appointees spoke briefly expressing individual experiences at points of view. The spirit of all was expressed by one who said: "We represent Him who gave the order to go. Several touching tributes to the influence of Christian parents, some of whom were sitting on the platform, brought both a plause and tears. One of the most significant of these tributes was that of Mr. Boynton who said that among the influences that determined him in choosing missionary work was contact for twenty-one years with the life and ministry of his father, Rev. M. P. Boynton of Chicago. Finally, all the appointees, the parents and the officers stood grouped about Rev. Mr. Boynton while he offered a simple and tender prayer of consecration.

Just before adjournment, Rev. W. J.

The Baptist

Chicago, June 12, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 19

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Rates: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Remittances: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add exchange.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send in renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No manuscripts returned unless accompanied by full return postage.

Want Ads

Wanted by a trained, experienced woman, position as church or social service worker. Address T. F., "The Baptist."

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

Baptismal Garments — Finest Quality Guaranteed. Trousers, Robes, Sleeves. Write for Illustrated Price List. B. C. Tillinghast Rubber Co., 236 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Collection Envelopes Duplex 8 cts. Single 7 cts. If ordered now June. Pay when your year begins. Dufold-Trifold Company, Trenton, N. J.

Station WCOY

THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan ave., Chicago.

"Good evening, WCOY friends. June is here again. How easy it is to relax into complete inactivity these balmy days. Spring fever is not confined to April and May. Even editors get a stretchy feeling and long for the green fields these days.

"Ever hear this one? A man went to a doctor saying, 'Doctor, if there is anything the matter with me, don't frighten me half to death by giving it a long scientific name. Just tell me what it is in plain English.' 'Well, sir, to be frank,' said the doctor, 'you are just plain lazy.' 'Thank you, doctor,' said the patient with a troubled look, 'now please tell me the scientific name for it. I've got to report this to the missus.' Wasn't he human?

"Recently we have visited two different churches that observe what they call Family Day.' The main objective is to get families to attend church and sit together as families. It creates unusual interest and the churches were crowded to the rails. Each church offered prizes. For the largest family present they gave a year's free subscription to THE BAPTIST and Missions, $3.00. To the second largest family present, a year's subscription to THE BAPTIST, $2.50. And to every family with three or more present, a year's subscription to the state bulletin. The great audience and the added loose collection more than paid the small financial outlay. We commend it to every church in our fellowship as an annual event.

"Putting THE BAPTIST into the church budget is to be repeated this year at the Logan Square church of Chicago, Rev. Wilfred Noble, pastor. Last year this church with less than 300 members had over ninety subscriptions to the denominational paper. So satisfactory did this arrangement prove that the church decided to continue the plan this year with some modifications. Any church using this method and suitable means to insure the reading of the paper will reap a great and lasting reward.

"At the invitation of acting-pastor, Dr. L. C. Barnes, the field editor spent the evening with the First church of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It was prayer meeting night. It was very warm. The editor spoke fifty minutes on his western missionary experiences and ten minutes on the values of THE BAPTIST. What a patient and long suffering people they were, on that hot night. When the editor got back to his room in the hotel and had fished out of his pockets all the subscription cards, checks, paper money and silver coin, he found that THE BAPTIST subscription list was increased by forty-one new subscriptions. There were only three trial subscriptions. All the rest were annual subscriptions, personal and gifts.

"The office boy will close the program with a few lines of verse credited to Agela Morgan, and appearing in the bulletin of the Delaware Street church, Syracuse, N. Y., Rev. Chas. F. Banning, minister:

To be alive in such an age?
To live to it! To give to it!
Fling forth thy sorrows to the wind,
And link thy life with humankind;
Breathe the world thought, do the world deed,
Think hugely of thy brother's need,
And what thy woe, and what thy weal;
Look to the work the times reveal!
Give thanks with all thy flaming heart,
Crave but to have in it a part—
Give thanks and clasp thy heritage—
TO BE ALIVE IN SUCH AN AGE!

"WCOY now signs off. You can live your life better with THE BAPTIST."

Wheeler, executive secretary, announced a telegram from a husband and wife offering $60,000 towards the extra mileage to that the convention proposes to raise for personal gifts, and stated that there were encouraging signs of an upward turn in missionary giving.

Saturday Morning.

Saturday opened with the morning missionary study led by Rev. Kenneth Arthur. The program of business followed routine but developed items of great importance. Rev. A. W. Cleaves of Providence, R. I., offered prayer. Amendments to the by-laws of a technical character were passed. International peace and good will, and the Near East relief were reported by Rev. M. P. Stanton. Fraternal greetings were exchanged with the Presbyterian General Assembly in session at Baltimore. The executive committee was instructed to consider the desirability of a board for homes and hospitals. Chicago was chosen as the place for the next meeting. Revs. James F. Stifler, F. E. Hovey, D. J. Evans, H. F. Stewart, Profs. K. S. Latourette, J. S. Brown, and W. W. Charles, Miss Margaret E. Burton and Mr. John Poteat were appointed members of the board of education for the term expiring 1929. Revs. G. D. Allison, B. C. Clausen, L. G. Edwards, E. P. Farnham, J. F. Hazen, A. E. Greene and A. R. Petty were appointed for the same term on the ministers and missionaries board.

Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler made a strong appeal for the prohibition law and its enforcement and the convention endorsed the Anti-Saloon League. Committees on foreign bodies, interracial relations, city missions and the Roger Williams memorial reported and were continued. The committee on the division of the missionary dollar reported and was discharged. Final report on enrollment showed 3369 delegates registered and 1603 visitors, the largest in the history of the convention. President Rhoades presented the president-elect Rev. James Whitcomb Brouwer who was received with great applause and pledged his efforts to promote harmonious cooperation in carrying out the ideals of the convention.

The matter of the advisory committee on reorganization came up again. Rev. W. H. Gleiss moved the appointment of a committee of nine to make a study of the results of the work of the original committee and to make report thereon, with instructions to publish its findings in the denominational papers before the next meeting of the convention. The committee as appointed later is composed of Revs. D. J. Evans, W. F. Harper, E. V. Pearce and Frank M. Goodchild; Mrs. C. D. Eulette, Mrs. George W. Coleman, Messrs. F. W. Freeman, A. M. Harris and D. C. Shull.

Resolutions aside from those that come as a matter of course, commit the convention unanimously to law enforcement, the Golden Rule, the child labor amendment, stewardship, the world conference on faith and order, looking to the establishment of joint headquarters for the northern and southern conventions at Washington, and against any treaty with Turkey, "which does not guarantee full religious liberty and freedom from persecution and make the necessary reparations in property, including the specific provision for the release and restoration of its Christian womanhood, now defenseless against atrocity and in need of the charity of the world."

It was at this time that there occurred the most touching incident of the convention. A little Armenian girl was lifted to a chair in sight of the convention

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"
2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.
Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN, 1912 "G" Street, Northwest

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

and we were told that she had been picked up, a bundle of bones and rags by the side of the road. It seemed hardly possible that that beautiful child could have been in such a plight. There were few dry eyes as she sang America and presented to President Rhoades a beautiful gavel made by Near East boys in Nazareth. President Rhoades replied with loving sympathy.

The resolution on war consisted of the obvious commonplaces except in one item, namely: "We look with disfavor upon compulsory military training in colleges and high schools." A motion to strike out that item secured little support.

Rev. F. E. Taylor gave the last of his devotional addresses on "Victory through Christ." The course has run serially as a course of victory through love, through faith, through suffering, through intercession and through the cross. Through the addresses Doctor Taylor made a rich contribution to the spirit of the convention.

Saturday Evening.

Saturday afternoon was devoted to recreation. Some went to Arsome to a ball game, some to public buildings and the Mallington, some to Mount Vernon, some to the unveiling of the statue to John Erickson, where addresses were made by President Coolidge and the Swedish crown prince Gustavus Adolphus; some went to other interesting places, but all reported a delightful time. The evening was given up to two great banquets, one by the women at the Raleigh hotel, the other by the men at the City club.

The woman's banquet was held in the Hotel Raleigh, at the same hour that the men were meeting in the City club; 750 women sat down to the bountifully spread and beautifully decorated tables.

Unfortunately there were so many that the seating had to be arranged in three different rooms. This made it impossible for many to hear when the program began.

Mrs. H. H. Skerrett of Philadelphia was toastmistress and introduced Mrs.

Howe of Washington, the loved and honored president of the District of Columbia women, who welcomed the women of the N. B. C. to their nation's capital.

The program had been arranged to emphasize the chain of volunteer service which the women perform for the denomination, and various links were spoken of by Mrs. Ray Hudson of Philadelphia; Mrs. Geo. E. Ladd of Framingham, Mass.; Mrs. N. J. Nelson of Grand Forks, N. D.; Mrs. W. P. Topping of Illinois; Mrs. W. A. Ballard of California; Miss Russell of Kansas; Miss Mary St. John of New York City; and Miss Barbara Pierce of Washington, D. C.

Awards of traveling libraries were made to the Northwest district for highest standing in the reading contest, with honorable mention of Rocky Mountain and South Pacific districts. Also the loving cup from the department of missionary education to the district making the most points on standard of excellence was presented to South Pacific district. This is given for highest number of points according to resident membership.

These awards were made by Mrs. George Caleb Moore and Mrs. Herbert E. Goodman; they were received for the districts by Mrs. Patterson of Minneapolis and Mrs. J. L. Reith of Berkeley, Calif.

A short address representing the national officers was made by Mrs. Orrin Judd, and the meeting broke up at a late hour.

In the City club at six o'clock a crowd estimated at 850 men sat down to dinner. Mr. James, chairman of the local committee, presented Mr. William Travers Jerome, president of the laymen's organization of northern Baptists, who called on Pastor Abrenat to say grace.

"I'm supposed," said Mr. Jerome, "to tell a story, but I won't." "Ray!" roared the crowd. "But I'll call bells," he continued; and he proceeded to call them. Rev. F. E. Taylor responded: "I'm here not to talk, but merely to be a part of the scenery." Mr. E. H. Rhoades quoted Jonah to the whale: "It would have saved the world a lot of trouble if you had only kept your mouth shut." Following up the allusion, Rev. James Whitcomb Brounger said: "We are going to quit quarreling and work together." Messrs. Earl and Raymond of Calvary men's quartet sang with zest and expression "Dear Little Home of My Dreams." "Beware," "Mandalay," and "That Old Gang of Mine." All stood in silent tribute to the memory of Henry Bond, John Y. Aitchison and Ernest D. Burton. Visitors introduced were: Rev. Mr. Gordon of Australia; Walter Fraser, Presbyterian laymen's leader; Judge Witte, executive secretary of the laymen's league; Rev. W. H. Bowler, general secretary of the Board of Missionary Cooperation; also Congressmen Newton of California, Hudson of Michigan, Upshaw of Georgia and Lowry of Mississippi.

The first speaker was Mr. James L. Kraft of Chicago, well known manufacturer of cheese. When he arose, somebody cried: "What's the matter with the

(Continued on page 608)

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for June 20

JUDAH'S PLEA
Lesson Text: Gen. 44:18-45. Golden
Text: Psa. 51:17

Joseph was delivered from prison and exalted to the premiership of Egypt through his ability to interpret the dream of Pharaoh. Famine in Canaan drove the sons of Jacob to Egypt in search of food. By a ruse Joseph made it appear that Benjamin had stolen the silver cup.

Change

The twenty years that had elapsed since Joseph's brethren sold him into Egyptian slavery had wrought no less wonderful changes in the sons of Jacob than took place in the fortunes of Joseph. By comparing the conspiracy of Jacob's sons as recorded in Genesis 37 with the solidarity of the same men in Genesis 44, we discover that time and experience had changed their spirit and attitude. Selfish individualism with its impulse to put out of the way anything and everything that bars its progress toward selfish ends was the spirit that conspired against defenseless Joseph when he was cast into an abandoned well and later drawn up out of it and sold as a common slave. Lies followed this brutal deed and Jacob was led to believe that his favorite boy had been devoured by some wild beast. Evidently the lie had been allowed to stand as the truth for twenty years. But in spite of the lie the brothers of Joseph had repented of their dastardly deed and doubtless had sought to atone for it. Imagination must fill in the unpublished longings of these men through the years to know if Joseph lived and how he fared. Many lies refused to be uncovered even after years of upright living on the part of the person guilty of the lies. Sometimes circumstances, as in the case of Jacob, act as a barrier. However, the plea of Judah in the united action of all the brothers in returning to Joseph when the supposed theft was discovered gave evidence that these men had undergone a profound change in their moral character.

Cohesion

This change is best seen in the transition from an individualistic exploitation of an innocent and defenseless youth to a sense of family solidarity that reveals itself eloquently in Judah's plea and in his atoning proposal that he himself should be enslaved for the sake of Benjamin's freedom. Family integrity, the promise to an aged father and the memory of former tragedy in the family for which they were to blame, actuated these men to stand together vicariously in behalf of Benjamin. Joseph saw at once that these men were not the same men who had ruthlessly banished him from his father's house twenty years before. They had learned their lesson and their spirit was a new spirit. Joseph felt, therefore, that he could now reveal himself to them as their long lost brother. The universal brotherhood of mankind is possible only as moral change involving social solidarity takes place in the hearts of all the individuals who constitute the population of the world.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing out its for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

BLMYER
CHURCH
BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs

21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices.

A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
1215 Englewood Ave., Chicago, Ill.

With The Board of Missionary Cooperation

PASSING OF THE "ONE MAN" CHURCH

Before taking its every member canvass, the Clinton Avenue church of Newark, N. J., published the following church calendar:

Every member canvass Sunday, Mar. 28. The following figures tabulating the number of pledged contributors to our church for the last year will be of interest to everyone:

Amount	For Current Expenses	For Benevolences
Over $5.00.....	2	3
4.00 to $5.00.....	5	3
3.00 to $4.00.....	6	2
2.00 to $3.00.....	13	8
1.50 to $2.00.....	10	7
1.00 to $1.50.....	34	16
.75 to $1.00.....	18	8
.50 to $.75.....	55	49
.25 to $.50.....	80	64
.10 to $.25.....	69	85
.05 and less.....	10	30
Total.....	302	272

From the above one can very readily determine that there are just two things necessary to reach our budget for the coming year: 1. An increase in subscriptions all along the line in both large and small contributions. 2. An increase in the number contributing."

The editor of the New Jersey state bulletin, in which this item appeared, has added, "Each year brings an increasing number of our churches which take a special period to build a financial budget to present to all the members facts about the number of givers. The churches are becoming more democratic in their giving; more and more the one church is passing. The trend is to have every member contributing."

SOME QUESTIONS PUT TO APPLICANTS

The American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Detroit Baptist Union, to all of our home mission agencies active in the every member canvass so that a general rule has been adopted that no church or mission shall receive aid unless it purposes to follow this very plan. The Home Mission Society, in considering requests for aid for the year beginning May 1, 1926, expects to receive information concerning each church or mission as follows:

1. Has the church or mission taken every member canvass previous to the beginning of the new financial year? What proportion of the members pledged? What was the total amount? Was the canvass satisfactory to you in the particulars mentioned?
2. Does the church or mission assume a larger amount of self-support for the coming year than it did last year? If so, how much? The Home Mission Society expects every church and mission to make some increase in self-support each year. Every church and mission ought to seek to become self-supporting as soon as it can do so.

This page is conducted by the Board of Missionary Cooperation, New York City, as a medium for circulating items about local churches which are carrying on their own and denominational projects in an effective way. If your church has developed any interesting ideas or methods we shall be glad to have you write about them to the Board, at 276 Fifth Avenue. Brief outlines of denominational plans, important news, etc., will also appear here from time to time.

3. Does the church or mission pay its share of the pastor's salary with reasonable promptness and regularity?

In granting requests for aid the board will inquire whether these requirements have been met by each church or mission which applies.

WELL EXPRESSED

The bulletin of the First church of Ottawa, Kan., carries the following statement: "The function of the church is to minister. It is in the world to serve. This church is not a beneficiary but a benefactor of society. It lives in the community not as a mendicant with hands outstretched to receive, but with hands extended to bless. It seeks in every way to represent the Christ for whom it exists and to extend that reign of righteousness for which Christ prayed and gave his life. All who share this spirit and purpose are cordially invited to worship and work with us."

THE BANNER STATE

The Utah convention, not being content with leading the entire Northern Baptist Convention straight through the year, broke its own record by raising for all missionary purposes, during the fiscal year just closed, $1200 more than during any other year of its history.

BIG MONEY

I am twenty-five cents.

I am not on speaking terms with the butcher.

I am too small to buy a quart of ice cream.

I am not large enough to purchase a box of candy.

I am too small to buy a ticket to the movie.

I am hardly fit for a tip—but, believe me, when I go to church on Sunday, I am considered some money.—Life.

TACOMA HOLDS THE RECORD

The First church of Tacoma, Wash., Rev. C. Oscar Johnson, pastor, holds the record in the Northern Baptist Convention this year for having received the largest number of people into membership. Since a year ago, 401 new members have joined the church.

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

A Maine pastor's wife wrote to the state office enclosing a check for $150, "Our $150 represents our quota plus 'interest,' plus enthusiasm. We are happy that it is a step in the right direction and hope that next year will see more, and in monthly payments. That is our goal."

ALL'S WELL WITH THIS CHURCH

The annual meeting of the First church of San Diego, California, which was held in April, was an occasion for much rejoicing over the year's achievements. Dr. John Bunyan Smith commenced his pastorate there about a year ago and during the time which has elapsed since then, 258 persons have been received into the church. The present membership is 1418. The church has received and expended during the year—over $25,000 for local expenses and building, and contributed $17,375.19 for missions. The average attendance of the men's Bible class has been 233. Every department of the church reports a good year and all the activities in a healthy and vigorous condition.

CLIPPED FROM MAINE'S STATE BULLETIN

"A very much larger number of our churches than ever before raised the full amount suggested as their quotas this year. These churches were many of them small, many in rural communities, and many were ones which find difficulty in paying their own current expenses. Their success points plainly to what faith and effort and the setting forth of the real situation on the part of the pastors and faithful workers can accomplish."

THESE TWO STATES MADE FINE RECORDS

Southern California's receipts on her 1925-26 missionary quota were $303,138.36, as compared with $296,095.36 for the year previous. If it had been possible to count the Lone Star contributions on the quota, Southern California would have exceeded her quota by $330,756.

Fifty-two Colorado churches overpaid their 1925-26 missionary quotas, nineteen more paid them in full, and forty-one paid 75 per cent or more. A note in the May bulletin of that state says, "The sum total of all our offerings for 1925-26 gives us 100 per cent of our state quota." Suggested quotas for Colorado churches in 1926-27 are published in the same issue and the churches are asked to take action on them as soon as possible.

The Northern Baptist Convention

(Continued from page 606)

"big cheese?" Mr. Kraft replied by showing how after he took God into partnership with himself in business that business had grown to be the greatest cheese business in the world. He argued that the Golden Rule works, not only between man and man but also between man and God.

Rev. S. H. Hughes, successor in the pastorate to the great British preacher, Dr. John Clifford, was the guest of honor and the principal speaker. First he brought official greetings from the British Baptist Union and then launched into one of the most remarkable addresses delivered to an American Baptist audience. It was marked throughout by scholarship, philosophical insight, spirituality, complete intellectual self-mastery and a constant stream of fine humor. The banqueters were either rapt or roaring from beginning to end. Referring to conditions at home he said: "The British are a striking people." In the flamboyant and optimistic rhetoric of a soapbox orator—"Fellow citizens, I seem to see a new error (meaning era) on the horizon." But it could not be reported in a syllabus. THE BAPTIST hopes to print it.

Sunday Sessions.

Sixty visiting Baptist ministers occupied Washington pulpits on Sunday. In the convention program two great Bible classes of several hundred members each assembled at different places. The women were taught by Miss Jessie Burrell and the men by Rev. D. J. Evans. The convention sermon, by Rev. W. H. Geistweit on "The Great Quest," was heard by 2000 people present and by an unknown number by radio within the distance of a thousand miles. Radio hearers were formally invited to participate in the various exercises of worship as these were announced one by one. The sermon was printed in the June 5 issue of THE BAPTIST.

In the afternoon the young people put on an interesting program in which both the local and national organizations participated, and of which accounts will appear in the young people's department of THE BAPTIST.

A good audience still remained for the closing service of the convention in the evening, when Rev. M. P. Boynton delivered a sermon in memory of the nation's fallen heroes, emphasizing the enforcement of law, the prevalence of crime, the importance of prohibition, the moral responsibility of the voter, the international duty of organizing for peace and the necessity under existing conditions for adequate national military defense. This address is given elsewhere in this issue of THE BAPTIST. At this meeting the National Council of Northern Baptist Laymen held a short official session at which Mr. Floyd Carr outlined the plans of the Royal Ambassadors, an organization for boys. Mr. Jerome, the president, said that laymen are not so much interested in theology as in dogology, and pledged the organization to stand behind the denominational program.

President Rhoades felicitously expressed the appreciation felt by all for the courtesy and efficiency of the groups and persons in Washington that had to do with either entertainment or service connected with the convention. They have never been surpassed.

With a benediction pronounced by Rev. Maurice Levy closed a convention which is best interpreted in the following words of Pres. James Whitcomb Brounger reported in the Washington Post:

"We all go home with a greater determination to prosecute the main purpose of our denominational life and to seek as far as possible to settle our problems in a fraternal and Christian spirit. Baptists have no central authority, nor legislative body. The local church is absolutely independent of any association or national convention. I believe that we are facing the best year in our history as a denomination.

"There are three things that I believe will be emphasized this year:

1. "Evangelism: every preacher and every church will be asked to put evangelism first in the program of activities.

2. "Every preacher and every layman is going to emphasize the things on which we agree, such as the deity of Christ, the absolute authority of the scriptures, salvation through faith in Jesus Christ, and the living of a Christ life in seeking to serve mankind.

3. "Our great missionary program will be recognized as having special claim upon our thought, and prayers and giving.

"The convention has been a great one and every one will go home to cooperate in carrying out the mission of Christ to humanity."

The Saving Sense

On arriving in Manchester, a man who was fond of playing practical jokes sent to a friend in London, a telegram that read, "I am perfectly well," charges collect.

A week later the joker received an express package on which he was obliged to pay heavy charges. Opening it he found a paving-block upon which was pasted the message, "This is the weight your telegram lifted from my heart."

A bachelor who did his own cooking came to work one day with a pie over two feet long fastened to the top of his lunch basket.

"What have you got there, Joe?" the boss asked him.

"A pie," said Joe.

"But look at the length of it," said the boss.

"Well," Joe growled, "the rhubarb was that long."

Billy, who was visiting at his uncle's farm, came running into the house very excited and cried:

"There's a mouse in the milk pail!"

"Did you lift it out?" asked uncle. "No," said Billy, proudly; "but I threw the cat in!"—Tit-Bits.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

Parker School for Girls "Prepares Girls for College and for Life"

UNDER BAPTIST AUSPICES

Thorough preparation for all female colleges. High grade curriculum; careful discipline; Christian atmosphere.

Winnebago, Minnesota

UNIQUE

is the expression used by some in reference to the service of

THE HEWITT COMPANY
Tribune Tower Chicago

We do raise money for Churches, Colleges, and Hospitals, oftentimes after others have failed.

Why not let us discuss with you the problem of raising the money your institution needs? It will not place you under obligation.

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

EDUCATION NUMBER

H. M. Fillebrown

BRASNOSE COLLEGE QUAD WITH RADCLIFFE LIBRARY, OXFORD

HILLSDALE COLLEGE

Presents A New Department Applied Christian Education

1-2. Christian Vocations

A course combining field and class work designed to help students to find out for themselves under sympathetic guidance the vocation for which they are best fitted. Graded service tasks will enable them to test out various forms of Christian endeavor in church, school and community. Three hours' credit for each semester.

3-4. Vocational Guidance —To discover life (so called secular) vocations from a Christian point of view. A survey and study of the opportunities and responsibilities for volunteer Christian service devolving upon lay men and women. Two hours' credit for each semester.

5-6. Experimental Character Education—For ad-

"Through all ages Jesus stands out as the perfect type of culture. Christian colleges, founded in his name, will fail in their central purpose unless they produce Christian men and women of culture who think and feel and act in sympathy with others."

—President W. G. Spencer.

vanced students already having a background in psychology, sociology and religious education. A course designed to stimulate research in the problems of lay and professional leadership in religious education. Two hours' credit for each semester.

7-8. Christian Leadership Seminar — For Juniors and Seniors interested in becoming leaders or teachers in various branches of Religious Education such as Y. M. C. A.,

Y.W.C.A., Church School, Ministry, etc. Each student will be assigned to active leadership in the field. This course will be conducted on the project basis using field problems and experiences of the class as an outline. Five hours' credit each semester.

Address HILLSDALE COLLEGE Hillsdale, Mich.

Folks, Facts and Opinion

The latest leper census taken in Japan reports a decrease of 861 from the number reported in March, 1919, when the last census was taken. The total number now is 15,400.

The Federal Trade Commission has been asked to investigate several consolidations made recently and in the process of being formed, in order to determine whether these combines would constitute trusts. Senator Walsh, who makes the request cites the typewriter, oil, and grocery, and refrigerator mergers made recently, and urges an investigation.

Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, commenting on the present negotiations for disarmament, expresses the opinion that "if a very few great nations could begin such reduction in that part of their military establishments which is admittedly maintained with an eye to their neighbors, without concerning themselves with what the many small nations are willing to do, the problem of disarmament would be a long step on the way to solution."

It is now reported that a movement is taking form in university circles to refuse credits issued by the Tennessee state university because the new law of Tennessee forbids any teaching of evolution in the tax-supported schools, including the university.

From the calendar of the First church of Greenville, Dr. George W. Quick, pastor: "Three great Pseudo-Baptist denominations in the United States, Northern Methodists, Southern Methodists and Northern Presbyterians, baptized in one year 211,405 persons, on profession of faith. Southern Baptists alone baptized in that same year 209,676. While Southern Baptists lead in the matter of evangelism they have not succeeded so well in the matter of enlisting new converts in definite service. As a result, more than 2,000,000 of our members have practically no part either in local work in their own churches or in the support of denominational enterprises. This is a problem worthy of the serious, prayerful consideration of all our people."—The Baptist Courier.

Two Germans are said to have secured from the government of Nicaragua a contract to suppress and utilize the smoke from a volcano for commercial purposes to manufacture by-products.

Shriners of Arizona brought the head medicine man and members of the tribe of Hopi Indians to Washington, D. C., where they performed the snake dance May 15, on the plaza in front of the capitol building, in the presence of United States senators, their families and friends.

"We of today learned at least enough by the war to know that the old order of things will not do," declares the Herald of Gospel Liberty. "Something different and better than the old-time unorganized world affairs simply must be established if ever there is to be real world peace. The people of the world are coming to be wise enough to know this; and they are not going to let go of the World Court and the League of Nations and the other little gains which were made through the war, until something better has been proposed.

For the Work of the Ministry

ROCHESTER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Clarence A. Barbour, D.D., LL.D., President

Rochester, New York

Our supreme purpose is that men shall go from us to this new age with the message of the Christ of all ages, to serve their own day and generation in the will of God, with a word and work that shall stand the test of truth and of life.

A Graduate School of Theology, with a curriculum designed to train effective leaders for the churches at home or abroad.

A Faculty thoroughly equipped both by specialized study and by practical experience in the pastorate.

Modern dormitory and class rooms; a Library ample for all demands of the students, open shelves and modern catalogue; gymnasium of the new $600,000 Central Y. M. C. A. made available for students; courses at the University of Rochester (3 city blocks distant) open to qualified Seminary students.

Rochester is a convenient and satisfactory laboratory for the study of many phases of religious, educational, musical and social activities.

Catalogue on request, and correspondence invited.

GLENN B. EWELL, Registrar.

BUCKNELL HALL—COLLEGE CHAPEL

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

EMORY W. HUNT, D.D., LL.D., President

THE COLLEGE

Awards the degree of B. A. on the basis of four years of undergraduate work.

Awards the degree of B. S. in Biology, Chemical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, or Mechanical Engineering on the basis of four years of undergraduate work.

THE SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Offers courses in Piano, Pipe Organ, Violin, Voice Culture, and Art of Singing, Wind Instruments, History of Music, Public School Music, Harmony, Composition, Theory, Vergil Clavier.

COURSES FOR TEACHERS

Awards the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education to high school graduates on the basis of four years of undergraduate work, and to high school and Normal School Graduates with approved standing on the basis of two years' work.

Regular college work offered in Summer Session, Extension Courses and Saturday classes.

Bucknell University aims to develop men and women who will apply true Christian ideals in every department of human endeavor.

For Information and Catalogue Address

THE REGISTRAR,

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

LEWISBURG, PA.

A gratifying improvement appears in the Canadian Baptist. It comes with better paper, better make-up, and no controversy.

Pellagra is a disease which was hardly known a few years ago. Now it is frequent, especially in the South. It is not infectious but has seemed to be incurable. It seems to be connected with an insufficient or unbalanced diet and may lead to a generally diseased condition and to insanity and death. But dietetic experiments on rats are said to point to the probability of a cure as well as prevention.

The world has been waiting for some Baptist sufficiently original and brave to say what the Baptist Advance, of Arkansas, says here: "We very properly say that scientists are perfectly free to pursue their investigations and discover all they can and then publish to the world what they have discovered. Also very properly we insist that scientists shall publish as facts only what they have actually proven and what they really know to be proven facts. They must not give a thing out as a fact when it is only a theory or a working hypothesis. But if we are consistent we must be just as rigid with ourselves. We must not insist upon a thing as a fact in religion unless it is actually a proven fact. Unless we can plainly show that the Bible itself claims the infallibility and inerrancy that we claim for it, then we have no right to insist upon such infallibility as a proven fact. Sauce for the goose ought to be good for the gander."

By means of the Cradle society of the Besancon committee of the Red Cross, French mothers can now borrow or rent cradles, clothes, perambulators, scales, and milk sterilizers for young babies. Two hundred and ninety new babies have been supplied already, and no charge made for the service in two-thirds of the cases.

Even a pacifist will welcome one activity of the army, namely, the training of enlisted men for civil occupations. Of men in the regular army and Philippine scouts, 44,719 were fitting themselves last year for 475 different civil pursuits, ranging "from aviary experts, librarians, and motor boat operators, to opticians, pharmacists and newspaper men. Over 7,800 soldiers of the regular army were engaged in military activities relating to motor transportation; 9,300 in duties which prepared them for positions in business life, such as clerks, typists, accountants, and multi-graph operators; and 1,200 in medical activities, the latter category including seventy-three enlisted men who were X-ray photographers, operators and technicians. Over 4,500 soldiers were detailed on duties pertaining to the care of animals and animal transportation. Thirty-three of this number were skilled veterinarians, and 940 were blacksmiths or farriers or were attending army schools preparing for those trades." The value of such training in some branches may be doubtful—for instance, blacksmithing.

After all of the excitement about the growing degeneracy of youth, competent students in the schools as well as the federal government are publishing revised statistics to the effect that juvenile crime is decreasing. Per contra, the Herald of Gospel Liberty offers this comment: "So much of the criminality of youth formerly was minor offenses, but recently banditry and murder have grown more common in high-school and college age. If there are fewer criminals per thousand among the youth of the land than formerly, as this movie picture publicity would have us believe, no one would dare to assert that the kinds of criminality have not grown worse."

One million communists now hold regular membership in the party in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, according to Mr. Arthur Ransome in the Manchester Guardian. They are very strict in the conditions of admission to membership in the party, and severe in the moral discipline exercised over the members. No member is permitted to indulge in luxurious living, or to receive a salary in excess of $1,200 a year, even when serving as a manager or director and paying expert subordinates, who are not communists, salaries three or four times as great. And yet Mr. Ransome says that the party is steadily growing. Concerning the atrocities attending the revolution, he adds: "I know plenty of White officers who were captured by the Reds and are working in Russia today, but not one single communist who survived being captured by the Whites."

A bronze relief of President Emeritus Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, presented by the class of 1923, will be placed in the corridor of Leon Mandel assembly hall by the board of trustees to commemorate his eminent services.

The 1926 summer session at the State University of Montana offers ministers of the gospel an excellent opportunity for special study. The faculty is one of the strongest in the country, including, in addition to many of the regular university staff, several educators of national prominence. Courses of special interest and value to ministers will be given in sociology, psychology and philosophy, literature, history, and science.

United conferences between whites and blacks on race relations are coming to be so numerous and so successful as to be commonplace. Both North and South, but especially in the South, this method of approach to the solution of the race problem has proved so effective as to justify the expectation that it will lead to full understanding and to harmonious relations.

Six Princeton undergraduates have been accepted for work in the Grenfell mission in Labrador during the summer recess. The present delegation will continue Princeton's representation at the mission for the last fifteen consecutive years. The party will leave the United States about June 20 and will return about Sept. 1. Due to the lack of labor in Labrador, many of the college men who go to the Grenfell mission this summer will probably help in the construction of a new hospital building at St. Anthony.

"Herewith is given a partial list of the universities, seminaries, and colleges in which the forty-six men who have come into our ranks received their training. Only five have a Unitarian background, and only six were trained in our Unitarian schools. The list follows: Pacific School for the Ministry, Northwestern Theological seminary, American university, Massachusetts Institute of technology, Chicago Theological seminary, Tufts college, Canton Theological seminary, Meadville Theological seminary, University of Tennessee, Catholic university, the University of Flushing, university of Oxford, Campbell college, Muskaloosa college, Kansas City university, Eugene Divinity school, Rutgers college, New Brunswick Theological seminary, St. John's college, Yale university, Dunwoodie seminary, Lancaster Theological school, St. Lawrence university, Rochester Theological school, General Theological seminary, University of Ireland, Andover Theological school, Boston university, St. Joseph's seminary, Union Theological seminary, Drew seminary, Harvard Divinity school, University of Southern Minnesota, Hamilton College of Laws, Mansfield college, New York university, St. Joseph Institute, and "Overt Hill college."—The Christian Register (Unitarian).

Official announcement is just made by the University of Chicago board of trustees of the appointment of Donald Wayne Riddle, who received his Doctor's degree from the University of Chicago in 1923, as assistant professor of New Testament literature.

Twenty thousand persons have abandoned Judaism and become converts to various Christian sects in Hungary since the end of the war, according to statistics published by the Hungarian Statistical Review. The conversion epidemic is a cause of grave concern to Jewish leaders in Hungary, it is stated.

Walter W. Smith, for twelve years one of the outstanding Baptist laymen in the state of Michigan and for six years treasurer of the Michigan Baptist convention, died May 18. The board of managers of the convention, through its committee, John E. Carr, Miss Florence E. Grant and Rev. H. C. Gleiss, has published a warm appreciation of his life and services.

The missionary education conference at Washington was held in Aitchison hall, Thursday afternoon, May 27, at 4 p. m., under the direction of Sec. William A. Hill. Dr. Frederick E. Taylor of Indianapolis and Dr. A. E. Harriman of New Rochelle, N. Y., spoke on the value of the church school of missions. Rev. Willard L. Pratt, of Boston and Rev. W. J. Cusworth of Moorestown, N. J., presented the Royal Ambassador work for boys. Mrs. Henry Elmore of Washington, D. C., outlined plans for promoting reading contests. The very profitable hour was brought to a close by a helpful address on methods for promoting missionary education by Mrs. W. H. Farmer, of Montclair, N. J.

Plans are being made for the restoration of the old irrigation system of river-fed canals which was the basis of the ancient prosperity of the Tigris and Euphrates valleys.

Dr. J. M. Powis Smith, professor of the Old Testament language and literature, has been granted leave of absence by the board of trustees of Chicago University to accept appointment as annual professor in the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem for the year 1927-28. Professor Smith is in charge of the new translation of the Old Testament, which is to be published by the University of Chicago Press.

The Mounds School of Nursing recently graduated the following students: Elsie M. Engbrecht, Fessenden, N. D.; Lillian W. Anderson, St. Paul, Minn.; Emily W. Rooney, Brocton, Minn.; Lillian D. Johnson, St. Paul, Minn.; Ada C. Peterson, Minneapolis, Minn.; William G. Thompson, Omaha, Neb.; Rachel D. Kjellberg, Minneapolis, Minn.; Ida M. Marks, Okabena, Minn.; Hazel R. Buffham, Jeffers, Minn.; Zella Garrity, St. Paul, Minn.; Elizabeth E. Kohrs, Burlington, Iowa; Magnhild M. Anderson, Ironwood, Mich.; Ingeborg Wogberg, Sioux City, Iowa; Brita Wogberg, Sioux City, Iowa; Esther M. Sisell, Buhl, Minn.; Hilda M. Anderson, Truman, Minn.; Margaret S. Lindblom, Fargo, N. D.; Ida A. Erikson, St. Paul, Minn.; Gerda F. Hagen, Minneapolis, Minn.; Naomi E. Pierson, Fargo, N. D.; Florence L. Conant, Stanton, Minn.; Mable I. Truax, Northfield, Minn.; Ingeberg E. Bloomquist, Cook, Minn.; Rosan D. Wohlenhaus, Welcome, Minn.; Alma M. Paul, Fessenden, N. D.; Hazel H. Peterson, Miles City, Mont.; Agnes A. Stiles, Winnebago, Minn.

The Southwestern Baptist seminary has just closed its nineteenth annual session, graduating ninety men and women. Dr. William Russell Owen of Macon, Ga., preached the commencement sermon, using as his theme, "The Aristocracy of the Cross." T. C. Gardner of Dallas, state B. Y. P. U. secretary, speaking under the auspices of the School of Religious Education, presented the problems and the solutions in the "Upward Struggles of the Youth of Today." The training school address was rendered by Mrs. W. J. Cox, president of the women's work in the South. Dr. W. C. Wayman, president of William-Jewell college, Liberty, Mo., made the baccalaureate address. Mrs. Cox spoke on "The Splendors of a Life Beautiful," and Dr. Wayman developed the subject, "Fellowship Between Learning and Religion." Summer school students are already arriving for the summer term. The year's enrollment is expected to be materially boosted by these new-comers. Already the enrollment for this session has reached approximately 700, near the highest in the institution's history. The geographical representation, covering thirty-three states and fifteen foreign countries, has never been surpassed, and the character of work has been the highest.

Index
	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	611
EDITORIAL	615
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	617
THE HIGH COST OF THE BACHELOR'S DEGREE, BY DONALD J. COWLING	618
THE GLORY OF THE COMMONPLACE, POEM, BY ROBERT WHITAKER,...	619
UNDERNOURISHED COLLEGES, BY FRED G. BOUGHTON.....	620
PROVEN LOVE, POEM, BY W. EVERETT HENRY	621
ADEQUATE THEOLOGICAL TRAINING.622
—A Symposium by Shailer Mathews, Claiborne M. Hill, Milton G. Evans, Philip Wendell Crannell, E. Y. Mullins, George W. Taft.
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—THE FATHER OF SPIRITS, BY F. W. NORWOOD	626
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	627
CHIMNEY CORNER	628
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	629
AMONG OURSELVES	630
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON.640
WITH THE BOARD OF MISSIONARY COOPERATION	642

THE DIVINITY SCHOOL of the UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Summer Quarter 1926

First Term, June 21—July 28

Second Term, July 29—September 3

A wide range of interesting courses especially intended for those preparing for, or already in, the pastorate, teaching positions, missions, and religious education, under the following instructors:

Oriental Languages and Literatures

Daniel David Luckenbill
Herbert Lockwood Willett
William C. Graham, Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, Canada
Theophile James Meek, University of Toronto

New Testament and Early Christian Literature

Clyde Weber Votaw
Benjamin Willard Robinson, Chicago Theological Seminary
Alfred Morris Perry, Bangor Theological Seminary, Bangor, Maine

Systematic Theology

Shaller Mathews
Gerald Birney Smith
Daniel Evans, Harvard University

Church History

Shirley Jackson Case
Archibald Main, University of Glasgow, Scotland
John T. McNeil, Knox College, Toronto
Joseph Cullen Ayer, Protestant Episcopal Divinity School, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Charles Lyttle, Meadville Theological School

Preaching and Parish Ministry

Ozora Stearns Davis, Chicago Theological Seminary
Robert Cashman, Chicago Theological Seminary
Franklin Chester Southworth, Meadville Theological School
Van Ogden Vogt, Chicago Theological Seminary

Religious Education

Theodore Gerald Soares
Joseph Manson Artman
Ernest John Chave
Erwin L. Shaver, Congregational Education Society

Missions

Archibald Gillies Baker

Comparative Religion

Albert Eustace Haydon

Sociology

Arthur Erastus Holt, Chicago Theological Seminary
F. Ernest Johnson, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America

Public Speaking

Edgar George Frazier, Indiana University

FOR ANNOUNCEMENTS APPLY TO DEAN SHAILER MATHEWS, THE DIVINITY SCHOOL,

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

The Doorways to Stephens College life are the doorways to spiritual, intellectual, physical, and social development.

THE LIGHT

Of a Christian Faith

Grows Brighter

Under the Influences of a Christian Education

The Stephens College program of religious education, under the direction of Miss Jessie Burrall, is known throughout the country for its remarkable achievements.

Stephens is a Junior College for Young Women. Graduates from Stephens may enter the junior year of senior colleges and universities with full credit.

Superior faculty and equipment.

Up-to-date dormitories accommodating five hundred girls.

High standards of scholarship.

The right spiritual influence on the campus.

For catalogue or other information address

President JAMES M. WOOD,

STEPHENS COLLEGE,
COLUMBIA, MISSOURI

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879, Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Crowns Go to the Competent

BAPTISTS have not and never had a monopoly of ignorance. But in the nature of the case their misfortune has been among the common people. Perhaps it is even that their message has usually found access made a special appeal to the least privileged classes. Consequently, while the denomination has never been without intelligence of a high order within its ranks, there have been times and places where the disdain of the more proudly cultured towards the Baptists, was supported by the facts. Many Baptists have lacked educational opportunities, and considerable numbers of them have mistaken ignorance for a condition of superior spirituality, accepting it with satisfaction and posting of it as a sign of divine favor. This was especially true in the earlier period when the great mass of the common people were illiterate. Such a heredity made its contribution to the life of the Baptist denomination in this generation. It need not be a matter of surprise therefore that among the leading denominations the Baptists rank low in the percentage of young people seeking higher education.

But we cannot escape the consequences of any condition which we accept. While it remains true that salvation is a spiritual experience as accessible to the child as to the philosopher, is it also true that knowledge is power. It is even an increment of spiritual power. At least, ignorance has nothing to offer to the life of the individual, and growth in grace certainly does not imply growth in ignorance. By common consent, it is acknowledged that Paul's education contributed to his power for a vastly influential and potent service in the Gospel and in the world's enlightenment. It will hardly be argued that the saving sufficiency of Jesus was due to intellectual incompetency. He knew, and the fact that he knew counted for much. The same principle holds for his followers. Spirituality does not prevent a man from breaking his bones when he stumbles at a stone quarry; neither will it give safety and success to a denomination in the performance of a task which requires insight, understanding and training. As long as we accept a condition of intellectual inferiority, we must accept also a position of inferiority as a force for the redemption of the world. This is less a question of denomination rivalry than of self-realization. To be surpassed in intellectual and social eminence by others may be a minor matter, but to come short of giving full expression and effect to the spiritual riches with which God has endowed us is tragedy. We cannot give the world our best unless we are at our best, and without education, we cannot be at our best.

Of course, and forever, scholarship is no substitute for spirituality. But it is equally true that spirituality is no substitute for scholarship. They are inseparable essentials to life at its best. Nobody is compelled to choose between them, to put one in the place of the other, or to accept one to the exclusion of the other. Religion enriches life and puts energy into its motive for righteousness; education guides life and gives effectiveness to its impact for good. In normal life the altar is the mother of the academy. Historically the university was born in the cloister. Trained men and women are the pioneers of advance wherever Christianity is making headway in the world.

More than ever before, mind is necessary to either service or progress. The new industrial order which is so fast transforming the face of the world and the conditions of living compels a wider range of subject-matter and a general dissemination of popular learning. While it never has been true and never ought to be true that everybody requires a college degree in order to occupy a creditable and useful place in society, it is nevertheless true that he who has not in some way achieved a fund of information and a disciplined intelligence sufficient for an effective degree of competency in the new and complex order of society, must be content to count for less than ever before as a force for the betterment of the world. And the same principle holds in relation to denominations or other groups. This means that in the Baptist denomination there must be a lifting of the general level of education and the production of a larger number of thoroughly trained leaders. Our proposed new ministry of evangelism must carry as one of its essential features an educational revival, and it ought to send additional thousands of our young people into the higher and special institutions of learning and training.

It follows as an obvious corollary that we must send them into the schools with the most perfect possible spiritual preparation and must follow them there with the most careful spiritual guidance. It is encouraging to note that in both the secular and the denominational schools this necessity is increasingly recognized and provided for.

But a situation has arisen which emphasizes anew the value of the denominational schools and especially emphasizes the importance of keeping them free from factional control. The state schools, indispensable as they are, find themselves more or less subject to the interference of partisan politics. This interference has registered itself in such a way as to hamper the freedom and damage the efficiency of a number of state universities. Denominational schools which have been able to escape factional control and to maintain scholarly freedom have therefore an opportunity and a call to hold open to our young people the doors of opportunity for an education that is at once true to essential Christian faith, positively religious and both free and thorough in scholarly investigation. Towards such schools the feet of our youth ought to be turned by thousands. And into such schools financial support ought to go by millions.

The Baptist schools of the North are in a peculiarly fortunate position for such a service. They have passed through a period of intense criticism and of careful public investigation and the Northern Baptist Convention has thereby assured itself of their trustworthiness and efficiency. In no group of schools in the world is there better opportunity to secure an education that is at once free, scientifically sound, true to the Christian faith and warm with the religious spirit. In none can our young people be so generally sure of acquiring the discipline that will fit them for the investment of their lives.

We Resurvey Our Task

FROM the first the task of THE BAPTIST was fairly defined by the situation. That task was to promote harmony among all the Baptists within the field of the Northern Convention; to maintain as the basis of harmony the essential teachings of the New Testament and the historic principles of the Baptist movement as a whole; to support the cooperative program; to seek the larger unification of all Baptists throughout the world in the Baptist World Alliance; to discourage and as far as possible to render ineffective all divisive and disintegrating tendencies; to accomplish these ends through the dissemination of facts and the courteous expression of all representative shades of opinion in the denomination; and to enlist for these purposes the entire constituency of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Such an undertaking was unique in the field of religious journalism. It was hampered by inexperience. It was viewed by many with misgivings, fear, suspicion and aversion. It found the Baptist fellowship rent by controversies which were deeply rooted in religious conviction and which extended far into the field of practical administration. By no possible course could it give satisfaction to all parties, and there was always the danger that upon some contingency it might choose a course that would lead away from rather than toward the accomplishment of its main purpose.

But it has lived through these stormy years. With whatever of embarrassment, of misunderstanding or of possible error, it has steadfastly pursued the main purpose of its existence. And it has lived to see that purpose far on the way to fulfillment. At every successive crisis in the affairs of the denomination, its interpretation of the situation has been verified by the outcome. And today more than at any time in the past there is growing evidence that the denomination is coming to understand and appreciate THE BAPTIST as an agent of unification and as an interpreter of the Baptist movement.

We take increased encouragement from the proceedings and outcome of the last annual meeting of the Northern Convention at Washington. So far visible signs reveal the existing conditions, the Baptists of the North have never been nearer to a common understanding and to a true spiritual fellowship than they are now. THE BAPTIST, learning from experience and with unchanged purpose, takes up anew the task for which it came into existence, with good-will to all who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity and with the hope that together our people are nearing the goal of "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Prohibition Stands Firm

IF the attacks made upon prohibition within the last year shall fail, it is hard to conceive any other effective source of opposition within the reach of the foes of prohibition. What else can they do? Every appeal to the spirit of licentiousness, to vice and to ignorance seem to have been exhausted. A propaganda against not only the law but also against its enforcement has been abundantly financed, and supported without scruple by an influential daily press. A confederacy of bootleggers, corrupt politicians and respectable tipplers who regard themselves as superior to law, has played every chord of popular fear, prejudice and self-interest. It has not hesitated to peddle false statements and false representations of fact. With special virulence it has attacked the Anti-Saloon League as the chief agency for the promotion of the cause of prohibition.

Notwithstanding such a campaign, the cause of prohibition seems to stand perhaps stronger than ever in the purpose of the American people. The insincerity of the attacks has become more and more obvious. While they have led some friends of temperance and of good government here and there to doubt the wisdom of the Volstead law, no such doubt has become at all general. A general change of conviction on the subject of prohibition is apparent. The people are awakening to the fact that the very principle of constitutional and lawful government is involved. There are signs of a growing purpose to sustain the government and to enforce the law. It seems probable that the country is passing through the crisis of the experiment which when past will leave the liquor traffic outlawed and the lawlessness attending its suppression a dying memory in a sober and orderly nation.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

This, Planted in Good Soil, Should Sprout Some Wisdom

Charles Stelzle, noted labor evangelist of the Presbyterian church, says in the Outlook: "We hear a good deal these days about the uprising of the radicals. But I am more concerned about the down-sitting of the conservatives—those who are quite content with things as they are; who have comfortable homes, can afford to wear good clothes, are assured of enough to eat, can educate their children, and who have snug little sums in the bank or in bonds which will take care of them in the future. The greatest menace to our American institutions today is not the labor agitator nor the trust magnate. The greatest menace to society is the smug, self-satisfied middle class, the standpatters, those who do not wish to be disturbed, the people who do not want to be compelled to face the real social facts of the twentieth century. The labor agitator has not created the social unrest in the world today. It has created him. He has been pushed up from among the people to give expression to their hopes and aspirations."

Produce a Rose, Then Call It What You Will

A friend sends a clipping from a paper in which another advocates compulsory military training in schools for its benefit upon the character of boys. Her method of reasoning is interesting. She says: "It is not necessary to call it military training if the name and idea irks the peaceful mind. Call it compulsory physical training, letting it include the teaching of obedience, respect, self-reliance, self-restraint, precision, loyalty, democracy, manhood, to say nothing of the physical development it accomplishes." That is, leave out all war propaganda, all attempts to create a war spirit, all handling of arms, all direction from the war department, all connection with the R. O. T. C., everything but beneficial training for physical and moral fitness and citizenship; drop even the term "military training," and then make it compulsory. Our Quaker friends will probably accept the program, but what will those who call for compulsory military training in the schools say about it? The question at issue is this: Shall our boys and girls by compulsion be educated in, to and for war? No disguise can evade that issue.

We Want to Stop War Here Is the Way to Do It

Premier Briand spoke a true word the other day. He said in the French assembly: "France is ready to disarm completely the day it gets proper security safeguards." In that word he spoke not only for France but for every nation on earth. No nation is going to disarm until it is persuaded that it is safer disarmed than armed. Millions of people are pledging themselves personally not to participate in war hereafter. Such a pledge has value as a moral protest against war but it is futile as an effort to stop war. Agreements to limit armament may lighten the burden of taxation, but they do not stop war and disarm nations. One thing will. Briand has named it. Whether he knew how much he was saying may be a question. The road to disarmament and peace is security—security against invasion or attack, security of equal economic opportunity, security of equal rights to all peoples, security prescribed by international law and guaranteed by international power. As long as nations refuse to take that road they will prepare for war. The world's peoples are going to take that road presently. Existing governments may as well prepare to take the road or take the ditch.

Give the Social Engineer a Chance at Unemployment

With nearly eight million men reported as unemployed in the industrially organized countries of the world at the present time, the address of Percy S. Brown at the recent national conference for social work has a keen point. He said: "Regardless of the experience of foreign countries that have dealt with unemployment by compensating it instead of preventing it, many of us will have to be sold on this kind of legislation. There is already too much legislation and too little engineering investigation with regard to industrial problems." Fasten your eye on two words: "compensation" and "prevention." They stand respectively for muddling as against scientific treatment for unemployment. Whether we have had "too much legislation" on the subject, who knows? Give the social engineer a chance, unhindered by incompetents in either politics or business. Let him tackle just one problem, namely, how to eliminate unemployment. He will make some interesting discoveries.

Resolved to Train Them But Wanting a Reason

Military training in the schools is the training of both mind and body for war, otherwise it is not military training. Setting up exercises, plain and fancy marching and official etiquette have no necessary relation to war and are not military. Nothing is military that does not include the combat technique and the production of a war psychology. Bar that and you bar every reason for either a military officer or military training in any school anywhere. The reason for such training usually assigned is the necessity for adequate preparedness. If that is the true reason, then such training is conceded to be a necessary evil whose removal is to be desired. But in that case one would expect advocates of such training to be the most earnest propagandists for peace and most assiduous in teaching the causes and cure for war. Are they? For answer observe their attitude towards the peace movement and towards those who are trying to promote it. Does military training in the schools spring from national necessity, or from unnecessary fear and the psychology of war fostered by the war departments of nations?

Bootlegging and Boodle, Twin Brothers at Work

Ever and anon or thereabouts, mysterious hints appear in the papers to the effect that if the public only knew about the graft in connection with the enforcement of prohibition there would be an uproar. Well, spread the information and let the roar begin. Certainly the whole American people were not such simpletons as to suppose that there would be no problem of graft connected with the effort to enforce the law. There are always in every department of government some men who can be "fixed." In this case, an unscrupulous business fighting for its life will certainly try the fine art of corruption on every corruptible man connected with enforcement. Expect it. Keep a lookout for it. Unearth it. Expose it. But in the name of common sense do not mistake it for an argument against prohibition. It is, rather, simply another reason for making prohibition fully effective. It is a part of the sea of slime through which this nation has to wade towards sobriety.

The High Cost of the Bachelor's Degree

By DONALD J. COWLING

A college education should be thought of primarily as an investment. . . . it should bring rich returns in character and in capacity for service, and add to the nation's wealth its most important element—a citizen with powers developed and devoted to noble ends.

A GOOD education is bound to cost somebody considerable money. There is such a thing as a cheap education, but there is no such thing as a good education to be had cheap. Somebody must pay the full cost. The only question is, who shall it be? Earlier generations have answered this question by saying, "Let the teachers pay," and low salaries represent the method they arranged to bring this about. This policy, still in force in most colleges, threatens to run the whole profession of college teaching into the ground. As a matter of fact, strong teachers are no longer to be had for small salaries. There are, of course, rare exceptions, but in the long run, low salaries mean poor teachers.

A second answer to the question, who shall pay, is that the student should be asked to carry a larger share of the cost of his education. This is proving a practical solution of some of the problems of the stronger eastern institutions, where a very considerable portion of the current income is received from students.

However, attention should be called to the difference between the situation an eastern college faces in this respect and that confronting colleges in the West, which are doing their work under the shadow of great state universities. In most state universities, the income from students is a very small part of the current income, and the theory of free tuition has created a situation in the West in which it is exceedingly difficult for non-state colleges to charge as high rates of tuition as are paid in eastern colleges. If western colleges should charge as high fees as are common among eastern institutions, it would mean a steady trend in the direction of excluding students of moderate means and of making these colleges class schools for the well-to-do.

It is probably true that most of the stronger western colleges could go further than they have gone in requiring the student to carry a reasonable part of the cost of his education, but it is also true that this possibility does not furnish a complete solution of the problem.

The third answer to our question as to who shall pay is that the public should bear a large part of the cost of higher education, either through taxes or gifts. The theory of public support for state institution is well established and it is assured that these institutions will steadily grow in influence and power. The multiplying of opportunities for higher education through state institutions is cause for increasing pride all over the country and is a movement which deserves the support of all good citizens. On the other hand, the very fact of the enormous success of state institutions adequately supported through public funds makes it all the more necessary for the separately organized colleges to secure adequate resources from private benevolence to enable them to meet the scholastic standards set by state institutions and to offer in addition many advantages not to be had in state schools.

The religious denominations of America are only beginning to realize the enormous financial responsibilities involved in maintaining institutions of higher learning. Most denominations have had no national policy with reference to the development of their colleges, and no adequate program for their maintenance and support. The renewed interest on the part of many denominations in their colleges and the growing feeling of responsibility for their financial support is most encouraging. This renewed interest and responsibility may well lead all denominations to a reconsideration of their programs regarding colleges. With the exception of two or three denominations, which have done very little in the college field, it is doubtful whether there is a denomination in America which is able to maintain and properly develop the institutions for which it is now responsible. Many of these colleges will surely die. Others will be merged, and it is to be hoped that the method of denominational cooperation will prove to be the wise and practical solution of the problem in many other cases. There are in America today many great areas unprovided with adequate college opportunities for their young people. If the denominations, instead of splitting up their efforts among a number of weak and ineffective institutions, would cooperate with each other in a given region, there could be developed important regional opportunities for high-grade college instruction under Christian auspices which are likely to be realized in no other way.

There are certain objective features of a good college which are not difficult to recognize, and which are sure marks as to whether or not a college is offering its students first-rate opportunities. For example, a good college should have on the average at least one teacher for every twelve students. The enrolment in classes should not exceed thirty. At least 40 per cent of the teaching staff should be full professors. The amount spent for salaries for teaching and educational administration should be at least two-thirds of the entire current budget. These and similar provisions create a situation that requires an expenditure of at least $500 per year for each student for current educational expenses. In addition to this it is necessary for a college to provide an adequate income for current additions to equipment, such as books for the library laboratory apparatus, new buildings, etc. A third item of expense is the matter of scholarships and loans for students who are not able to pay the regular fees. Probably a sum equal to one-fifth of the total tuition receipts could be spent wisely to enable students of unusual promise but without financial resources to continue their college work.

The following table indicates the main items of expense in providing reasonably satisfactory opportunities for 500 students (which is about the minimum number that would justify the maintenance of the essential equipment and personnel for college instruction):

Salaries:

For instruction:
17 professors at $4,000.....	$68,000
12 assistant professors at $3,000.....	36,000
13 instructors at $2,000.....	26,000
	$130,000
For library	15,000
For administration	25,000
	$170,000

Supplies and expense:

Departmental	$ 9,000
Library	1,500
Administration	7,500
<hr/>
Operation and maintenance of plant	$ 18,000
Miscellaneous expense	60,000
	2,000

Total current expense.....$250,000
 It is not to be assumed that $4000 represents a satisfactory salary for a full professor on permanent appointment. This sum is suggested as the minimum required to secure men of first-rate ability, and it is likely that the stronger ones selected will soon leave for more attractive opportunities elsewhere unless larger salaries are provided. It will also be noted that the above total makes no provision for additional allowances for sabbatical furloughs or for pensions.

Over against these expenses would be the following sources of income:

500 students each paying $250 tuition in cash	$100,000
50 students each paying $250 tuition with money received as scholarships	12,500
50 students each paying $250 tuition with money received as loans	12,500
	<hr/>
	$125,000
Balance to be made up by income from endowment ..	125,000

Total current income.....$250,000
 On the basis of the standards indicated above, a college for 500 students, with a tuition charge of $250 a student, needs at least $2,500,000 for general endowment with income available for current expenses. In addition to this, an endowment of at least $500,000 is needed to provide for necessary annual additions to permanent equipment (books, laboratory apparatus, etc.), not included in the current budget; at least $250,000 more to provide an income of $12,500 for scholarships for superior students of limited means; and an additional sum of $62,500 to be used as a revolving fund or loans to students who should be encouraged to undertake the responsibility of repaying the help received. (This would provide $12,500 a year for student loans averaging five years in length.)

These various sums represent a total of at least $3,312,500 needed for endowment. Probably $2,000,000 more would represent the minimum necessary for a modern educational plant for 500 students, exclusive of dormitories. Dormitories and all other service buildings and equipment may well be placed on a self-supporting basis, thus requiring no gifts. The following table summarizes the amounts thus needed as capital investment to provide adequate college opportunities for 500 students:

Endowment for current expenses	$2,500,000
Endowment for annual additions to permanent equipment	500,000
Scholarship endowment	250,000
Revolving fund for student loans	62,500

Total endowment funds.....$3,312,500
 Plant, including grounds, buildings and equipment.. 2,000,000

Total required

	$5,312,000
--	-------------

From the above analysis, it will be evident that teachers, students and the public must all cooperate if good college opportunities are to be provided at moderate rates. Even under the most favorable circumstances, teachers' salaries cannot be made as generous as men of equal ability can earn in most of the other professions. The public must be prepared to provide, either through gifts or taxation, for the entire physical plant, including buildings and equipment, without cost to the student, and it must provide through endowments or current gifts a large part of the actual money spent for current educational purposes. With this help, it is not unreasonable to expect that the student, or his parents, should bear the rest of the cost.

The student who receives no special help would thus be expected to pay the tuition of $250, representing considerably less than half of the actual cost of his education, plus his board and room, the charge for which should be sufficient to cover the cost. These latter items, in most standard colleges, run from $350 to $500. In addition to this, a student would have to provide for his personal expenses, which, in colleges associated with denominations, would probably range from $300 to $500, making a total annual expense to the student of from $900 to $1250.

A college education should be thought of primarily as an investment and not as an expense. If a student makes worthy use of the opportunities provided, the investment brings rich returns in character and capacity for service and adds to the nation's wealth its most important element—a citizen with powers developed and devoted to noble ends.

The Glory of the Commonplace

BY ROBERT WHITAKER

LET us not say,
 However goes the day,
 The glory has departed; common air
 And common cloud can be so strangely fair.
 The desert an ethereal wistfulness
 Weaves from the fabric of its dreariness;
 The young grass springs where flamed the forest fires,
 And the storm breaks in more resplendent pyres,
 Drouth, desolation, mouldering decay,
 Each in its subtle way
 Pays court to beauty and the builder's dream.
 However drab may seem
 That which is open to the casual eye,
 Within the frame-work of the visible
 Hideth forever the ineffable.
 Beyond both flower and weed,
 The blossom and the seed,
 Pebble or pearl,
 Plain stick or redwood burl,
 Marsh slime or midnight sky,
 Worketh the miracle
 That microscope nor telescope desery,
 Save but to show the fringes of the dress
 That clothes all being in such loveliness
 As tongues shall need eternity to tell.

Wherefore is nothing common or unclean,
 Nor any day's tale mean,
 So that who tells it fares beyond the seen;
 Beyond the unwinged senses heavy flight
 Sees great and small and high and low unite,
 And good and ill.
 Then be life as it will,
 Or where or what
 Our momentary lot,
 Weeds, flowers, sticks, stars our portion, even so
 Under their superficials all things now,
 From age to age, allow Science and art new continents to show
 Of meanings unsuspected hitherto,
 The old disclosing evermore the new.
 Nor does it yet appear
 What is, or shall be, of each item here.
 There is no commonplace;
 No need to grieve for any vanished grace.
 Say not, the glory has departed; say,
 Be what may be the day
 The wonder of it has but yet begun.
 For lo! the atom is itself a sun,
 The present an eternity,
 And all that is, a something yet to be.

Our Undernourished Colleges

"Our educational standing is actually in jeopardy because worthy and capable educators have been asked to make bricks without straw."—Dean A. T. Belknap.

BY FRED G. BOUGHTON

WHICH are the undernourished? No college executive is ever satisfied. The college may be crowded with students, an adequate faculty functioning "100 per cent" and the equipment meeting the most rigid demands for standardization, but the administration still longs for added millions for enlarged curricula and research possibilities. As soon as one dream comes true for a college president, a still larger vision covers the horizon. This article will assume, however, that there is a reasonable goal of healthiness within reach of the average institution, and will limit the topic to those anaemic colleges which are either unable to carry out the program that they advertise to the public or do not serve reasonably well the educational demands of their natural constituencies.

The history of almost every Christian college includes a period of undernourishment—usually until the third generation of the alumni has arrived with money and children enough to put alma mater on a firm footing. This long period records heroism on the part of teachers and officers and trustees on a par with that displayed in the most strenuous forms of missionary endeavor. There are or have been three groups of Baptist colleges in our northern states: (1) some that have had the good fortune to grow amazingly because men of wealth and vision have poured millions into endowment funds and equipment; (2) a dozen or more that have already starved to death because sadly underfed financially, with no denominational backing and poorly located; and (3) a few that are still battling for their lives.

Since 1908 northern Baptists have been rapidly developing an intelligent and progressive educational policy coupled with at least a moderate program of support. Our leadership in the great kingdom enterprises is seriously lacking, however, because of the comparatively small percentage of Baptist young people enrolled for college training. In the United States as a whole, a few years ago, the ratio of membership attending college (as reported by the Council of Church Boards) was as follows: in each 100,000 members, Congregationalists had 1200, Presbyterians 1030, Unitarians 1000, Episcopalians 900, Methodists 500, Lutherans 300, Baptists 200. If the denominational factor is to be of future value, the whole Northern Baptist Convention is vitally concerned with the life-and-death struggle now being made by so many of our sixty-four schools. And who would venture to say how many of these are not undernourished?

Starving for Students

While, since the war, hundreds of American universities and colleges have been overflowing with students, many of our Baptist student bodies have been too small to be efficient. The small college by all odds has the advantage in the giving of liberal arts college work, but it must not be too small. If too small, the classes may not be large enough for the best discussions; the athletic squads and debate teams may be inadequate for college enthusiasm and victories; each student is forced into too many extra-curricular activities, so that (no matter how valuable such items are) he becomes overloaded and something suffers; the Christian associations, literary societies, etc., need a larger minimum membership in order to function well. A student body of 1000 is quite large enough; a college of 100, though meeting the minimum standard, is decidedly undernourished, and is always on the danger line.

Our schools are fairly well located. Why then the weakness in student members? Each one has its Baptist constituency and its home city and country. With all the logic in favor of small colleges for college work why are they so largely starving for students, while the monster universities are overcrowded? The answer involves many angles, which I can here merely name and not discuss: (1) the very small Baptist constituencies of a few colleges are not sufficiently reinforced by local students because of heavy competition; (2) many youths and even their parents are enamored by the bigness of great universities, by their supposed "prestige," or by their emphasis on social life and athletics; (3) some avoid a Christian college because it is mistakenly supposed to be nearly if not entirely a theological school; or (4) frankly because it does endeavor to furnish a social ethical program that is truly Christian; or (5) because its real sportsmanship will not guarantee intercollegiate victories while it repudiates commercialized athletics; or (6) because it lacks adequate equipment; or (7) because its curriculum needs a wider range of electives; or (8) because it is not "accredited" by the stiffest standardizing agency in the country.

No matter how good an answer can be given to this or that objection, no matter if the misinformation is definitely corrected, no matter how much we deplore the decisions of thoughtless parents or the fact that the high-school gang had more power in the decision than the parents, it remains true that for reasons similar to those listed above, thousands of our young people pass by our Baptist colleges and thereby impoverish the numbers and enthusiasm and versatility of the student bodies. Thus they ultimately remain outside our alumni groups that might otherwise save the day for alma mater. Only God knows how many leaders are thus lost to the Baptist churches.

Then we must add to these invalid or semi-valid excuses or reasons two outstanding facts: (a) that whether we like it or not, denominationalism is fast losing its point and power among boys and girls and their parents and still more so among their high-school teachers and other advisers; and (b) that more and more every student body today is made up of young people within a fifty mile radius, regardless of denominational affiliation or even of national and international renown.

Undernourished with Money

Which is cause and which is effect: lack of students or lack of funds? Every college president faces the dilemma: "Get an enthusiastic larger student body and we will believe enough in your school to help finance it; get enough endowment and equipment to be standardized or we will not send our children to your college." The problem is well presented in a paragraph from an unpublished article by Dean A. T. Belknap, of the Mansfield, Pa., normal school, formerly president of Grand Island college. His theme "Bricks without Straw":

"Our slow progress in denominational education has been due to the failure of men of means to give adequate financial support to the schools. . . . On the appoint ment of a national committee to investigate our schools the Baptist executive wittily remarked: "The denomination has a perfect right to investigate our faith, for faith is all it has ever given us to live on." . . . Our educational standing is actually in jeopardy because worthy and capable educators have been asked to make bricks without straw. Self-sacrifice is essential, but it is essential for wealthy donors as well as for poor instructors. Self-sacrifice will not take the place of libraries and laboratories and dormitories and recitation rooms and time for study and investigation. Student campaigns and college spirit will not take the place of intellectual attainment and technical equipment."

Perhaps it should be said, as comparatively few men and women (even though college bred) are familiar with the fact, that in almost no school in America are the tuitions and other student fees sufficient for the financial budget. Ordinarily such student payments take care of only two-fifths of the total cost; at the present time in some of our Baptist colleges they cover barely one-fifth. Furthermore, scholarships and discounts are constantly requested—sometimes almost demanded—by student groups of different sorts, even when the college has no income-bearing funds to cover such items. The resulting fact is that large endowments must be provided by friends of education. Even in earlier decades it has practically always been true that only those American colleges have weathered the financial storms which had obtained generous interest-bearing endowment funds to produce a steady, dependable income. It is increasingly true now.

In the past ten years college professors' salaries and other costs have nearly doubled. The fact is unpleasant, at least for the administration, but must be faced. And the accrediting agencies have this change very much in mind. Nearly all of our undernourished colleges are in such geographical territory that they desire accreditation by the North Central Association of colleges and secondary schools. The most difficult demand that it now makes is a minimum of $500,000 income-bearing endowment for a minimum of 100 students, and $50,000 for each additional hundred. Within recent years this money requirement has been increased so often and so much that many Christian colleges are now gasping for breath, even though they had previously been accredited or nearly so. Just a few weeks ago a modification was made by the association, viz., a provision for capitalization at 5 per cent of the annual income received from church gifts averaged from preceding five years, and the counting of such capitalized amount as endowment. This provision applies to such colleges already have a total of $300,000 endowment, and ought to afford relief to several such institutions.

These financial requirements have seemed to many educators arbitrary and harsh when they know that their institutions are actually delivering honest college work. At the same time it must be recognized that even the minimum-sized college of liberal arts ought to have an annual income of $50,000 from thoroughly dependable sources; and the income from $500,000 endowment cares for only half of such a minimum budget. Whether we thoroughly approve of this self-appointed dictator of educational accreditation or not, its power is tremendous and the struggling Christian college cannot obtain the student body that it ought to have when it is constantly listed as "unaccredited."

What to Do

Perhaps no general formula can be given. A medical specialist for infants prescribes treatment to fit each separate diagnosis: more sunlight; more fresh air; more cream or lime water; less coddling and more exercise; temporary medicine or a correction of diet. So each college problem needs a specific solution. But the one need common to all struggling colleges is endowment, no matter what specifics may be named. For endowment we have been looking to our own local constituencies pretty largely; sometimes also to friendly donors scattered throughout the land; and for twenty-four years to the General Education Board which has assisted upwards of 300 American schools to improve their financial methods and to enlarge their endowment funds. Their policy has been: "To him that hath shall be given." Let the baby college show enough vigor and good judgment to live within its income and then it deserves to live a still bigger life. This sounds inhumane, but there is certainly much to be said in its favor. This board has now discontinued its help to colleges in order to specialize in research schools. A large number of our Baptist institutions have been greatly helped by gifts for education.

We must turn to the Northern Baptist Convention for any help from outside the local field. What percentage of our missionary money belongs to education? Education is interlocked with all the other forms of missionary effort in developing the kingdom of God. Our board of education is rendering a most intelligent and helpful service. Shall we ask it to help build endowments or to continue with current expense contributions, or both? Or shall we ask the colleges to increase their tuition fees 300 per cent? Or shall each college be turned loose to solicit money from coast to coast for equipment and endowment? Or, in sparsely settled sections shall we encourage the merging of two or more starving Christian colleges into one? Great wisdom is needed to interweave efficiency, sentiment, denominational loyalty, economy and honesty. At any rate, the call is loud and insistent that our undernourished colleges should not be allowed to die a slow death nor to pose as colleges when they are unable financially and otherwise to "deliver the goods." We must support them or discontinue them.

Proven Love

BY W. EVERETT HENRY

*If mother knew what things were best,
And had the power to bring to pass
According to her will:
If she could see things present, past
And yet to come as in a glass,
Discern the reach of all and each
For utmost good or ill,
And had the power to speed or stay
Their coming unto me,
Would I go fearful on life's way?
How could I doubtful be
Of mother's proven love?*

*But One there is who doth thus know,
Whose gaze includes time's farthest hour,
Who doth all things discern;
No scheming foe beyond can go
His searching wisdom or his power;
And loveliest love his love to me
Life proves at every turn
And stronger far than loves of earth
However strong they be.
How then can I e'er suffer dearth
While knowledge dwells with me
Of Jesus' proven love?*

Adequate Theological Training

A Symposium

A MINISTER cannot be trained by being exhorted. He must know something if his views are to be respected. An ignorant loquacity is one of the dangers now threatening the Baptist pulpit. To train men correctly is to make them religiously efficient. A man cannot be ignorant and a successful pastor of people who are not ignorant. An adequate theological training should include:

I. A knowledge of the Christian religion as an historical movement. Such a knowledge is more than a mere remembering of facts. The student should be instructed as to how and why the Christian religion developed. He should be able to understand how and why doctrines emerged, how institutions and customs developed, why there was need of reformation, why there have always been change and development in Christendom. No man can preach wisely today who is not historically-minded. Our churches are suffering from preachers who know nothing of the history of the religion they represent.

II. A knowledge of the Bible. This is, of course, fundamental to any understanding of Christianity. But the Bible improperly used is a dangerous agent of Christianity. It has been repeatedly quoted to justify social wrongs like slavery, war, use of liquor, polygamy. Such use is wrong but the minister needs to be so trained that he will know how to state its wonderful spiritual and moral value without committing his hearers to mistaken views of the real inspiration of its prophets and writers. Such knowledge of the Bible and such a proper method of study cannot be simply told students. They must be trained in the practice of the right use of the Bible.

III. Training in understanding of social forces and individual needs as set forth by the best experts in the various fields of knowledge. Most of the adaptation of Christian activities to modern conditions has been the result of a trial and failure method. There is no more reason why a minister should have to be unintelligently experimental than is a doctor. As in the case of the doctor, he needs to be intelligent if he is to be effective. If it is foolish for an ignorant man to attempt to cure people's bodies, how much more dangerous is it for a minister to attempt to cure their souls and society.

IV. Training in preaching and pastoral duties. This need goes without saying. It is one thing to lecture and another to preach. Pastors ought not to be more or less reduced theological teachers. They ought to be preachers, knowing how to use their voices as well as their brains.

V. Training in the discovery, appropriation and practice of the truth of the Christian religion. By the time men have known the history of the religion and have come to understand the Bible, it ought not to be difficult for them to understand what is permanent and applicable to our modern world. Ministers ought to know what the intellectual currents of the world are and they ought to know that Christian preaching and Christian beliefs must take these modern currents and scientific data into consideration. But religion is neither science nor philosophy. It is living with God. The minister must so live as to become a master of the religious life itself. To do so entails more than a memorizing of a book of theology. It means prayer and service as well as individual commitment of oneself to convictions which on the one side are reasonable and on the other side capable of producing Christlike character.

There are a great many things that a theological seminary does not need to teach. It ought to assume that its students know them when they come from college. Why should it teach sociology, psychology, economics? The business of a seminary is to transform educated men into Christian ministers. Of course, the man is not educated before he comes to the seminary he ought not to be there. To say that small churches can succeed with ill-trained pastors is an insult to the small churches. Many Baptist churches are suffering from the ministrations of earnest souls who are not intelligent and are not trained. We cannot expect a church or a denomination to be more intelligent than its leaders.

—SHAILER MATHEWS.

“WHAT is adequate theological training for a Baptist minister?” What I may say in answer to this question proceeds upon the assumption that the young man to be trained has had a genuine religious experience, has an abiding sense of vocation, and a keen desire to preach the gospel of Christ. Having so much, what kind of training will best fit him for his calling?

The training, that approximates adequacy, at its best would include the influence of a good home, the instruction of a graded Bible school, the fellowship and opportunity for worship and service afforded by a live church under the guidance of a good minister of Jesus Christ. So much to begin with as an invaluable background.

Adequate training, under ordinary circumstances, would include a four years' course in a standard college with especial attention given to the English language, Greek and Latin, history, sociology, biology, psychology and philosophy. There are other college disciplines that are important but those named are essential. It would be an improvement over present conditions if young men came to their theological work knowing how to speak and write good English.

One in search of adequate training for the ministry will not stop short of a full course in a standard theological school. The curriculum of these schools is the result of educational and practical experience. The curriculum may not be perfectly adapted to its purpose but it is the best provision so far made that young ministers “may be furnished completely unto every good work.” The courses of our best theological schools are built up around the Bible. They include an increasing variety of subjects, made necessary by the complexity of modern church life. A student who masters what is required and what he elects from these courses will be using to the best advantage his years of special training for the ministry. This is not to say that he must take no time for putting into practice what he has learned. He will learn by doing. Therefore it will be wise for him to put his hand to some piece of kingdom work and undertake to accomplish certain definite results. This will give an increased opportunity for self-criticism and self-discipline which are indispensable for the improvement of a growing man in a critical world.

If I had to define in a sentence what I mean by training for the work of the ministry I would say that it is such discipline, physical, mental, moral and spiritual, as tends to bring a personality to its highest efficiency. A student is most likely to get such discipline as he travels the road that runs through the Christian home, the church, the college and the theological school.

The Baptist denomination is fairly well equipped for giving this training. It has good colleges and theological schools fairly well distributed over the country. Our greatest need is twofold. The first is that pastors and others whose counsel is sought by young men desiring to become ministers should give the right advice. If these advisors will urge the necessity of adequate training, good results will follow. The other need is that the candidates themselves should sense deeply the need of the best preparation possible for them, and give themselves with utmost devotion to acquiring that preparation.

An improved ministry among us waits on more wisdom on the part of the mentors of our earnest young men, and upon the willingness of these same young men to pay the price of that discipline which will at least tend to bring their personality to its highest efficiency.

—CLAIBORNE M. HILL.

THE subject implies a vocational ministry, and an adequate vocational training is the dream of practical educators. Theories must be tested in practical work. The task of the church is to secure a better future for the world. To do this requires a training in appreciation of values rather than in knowledge. The undergraduate in the seminary masters the requirements of the curriculum not for the sake of knowledge only, but rather for the sake of power. Nor should he discipline mind in order to vindicate the past of any organization to which he happens to belong, except in as far as the organization can function more efficiently tomorrow than it did yesterday. The best training will provide wisdom rather than information, a wisdom that knows how and when to discard whatever hinders efficiency.

Sometimes progress is made only by throwing away weapons tested by long experience. Today a school renders its best service by pointing out the relative values of organizations and doctrines and ordinances, and training students in courage and initiative to select whatever has been most valuable in unifying all who accept the Lordship of Jesus, and discarding whatever perpetuates rivalries and divisions.

One thing seems certain: today the social consequences of salvation are most to be desired. If the trained ministry cannot mediate to our common humanity doctrines and practices that effect a changed relationship to fellow-men, it is idle to talk about a changed relationship to God. The doctrine of the Fatherhood of God is a fairy tale, if it does not eventuate in the brotherhood of man.

Brotherhood or fellowship is the need of this distracted world. Barriers of race, of class, of education, of culture, of convention, and prejudice, separate. Hatred, strife, jealousies, ambitions, and conflicting interests must be banished. There ought to be an organization on earth where those things do not exist; where fellowship is a fact. The church is such ideally; actually in history the church has not been a wholly successful experiment in brotherly love.

Training for the ministry in the past has fostered permanent divisions and perpetuated conflicting interests. Denominational rivalries have hindered the idea of brotherhood gripping the conscience of the non-Christian world. An adequate training now must discontinue methods and policies that perpetuate rivalries within the Christian brotherhood. This means that the central theological truth, "God is love," must be taken more seriously than in the past, even if it does involve a "new theology," or a "new polity." To love God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is to love man as God loves him; and this means that man is the end and not the means, and that therefore the church with all its glorious achievements in supplying high ideals must be regarded as instrumental. To permit an organization, or a creed, or an ordinance to have divisive effects among men, so as to estrange them, is to belittle man. He must be loved for his own sake, and not because he is a recruit, a trophy, a new adherent to a party, a new signer of a creed.

An adequately trained theological leader, then, knows all that can be known within his limitations, that he may, like Jesus, empty himself to serve. He will know all conditions of race and culture, that he may have human sympathy, recognizing no distinction between Jew and Gentile, Greek and Barbarian; he will know history, including the Bible, well enough to know how to discriminate between things that differ, and use only those facts and truths that tend to make men of "one mind in the Lord." An adequate theological training will produce teachers that make for harmony, not discord, edification, not destruction, progress, not retrogression, a kingdom of righteousness and of love on earth.

—MILTON G. EVANS.

BY "adequate" is meant "fully adequate," the preparation the minister should have under normal conditions, unusual circumstances not considered. Such preparation should put him into vital touch with the present world of thought and action, put into his hands the equipment for his many-sided work, give him firm grasp on the methods needed, place his feet squarely on the solid rock of the Bible and of Christian and Baptist doctrine, and imbue him with the evangelistic and missionary fervor, social zeal, which can be learned of, made powerful by, the Holy Spirit only.

His touch on the Bible should include thorough knowledge of it in English, the Bible the people use. But he must by no means lack working knowledge of the languages in which the book was written, not to make him a specialist but to save him from being the helpless victim of the specialists. A breed of Christian teachers who have not enough Greek and Hebrew to read intelligently a modern commentary or to appraise the arguments for or against a revolutionary "critical" theory would certainly be "blind leaders of the blind."

A systematic knowledge of the foundation truths of the Christian religion, logically correlated, clearly seen, firmly held, must be the aim of such a training. Nobody wants to cram students with predigested theological pap, but there should be more in them when they get out of the seminary than slightly condensed atmosphere. Animated interrogation points will never capture the world for Jesus. And such firm and adequate grasp of doctrine is impossible without a knowledge of the debates and struggles and disputed principles which have brought the Christian world to its present status. Very likely theologians in the past have known a great many things that were not so. But we can not get far without knowing a few things that are so.

His touch with the living world of action will be given him partly by a full academy and college course, with some science in it, but mostly embracing the old "humanities," and the literary and the cultural studies. Never should his college courses be shortened. Every professional man needs the broadest base and widest outlook for his work, but the minister, whose business is to think men's thoughts with him, that he may get them to think God's thoughts after him, especially can not afford to lose the wider outlooks and contacts of the last two college years. For him, "prevocational" college courses are rarely necessary, usually simply another form of the delusive "shortcut."

Another touch with his world is the sociological studies. These also, to get the real Christian insight, angle and power, would better be taken in the seminary, where Christ is recognized as the greatest social force and the church the greatest meliorative social instrument; also because so much nearer actual utilization of social principles in his ministry. The present development of religious education in our seminaries is only at its beginning. The Sunday school will more and more be the church's greatest evangelistic agency. While special evangelism should be stressed more earnestly and sincerely even than now, the social and educational studies must be deepened and heightened. The minister must know his men and their conditions and lead in the development of the Sunday school and also be a trained and effective soul winner. These studies can not take the place of the deeper study of the Bible in English and the originals, but they ought to take a nearly equal place beside them.

Not nearly enough attention is now given to homiletics, pastoral theology, church management and the like. Being a "saddler," I am sure "there is nothing like leather," and so that more stress on sermon making and sermon delivery is absolutely imperative. To say of a minister that "he is a good man, but he can't preach," is a shameful accusation of ineptitude not only in him, but also, perhaps, in his teachers.

Music? Certainly an opportunity to secure mastery in this should be open to the normal student. It would not have helped me much! And no theological training will be adequate without a large amount of actual laboratory work. Nothing else is "training." All this in a three years' course? It can not be. I plead for four years in the seminary for every college graduate.

—PHILIP WENDELL CRANNELL.

I SHOULD say the first and fundamental thing is the need for a knowledge of the scriptures, both in the English and translation, and in the original languages. The latter is, of course, not necessary to great usefulness in the Baptist ministry, but it is of very great value.

2. I should say a knowledge of the subjects which introduce the study of the Bible, commonly classified under the general head "Introduction," or "Biblical Introduction," covering a number of subjects.

3. I should name a knowledge of doctrine. The Baptist minister ought to understand the teachings of the scriptures as formulated in doctrinal statements. More important still is the knowledge of what is in modern theological education, known as "Biblical Theology," in which the effort to systematize is put aside, and an effort is made to get an exact teaching of the various writers of the Bible.

4. I should say he ought to have a good knowledge of Baptist principles and practice. Unfortunately this is not as common today as it once was.

5. I should emphasize the importance of church history.

6. The student should have a sufficient knowledge of comparative religion and missions.

7. He should, of course, have an adequate knowledge of sermon making.

8. He should understand the fundamentals of Christian sociology.

9. He should have a knowledge of how to organize and make efficient a church, and by this I mean efficiency within the church itself, and efficiency in its relations to the cooperative work of the denomination. He should have an adequate knowledge of Sunday-school organization and method.

10. Theological training should give the student an adequate training on the practical side of the pastor's life—the organization of his church and the promotion of its interests in various forms.

11. The theological education should give adequate training in public speaking. This, I think, has been to a certain extent neglected in some theological institutions and it is a serious fault. Some knowledge of music also is desirable for the preacher, although as a general thing a thorough course in music cannot be given in connection with the ordinary theological course.

In conclusion, it goes without saying that the young minister should be trained to sympathize with and be interested in all movements for righteousness in society around him, and he should be as far as possible trained in the ideals of evangelism and missions. When he leaves the seminary he should be well equipped as a kingdom builder, not in the sense that he has attained perfection, but in the sense that the processes which he will pursue in his actual work have at least been started.

—E. Y. MULLINS.

THIS discussion presupposes three things: 1. A student for the ministry should have a positive and definite conversion and Christian experience. He should know that he is a new creature in Christ. 2. He should have a strong conviction that he is personally called to devote his life to the ministry. 3. He should have the best scholastic preparation possible for him to secure and in most cases such preparation should be largely made before entering upon his theological training. Assuming this, our statement will deal only with the special theological training of Baptist ministers. The following points are essential:

(a) A thorough working knowledge of the Bible, which is a supernatural and complete compendium of religious principles. This means a general survey of all of the books of the Bible and an intensive knowledge of certain sections so that the student will have the ability to know how to study and how to open up the scriptures. It is a great advantage if the student is well enough versed in Greek so that he can do good exegetical work in the Greek New Testament.

(b) Systematic theology gives a man balance and teaches him the relation of doctrines to each other. It helps to make one consistent with himself and keeps him from going off on doctrinal tangents, since it emphasizes the major scriptural truths. Some of these, such as the authority of the scriptures, the deity of the Lord Jesus Christ, the fact of the atonement, the hope of his coming again, and that the only scriptural baptism is the immersion of the believer upon the confession of his faith, should be thought through for himself and become positive convictions on the part of a Baptist minister before he enters upon his life service.

(c) Church history and Baptist history are indispensable, and excursions into such subjects as the history of preaching, the history of missions, and the history of social movements, are also essential.

(d) A student must learn how to prepare and present sermons and addresses. He should be taught to magnify the preaching of Christ crucified, risen, and coming as the heart of his ministry. Clinics in the making of sermon plans and the delivery of sermons and addresses should be conducted, so that the student will learn how to correct his faults, to supply his deficiencies, and to speak and to use his voice properly. His training in public speaking should be far more than popular elocution. He should understand the psychology back of public address. Moreover, he should in this, as in all other things, have his own personality developed so that he will be his own best self, and not a mere copy or imitation of someone else.

Pastoral Theology

(e) As a pastor he should have the best instruction possible in pastoral theology. He should hear specialists who have succeeded in the several fields of the ministry and if possible come in personal contact with them and their work. Pastors who have been especially strong in developing the spiritual life and the prayer meetings of the church should be heard and the students themselves should have clinical work in the same. There is something sadly lacking in the pastor who does not realize the vital value of the prayer meeting and who can not and will not conduct a real service of that type. The future pastor should be taught how to conduct a business meeting according to the best parliamentary usages. Before going to a field he should know how to study and appraise its peculiar problems. He should hear the best lectures and if possible have clinical work on the making of a church program, church efficiency, church organization, hymnology and Sunday school and young people's work, pedagogy and Christian education, vacation Bible schools, and the various duties that confront the modern pastor, for he should realize that this is the year 1926. Since the best way to learn to preach is to preach and the best way to learn to do pastoral work is to do pastoral work, one or two summers and if possible some other short time service as student pastor are invaluable in showing the young minister the problems he must meet and the places where he ought to be personally strengthened. If he meets these problems and realizes these needs while he still has contact with his teachers and his fellow students, it will fit him more immediately to render a larger and more efficient service upon leaving school.

(f) Special stress should be laid upon the study of social and economic movements as those movements are related to the progress of the Christian church. Specialists should lecture to the students on these topics. However, the basic principles derived from the study of scripture, history, and human nature are of paramount importance in facing these questions.

(g) Every student should be well grounded in Baptist principles, in missions, and particularly in Baptist missions, both at home and abroad, in Baptist literature, and Baptist movements. He should be versed in the work of the association, the state convention, and our national organizations, and to the best of his ability should be in touch with those who are the missionary and official representatives of such organizations.

(h) A man is not fit to enter upon the active work of the Baptist ministry unless he knows how to lead a soul to Christ. Every minister ought to preach evangelistic sermons. Some are more gifted than others in this particular, but every Baptist minister ought to be a personal soul-winner, and to know how to win lost souls to Christ.

(i) The minister should be instructed as to what books and magazines to buy, how to read and study to advantage, and how to do research work in libraries or elsewhere on special subjects. This is essential for the most effective work and the largest growth in the ministry.

(j) The young minister should never in school or in his ministry lose sight of the fact that he is first, last and supremely a man of God and that no matter how well he may do in other particulars, if he fails as a man of God, he is a complete failure. To be a real man of God will develop his prayer life, make him clean in his habits, courteous in his relations to others, and careful about his good name, for he is a living epistle. Christ, and Christ alone, is his ideal, his prophet, his priest, his king.

—GEORGE W. TAFT.

Revival at Hand

By G. H. MORRISON

I BELIEVE, and my faith draws its strength from history, that a time of revival is at hand. Anyone who has studied the great revival movements of the past—and the history of the church is little else than the story of revivals—is aware that such great times have always come amid peculiar national conditions. They have come in times of national transition, when new conceptions of society were surging in the minds of men; when new classes, hitherto inaudible and powerless, were rising into power; when the social fabric was rent and torn by forces which, seemingly disruptive and destructive, were really the passionate cry of the human spirit for fair dealing, for personal liberty, for justice. Such was the period of St. Francis, such the epoch of the Reformation, such the national condition in the days of Wesley. And the coldest historian admits now that, in an England seething with unrest and with rebellion, Wesley did more to save his country from bloody revolution than all the statecraft of his time.

He must be blind indeed who fails to recognize in the prevailing conditions of today the very features which have characterized the great revival periods of history. Therefore do I strongly hold that the first duty of the church today—the greatest service it can render to a divided and distracted country—is not merely to give good advice, not merely to pray for peace and brotherhood, nor to offer ineffectual suggestions, but, recognizing the signs of the times, to have vision, to stand a-tiptoe with expectancy, to give heaven no rest till its windows are opened, by a Hand that is not reluctant, and till, "not by might nor by power but by my spirit," saith the Lord, there is granted us a national revival of religion.

This will not settle strikes. This will not, as by any magic touch, change the storm into a calm. But it will give the atmosphere, the calmer and the kindlier air, in which with a new sense of human values and of duties and of responsibilities men will draw together, lay aside their bitternesses, often so justifiable, and move into that general deep harmony of spirit without which peace is but a fleeting shadow.

The Devotional Life

The Father of Spirits

BY F. W. NORWOOD

CRITICS tell us that we can never be sure who wrote the epistle to the Hebrews. But whoever he was, he had a genius for telling phrases, and surely was never more inspired than when he coined this beautiful name for God—"the Father of Spirits."

The House of Clay

This name for God is delicately graceful, and poignantly powerful. Were we to grasp its significance it might alter our lives and our attitude towards the material world itself. God is not the "Father" of mountains and rivers, trees and creatures, and the bodies of men. He is their Maker. They express his power, but not his person. He is the Father of Spirits.

Fatherhood implies the impartation of personality itself. It involves resemblance. In our human fatherhood we transmit our bodily qualities to our offspring; but then we are bodies and our processes are physical. We give of what we are to our children. Having bodies we expect bodily resemblance, though we long for much. But God is not a body; he is a Spirit. There is no correlative to the body in God. He "makes" our bodies, but is not "Father" to them. He is the Father of Spirits.

Our bodies are material and temporary. We use them for a little while, and then they are cast aside. This is the most obvious fact in our experience. Neither are they our own in any peculiar sense. They belong to the common stock, and are made of precisely the same materials as are in use for multitudinous purposes. They have been used over and over again before. When we have done with them they will go back into the common stock, and be used over and over again.

This is not to discredit the body. No nobler or truer definition was ever given of it than that given by Paul. "Your bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit." A temple that enshrines nothing is a melancholy and pathetic object.

The Holy of Holies was left vacant so far as material objects were concerned. The Invisible gave sanctity to the vast superstructure. Our bodies are the mundane home of our spirits. They should be kept fit for their indwelling. The worst thing to be said of our lusts is that they defile our habitation. A mind cumbered with mean things is a room made unfit for the spirit's comfort. A polluted conscience makes the august hall of judgment a chamber of spectres. The house may degrade the tenant, for how can he be clean if the house is unclean? A pure spirit in a worthy house is the only adequate description of a complete man.

Only Spirit Matters

Nothing matters much then but the life of the spirit. We have known for a long while how unsatisfactory are merely material things. The preachers and the moralists have been saying from time immemorial that houses, lands, and money are not of the real essence of our life. We use them until we respond to an inevitable call. Then they go back into the common fund and other spirits dismember them or use them until they too pass on. The lot of man is only variable within narrow limits. With but slight differences the same things come to every one of us. Joy and sorrow, success and failure, health and sickness, life and death. We are much nearer to one another than we think. We cherish our differences and hide our eyes from our similarities. We pride ourselves upon our distinctions, boasting of the little extra cleverness, or wealth, or social advantage. But we are passing through the same school and learning pretty much the same lessons. The most fallacious of all tests is that of our material possessions. These are the things that God will forget to ask about. We shall have stepped out from the midst of them when we report progress. Even here, amid the shadows where we do not see clearly, we feel out after judgments that belong to the spirit. He who meets sorrow without bitterness and is not coarsened by prosperity; who is defeated but fights on, or is triumphant but remains humble; who carries the hopefulness of youth into the deepening shadows of age, and when the sun is setting is confident of the morn—this is the man who has lived well. It is such as he who knows that there can be no nobler name for God than this—"the Father of Spirits."

A Larger View of Life

I would like to see many things reorganized so as to give a better fighting chance for the spirit of man. I hate the ignorance that exposes men to panic, and the poverty that vitiates the stimulus to resistance and engenders despair. I hate the lusts that issue a call to the jungle and the sodden things that steep men in brutality. I would like to see a new fashion of social reform that did not seek merely to pacify man the animal, but gave vision and courage to his spirit.

I have only heard one saying from dying lips that seemed to me to do justice to all that is in man. It is forever hallowed by the lips that spoke from the cross—"Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit." Bruised body and wooden cross, helmets and spears, oaths and curses, and all the tangle of things half-fledged and struggling—they have naught to do with Christ save as the foils of his soul. It is the word of one who knew that God is the "Father of Spirits."

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for July 11

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

The last chapter of Bruce Barton's book, "The Man Nobody Knows" has some thoughts which will fit right into this meeting. Here we learn of how Christ kept on with his work, regardless of circumstances, and in spite of the end he knew was imminent.

In presenting this lesson, you might tell two birds with one stone" by having two meetings. Have the first part of the meeting "the way it is usually done." The singing might be slow, and the people uninterested. The topic presentation could be brief, probably just a few statements such as "Our topic this evening is 'Keeping On—No Slips.' It means that we should keep on and not slip on what we are doing. Has anyone anything to say on the subject?" A few minutes after (without allowing anyone to say anything), the leader could call for another song.

Then show how the meeting ought to be. Have the singing spirited and the songs fitting in with the topic. The topic presentation could be given in a sincere, straight way. The point should be brought out that we have to keep everlastingly at it that we are trying to do in order to accomplish things for Christ. The leader might even state that besides using the regular scripture, he had found other references which seemed to fit in: Philip-ans 3:13-16.

It might be stated, also, that the point about sticking to the job applies to the meetings, and to our own lives as well.

A. Modern Caravan

Are you not thrilled when you read stories of pioneering, or when you see pictures of life as it was then? The long line of covered wagons moving slowly across the prairies; the herds of cattle camping alongside of the caravan; the sturdy pioneers, mounted on horses, going before to see that a good place is found for the night's rest; all captivate the imagination and hold the interest,

Next month residents along the west coast may see a modern caravan of "covered wagons" containing adventurers. A long line of cars—small ones, large ones, rattling ones, purring ones, cars piled high with camping paraphernalia, cars emitting songs and yells, cars containing smiling faces and happy hearts—will be seen going along over mountain and valley, for 1000 miles. Bringing up the rear will be a large supply wagon carrying the food for the adventurers. Going before the caravan will be a fore-runner who will select the site for camp.

What is this modern caravan? Where is it going? Why is it going? This caravan is the Oregon delegation of Baptist young people who are going to Los Angeles, Calif., to attend the thirty-fifth annual convention of Baptist young people. Instead of going by train, as will most delegations, the Oregon young people are going by auto. The use of the automobiles is donated. All other expenses, such as food, lodging, etc., will be cared for in the amount paid to the transportation manager. And that amount is perhaps the best part yet. This is what the transportation manager says: "We will pack you, sleep you, and eat you, thirteen days for $30." Think of going a 1000 miles and seeing some of the most wonderful scenery in the world, of attending the best ever convention of Baptist young people, and of having thirteen days of vacation—all for $30. Do you think it's worth it? (Echo: It's worth it!)

And now for the application of all this. You are not all from Oregon, and so you can't all take this trip. But, all of the states have summer assemblies. Perhaps there are some young people in your church who want to go, but who cannot afford the cost of the trip. A plan such as Oregon is using for the convention would cut the cost of travel to minimum. More than likely people from other churches in your vicinity would like to go via caravan and would join such a party.

Or there are rallies and state conventions to which members of your young people's society would like to go. The caravan method would be a good one in such instances. A regular picnic and vacation would attract many young people, and the rallies or conventions or assemblies would probably be better attended than ever before. Why not try it?

The Better Way

To some of you "The Better Way" will immediately bring to mind "C. L. P." To those of you who are not familiar with the C. L. P. (Christian Life Program), this will not mean anything. "The Better Way" is the new leaflet telling about the Christian Life Program for all Baptist young people. If you want to familiarize your young people with this program, by distributing it at your next rally or other meeting, send to the B. Y. P. U. of America for a supply. If you want to find out for yourself what the C. L. P. is, send for a copy of "The Better Way." It will tell you more about this better way of accomplishing the tasks which confront the young people of the church.

Centuries of priestly rule and exploitation have burned into the bone of the Mexican people the necessity of breaking utterly the power of the church to control either the political or the economic life of Mexico. By the constitution of 1917 the church is forbidden to own real estate or mortgages on same, to own church buildings or any other buildings, to possess invested funds or other productive property, to maintain convents or nunneries, to conduct primary schools, to direct or administer charitable institutions, to solicit funds for its support outside of church buildings, to hold religious ceremonies outside of church buildings, and to clothe its ministers with a garb indicative of their calling.

Convention Hall of Fame

MISS MEME BROCKWAY

Director of children's work for the American Baptist Publication Society, and the author of "Church Work for Juniors," will conduct the conferences on junior methods at the Los Angeles Convention for Baptist Young People, July 7-11.

The Chimney Corner

The Conversion of the Revered Judge

BY JOHN WINTHROP

(Continued from last week)

"BUT the letters are all in the usual form, exactly alike—you mean, you wish to read over the same form fourteen times?"

"It is the invariable custom of this church," the Judge replied. "Paul says, 'let everything be done in decency and order.'"

"Very well," frowned the new pastor. "I had thought that quite superfluous."

When the last of the fourteen letters had been read and the fourteenth motion had been put, the Pastor offered himself on a joint letter with his wife. The letter read and the motion to receive them duly made, the Judge again rose deliberately to speak:

"Brethren, I notice the church from which Brother Peters comes neglected to certify that he is an ordained minister. To receive one as an ordained minister, even our pastor, without such certification, sets a dangerous precedent. I move you, therefore, that we ask our sister church to send on a certificate of his ordination."

This proved too disconcerting to the young preacher. An appeal from Mary's eyes saved him from a scene, made him realize this was a most circumspect church, that he must restrain himself.

His real discipline began in a meeting of the official board which preceded the monthly congregational conference. The chairman of the board, the respected Judge, presided with vast dignity.

"The object of our meeting tonight," the Judge said, "is the consideration of the $4,000 deficit on current expenses incurred during the late pastor's administration."

If so, the new pastor's proposal to elect a financial secretary for the church soon made the deficit appear a mere bagatelle in a larger program. During his careful presentation of the advantages of a financial helper the Judge groaned.

"The Bible enjoins, 'Owe no man anything,'" the law observed. "I've never owed anybody, and I hate for my church to owe money. This church is already under the disfavor of God for the sin of debt, and here you are talking of adding to our burdens by electing an expensive extra-scriptural officer. The Bible tells us deacons were appointed to serve tables, to have charge of all business of the church."

"All well and good, Judge," remonstrated a younger man, treasurer of the church, "Is it actually taking business out of the hands of the deacons for them to recommend to the church the employment of an efficient financial man to give his entire time to the details of collecting and bookkeeping? Isn't our church in debt now because you and I and the rest of us are so circumstanced that we cannot personally visit 2000 members to get their offerings? Are we really faithful to our task when we do not make some sensible arrangement for taking care of the church's business?"

"It is not authorized by the scriptures," the Judge answered summarily, stroking his long beard. "Why let debt like an old man of the sea ride us to exhaustion? The remedy is my plan of giving. If everybody gave as much as I do out of my modest income we would have so much money we wouldn't know what to do with it."

The younger man looked disgusted. Others seemed keen to argue the matter. The authentic Judge flayed them. Whereupon they called for the vote. Resolutely, silently, seventeen deacons voted for the employment of the financial secretary; four deferentially voted against the measure. The Judge groaned in white astonishment.

"The recording secretary of the board will read your revolutionary recommendation to the church when convened in conference," he announced, and immediately pronounced his shortest benediction.

Thomas Peters retired that night with no feeling of elation. He imagined a pugilist had more comfort of body after a prize-fight than he had of spirit after this encounter. In the night he awoke horrified at the vision of the Judge sternly flashing protest out of that one living eye while the dead one caught the reflection of wrath. How would the recommendation for advancement fare before the popular gathering in the church conference?

In the church conference the board's secretary read the recommendation. Again the pastor explained the matter carefully. A long moment of silence followed but no debate. The Judge did not speak against it! The revered Judge had given an inch, there were those who would take an ell. An emboldened young deacon addressed the moderator:

"All of us know our big church auditorium is unfinished. Behind the pulpit is a glaring, empty loft. A pipe organ ought to be there. One of our members offers to give a thousand dollars if we'll get a good instrument. Believing we can carry this through without impairing any of our work I move the appointment of an organ committee."

The motion was seconded. The house was in a clamor.

The Judge at once stood up in Sinaitic splendor, stroked his patriarchal beard, and addressed the audience as with the oracles of God: "I remind my fellow church members that this a perilous innovation. We have long borne a crushing debt; by a ruthless vote just take you are about to add to this load by an extravagant extra-scriptural officer! Now comes this reckless proposal to purchase a perfectly useless thing—a pipe organ! The chances are that this vile instrument, like the devil's fiddle, will ruin the spirituality of the church."

"I admonish you concerning the crime of debt. I can tell you that your grandchildren will be paying on this organ debt while missionaries will have to be recalled from the foreign field and perishing orphans will be denied asylum. Besides, in utter disregard of time-honored custom, this business has been precipitated without first being brought up before the board of deacons for the approval or rejection!"

Ominous Amens greeted the emphatic deliverance. Unlooked for advocate combatted him. The clash among the contenders waxed furious. Then the turmoil of discussion seemed to abate, the crowd became quiet. A little man who had not spoken, in a tone of good-will pled for a forward move, with objective big enough to cause everybody to forget small bickerings. A lone woman timidly called for a vote. When the vote was taken the surprised congregation found the organ appeal had carried.

Soon after came the marriage of Mary Yantis to the Rev. Mark Warmton, rising young pastor of the great First church in the distant metropolis.

"What do you think of the new member of the family?" Peters inquired of one of his pastoral visits.

"Easy as an old shoe, and I'll never wear out," Mother Yantis responded.

"Funniest man alive," laughed Junior. "He keeps us up till after midnight with his jokes."

"No theologian like Doctor Paulson pronounced the Judge. 'He cares little for doctrine, but is strong on what he calls 'ministries.' It's amazing what he's doing through his hospital and his church schools. Seems strange to me that a church should do such things at all, but undoubtedly what he does tremendously impresses the people.'"

Peters went home in high glee over having found a friend at court. Greatheart's capture of this daughter changed not the views of the Judge, did at once quite clearly deepen the religious interest of the Yantis children—at least galvanized their formal worship with a show of life. Unquestionably a new and powerful vital influence had invaded that home. But could it produce growth in a cast-iron pillar?

(To be continued)

BOYS and Girls

The Boy Who Knew Where He Wanted to Go

I

WHEN he grew up Hudson Taylor knew exactly where he wanted to go. The truth of the matter was that when he was a boy that place was the one thing he thought about morning, noon and night. He read every book he could find on the subject, and he tried to repeat all the most thrilling tales of his sister Amelia, who, being "only a girl" and exceedingly young, used to go so placidly to sleep right in the middle of a story. He never could see how she could do this, not when his one great marvelous country was being spoken of. The sad part of life was that his days were not long enough to read the books he wanted to read; his mother was always telling him it was time to go to bed, and even though he undressed and lay in bed, the twinkling of an eye in order to get his chapter finished, his mother seemed to appear in the same twinkling of an eye to blow out his candle for the night, leaving poor little Hudson Taylor with a story only half done lagging around in his head.

Oh, if I could only find a way to read at night after mother goes down to bed again!" he would sigh. Then he found that way. He knew where candle-ends were kept, bits of candle that were used when going up to the garret or down to the cellar, bits of candle long enough to burn at least ten minutes. Several of these would be just the thing for just the very thing, and wouldn't he have a grand time lighting one after another for a long glorious hour of reading? One afternoon he opened the chest-drawer where these treasures were kept and stuffed a pocket full of precious candle-ends.

It happened that that very evening of elevenings, when he was most anxious to read about his special country (by the way, are you wondering which country this was? It was China!) a certain friend of his father's came to call, a very interesting gentleman, who loved children and could tell the most interesting stories. You can see for yourself that Hudson Taylor had to stay politely downstairs to listen to this interesting person. Dashing to bed would have been most improper! But for once in his life he did wish this nice gentleman were somewhere else, or rather, he wished that he himself were somewhere else, instead of sitting perched on one of the gentleman's knees, his sister Amelia perched on the other.

Presently he said: "Mother, isn't it time to go to bed?" Imagine! This, from a boy!

His mother smiled indulgently as if

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

she were giving him a great treat: "No dearest, in our friend's honor you can stay up a while longer tonight!"

So the most uncomfortable little boy in the world sat perched on the knee of the talkative gentleman, who never guessed what agonies were going on inside the mind of the solemn little boy. For, would you believe it? the knee where he sat was too near the fire, and in the pocket near that same fire were all those precious candle-ends, and as the endless story went on and on, poor Hudson Taylor began to feel a very queer sensation around his pockets, as if something sticky and hot were spreading through his clothes. Mercy on us! The fire was melting the candle-ends. He began to squirm and hitch himself as far from the fire as possible. The gentleman's story sallied slowly on and on, while Hudson Taylor began to fancy that he could feel the tallow dripping in a little shiny pool on the floor, where his father would see it, his mother would see it, Amelia would see it, the gentleman would see it. He could just imagine how they would stare at him! "What does this mean sir?" they would say. Already he could feel tell-tale blushes

The Things That Haven't Been Done Before

THE things that haven't been done before,

Those are the things to try.

Columbus dreamed of an unknown shore
At the rim of the far-flung sky;
And his heart was bold and his faith was strong

As he ventured in dangers new;
And he paid no heed to the jeering throng

Or the fears of the doubting crew.

A few strike out, without map or chart,
Where never a man has been,
From the beaten paths they draw apart,
To see what no man has seen.
There are deeds they hunger alone to do;

Though battered and bruised and sore,
They blaze the path for the many who
Do nothing not done before.

The things that haven't been done before

Are the tasks worth while today;
Are you one of the flock that follows, or
Are you one that shall lead the way?
Are you one of the timid souls that quail

At the jeers of the doubting crew,
Or dare you, whether you win or fail,
Strike out for the goal that's new?

prickling his hot cheeks. Oh what a disgusting boy he was! Would this terrible evening never end?

Finally, after whole ages and centuries seemed to have passed, his mother's dear voice said: "Now children, it is time for you to go up to bed."

Never did a small boy hop more eagerly from a gentleman's knee! He looked anxiously at the rug underneath the place where his pocket had been, and to his immense relief, not a drop of tallow was there. He tore up to bed in such haste that Mrs. Taylor followed him upstairs to see what made him act in such a peculiar fashion. She found him woe-begone, crying over a pocket full of very "gooey" tallow; and then of course she heard the whole sad story: how precious all the books on China were, how there was simply never time enough to get them read by day, and so . . . and so . . .

His mother looked a little sad. But down in her heart I think she saw deeper than stolen candle-ends. I think she saw a boy so tremendously in earnest that some day something might come of it, especially as the one thing uppermost in his mind was a sentence which made his father smile approvingly: "When I am big, I'm going to be a missionary, a missionary to China!" His mother did not say "no," but I suppose she trembled a great deal inside.

II

And he did go. If you could see a moving picture film of his life you would be sure to say: "That was some picture! But pretty impossible. So many thrills and narrow escapes could never come to one man!"

But that is where you would be wrong, for the thrills and escapes which came to Hudson Taylor would take many fat volumes to tell: how he dressed as the Chinese dressed, because it was cheaper; how he slept where the Chinese sleep, for the same reason, many times finding he had been in beds where small-pox patients or even lepers had been. He nearly starved for lack of money; he was mobbed because of misunderstanding on the part of his beloved Chinese, who could not and would not believe that anybody had come to China simply to tell about God and to cure sick bodies. He was betrayed, hated, chased out of towns, friendless, his goods stolen, his food poisoned. Yet, down underneath, he trusted God. "We have work to do today, dear God," he would pray.

You will see, therefore, that boys who know where they want to go when they are still boys, grow up with a firm belief that the way to get a thing done is—to get it done through thick and thin, through peril and danger and every difficulty.

Among Ourselves

District of Columbia

By HENRY W. O. MILLINGTON

THE 1926 session of the Northern Baptist Convention is now a matter of history. The meetings aroused a great interest in our Washington Baptist churches and have made a profound impression upon our people. Our Baptist enterprises, both in their number and importance are appreciated here as never before, and this will mean a readier and heartier response to any appeals hereafter in behalf of our denominational undertakings.

The greatest missionary force in the District of Columbia is our women's missionary association under the leadership of Mrs. O. E. Howe, who has been president for a number of years. Our women are untiring in furthering missionary projects and they had real joy in arranging for the meetings of the women's boards and committees during the convention and caring for the large number of missionaries who were in attendance. Our Washington women are unsurpassed in their devotion and efficient service.

Our church circles have been shocked by the death of Mrs. John E. Briggs, the wife of the pastor of the Fifth church, which occurred on May 29. Mrs. Briggs was active in church and Sunday-school work and a great help to her husband in all his pastoral service. In her spirit she was sweetly Christian and endeared herself not alone to the members of the Fifth church but to all our people during the more than seventeen years of her life in Washington. Funeral services were held on June 1 at the Fifth church which was crowded to the doors. The past of our Baptist churches were seated on the platform and the services were conducted by Dr. J. J. Muir, the dean of our Baptist ministry in Washington, assisted by Rev. O. B. Falls and Rev. C. Austin. Doctor Briggs has the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends for the greatest of sorrows.

Rev. J. C. Ball of Metropolitan church is back in his pulpit after a prolonged absence through illness. While not entirely recovered he is much stronger than he was, and it is hoped will soon be himself again. Dr. Samuel J. Porter, of the First church has sufficiently recovered from his recent operation to assume the charge of his important work. Dr. Henry Allen Tupper, his predecessor in the pastorate of the First church, is now living in Washington and it is always a joy to see him in our circles. He too is in much better health than in sometime past and it is hoped that he may live to continue his useful service for years to come.

KANSAS BAPTIST ASSEMBLY

Ottawa University

August 2 to August 13, 1926

COURSES required for State teachers' certificates; also leading to degrees A. B., B. S., and Mus. B., English, Education, History and Government, Mathematics, Psychology, Agriculture, Biology, Instrumental Music, Voice Training, Gymnastics, Tennis, Swimming, etc.

Strong faculty, fine equipment, pleasant surroundings, expenses reasonable.

Address W. B. WILSON, Dean, or A. E. LUNCEFORD, Mgr.

KEYSTONE ACADEMY

Founded 1868

A COLLEGE PREPARATORY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG MEN.
IDEAL LOCATION.
EFFICIENT TEACHING FORCE.
INDIVIDUAL INSTRUCTION IN SMALL CLASSES.
PLEASANT DORMITORY ACCOMMODATIONS.
ENVIRONMENT AND SURROUNDINGS CONDUCTIVE TO GOOD WORK AND RIGHT LIVING.

Address Curtis E. Coe, Principal, Box 6, Factoryville, Pa.

A College President's Testimony

By LEONARD W. RILEY

DR. CHARLES F. THWING, president-emeritus of Western Reserve university, has recently written a very interesting book entitled "The College President." This is based on his experiences as a president for a term of three consecutive years. The average term of service of college executives is about five years. Perhaps after twenty years of such service I may be permitted to be a bit more personal than might otherwise be thought proper.

At the outset I may remark that one can be more surprised over this long term of service than I am myself. Educational work was never in all my thoughts during my early days of preparation. It was an emergency situation that led me into it and like the man who had the bear by the tail, the opportunity to let go has not yet appeared. By that I do not mean that attractive openings elsewhere have not come, they have, but that the condition of the college has not seemed at any time to justify the laying aside of my responsibility for its welfare.

A Poor Proposition

Two decades ago our committee on nomination of new president was told "A college which has been in existence nearly half a century and has nothing more to show for it than a debt of $50,000, is a pretty poor proposition for an old man." The young men approached thought it an equally poor prospect for a young man. While appreciating the statement of the case, my own con-tion was that any religious denomination had a mighty poor prospect in any given field without its own college. Baptists had started educational institutions at Oregon City and Grass Valley in Oregon, and at Centralia, Colfax and Seattle in Washington, all of which had been closed. From my point of view it was unthinkable that the last one of all those founded should also close its doors. The personal side of the question weighed little in my mind over against a prospect of such disaster.

Heroic Sacrificing

My experiences during these two decades of fairly prosperous conditions in the Northwest have given me an unbounded admiration for my predecessors whose work was done in times shading back into the earliest pioneer days. There were only about 100 Baptists in the state of Oregon when the first Baptist college was started at Oregon City in 1849. Nevertheless over $4000 was invested by them in this enterprise before they were compelled to give it up. That was an immense sum of money in those days in that new country. There were less than 900 Baptists in the whole state when an institution founded by the Christian denomination at McMinnville was taken over in 1857, and of that number only the handful of Baptists in the old Central association assumed this responsibility. They employed three teachers with Rev. George C. Chandler, D.D. (formerly president of Franklin college in Indiana) as president. By 1860 a debt of $4000 had accumulated and forty Baptist men in that association assumed and paid it on the basis of their tax receipts, each paying sums ranging from less than $2.00 to nearly $400.

The nine years of Pres. T. G. Brownson, the seven years of Dr. H. L. Boardman and, before their days, the three or four years each of J. W. Johnson, Mark Bailey, E. C. Anderson, G. J. Burchett, or even the two years, immediately preceding my day, of Pres. Arthur M. Brumback must have called for powers of endurance not required in my own days. The trustees and the teachers of those days must likewise have been men and women of vision who endured literally as "seeing the invisible." They are worthy of our sincere appreciation and of our highest admiration.

Unquestionably their faith and works were operating during the increasing of the $100,000 of assets accumulated in their days to the one million total of the present day. Even an accumulated indebtedness of $34,653.63 after forty-nine years of their struggles may suggest less to their discredit than no debt at the present time suggests to our credit. The 111 degrees granted in their days may represent a greater achievement than the 375 degrees granted in the past two decades.

Incidental but Interesting

During these twenty years I have kept a line-a-day diary. A recent examination of these pages reveals the fact that 259 articles and letters have been written for publication, or more than one monthly; 377 books have been read or

Berkeley Baptist Divinity School

Offers standard theological courses; courses for Women, and a four year English course; emphasizes Biblical interpretation, preaching, evangelism, missions and church leadership. Location at the gates of a great university; 40 minutes from the heart of San Francisco. Open to men and women.

Address: CLAIBORNE M. HILL,
President

2606 Dwight Way, - - - Berkeley, California

WANTED

Each year about twenty-five trained, consecrated, young women are needed to fill vacancies as missionaries, teachers and Christian Center workers under the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society in Central America, Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Alaska, and the United States.

TRAINING

The Baptist Missionary Training School in Chicago is equipped to furnish training theoretically by its curriculum, practically by its actual field experience.

One, two, or three year courses are open to young women of missionary vision with at least high school preparation.

SERVICE

BAPTIST YOUNG WOMEN:

Consider this opportunity for Christian service and send for full information to Miss Alice W. S. Brimson, President, Baptist Missionary Training School, 2969 Vernon Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

NOW

more than one-and-one-half monthly, and that 568 addresses and sermons have been delivered, or better than one every other week.

Seventy-five trips were made between Portland, Ore., and Chicago, Ill., making a total of 172,300 miles. Counting three days for each trip this means 225 days spent on the trains between Chicago and Portland, or a total of seven months.

All my travels during these two decades have covered 370,280 miles, or more than fifty miles per day for every day of the twenty years. This represents the equivalent of fifteen trips around the world at the equator. Traveling thirty miles per hour, twenty-four hours per day, this would require 514 days of time, or a total of seventeen months of steady travel.

The main features of the work of these years cannot be thus precisely and conveniently tabulated. They are not, and could not be, placed on any human records. They may, however, be fairly well understood and appreciated by those who read Doctor Thwing's book on "The College President."

A Real Home

BY J. S. KIRTLEY

I'VE been in many Old People's homes in many parts of the country but never have I seen a more "homey" one than the Baptist Old People's home of Maywood, Ill. The rooms are not cramped; the furniture and carpets cheer and do not crush you; the walls are bright; no one is an "inmate," but all are members; there is no overhead tyranny, Mrs. Hyatt is a "big sister" to all.

I heard pleading voices with the ear of my soul. They were saying as clearly as if they were vocal: "The churches must put this in their budget for annual offerings; the well-to-do must come to the aid of Mrs. Brabrook and Aunt Lizzie with gifts for buildings and thus share with them their immortality of service; those who make their wills and leave behind what God enabled them to gather must not disinherit these elder brothers and sisters, nor the great Elder Brother whose they are."

I also thought of the wonderful resources we have in these older brothers and sisters, not liabilities but assets, not weights but wings. They are the benefactors of all the churches. They illuminate that area of life from which we all shrink, called old age, and they make it beautiful. They render us the service of appreciation, and we active workers need that. They pray for us. Their commission to pray has never been cancelled. They have experience in praying, have time to pray and they stand on the hilltop of life from which they see the objects of prayer in their clearness and in their relations. They are giving us a chance to do for them something for which they can never repay us in kind, something unselfish. That is the best thing we can ever do. Let us accept their challenge to be unselfish, and prepare that building for that long waiting list to whom this will be "Home, Sweet Home."

West China Letter

BY JOE TAYLOR

THE old vicious distinction between the pastoral work of a mission and the educational still persists, and every once in a while one sees a call to evangelistic work as if that work were confined to the efforts of the church alone. Some years ago, the West China Baptist mission revolted against this distinction and decided that the work especially connected with the church and its immediate departments should be known as "pastoral" work, thus freeing the term "evangelistic" for application to all forms of our campaign. That this was a move in the right direction has been proved more than once and other proofs keep coming to us that fully warrant the change. In general, we think of evangelistic work as any effort to bring the soul into the presence of Christ. That is, all our work is evangelistic in aim whatever the method employed may be. I have before me a report from the Rev. Donald Fay of the Chengtu church, which gives figures regarding the baptisms which took place at Easter.

There were thirty-nine persons baptized at the church on the day preceding Easter Sunday. This was necessary because twenty-two of them had come from an out-station over six miles away and could not wait for the Sunday service. Also, the church wanted all of Easter Sunday for other services including the celebration of the Lord's Supper. So the service took place between Good Friday and Easter Sunday.

Of those baptized, six were students from the Chengtu girls' school, three from the Chengtu boys' school, one teacher from the girls' school, four boys from the blind school and thirteen pupils from Tso Chiao, the out-station mentioned above. This gives twenty-seven from the schools connected with our

Wayland Academy

1855-1926

Beaver Dam, Wisconsin

Full college preparatory course
Graduates in twenty-six colleges.

Twenty acres
Seven buildings
Fine athletic field
High scholastic standard.
Excellent buildings and grounds.

Fine record in athletics
A School of Music in separate building.

A Home School with True
Christian Atmosphere

Catalogue at request

Principal

EDWIN P. BROWN

KEUKA COLLEGE

Keuka Park, New York

A college for women. Summer School, June 28-August 7. Men admitted to summer term. Regular session opens September 20, 1926. Courses lead to B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special attention to training for Christian Leadership. New dormitory. Modern equipment. Expenses moderate.

A. H. NORTON, President.

KALAMAZOO COLLEGE

1833

OLDEST IN MICHIGAN

Noted for

CHARACTER AND EXCELLENCE

Catalogue on Request

Chengtu church. Three-fourths of those entered into membership at Easter in the Chengtu church were from the schools of the church. I venture to say that if we could get figures from our other churches that a goodly number of those uniting with the churches by baptism would be found to come from our schools. This is as it should be for our education is first, last, and all the time, Christian. What we need now is to make it more Christian and more Chinese. And that is our aim. If the churches at home, of all stripes, could get this one fundamental fact into their thinking, it would bring new courage to them and fresh confidence in the men and women they send to the mission field.

Mr. Fay writes to say that one of the men from Tso Chiaow was formerly in the military service in the province of Honan. He was an officer in the army of Gen. Feng Yu Hsiang where he was influenced by Christian teaching; afterwards he returned to Szechuan. He and his son asked for baptism. This is indicative of the work that General Feng does among his troops. Several military men, now in this province, declare that they are Christians and usually it means that they have been connected with the "Christian" general.

What is needed in the work in the West China mission is more intensive cultivation of our field. Pastors, physicians and teachers combine in one campaign and use all legitimate methods to turn the minds and hearts of those they reach Godward.

Chengtu, April 24, 1926.

Nebraska Letter

By R. R. COON

GRAND Island college celebrated its thirty-third anniversary May 28-June 4. "New Implications in Foreign Missions" was the subject of the missionary sermon given by Rev. John A. Foote of Japan, a former student of the college. It was an elaborate discussion of the subject.

Pres. J. M. Wells preached the baccalaureate sermon in the evening on the campus. Since it was Memorial Sunday, he chose for his subject, "Education and National Loyalty," blending patriotism and learning.

The usual May-day fete and musicale drew a large company Monday evening.

The only public speaking contest (there used to be three or four) came on Tuesday evening. At this time four seniors and five freshmen contested in orations for two sets of prizes. The college chapel was crowded for "Solemn Pride," a one-act drama presented by the history department.

Thursday was full of events. Class day with its attractive features has found a place in commencement week here. The class prophecy and the reading of the class will were enjoyed by the audience and special class songs gave color to the program.

Four years ago the gymnasium was destroyed by a violent windstorm. Efforts to secure a new building combined

SHURTLEFF COLLEGE

ALTON, ILLINOIS

Member of the North Central Association

The Baptist College of Illinois, offering courses in

LIBERAL ARTS—MUSIC

A Christian college with strong faculty, excellent library and well equipped laboratories.

Dormitories for men and women.

Large enough for highest standards. Small enough for personal touch.

Write for catalog and information to

GEORGE MILTON POTTER, President.

COLORADO WOMAN'S COLLEGE

DENVER

A distinctive Junior College for young women.

It is the only woman's college between Missouri and California.

Member of the American Association of Junior Colleges and officially recognized by the Colorado State Board of examiners.

Courses in the Arts and Sciences and the Fine Arts.

Catalog on request. Address the President.

SIOUX FALLS COLLEGE

1883-1926

Liberal Arts Degree Courses
Three Standard Normal Courses
Department of Music

President FRED G. BOUGHTON, D.D.
SIOUX FALLS, S. DAK.

NORTHERN BAPTIST THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

EVANGELICAL EVANGELISTIC POSITIVE PRACTICAL MISSIONARY BAPTISTIC

New Buildings—Larger Library—Four Additional Full-time Members of the Faculty—Increased Facilities—For College and Non-College Men and Women.

185 students enrolled during the school year 1925-26 not counting the Correspondence and Evening classes. Courses leading to Th.M., B.D., S.T.B., Th.B., and the non-academic degrees of Th.G., and Ev.G., also Christian Worker's Certificate.

AFFILIATED SCHOOLS

Pastor's College—A new two-year English course. Regular Bible Institute Graduates in one year only. Diploma granted.

Norwegian Baptist Theological Seminary—Co-operating with Norwegian Baptist Conference—Dean to be announced.

Danish Baptist Theological Seminary—Co-operating with Danish Baptist Conference—Julius Jensen, D.D., Dean.

Chicago Baptist Institute—Evening classes for young people and lay workers. Co-operating with Chicago B.Y.P.U.

Fall term begins September 14th, 1926. Address

GEORGE W. TAFT, D.D., President

3040 W. Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Illinois.

with an auditorium are being realized. The ceremony of laying the cornerstone is the expression used by some in reference to the service of

UNIQUE

THE HEWITT COMPANY Tribune Tower Chicago

We do raise money for Churches, Colleges, and Hospitals, oftentimes after others have failed.

Why not let us discuss with you the problem of raising the money your institution needs? It will not place you under obligation.

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852. Minneapolis

The Hall Organ Company

West Haven, Conn.

High Grade Pipe Organs

Churches Masonic Halls Residences

Van Duzen Bells

formerly Van Duzen & Tift
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"
2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN,
1912 "G" Street, Northwest

DOANE ACADEMY, Granville, Ohio

A strictly college preparatory school. In the atmosphere of Denison University and enjoying all the general advantages of the larger institution.

Especially aid to Baptists preparing for definite Christian service.

Ideal school for the belated student who wishes to make rapid progress.

For catalog and information, apply to

H. Rhodes Hundley, Principal

was an item of peculiar interest. Brief remarks by a representative of the chamber of commerce and by a student were followed by an address by Rev. H. C. Whitcomb of Omaha on "The Christian College and Community Leadership." He declared that the quest for truth, a high moral idealism and sacrificial service are marks of the influence of the religious college.

Many friends of the college attended the president's reception held at his home.

"The Unfinished Task" was the subject of the commencement address by Prof. W. A. Seward Sharp of Kansas City Theological seminary. He chose a text from the first chapters of Genesis and by abundant facts and illustrations indicated the stupendous work remaining before man will "subdue the world." Forceful appeal was made to the members of the graduating class to have some real part in that task. At this time Rev. H. C. Whitcomb and Rev. John A. Foote received degrees of Doctor of Divinity and the eighteen members of the graduating class received A.B. degrees.

A company that filled the large dining-hall met for the occasion that appealed to all the classes, the alumni banquet. Rev. Mr. Whitcomb acted as toastmaster. There were speeches by alumni, students, noted visitors and faculty, announcement of a long roll of honor students and mention of gifts to the college during the year. Winners in the oratorical contest were announced: of the seniors, Pearl Hile received first prize and Otto Grula second; of the freshmen, Elizabeth Kaufman received first and Chester Windolph second.

The year just closed is considered most satisfactory in many ways. Rev. F. E. Jordan, former president and present vice-president, is pushing the financial campaign for $100,000 in the state. In former years, his endeavors in this respect, freely given, have been of great value.

"Purposeful Stirrings"

ON Friday evening, at the Washington convention, after the dedication service for the out-going missionaries had taken place, Doctor Bowler presented the following letter from Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Coon which had been sent to the president and members of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Mr. Coon is a retired Baptist minister who went to Florida some years ago. He is the father of Mrs. Clayton D. Eulette, a member of the Board of Missionary Cooperation, who is well known to the denomination. The allusion in the letter to the statements of Mr. Tiffany refers to an article by him which appeared in the Apr. 15 issue of The Watchman-Examiner. The letter reads as follows:

431 1st Ave. So.
St. Petersburg, Fla.

May, 1926

Mrs. H. E. Goodman, and members of the W.A.B.F.M. Society:

Northern Baptists must have been greatly startled and humiliated by the recent utterances of Mr. Tiffany and Mr. Myers. Assuming the practical correctness of their statements, surprise and humiliation must have been followed, in turn, by serious examination, by fresh resolution, by purposeful stirrings to action.

These varied experiences, together with the increasing and insistent world call "Come and help us," and the many heroic replies of youth, "We are ready to go" constitute a challenge appeal impossible to resist.

The undersigned, even in the far Southland, have heard of the grave conditions confronting foreign missions, and our northern blood and northern past are prompting us to heed this call of the North. That our gift may grow other gifts, agreeably to the scripture, "provoke unto love and good works," we are making the following offer to send some of these accepted candidates to some of these needy fields:

If the women's society will secure within a year pledges to send ten of these candidates to their chosen fields, we will pledge to provide for an equal number the provision in each case to cover transportation, equipment and first year's salary and pledges in each case to be in cash or dependable paper. Later we hope to make a similar offer to send out the remaining candidates.

Our pledges will be in cash or estate notes, which are near-cash as our ages are eighty-two and seventy years respectively.

We are asking one condition, namely that the candidates we send write to us at least once a year, oftener if convenient. Nothing perhaps will do more to create a bond of intelligent and sympathetic fellowship and cooperation, than makes for denominational unity, and efficiency. Such communications also will help to foreign-missionize the home churches that they may more speedily evangelize the foreign world.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed) Rogilla A. Coon,
J. M. Coon.

Before Another Convention

By AN "AS-YE-WOULD" BAPTIST

BEFORE another annual meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention convenes it would be well for us to

1. Arrange to have all reports given in a summarized form.

2. Determine to do our visiting some place other than the aisles and the vestibules during sessions.

3. Cut down the sermons and state addresses to one-half the length they were in Washington. Several splendid speakers wearied their tired audiences and destroyed the effect of their messages by diffuseness and length.

4. Discover exactly who and what constitutes the Northern Baptist Convention and rediscover the fact that it cannot legislate for the association and for the local churches nor for the conscience of the individual.

5. Read our New Testament including such passages as, "Love suffereth long and is kind," "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace," "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you" and the like.

6. Give the country and the village preachers a chance at the committees and part in the activities such as prayers, scripture reading and even membership in the boards.

7. Put more "new blood" into the membership of the various boards. There are men like W. A. Samuelson who are doing great things for God even though in his providence they are not in great cities and are not pastors in "Temples" and "First" churches.

John Henry Chapman

A Tribute

By MRS. JOHN H. CHAPMAN

JOHN HENRY CHAPMAN was born in Deptford, England, near London, in the year 1853. His mother and two other children—one older and one younger than John—made the difficult and trying trip across the Atlantic Ocean in 1856. The baby sister died from measles shortly after the arrival in America and before the mother had reached the waiting father. The childhood of the young immigrant was full of experiences calculated to develop that forcefulness of character that was so evident to every friend who knew him. The beautiful Christian life of his mother had much to do with his early acceptance of Christian truth, making mellow and lovable a character otherwise too aggressive and strenuous.

He could never have been colorless or indifferent in any chosen line of endeavor and it is well that the vigor of life found its expression in Christian effort. At the age of fourteen, he became a professed

The Kansas City Baptist Theological Seminary

Central School of the Continent

Courses Thorough and Scholarly, with Special Emphasis on

Evangelism—Christian Education—Social Service Leadership

Beautiful Grounds, Buildings, Location.

Many Opportunities for Student Pastorates

Address President P. W. Crannell, D.D., Seminary Heights, Kansas City, Kansas

THE Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary In Philadelphia

True to our historic Baptist beliefs

Loyal to our denominational interests

High educational standards

Courses leading to degrees in Theology and Religious Education.

A Faculty of teachers who are scholarly, wisely conservative, vigorous and thoroughly up-to-date.

Prepares for the Ministry, Missionary Endeavor, Pastors' assistants with opportunities for special training in Religious Education and Gospel Music.

Located in the heart of Philadelphia.

Ten minutes by trolley to the University of Pennsylvania.

Surrounded by great libraries affording opportunities for research work.

Many opportunities for self help. For such information write Harry Watson Barras, Dean.

Tuition, room, light and heat free.

Board $6.00 per week.

For additional information address

AUSTEN K. DE BLOIS, Ph.D., LL.D., President

1812-1814 S. Rittenhouse Square

Philadelphia, Pa.

follower of Christ. The work of the kingdom-progress was a passion with him. Labor that would have held many a man from taking on the burden of church effort was ever his portion, but the church work was his joy and delight and his rest was toil for the kingdom.

Chicago was his home from the time he was seventeen years of age, his earlier life having been spent in Waukegan and on nearby farms. He loved this city and believed that in its future it was to be the greatest in the history of the world. To him Chicago was not only the center of commercial activities but the natural headquarters of all national Christian effort.

Broader than any city or state or country was his interest in people and in the kingdom of God. Not only could he name nearly every Baptist church in all the important cities of the union, North and South, but he could in most cases name the pastor then serving in each. He was equally familiar with the professors and presidents of our schools and colleges. If men of God crossed the border into Canada or even went to England his unfailing interest would follow them and they were sure to receive messages and reports of happenings to remind them that they were not forgotten.

One of the most beautiful and unselfish services he rendered was his fellowship with the sick. He was never too busy nor too much interested in present happenings to take time to write letters and send messages to those who were out of touch with current events. How many beautiful letters lie here to testify of the grateful appreciation of these prisoners of physical ill! God in his mercy spared him the confinement of a long illness for the call came to him out of an only slightly limited activity.

He had his full share of the strenuous service he loved in the sixteen years of leadership he gave to the Baptist young people when his vigorous efforts set pace for denominational conventions that had never been equaled before. There were few honorary offices in the gift of our Baptist people open to a layman that were not offered to him at some time. He loved such service and freely gave himself to it. And yet his home and his children were his first and most satisfying interests. There are many friends who will miss him; there are many churches where the withdrawal of his help will leave a sense of weakness. But in the home where he lived and loved his missing voice will mar the music, the older ones will long for the comfort of his presence, the little children will be saddened because his face is gone. He died on Sunday morning, May 30, 1926, without a struggle. On his knees at the bedside as though in prayer he passed into the heavenly home.

Church Furniture
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture,
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1909 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Paderford, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

Here, There and Everywhere

SIX HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHT men attended the Bible classes of the federation of men's classes in Bridgeport, Conn. On June 20, Rev. C. H. Heimsath, pastor of the First church, will be the speaker. A total attendance of 1000 is set as the goal of this last meeting for the season.

REV. SIDNEY B. SLATER was recognized as a Baptist minister by a council called by the church at Charlotte, Mich., on May 26. Rev. G. H. Waid acted as moderator and Rev. Edgar Engelmann as secretary. Mr. Slater came from the Adventist fellowship.

OWING TO CHANGES in the organization of the New York State Convention growing out of decreased revenue, several departments will be closed on Sept. 1. Those

University of Redlands

Located at Redlands, California, one of the most beautiful home cities of Southern California, is the only Baptist College in the great Southwest. Offers courses in the Liberal Arts College, leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, with the opportunity of majoring in any one of sixteen departments; in the Fine Arts College, leading to the Bachelor of Music degree, with the opportunity of majoring in Organ, Piano, Violin or Voice; in the School of Education, preparing the student for the Elementary, the Junior High, or the High School Credential. Offers Combined Liberal Arts and Engineering Course, Combined Liberal Arts and Medical Course, Combined Liberal Arts and Nurse's Course, Combined Liberal Arts and Library Course.

The Faculty is composed of Christian men and women who have had special training for their work and who take a special interest in the individual student.

For literature and information address

UNIVERSITY OF REDLANDS
REDLANDS, CALIFORNIA

released at that time and available for relocation are Dr. H. Wyse Jones, director of evangelism; Mrs. F. W. Tomlinson, director of children's work; Rev. Chas. W. Briggs, director of religious education.

THE EAST CLEVELAND church, Rev. Milard Brelsford, minister, raised $15,000 for current expenses the past year, $8000 for benevolences and $4000 for debt payment. The property valued at $250,000 is now free of debt. The pastor has entered the eighth year of his second pastorate with this church. On June 23 he sails with the Sherwood Eddy party for the summer in Europe. The pulpit will be supplied by Dr. P. L. Powell of Franklin college.

THE EUCLID AVENUE church of Cleveland, Ohio, Dr. John Snape, minister, has received an unconditional gift of $250,000 from John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of which $100,000 is given in memory of Mrs. Laura Spellman Rockefeller. In addition, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., will give the church $100,000 for endowment conditioned on the church raising $350,000 for the same purpose. The church will meet the conditions. The new edifice will be ready for occupancy early in 1927, and will cost $1,400,000. The auditorium will seat 2500.

REV. HENRY CROCKER of Chester, Vt., has passed his eighty-first birthday. Two of his sons have republished a volume of poems written by their father. Old friends can obtain copies from the National Survey Co., Chester, Vt.

DEACON ANDREWS of the Mariners' Temple, New York City, is in his ninetieth year. He united with the church in 1868. He was a missionary of this church in his active years.

DR. W. J. SLV of Linfield college supplied the pulpit of the church at Salem, Ore., while the pastor attended the Northern Baptist Convention.

"THE ROCK," is a beautiful Biblical drama portraying the call of Peter. It was staged by the young people of Temple church, Brooklyn, N. Y., early in June.

REV. D. A. PITT, pastor of the Central church of Norwich, Conn., has entered the sixth year of his pastorate there.

REV. J. H. MORTON of Greenburg, Ind., has welcomed seventy-eight new members during the past year.

REV. J. O. WHITE of Huron, S. D., has added thirty-one new members, eleven coming in by baptism.

DR. JOHN R. SAMPEY, forty-one years professor of Old Testament in Louisville seminary, was married on May 16 to Miss Ellen Wood of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. and Mrs. Sampey have gone to Brazil where they will engage in a four months' evangelistic tour.

REV. C. B. JONES of Monessen, Pa., has been voted an increase in salary. He was formerly located in Indiana.

REV. C. A. WADE of North Vernon, Ind., recently married and was given a reception by the church. Beautiful gifts were given by the members to the bridal couple who are greatly loved not only in the church but in the entire community.

DR. GEO. TRUETT of Dallas, Texas, was recently the guest of honor at a banquet by L. A. Boli at Wichita, Kan.

REV. W. H. ROGERS, pastor of the First church of Wichita, Kan., preached the baccalaureate sermon for the high school

The Cook Academy, Montour Falls, N. Y.

The Only Baptist Preparatory School for Boys in New York State

Baptists of New York State are proud of this old school which has served the denomination over half of a century. Graduates are prominent in every walk of life and particularly in Missionary and Educational Work. Thorough training is given in College Preparatory Work and students are successful in fourteen colleges and universities. Students come from eleven states and many foreign lands. The Faculty men are seasoned in the work and have a strong professional pride in the school. The student body numbers one hundred fifty students—half of them being Boarding students.

In addition to the class-room activities strong organizations are conducted by and for the boys. The Y. M. C. A. enrolls every Boarding student and the support is strong. Under the Music Department there are three organizations—the Orchestra, the Band and the Glee Club. Under the English Department there is a strong Debating Club, conducting Debates with other schools. A school paper is published by the students and a Year Book is issued by the Senior Class.

Information and catalog may be secured by addressing

Principal Bert C. Cate, Box B, Montour Falls, N. Y.

DES MOINES UNIVERSITY

HIGHLAND PARK, DES MOINES, IOWA

A benefactor says:

"I am leaving my estate to Des Moines University because we Baptists shall need LEADERS in the years to come as never before."

These leaders are called for by:

- | | | |
|--------------------------|---|--|
| 1. Churches. | 4. Colleges, private and state. | 7. The scientific agricultural world. |
| 2. Missionary societies. | 5. Secretarial positions of all kinds. | 8. Industrial positions of the most remunerative type. |
| 3. Public schools. | 6. Professional positions of all kinds. | |

SPECIAL PHYSICAL EDUCATION COURSE

Leads to bachelor's degree in Physical education.

A NEW FIELD HOUSE. An outlay of $100,000 before September 1, 1926, on the Physical Education Department. Expecting heaviest enrollment September in the history of the institution. Alumni and friends united as never before.

INQUIRY COUPON

(Date)

The undersigned desires information concerning the Departments and Courses checked below:

(Place check marks in brackets)

- | | | | | |
|---|---|-------------------------------------|---|--|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Liberal Arts | <input type="checkbox"/> Music | <input type="checkbox"/> Bible | <input type="checkbox"/> Economics and Business | <input type="checkbox"/> Extension |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Education and Normal | <input type="checkbox"/> Dramatic Art | <input type="checkbox"/> Missionary | <input type="checkbox"/> Administration | <input type="checkbox"/> Athletic Coaching |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Engineering | <input type="checkbox"/> Public Speaking | <input type="checkbox"/> Journalism | <input type="checkbox"/> College Course | <input type="checkbox"/> Ministerial or |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Pharmacy | <input type="checkbox"/> Drawing and Painting | | | <input type="checkbox"/> Social Service |

Address all inquiries to Des Moines University, Highland Park, Des Moines, Iowa

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Ill.

"Tonight we introduce you to several friends and to one hard-boiled enemy. This enemy-gentleman seems to have a wooden leg with a universal joint—he kicks several ways at once. Look out for him.

"This is pastor A. H. Mavis, Avon church, East Cleveland, Ohio: 'Last but not least, I am delighted with THE BAPTIST. Please advise WCOY.'

"This is Rev. J. W. MacDoniels of Lincoln, Neb. He says: 'I have learned to love THE BAPTIST. Have had it since it was published. I believe the Northern Baptist Convention should be represented officially in a paper and find that THE BAPTIST does that, and more.'

"And Dr. H. C. Whitcomb of the Calvary church of Omaha, Neb., in a recent church bulletin says: 'The Baptist churches of Omaha are engaged this month in a simultaneous campaign for new subscriptions for the THE BAPTIST. Calvary should have at least fifty more subscriptions. Give your subscription to the pastor today or next Sunday.'

"Out California way, at Santa Monica, from the Trinity church, Rev. William A. Wills writes: 'I am agent for THE BAPTIST and Missions. I am a deacon and was formerly a missionary in China and take a deep interest in missionary work. I will do my best to make your offer of six months for one dollar known and hope to send in new names.'

"Rev. Daniel Bryant, pastor of our church in the college town of Corvallis, Ore., deserves his splendid success. He says: 'THE BAPTIST is a high-class paper and worthy of a place in every home in our church. We had eighty additions last year, mostly by baptism. And I do want to see, and shall strive to see, THE BAPTIST in its rightful place in the life of the church.'

"I have read 'The Standard' from its beginning," writes D. Hoyt Leland of Denver, Colo., "I was in Washington, D. C., when the Northern Baptist Convention was started in May, 1907, and I was in Denver in 1919 when THE BAPTIST was made the denominational organ of the convention. I have found it a worthy successor to 'The Standard,' and ringing true to its mission."

"Rev. Vernon H. Cowser of Clovis, Calif., writes: 'Received a shock in the coming of a bill for subscription due THE BAPTIST. Have no shadow of a doubt the bill is correct. The shock comes from the fact that I am constantly boosting THE BAPTIST and Missions, and we try to run on the principle of "owe no man anything." Here I have been sending out love waves to you, mingled with earnest prayer for the editor in his trying position, and lo, here I have neglected the first works.'

"Our kicker kicks thusly: 'I want to know how I became a member of this subscription family? I was not born into it nor did I attach myself to it. I appealed to our state headquarters to have the paper stopped but the cursed sheet kept coming. If you can find the fellow that sent in my name—collect from him and I shall be satisfied. You may think I am hard-nosed. But I am too much of a Baptist to take joyfully the dose which our leaders mix up and try to ram down my throat. I cannot read such bunk and feel harmonious. I know, brother editor, that you are not to blame. And neither am I.' Now what do you think of that?'"

"The office boy will now conclude with a few lines from an unknown author:

"The camel at the close of day kneels down upon the sandy plain,
To have his burdens lifted off and rest to gain.

"My soul, thou too shouldst to thy knees when daylight draweth to a close
And let thy Master lift thy load and grant repose.

"Else how couldst thou tomorrow meet, with all tomorrow's work to do,
If thou thy burden all the night dost carry through?

"The camel kneels at break of day, to have his guide replace the load,
Then rises up anew to take the desert road.

"So shouldst thou kneel at morning's dawn that God may give thee daily care, Assured that he no load too great will make thee bear.

"WCOY now signs off. Goodnight. Keep your batteries charged."

in the city forum on his return from Washington.

NORTHWEST DISTRICT won the prize in the reading contest of the Northern Baptist Convention in 1925-1926. The prize consists of five traveling libraries. Wisconsin stood first in the district, having 148,019 points. The winning churches in Wisconsin were Milwaukee Tabernacle, Superior First, Green Bay, Beloit Emmanuel, Bancroft, Fairweather and Madison First. Total number of churches reporting was 103. Mrs. B. B. Collyer of Madison is the state reading contest secretary.

MRS. LULU LOVELAND SHEPARD delivered a series of lectures on Mormonism in Dayton, Ohio, beginning June 6.

THE FIRST TRINITY CHURCH of Salt Lake City, Utah, Rev. F. G. Huling, minister, was organized on May 27, 1925. During its first year it increased in membership from 155 to 235, and raised a budget of $12,985.

Bethel Institute

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

Trains Young People for Leadership in Church and Missionary work, as well as Community service, and Professional Life.

Departments

Preparatory, Academic, Music, Domestic Science, Expression, Bible and Missionary Training, all in the English language; Theological training for bi-lingual service.

Faculty of 18

Enrollment 330

Accredited by North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and State Universities. Equipment modern—Large and valuable library—Spirit safe and sane—Atmosphere Christian—Graduates in Foreign Missionary Service as well as on home fields, and other walks and professions—Abundant opportunities for Christian work—65 per cent of students support themselves in whole or in part—Outlook for self-support good on account of strategic location of school, midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

For catalogs, information regarding courses, tuition, etc., address

G. ARVID HAGSTROM,
President

BETHEL INSTITUTE,
ST. PAUL, MINN.

Want Ads

Pastor, graduate in Arts and Theology, desires to communicate with church relative to pastorate. Forceful, extemporaneous speaker. Pleasing personality. Address Pastor, The Baptist.

Collection Envelopes Duplex 8 cts. Single 7 cts. If ordered now June. Pay when your year begins. Dufold-Trifold Company, Trenton, N. J.

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

DR. W. R. L. SMITH, former pastor of the Third church of St. Louis, Mo., lives now at Norfolk, Va.

PRESIDENT J. B. LAWRENCE of the Oklahoma Baptist university at Shawnee, Okla., will spend the summer in the University of Chicago taking some special work. President Lawrence is highly commended as a preacher and is available for supply work during his residence at the university.

Rev. RUFUS KEYSER of West Hollywood, Calif., has seen a most astonishing development on his field. In about one year, beginning with a tent and twenty members, the church has grown to a congregation of 275 and has erected and moved into a new edifice costing about

RUFUS KEYSER

$5,000. Rev. Keyser graduated from Rochester in 1917 and has had work in New York, Colorado and California. Before assuming the pastorate of his present church he was assistant to Dr. James A. Francis of the First church of Los Angeles.

Baptist Summer Assemblies

The following table will give the state, place and date of each assembly and the person, together with correct address, to whom inquiries for information may be addressed:

Arizona, Flagstaff, Aug. 18-28, Miss

THE GRAND ISLAND COLLEGE

GRAND ISLAND, NEBRASKA

John Mason Wells, President

A College of Liberal Arts giving the B. A. and B. S. degrees

Prepares teachers for all State Certificates and gives pre-law, pre-medical and pre-ministerial courses.

Better than 10% Interest

Money invested in this Christian institution will bring to you a joy which the world can neither give nor take away. You will receive a spiritual satisfaction through the consciousness that you are performing a great service for Jesus Christ and for the Kingdom of God.

Myrtle M. Love, 216 Home Builders Bldg., Phoenix.

California (north), Asilomar, July 16-26, Rev. M. L. Thomas, 1213 Humboldt Bank Bldg., San Francisco. California (south), Palisade Park, Aug. 16-26, Oliver D. Cummings, 313 W. Third St., Los Angeles.

Colorado (western) Olathe, July 19-26; Colorado (eastern) Palmer Lake, Aug. 17-27, Rev. W. F. Ripley, 317 Colorado Building, Denver.

Connecticut, Storrs, July 7-18, Rev. O. P. Campbell, 720 Main St., Hartford.

Idaho, Saw Tooth Mountains, July 14-24, Rev. Stanley A. Gillett, Caldwell.

Illinois (northern), Mount Carroll, June 19-26; Illinois (southern), Alton, July 31-Aug. 7, Rev. L. H. Koehler, 540 Normal Ave., Normal.

Indiana, Vevay, July 18-23 and at Franklin, Aug. 16-26, Rev. Fred G. Kenny, 1729 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis.

Inland Empire, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, July 20-30, Rev. H. W. Vodra, 501 Empire State Bldg., Spokane, Wash.

Iowa, Iowa Falls, July 20-30, Rev. Victor N. Witter, 406 Valley National Bank Bldg., Des Moines.

Kansas, Ottawa, Aug. 3-13, Rev. Warren F. Behan, Ottawa, Kans., or Rev. A. Lawrence Black, 918 Kansas Ave., Topeka.

Michigan, Kalamazoo, July 19-Aug. 1 and Manistique, Aug. 21-29, Rev. Morgan L. Williams, 368 Capital National Bank Bldg., Lansing.

Minnesota, Mound, July 21-Aug. 1, Richard Hoiland, 529 Second Ave., South, Minneapolis.

Montana, Mill Creek, July 20-30, Rev. T. L. Huxley, Livingston.

Nebraska, Grand Island, Aug. 9-17, Rev. Ezra Duncan, 2850 Fowler Ave., Omaha.

New England, Ocean Park, Aug. 16-28, Rev. F. F. Peterson, 44 Norwood St., Portland, Maine.

New Jersey, Hightstown, June 26-July 8, Rev. Otto F. Laegler, 158 Washington St., Newark.

New York, Dunkirk, June 28-July 5; Cook academy, Aug. 2-8; Colgate university, Hamilton, Aug. 9-15; Keuka, (for pastors), Aug. 16-21, Rev. Chas. W. Briggs, 487 S. Salina St., Syracuse.

North Dakota, Valley City, July 12-18, Rev. Leon B. Shorey, 416 Cheyenne Ave., Grand Forks.

Ohio, Granville, Aug. 2-13, W. A. Holmes, Granville.

Oregon, Gladstone Park, July 20-30, Rev. W. T. Milliken, 505 Odd Fellows Bldg., Portland.

Pennsylvania (east), Collegeville, July 26-Aug. 2; Pennsylvania (west), Saltzburgh, July 12-19, Rev. John W. Elliott, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

South Dakota (east), Sioux Falls, July 28-Aug. 3; South Dakota (west), Black Hills, July 14-21, Rev. W. H. Bayles, Huron.

Utah, Ogden Canyon, July 20-30, Rev. Lester T. Randolph, 310 Dooley Block, Salt Lake City.

Washington, Burton, Aug. 3-13, Rev.

T. H. Hagen, 431 Burke Bldg., Seattle.

West Virginia, Philippi, Aug. 11-17, and Alderson, Aug. 25-31, Rev. A. B. Withers, Parkersburg.

Wisconsin, Green Lake, July 26-Aug. 6, Rev. C. C. Browne, 1717 Wells St., Milwaukee.

Wyoming, Douglas, Aug. 3-15, Miss Mary Balsch, Box 1545, Casper.

William Jewell College

LIBERTY, MISSOURI.

A fully accredited college. Member of North Central Association. One of the three colleges of Missouri on accredited list of Association of American Universities. Faculty specialists in their Departments; Ph. D. graduates of leading universities of America and Europe. Regular courses leading to A.B. degree and pre-professional courses for Law, Medicine, Engineering, Commerce, and Agriculture. Beautiful Campus; Large Gymnasium, Modern Dormitories; extensive Library; excellent Laboratories; wholesome physical, social and religious conditions. A Christian education directed toward character building. Expenses $350 to $400 per year. For catalog or other information address,

H. C. WAYMAN, President.

Parker School for Girls

"Prepares Girls for College and for Life"

UNDER BAPTIST AUSPICES

Thorough preparation for all female colleges. High grade curriculum; careful discipline; Christian atmosphere.

Winnebago, Minnesota

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study, Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write

President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D.
1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary

"The Beeches," Louisville, Ky.

Completely New $2,000,000 Suburban Home
Affording Unsurpassed Facilities

1. Tuition Free and Financial Assistance if Needed.
2. Session of Thirty-two Weeks. Opens Sept. 21st.
3. World Famous Faculty of Sound Christian Thinkers.
4. Practical and Comprehensive Curriculum in Twelve Distinct Schools.
5. World-wide Student Fellowship and Alumni Brotherhood.
6. Evangelistic and Missionary Message for the Whole World.
7. Largest Theological Seminary in the World.
8. In Midst of Many Student-served Churches of Indiana and Kentucky.
9. Just a Few Miles From Center of Nation's Population.

On the Border Line Between the North and the South and Where East Meets West

For catalogue and photos, address

EDGAR Y. MULLINS, President

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL

For Girls and Young Women

Junior College

Academy

Thorough work, accepted by leading colleges without examination, is offered in the two-year college course. The Academy Department gives a four-year course in intensive college preparation. Fully accredited by all colleges admitting by certificate. Special courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics.

Twenty-five acres of shaded lawn and stately trees. Modern buildings. New $40,000 library. Outdoor sports, including golf and hockey. Seventy-fourth year. Term opens September 8, 1926. Write for catalog to

Wm. P. McKee, A.M., B.D., President

BOX 620

MT. CARROLL, ILLINOIS

Metcalf Hall

View of Grounds from Veranda

William Parker McKee Hall

COLGATE UNIVERSITY

Hamilton, N. Y.

GEORGE BARTON CUTTEN, D.D., LL.D., President

108th Year begins September 16, 1926

THE COLLEGE

Courses offered leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science.

For catalogue and information, address

Professor ALFRED E. ALTON,

Secretary of the University

THE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

THOMAS WEARING, Ph.D., Dean

To men prepared for entrance to college the Seminary offers a four-year course which includes both college and theological studies and leads to the degree of Bachelor of Theology.

Students who graduate in this course may complete the work for the Master's degree in one additional year, and for the degree of Bachelor of Divinity in two years.

PILLSBURY ACADEMY

OWATONNA, MINNESOTA

A Christian Boarding-School for Boys from Twelve to Eighteen years of age. Seventeen acre Campus, Dormitories. Careful supervision. Small classes. High standards of scholarship and conduct. Military training. New catalog.

Milo B. Price, Principal

The Editor's Notes on the Lesson for June 27

(REVIEW)

WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM THE BOOK OF GENESIS

Devotional Reading: Heb. 11:4-22.
Golden Text: Rom. 8:28.

Some one has asked if there would any great loss if Genesis were omitted from the Bible. The question of course is simply intended to awaken thought to move Bible lovers to appraise the value of Genesis for themselves. We have learned much from Genesis but a single column containing five hundred words the limitations of space prevent exhaustive enumeration.

God

The primary and significant thing that stands out in Genesis is the record of God-consciousness on the part of the men who compiled the traditions and put them in the form in which we find them. "In the beginning God." This phrase spells out the consciousness with which the first man made in the image of God came forth. A personal God with creative power and of holy character appears in the book of Genesis. "He speaks and it is done, he commands and it stands fast." There is no laborious effort, striving after effect. "And God said, there be light, and it was light." All creative processes head up in man, a man is put under moral discipline. If a man fails to rise to the high standard of absolute obedience. At this point the story of redemption begins. God is pictured as being just as personally engaged in the redemptive process as in the creative process. He flames out against personal and social as we find in the story of Cain's punishment, of the flood and of the destruction of Sodom. Even at the same time his love and care are evident in his treatment of Adam and Eve, in his provision for Noah and his family and in his dealings with Abraham and the patriarchs. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ unfolded in the New Testament is enfolded in the book of Genesis.

Man

With all his privileges man has not far out-distanced his primitive ancestor whose record is in the book of Genesis. The fall of Adam and Eve is still being repeated by every boy and girl who reaches the age of conscious choice and yields to temptation. The murder of Abel is no so frequent in the great cities of America that it hardly causes a ripple on the surface of an indifferent public. Corruptate Jacobs backed by financial and political power steal the birthright of numerous Esaus with impunity, and the sons of Jacob, now grown to a mighty host, lord it over defenseless Joseph. Even at the same time we have our Enochs who walk with God, our Noahs who refuse to be intimidated by fair-weather skeptics, our Abrahams who travel uncharted paths in their quest for a better world, and our Josephs who live in the faith that all things work together for good to them that love God.

Crozer Theological Seminary

MAIN BUILDING

THE SEMINARY maintains a correspondence department for ministers and Christian workers. Covers six courses.

Faculty certificate. Total expense about $10 a year.

FOR INFORMATION

ELI S. REINHOLD, A.M., Director, Chester, Pa.

Curriculum outlined to meet modern conditions.

University of Pennsylvania connection for college men.

Scholarships available to worthy students.

Courses leading to degrees of B.D. and Th.M.

Tuition, room rent, etc., free to students.

Theological Library of 35,000 volumes.

Catalog giving full information on request.

Address

MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., Pres.
CHESTER, PA.

A Vitalizing Vacation

By J. WHITCOMB BROUGH

SINCE completing my tour of the Northern Baptist Convention, I am more convinced than ever that one of the essential things in the development of our churches along the line of evangelism, missions and social service, is the more thorough training and education of our people.

Many are unable to go to a training school for a regular long-term course of study; but hundreds of our young people can plan their summer vacation so as to attend an efficient institution for a few weeks in midsummer.

The Chicago Baptist Missionary Training school is well equipped both as to building and faculty, for providing a practical and helpful training during a summer semester. Chicago as a city offers almost attractive appeal to young people with little or no experience of life in a great metropolis; and the climate at Lake Michigan is usually delightful.

The companionship of a large number of young people seeking equipment for service, the genial and helpful instruction of bright competent teachers, the opportunity to hear some of the best preaching in America serving as summer supplies in leading Chicago pulpits, the privilege of studying the downtown problem as faced by strong and efficient downtown churches, all these and other Christian influences combine to make the Chicago summer school highly attractive to men and women who want to be thoroughly qualified for service in their own

The Shortest Path of Leadership Lies through the College

LINFIELD COLLEGE

The Baptist College of the Pacific Northwest

Opened by Baptists, September, 1857. Chartered by State, January 30, 1858
Its Regular Sessions Have Never Been Interrupted.

OFFERS

Standard Courses leading to the Degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science

Courses in Piano, Organ, Voice and Theoretical Work under competent teachers.

A Christian Institution with a Christian Atmosphere.

For catalog and bulletins write to

President LEONARD W. RILEY, McMinnville, Oregon

In the Choice of a College often Lies the Destiny of a Life

churches; and everything is provided that could make the school efficient and effective. No education requirements are demanded for entrance.

If only our young people in the churches, hundreds of them, will take advantage of the opportunity offered by this summer session, and will then go back to their churches to lead in the activities of their society and church, the summer school will prove an untold blessing to our entire denomination and a power in the kingdom of God.

Any desired information may be obtained by writing to Miss Alice Brimson, 2969 Vernon Ave.

With The Board of Missionary Cooperation

OUR PLATFORM IN 1926-27

The annual report of the Board of Missionary Cooperation for 1925-26 was presented at the meeting of the board in Washington, and also to the Northern Baptist Convention. It was approved by both bodies.

The board meeting also placed its approval on the platform for 1926-27 which was tentatively outlined in a previous issue of THE BAPTIST. Briefly stated, the major points in this platform are:

1. That every local church be induced to accept a quota representing its responsibility in respect to the denominational program as defined in the unified budget.
2. That the local church put on a well prepared every-member plan, which will secure the pledges necessary to insure payment of the quota.
3. That the money so pledged be punctually collected and forwarded on the basis of one-twelfth of the year's quota every month.

AN ENCOURAGING EXPERIENCE

The Washington convention was an encouraging experience to members of the Board of Missionary Cooperation and especially to those members of the active staff who attended. It is not too much to say that in no previous Baptist meeting has there been so much appreciative comment on the conduct of the united program, nor has there ever been warmer interest shown in plans proposed for the future. A burden is the more easily borne when the denomination shows the generous spirit that was manifested in Washington, and it may be depended on that all connected with the Board of Missionary Cooperation will work harder than ever this year.

Two meetings of the board were held during the convention, the first on Monday in the Hotel Washington and the second in Aitchison hall of the auditorium at the close of the great missionary meeting Friday evening. It was very late when the proceedings were commenced, but there was a good attendance and the inspiring influence of the splendid meeting that preceded the session added to the enthusiasm that all felt for the work ahead.

Officers Elected

It was in the Friday meeting that the board elected officers for the year, as follows:

Chairman, J. W. Baker, Rhode Island; first vice-chairman, S. J. Skevington, Calif.; second vice-chairman, Mrs. F. I. Smith, Colo.; executive secretary, W. H. Bowler, New York; recording secretary, W. B. Lippard, New York; assistant treasurer, H. R. Bowler, New York.

The administrative committee elected to serve for the current year is made up of the following members of the board:

This page is conducted by the Board of Missionary Cooperation, New York City, as a medium for circulating items about local churches which are carrying on their own and denominational projects in an effective way. If your church has developed any interesting ideas or methods we shall be glad to have you write about them to the Board, at 276 Fifth Avenue. Brief outlines of denominational plans, important news, etc., will also appear here from time to time.

Six members at large: Nellie G. Prescott, Mrs. George Caleb Moore and Avery A. Shaw of New York; R. L. Hudson of Pennsylvania; E. H. Rhoades of Ohio and Francis C. Stifler of Illinois.

Representing participating organizations: Frederick E. Taylor, American Baptist Foreign Mission Society; Mrs. Howard Wayne Smith, Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society; G. W. Palmer, American Baptist Home Mission Society; Mrs. George W. Coleman, Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society; Joseph E. Sagebeer, American Baptist Publication Society; Mrs. C. D. Eulette, Board of Education; Arthur M. Harris, Ministers' and Missionaries' Benefit Board; Horace Roberson and Smith G. Young, state conventions; Clarence A. Barbour, schools and colleges; William Travers Jerome, Jr., city mission societies.

VICTORY IN WYOMING

The Wyoming convention went over the top in 1925-26. Every dollar of its $7,320 for the United Budget was raised and its $300 to the "Golden Anniversary" of the Women's American Baptist Home Mission Society was paid in full.

A little church in Rock Springs in that state made a remarkable record. The church went over to self-support last June and accepted an apportionment of $200. This was done upon faith. What it actually turned in to the state office by May 1 amounted to over $1000. The Wyoming state bulletin comments, "Of many churches we can say, 'She did well, but of Rock Springs we must say, 'She did her best.'"

STATING ITS PURPOSE

The Market Street church, Zanesville Ohio, Rev. A. Stokes Watson, pastor prints the following on its weekly calendar:

"To everyone this church bids WELCOME in the name of Jesus, the great Head of the church. It would have ideal as high as Christ's, sympathies as deep as his, and interests as wide as the kingdom's. It desires to serve the community and its inhabitants, of whatever class or race. Its doors are open to all who are sorrowing; to all who need the Savior to all who seek a place for worship, and an opportunity for Christian service."

FURTHER TESTIMONY

FROM SOUTH DAKOTA

The editor of the South Dakota state convention bulletin writes in the May issue:

"One of the most encouraging feature of this year's work was the large number of churches that paid monthly. These churches were very happy at the close of the year that they did not have to put on a hard drive for funds. If all our churches would adopt this policy, they would find that it pays."

THE PASTOR CHANGED

THEIR POINT OF VIEW

The officers of a large middle-western church held a meeting not long ago to fix the budgets for the coming church year. They decided that they would need to add $5000 to the current expense budget of the church in order to carry on their projected activities for the year. The missions budget was mentioned and all seemed to feel that this figure could be left where it stood for the previous year.

"Wait a minute," said the pastor, "don't honestly believe we can afford to spend more money for home expenses unless we correspondingly increase expenditures for our world undertakings."

"Do you really feel that way, pastor?" said one of the men, and all of the looked rather surprised.

"I certainly do," replied the minister and proceeded to give his reasons. He did it so convincingly that the decision to leave the missionary budget at the same figure was reconsidered and it was raised by $2000.

J. W. BAKER

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

MAIN ENTRANCE
FROM BELLEFIELD AVENUE

Showing the emblems of the Trinity and of the Twelve Apostles, the verse from Revelation xxii, 14, the Foreign Mission Society seal, also the carvings of the star, and the crown of thorns with the nails over the south turret windows.

FIRST CHURCH, PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Dean John H. Sherman of Lake Forest college, Ill., sustains the call heretofore voiced in THE BAPTIST that clubs, colleges and Kiwanis shall lift their ideals of "service" and "building" from the Babbitt level to the higher Christian and community level. His article in the Kiwanis Magazine for June is good reading.

A national study conference of twenty-eight Christian communions in which both the northern and southern conventions were represented, issued last December a "message" in which it called upon the church henceforth to oppose war as a method of settling disputes between nations and groups, as contrary to the spirit and principles of Jesus Christ, and to declare that it will not as a church sanction war.

Sacco and Vanzetti seem doomed to die. This adds another to the long list of convictions for crime that are so bound up with the class struggle as to awaken in the minds of many people a profound distrust of the courts. The courts have decreed their death on the law and evidence in the case. Probably millions in many lands, following the story of the case and with all of the evidence in hand, solemnly believe that they are innocent and that they are victims of popular and legal class prejudice. And the case is not an isolated one. It is a sample of hundreds. It is a time for careful procedure.

Today the philosophy of the inferiority of the colored races to the white is challenged. However much the old philosophy may have affected foreign mission policies, it must now be recognized that in Christ the wall of racial prejudice is broken down, and in him the yellow, the brown, the red, the black and the white are all one. While there are backward peoples, God is no respecter of races. Western civilization is boldly challenged. Many thoughtful men of the East believe that western civilization is largely a matter of the clash of machinery and materialism, and that in such a disturbed atmosphere the best flowers of the soul inevitably wither. They boldly question whether the life of the West is really superior to the life of the East. They question, too, the organized religious life of America and Europe. The challenge which comes from the Oriental peoples and which is justified, together with a rapid increase of educated men and women in the Orient, and their aspirations for self-direction politically, socially, intellectually, and religiously, furnishes a background which must be taken into most serious consideration in planning the foreign mission work of future years.—Baptist Foreign Mission Report.

In accordance with a custom started fifty-four years ago, the American Tract Society presented Bibles to the graduating class of the West Point Military academy, on Sunday, May 23. Dr. William H. Matthews, general secretary of the society, spoke at the chapel service on the "Practical Value of the Bible" and presented the Bibles at the close of the service to 152 graduates. Probably there is no living graduate of the academy who has not been presented with a Bible by the society.

The Federal Council of Churches stands for the integration of denominations in unity of action with a world outlook to bring a Christian influence to bear upon both ecclesiastical and world problems. Through a score of years it has sought to bring different bodies into cooperation for the kingdom of God, and to aid churches with diverse forms and history to understand one another and to combine their spiritual resources that they may be more helpful to each other and to the world.—Report of Baptist Delegates.

The interdenominational message on "The Churches and World Peace" draws the following distinction between the police method and the war method of using force in government: "We draw a clear distinction between the use of force in police service, domestic and international, on the one hand and in war on the other. While force involves coercion or physical control in any case, the motive and end of police force is fourfold: it is inspired by goodwill for the common welfare; it is corrective and remedial in its nature; it is exercised by neutral parties; it is strictly limited by law and has justice as its aim. War, whether aggressive or defensive, is the use of organized violence in a dispute between nations or hostile groups. Even though one of the parties may be guiltless, it creates hatred, leads to unlimited loss of life and property, and always involves large numbers of innocent victims. In war the parties directly concerned seek to settle the issue involved by superior force regardless of justice. Usually war involves conscription of the individual conscience and a nation wide propaganda of falsehood, suspicion, fear and hate. This is modern war in its nature and processes, as our generation has seen it, whether the war be fought for offensive or defensive purposes. War is thus the very antithesis of police force. Attention is called to the fact that a punitive expedition undertaken by one or more nations on their own initiative is essentially a war measure and not an exercise of international police force."

Volume 23, number 2, of the Pearl of the Orient, issued by the Baptist missionaries in the Philippines, is a pictorial number, and a beauty it is. Mrs. F. H. Rose is the editor. A copy may be secured by addressing Box 231, Iloilo, P. I.

Kirby Page, reviving a suggestion of Benjamin Rush, proposes the creation of a department of peace at Washington with a secretary for peace as a cabinet officer. The function of such a department would be to assemble and coordinate all of the many agencies in the country for the promotion of peace and to perform all of the activities necessary for a full and effective propaganda in the interest of peace.

At their occasional friendly meetings two tribes of Chins hold an examination on whatever book of the Bible is being studied through the year in the Sunday schools. Most of the people cannot read or write and oral examinations are given for the unlettered. But there were over forty papers turned in at the meeting in December. Although questions which are not simple cause trouble, not many fail in these tests. New Testaments are given to those having the highest marks, and all receive gospel portions.

The position of employers generally on the question of the rights of labor at the present time is succinctly stated by Judge Gary, president of the U. S. Steel Corporation thus: "They believe in the open shop, which permits a man to work whenever and wherever he is disposed and can agree with the employer. They insist labor should always receive proper and adequate compensation, depending upon the financial ability of the employer and the results of the business; that the employee should be humanely treated; that the welfare of the employee and his family should be of high and constant consideration by the employer; that his person, his health, his comfort, should be protected and safeguarded; that he should be considered an associate and not an inferior; that so far as practicable he should be given an opportunity to purchase an interest in the business he is connected with, having the same rights, advantages and responsibilities and standing on the same basis as all other stockholders; also that he should be subjected to the same restrictions concerning behavior, attitude and accountability to the law that relate to the employer. We do not believe that he should be entitled to a voice in the management of the employer's property or business unless he has a pecuniary interest and corresponding responsibility."

E. Y. Clarke, formerly head of the Ku Klux Klan, is now reported to be promoting a new organization called the Supreme Kingdom." It will admit Jews and Catholics and will fight evolution. It would seem that after all, the master race of the world, "white, Gentile and protestant," which was ordained by the God of the Nordic to rule and save the world has fallen down on the job and must call in Jews and Catholics to complete the enterprise.

A new record has been established in the Greater New York campaign of the Palestine Appeal, according to a report by Benjamin Winter, chairman, which shows that 76,000 individuals contributed the $1,411,000 raised thus far. He said that this was double the number of contributors to any other campaign of the kind. He expressed disappointment at the number of wealthy persons who had not contributed, saying, "It is sad at true that many of our wealthy Jews have demonstrated their readiness to give of their means for the purely charitable needs of their people have as yet not appreciated the great historic and moral value of the reconstructive work at Jews are now accomplishing in Palestine."

Within the past year Dr. W. H. Leslie, Baptist missionary, received the decoration of Chevalier de l'Ordre royal du Lion from the king of Belgium. Doctor Leslie has labored for more than thirty years in Belgian Congo. The last twelve years have been spent at Vanga in the Kwango area, a part of the field especially difficult of access. A similar honor was conferred on both Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Clark. The former has spent forty-eight years in the Congo and the latter forty-six. Mrs. Clark is the first woman to receive this decoration. Their service has covered practically the whole period which has elapsed since Congo was thrown open to the knowledge of the civilized world by the explorer Henry M. Stanley.

An organization to be known as the Religious Motion Picture Foundation, Inc., which has for its purpose the production and distribution of religious pictures for use in the churches, has been created by the Harmon Foundation with the cooperation of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the latter known briefly as the Hays' organization. William E. Harmon is president of the new foundation and George Reid Andrews, chairman of the committee on educational and religious drama, of the Federal Council of Churches, is vice president and general manager. Members of the board of directors are the Rev. S. Parkes Gilman, president of the Federal Council of Churches, John H. Finley, Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay, W. Burke Frimon, and Carl E. Milliken, former governor of Maine. A fund of $50,000 has been set aside by Mr. Harmon to carry on the work in its early stages.

"In 1925, the Chicago Department of Health examined over 130,000 school children, the big majority of which were from the kindergarten and first grades. Over 90,000 of these children had bad teeth. This means that at least seventy out of every 100 children, most of them between the ages of five and seven years, had decayed teeth."

Exhibits in the name of religion at the Sesqui-centennial Exposition, Philadelphia, have two prominent features. One feature will be made by religious bodies themselves, to illustrate their work. Recently some of these bodies have increased their space, and bodies not already applying for space have done so. The other feature will indicate, in as graphic way as possible, what contributions have been made by organized religion to American government, education, charities, and other forms of progress during the last 150 years.

How the Washington convention looks to a foreign missionary is indicated by the following extract from a letter written to THE BAPTIST since the convention closed by one of our best Baptist missionaries in one of the most remote places in the whole field: "The past four years have been anxious years for us out there, not so much because of troubled conditions in China and robbers in our districts, but because of divisions among the churches at home. First came decreased financial support, forcing us to close down some work; then criticism of motives which cut us to the heart; then threatened divisions at Seattle. I went to Washington with fear and trembling, but have come away with praises to God. The Spirit of God conquered selfish desires and selfish views and united us. Now watch Christ's kingdom of righteousness and love advance."

The year 1925 marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of missionary work in the Philippine Islands by American Baptists. On May 3, 1900, the Rev. Eric Lund landed at Iloilo on the Island of Panay and with his Filipino fellow-worker Braulio Manikan, a former priest of the Roman Catholic church, began the proclamation of the gospel. The hearts of many people seemed open to the message. Some fifty years before a mysterious Catholic priest, Father John, had told of foreign teachers who would come with the word of God. Only nine months after the first preaching in the market-place of Jaro, a suburb of Iloilo, a petition signed by thousands of Filipinos was brought stating that the signers were Protestants and wished to have the gospel preached to them. Soon a church was organized at Jaro and then one at Bacolod on the neighboring island of negroes in 1903.

Muddling may save Great Britain yet but the game is becoming dangerous. John Steele, veteran reporter, writes: "Worse than ever is the description given today both by the owners and miners of the coal strike situation before the two executives broke up and scattered to the country after the breakdown of their meeting yesterday. The owners say the men talk only of reorganization of the mines and refuse to discuss lower wages and longer hours, while the men say the owners only demand wage cuts and longer working days, laughing at any suggestion of reorganization. The situation now seems to be up to the government." But it has been up to the government for at least two years. The government either does not know what to do or dares not do it. Meanwhile unemployment is growing. Nearly three million are unemployed. The Russian government is said to have contributed $2,000,000 to aid the striking miners. And everybody dreads tomorrow.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck, director of industrial studies for the Russell Sage Foundation, calls upon American industry to halt in its tracks a moment and make sure that it is not heading for a period of sudden and widespread unemployment. She advocates the immediate extension and coordination of existing state and federal machinery for gathering and analyzing labor statistics, so that there may be available each month exact information on changes in the number of unemployed, and on changes in the purchasing power of wages in each industry and locality and for the nation as a whole. She says: "The prosperity which is reflected in the money market and in the earnings of a few may be illusory. The only sure test of prosperity is the opportunity for every wage-earner to continue to have work and wages throughout the year. This has not been attained in the United States, and will not be until governmental bureaus provide more adequate information and business men make use of it to guide their policies."

(Continued on page 673)

Index	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	646
ADDRESS BEFORE THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT WASHINGTON, D. C., BY FREDERICK L. ANDERSON.....	648
EDITORIAL	649
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR.....	651
PROTESTANT OF THE PROTESTANTS, BY J. H. RUSHBROOKE.....	652
OBSERVATIONS OF RELIGION IN THE ORIENT, BY GEORGE D. SHEPARDSON	653
A SAINT IN OVERALLS, BY OWEN PHILIPS EACHES.....	655
THE CHANGING RELIGIOUS ORDER IN MEXICO, BY ANDRES OSUNA.	656
WHAT HAS BECOME OF JOHN BUNYAN? BY W. W. KEEN, M.D.	657
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE — THE LOVE OF GOD, BY GEORGE H. MORRISON	658
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	659
CHIMNEY CORNER.....	660
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	661
CHURCHES AT WORK.....	662
AMONG OURSELVES.....	663
NEW BOOKS.....	671
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	674

Address before the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington, D. C.

BY FREDERICK L. ANDERSON

"O SING unto the Lord a new song;
For he hath done marvelous things;
His right hand and his holy arm hath wrought salvation for him."

—Psalms 98:7.

Our hearts are full of gladness and gratitude today because the Lord hath dealt bountifully with us. We sowed in tears, we reap in joy. We tell you the glorious news that this year we can again announce the largest number of baptisms in our whole history, 22,460, more than twice the number we reported only five years ago.

The great ingathering among the tribes on the borders of Burma and China, a twenty-three days' ride from a railroad, goes on under the leadership of our great pioneer, William M. Young and his fine sons. A veteran Karen missionary, whose memory reaches far back, assures us that this work is as promising as the Karen movement at the same stage in its history. These people are being trained to self-support from the first, and are building their own simple chapels. Men of ability are being raised up from among them, and Mr. Young pleads for schools, and more schools to give these leaders a fitting education.

Last year there were more baptisms in our Telugu field in South India than in any year since Doctor Clough's great ingathering in 1878. The revivals in Assam, the Philippines, and on the Congo are continuing and spreading to new territory. Even in China, torn by civil war and alive with anti-foreign and anti-Christian feeling, the people in many sections have received the preachers of the gospel gladly and with open minds.

We are especially encouraged by the continual rise of new leaders among our native brethren, by their devoted and eager spirit, and by the evident desire on the part of the churches to support and direct themselves and to engage on their own initiative in the propagation of our blessed religion. The rising tide of nationalism is also in most respects a healthy sign and tends to give the people a feeling of independence and a consciousness of their own abilities and spiritual power.

These results seem to show that our policies and methods and the sacrifices and labors of our workers are being owned and blessed of God. Christianity is evidently taking a deeper hold in our fields; the recent increase is steady and rapid, and the question is how to conserve this abundant harvest and these gratifying advances and go on to greater things. We can no longer doubt that, in spite of all its weaknesses, hindrances and temporary local defeats, Christianity is now seriously influencing and changing the life of the world.

We have kept you informed of the succession of gravely important events in China through the denominational press and through our speakers. It seems unnecessary to repeat the story here, as it is told at length in our annual report, which may be obtained from us by anyone. In the opinion of one of our ablest men in China, this storm has done the Christian movement more good in that country than anything that has happened in its entire history. It proves that we have a body of Chinese Christians who cannot be swept off their feet by any threatening tide of popular prejudice or persecution. Chinese Christianity during these days of testing is finding itself, taking a fresh hold on God and Christ, getting a new and deeper experience of the divine realities, striking its roots deep down into the subsoil of the eternal.

At Seattle, after the report of the investigating commission had been unanimously adopted and a statement had been made by our board through its representative that "we gladly welcomed the constructive criticisms of the report," and that "with justice to all parties we should carry these matters to a conclusion," the convention urged upon our board "such action, in the light of the facts reported by the commission, as seems to them will best conserve our denominational interests and best advance the kingdom of Christ." Your board thereupon promptly incorporated in its procedure all the recommendations of the report of the investigating commission.

At our September meeting the board received a brief final supplementary communication from the commission, advising us to investigate the cases of eight missionaries, without implying that all of them were actually unsound. A committee of seven members of the board was immediately appointed to look into these cases, and it has labored diligently at this disagreeable task.

The results to date are as follows: Two of these eight missionaries had resigned before we received the final communication from the investigating commission. In the cases of three others the board found them loyal to the gospel and the Lord and has dismissed the charges against them. With one missionary in a far distant field, our active correspondence is still continuing. In the remaining two cases, we called the missionaries home for further conference. The first presented a statement, which the board considered unsatisfactory, but at his request, since he had never had a theological course, the board permitted him to spend a year at a theological seminary where he still is, with the understanding that we should review the whole case again at the close of the school year.

In the other instance, the board requested and received the resignation of the missionary, because in the judgment of the board he does not and cannot preach and teach the blessed immortality of those who are led by the Spirit of God, and because the board considers such teaching an essential part of the Christian message which its missionaries are sent forth to proclaim.

We have also sent a letter to all our missionaries informing them of the assurances given to the denomination at Seattle together with our statement of our evangelical position. In this letter we expressed to them our confidence that we could depend on them to fulfill these assurances, saying "that the denomination has a right to expect that we will place large emphasis on the great evangelical truths which our denomination has always held."

For the third time we wish to say to the society that your board considers itself the servant of the whole denomination, and that it will appoint and retain as missionaries, representatives of any of the groups which make up the denomination, provided they have the qualification necessary for missionary work and provided—and this is essential—that they are evangelical. What we mean by an evangelical is one who believes in the gospel, and what we mean by the gospel we have broadcast through the country.

In other words, we stand, as we said in Milwaukee, for an inclusive policy within the limits of the gospel. Within the limits of the gospel, mind you. Nothing could be more unfair—sometimes it has been wilfully unfair—to charge us with an inclusive policy without limits, when we have distinctly stated that it is within the limits of the gospel.

We feel it, however, incumbent on us to say to the denomination that we do not consider our statement of the gospel a creed, but rather the view of the brethren to whom you have committed the administration of your foreign work. The interpretations of scripture are ever changing and there are many divergent interpretations in our constituency. Indeed, it is doubtful whether any two of us exactly agree. Under these circumstances

(Continued on page 674)

Christ at Washington, 1926

BY CHESTER F. WOOD OF WEST CHINA

THOU eternal living Christ of God,
Who the hearts of men did save from sin,
Giving them God-consciousness within,
While in flesh these earthly roads you trod;
Calling men from self and selfish views,
Asking more than Pharisaic feint,
Joining zealot, publican, and saint,
Sending them to save men two by twos;
Thou wast in our midst at Washington, While our men of varied views as brothers
Heard Thy call to go and work for others;
God of righteousness and love has won:
Baptist brothers now united are;
Thou through them wilt save men near and far.

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879, Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Where, Then, Does Authority Lie?

IN the leading editorial of June 5, page 549, occur these words: "If Protestants continue as they have often done to play the pope's game in the pope's way, they must expect that in the long run, the pope will win. All authoritarianism plays into his hand." Since that quotation raises questions that may require consideration in order to clear the ground for an approach to a sound evangelistic program, it has been suggested that the subject be clarified by a fuller statement.

The whole matter can be made clear by a single question that lies at the heart of the Christian religion, namely: How far does Jesus in his work of salvation operate directly in and through the individual believer and how far indirectly through the church? Neither the Roman Catholic nor the Protestant denies that he does work through both channels. Nobody denies it. But the vital question is what he does through either channel. The Roman Catholic holds and wishes emphatically to be understood as holding that to the organized church Jesus has given exclusive authority to interpret his teaching, to convey his saving grace and to prescribe his way of life to men, with power to exclude from salvation, to excommunicate and otherwise to punish those who refuse to acknowledge such authority in the church. Since 1871, this church has held the pope to be the infallible spokesman for it in all vital religious matters, so that he holds and dispenses officially all of the authority of the church. A consistent practice in evangelism this principle calls sinners to come to the church, to accept its teachings, to trust it for salvation and to obey its directions for life. Probably the most careful Catholic would accept this statement as friendly, sympathetic and true. And the reasons given by him for this attitude are neither puerile nor weak. They have commanded the assent of some of the finest minds in Christendom.

What has the Protestant to say in reply? It used to be somewhat the fashion of Protestants to set over against an infallible pope an infallible book. But the retort of the Roman Catholic was too easy. An infallible book in order to work as such must have an infallible interpreter, and if the pope is not that interpreter who is? For answer the Protestants set up their own church organizations as authoritative interpreters and gave to the world the spectacle of an infallible book producing among its followers a multitude of authoritative, fallible and discordant teachings. The only consistent alternative is to swing clear of all ecclesiastically guaranteed infallibilities, to the principle of direct personal access to God through faith in Christ as the New Testament presents him for all of the salvation, for all of the truth and for all of the authority which the gospel offers to mankind.

Where does the saving grace of God achieve its first access into human life? In the experience of the believer in Jesus. Who is the responsible interpreter of the mind of Christ in terms of actual living? The believer in Jesus. Who has authority to act for Christ throughout the whole range of his redemptive purpose in this world? The believer in Jesus. Upon whom has Jesus conferred the dignity of a priesthood that reflects the sanctity of his priesthood? Upon the believer. Who wears all of the spiritual regalia of the kingdom of God in this world? The believer in Jesus. Whence comes the church? From the voluntary union of believers in Jesus for fellowship, teaching, worship and work. What is the church? It is what the believers composing it make it. What are the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper? They are voluntary symbols of a living faith expressing itself in loving and loyal response to Jesus. What are the guarantees for the maintenance and dissemination of the truth as it is in Jesus? They are the testimony and teaching power of Christ-born believers, of a Christ-formed church, of a Christ-inspired word, and of a Christ-filled experience, bringing their combined light to bear in love on the minds and hearts of men. Here and not elsewhere, can Protestantism stand unshaken and make a still larger place for itself in the life of mankind.

Those Baptists who had a clear insight into the meaning of the Baptist movement were always thus thoroughgoing in their advocacy of a free faith with all of its implications. They have always seen that there is no other consistent and safe position for Protestantism. Many of them have seen this so clearly that they refused even to call themselves Protestants. Historic Protestantism has seemed to them to be simply a state of revolt or disaffection among people who are essentially Roman Catholics. This view, however exaggerated, had a certain measure of logic to support it, and it serves at least to emphasize for all Baptists and Protestants alike the importance of clarifying their position and of making a free faith the structural principle of their whole system.

What a gospel of light and life and love and liberty is bound up in this principle! It is a jubilee call for the full release and realization of all the highest aspirations of the soul of the ordinary man or woman. It welcomes all personality even in the submerged areas of human society into the noblest and sweetest fellowship to which even angels might aspire—a fellowship in and with the living Christ as intimate and rich, both for communion and achievement, as can come to any potentate on earth. It proclaims the equal fatherhood of God to all who are willing to become his children, and the equal brotherhood of all who in the spirit of Jesus are willing to show themselves brotherly. It sets in motion not merely a church organization but a spiritual tide. As a message for world evangelization, man has never discovered nor God revealed anything else equal to it in universal power of appeal.

But a free faith can acquire compelling power among men only as it is supported by the testimony of a corresponding life. Neither logic nor raptures can outweigh those values of religion that express themselves in actual living. Unless we who profess a free faith can demonstrate love, and self-sacrifice, and willingness to serve the welfare of others, and zeal for the extension of the reign of Christ, and brotherly fellowship in both church and community life in greater measure than Romanism can show, let our boasting cease. But if we can put into our message "the power of an endless life," then within the field of the Northern Baptist Convention the coming year of evangelism may grace the calendar beyond all past years as an "acceptable year of the Lord."

"This Do in Remembrance of Me"

THE twenty-eighth eucharistic congress is assembling in Chicago. All that the Roman Catholic church can muster in the way of dignity and splendor from the historic centers of its glory in the Old World is coming to grace the celebration. The city is putting on gala attire. Police and guides are organized to handle nearly a million people at a single assembly on the lake front, where before the eyes of their faith will be wrought by pontifical consecration the miracle of changing a wafer into the very body of Christ. Those hours will swell with high devotion, and when the spectacle shall have faded away, multitudes will return to their commonplace tasks with a new sense of religious satisfaction.

An observer whose spiritual discipline has been far removed from such forms as these, but who has learned to look upon all of his fellows with kindly eyes, surveys the scene and reflects. Did Jesus on that last lonesome night have such a scene as this in mind? Is he more honored by such publicity and such pageantry than when a dozen unknown disciples sit down together in a little chapel in the mountains to their own simple and solemn memorial meal? Is he more truly present? Even Cardinal Mundelein would hardly say so.

This brings us back to realities—to the Real Presence. In surveying the scene one wishes and even prays that into the hearts of the thousands who there invoke God's grace he may indeed come with such overwhelming spiritual reality that they shall not mistake the pageantry of the church for the presence of Christ. Perhaps in his own way, by his own Spirit and independently of the imposing spectacle, he may there work in the hearts of shopmen or schoolgirls a deeper miracle than any of which Msgr. Bonzano is dreaming.

So, we salute the eucharistic congress for whatever it may be worth in the sight of him who said, "Do this in remembrance of me." And we know that after it pageantry shall have faded away, He will be present in all of His reality among His people "where cross the crowded ways of life." He neither comes nor departs with the eucharistic congress. What clear purpose of Christ does it serve? In fact, if the one purpose of the promoters of the congress had been to make the dying Christ real to his people, if there had been no thought of magnifying the hierarchy by a spectacle, and no purpose to play up pomp for the sake of power, would the congress ever have been held? Judge no man. But millions of simple believers have hazarded their lives for the privilege of finding and following Christ without the intrusion of either prelate or pageantry, and having no need for either have found him in the glory of his unseen presence.

With God on a Vacation

VACATION hints are in order. Take this one. While deciding what you will carry along and what you will leave behind, what are you going to do with your religion? Will you put it in storage with your furs? Will you take it along as conventionally necessary impedimenta, to be worn as required by custom like a bathing suit?

Why not make it an opportunity for getting more intimately acquainted with God? Use your retreat to give your soul a treat. Whatever else may have brought to you a sense of strain and weariness, excessive communion with God is hardly likely to have made a vacation necessary.

There are many ways of seeking spiritual refreshment that will cost little. In fact they may actually save you money. Row out upon the lake alone in the glory of the morning, in the quiet of the sunset, or under the enchantment of radiant moon, and as you float away, think of God and talk to him. Seek a long sweet hour with him apart from the crowd at noon, while you lie under the shadow of the broad, clean, beech trees, lulled by the rustle of leaves overhead or the distant trill of the harvest fly. Take time to work out that troublesome religious problem that you have been too busy to solve. Get acquainted with some book of the Bible, for instance, Psalms, Amos, Isaiah; or fall into a trance with John and dream with him through the supernal opera of the Revelation.

There are ways without end. Try it and you will turn a different and a better man or woman.

The World in Transit

By THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

Get Ready to Make Up Your Minds About War

A suspicious lull in China is beginning to reveal its meaning. It has been filled with all manner of whispering and of running to and fro among financiers, politicians and diplomats in the dark. Forces have been quietly assembling for still more serious conflicts at arms. There are foreign interests in China that would set the world on fire rather than release their gainful grip. China will never stop until that grip is broken. Factions in China led by military adventurers prey upon their own country. The soviet union is cultivating friendly relations with Chinese and extending its influence among them in order to strengthen its own international position for a conflict which it never doubts is coming. Citizens of eleven nations with Americans at their head are organizing in China a "Constitutional Defense League" for the specific purpose of resisting the advance of communism by methods that cannot be disclosed to anybody," and by activities on a very extensive scale." All of these various groups know no way but war, trust in war, expect war, intend war—and always "defensive" war. And nowhere does there appear any person or group with sufficient disinterestedness, magnanimity, statesmanship and courage to call off the dogs. What at this juncture is the church psychology?

Will the Farmer Listen to This Siren's Voice?

One little secret is of great value to the foes of prohibition, but they have been a long time in finding it out. Now they have discovered it, namely, the farmer is in financial distress. Having hit upon this secret they can hardly restrain their eagerness to apply their belated wisdom. They have set it to the music of propaganda, and it runs: "If alcoholic liquors could be freely manufactured, the farmers would find a market for their grain." If therefore the farmer can be so persuaded he will join the liquor forces and all will be well. The older farmers have gone all over that argument long ago. They know what a trifling percentage of the grain was taken by the breweries and distilleries when these institutions were running at full capacity. Unless they have forgotten, they are immune to the siren's song. But the younger farmers whose memory of public affairs does not cover the last fifteen years may be disposed to listen—until they learn the facts,

Is Such a Case as This Where Do You Stand?

It is the Chicago Daily Tribune which moralizes in this fashion: "The gangs flourish in Chicago as they never did before because of the profits of bootlegging. The gangs fight among themselves because the stakes are enormous. As long as all drinking is illegal the traffic in liquor will be a gold mine. Conflicts between the gangs must be settled by private justice because they cannot be settled by public justice. That means murder. The gangs seek to control law enforcing officials in their own interest and that means corruption. Corruption, like gang disorder, will continue so long as hundreds of thousands of citizens are resolved to violate the law against drinking and will pay a fancy price for their liquor." The logic seems to lead to the conclusion that the way to cure crime is to legalize the liquor business. The fraternity of bootleggers says the same thing. Its ultimatum to the government is this: "We shall continue the business, law or no law; if you don't want us to break the law, repeal the law." The Tribune says: "Amen!" It stands with them against the government. Their crimes are its vindication; its friendship is their protection. The public waits for it to say one resolute word in support of the government in this contest with organized crime.

This Business of Scaling Debts Seems to be Contagious

Debts of foreign nations owed to the United States were scaled down on the basis of ability to pay. Governments concerned in the transaction did not seem to anticipate the obvious consequences involved. If the debts of a nation may be scaled down as a necessary measure of economic adjustment, why may not the debts of a class or of any considerable economic group be treated in the same way? The case is different from that of bankruptcy, for instead of taking all of the debtor's assets to satisfy his creditors as bankruptcy does, the scaling down leaves him with sufficient assets to keep business going. The hint of the settlements with foreign nations is not lost on the farmers, and two conservative papers have recently frankly proposed a commission with power to effect an adjustment of the debts of the farmers on the principle of their ability to pay without bankruptcy or the foreclosure of mortgages. It is interesting to reflect how far the consequences of these settlements will carry.

Suppose That They Should Acquire a Control Ownership

The Chicago Daily News has discovered "the only industrial revolution worth more than a hill of beans," which is proceeding peacefully. It is the growth of the movement to distribute the ownership of stock amongst employees and consumers. Many millions of shares of stock are so distributed and the movement seems to be increasing. But before such a movement takes on a revolutionary aspect it has far to go. We are yet to see what might happen in case the quantity of stock so purchased by employees and consumers should amount to a majority and give them control of the business. Imagine those who now control the stock of the employing corporations permitting such a thing to occur! But if such a revolution is coming and if its coming is more welcome than a hill of beans, what becomes of the argument against public ownership?

Such Things Keep Coming Back to Plague Our Piety

The May number of The Family refers to a matter that must have been overlooked. It says: "The churches, according to Secretary Lane, were the most direct and efficient of the agencies used during the war to create public sentiment and to advertise the Liberty Loans, to aid in recruiting and to put over the great appeal of war benevolences. According to him, but for the churches the war would not have been sold to the country communities, villages, and small towns of the United States." The government seems to have omitted an important duty. Why should it not have presented a medal or flag or other token of Christian and patriotic merit to the church that rendered the best service in "selling" the war? Such a prize might stimulate the churches to "sell" preparedness for the next war. The churches are lagging behind in the latter work of grace. Is not the war department neglecting something?

Protestant of the Protestants

The following article is only a portion of the annual address of the president of the Baptist Union of Great Britain delivered in Leeds, England, May 3. We regret that our space will not permit the publication of the whole address.

By J. H. RUSHBROOKE

“THE Baptist denomination is not an accident, nor an incident, nor an experiment; it is the normal development and permanent embodiment of a great Christian principle.”

That is a high claim. I do not adopt these words from the opening address at the First Baptist World Congress held in London in 1905 as implying that so long as the earth remains there must needs be a separate Baptist denomination. No man may pretend thus to lay down laws for the future, and to anticipate the providential leadings of God. Vast changes may pass upon religious thought within and without our borders; approximations hitherto undreamed may appear; the way may open for entering into new relations without sacrifice of conviction. It would, of course, be stupid and presumptuous to regard all which Baptists hold as partaking in the quality of eternal truth; the easy and crushing retort lies ready to hand that on many secondary issues we notoriously differ. But central, vital, creative Christian truth demands embodiment; and our denomination exists, and so far as we are able to see will persist, as the answer to that demand.

The Unifying Principle

What, then, is the unifying religious principle of Baptists, the source and governing idea of their distinctive life and practice? I find it in the Protestant motto, “sola fide,” “by faith alone,” the personal faith which involves direct, immediate relation with God in Christ. The great, simple, splendid gospel whose rediscovery and reassertion is the glory of the Reformation: we have taken that seriously. We exist to maintain it, and to guard it against accretions that obscure or weaken it. Personal faith is for us the royal dominant fact. An individual spiritual experience and that alone makes a Christian. “Here stand we: we can no other.” The reality and the measureless significance of conversion, implying from the divine side regeneration; personal loyalty to Christ; individual faith—phrase it how you will—here is the organizing idea of Baptist life and witness. That, although taking it seriously—for we are Protestant of the Protestants—we have not always clearly discerned its range and power, we humbly confess. Yet we cherish the fixed purpose to act with utter consistency upon the conviction that faith is all-important. That others hold and profess this we thankfully acknowledge. We do not regard them as enemies, but hail them as brethren, and urge them to consider the testimony which, under Christ, we are bound to offer. We are constrained to believe—or we should not be Baptists—that the evangelical experience of faith has implications and applications revealed to us by the Spirit of Christ; and therefore that our churches stand for religious values which cannot be surrendered. But we rejoice in everything that links us with fellow Christians. We are a “salvation army” as truly as the body that owns William and Catherine Booth as father and mother in God. The “inner light,” rightly understood, is no less a reality for us than for the descendants of George Fox. John Wesley is of our kin; we remember indeed that his preaching liberated the spiritual energy which shaped the “New Connexion of General Baptists.” Our churches throughout the world, amid all local and temperamental differences, or varieties of custom, are irrevocably Evangelical in basis and evangelistic in spirit. I repeat: this word, “by faith alone,” is for us “the article of a standing or falling church.” . . .

It is clear, fathers and brethren, that an immediate living experience must carry tremendous implications. He that by grace through faith has to do directly with God in Christ can acknowledge but one authority in religion: the Lord himself must be the sole Ruler. The relation of the Saviour and his disciple becomes so intimate that “I” is transformed into “Yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me.” Such authority is in its very nature final and absolute, since it has its seat in the inmost depths of personality. Even an apostle may not assume the dominion that belongs to Christ: “Not that we have lordship over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.” Let me borrow another sentence of the address already quoted: “The essential Baptist principle . . . is this: An acute and vivid consciousness of the sovereignty of Christ, accompanied by a steadfast determination to secure the complete and consistent recognition of his personal, direct and undelimited authority over the souls of men.”

That is how we apprehend and apply our fundamental religious principle.

This being so, our conception of the church is natural and inevitable. The test of every ecclesiastical organization must be its capacity to express the innermost in religion. . . .

The church that accepts his authority is built up of men and women believing and confessing. It must reject all lordship that conflicts with the authority of the one Lord of the soul. Leadership within the church is not that of rulers that “lord it” over others; it rests on preeminence in brotherly service. These are elementary truths which we dare not set aside. The questions by which all models of organization must be tried are two: Do they accord with the mind of the Founder and Head of the church? Have they a legitimate place in a brotherhood of the spiritually enfranchised?

The Baptist Conception of the Church

The Baptist is thus led to the idea of the church as the voluntary but inevitable association of faithful men, each in immediate relation with his Lord, spiritual equals in Christ. This conception supplies his criterion of all polities. They are invalid if they contradict this constitutive idea. A papacy manifestly does so: when a fellow-man claims in the sphere of religion the unqualified submission of millions we are disposed to refer to the Apostle Peter who—quite unaware that he is the first pope—forbids his “fellow-elders” to lord it over their charge. A “historic episcopate” possessing an authority derived by succession from the apostles—we may leave aside the doubtful character of the history, but we must ask: Does the theory fall into line with the principles of Jesus? The conditions under which the powers are exercised may be varied or modified: an episcopacy may be “constitutional” instead of “monarchical,” but to acknowledge the necessity of an “order,” episcopal or presbyteral, without whose participation the church cannot commission a brother to obey his divine call to the ministry of the Word: is no this to impair the liberty of the Christian society? . . .

Such an ideal implies that for us the essentials of the church are not in organization. The Christian man, with his experience of faith, not the institution, is the primary. We believe in the church universal, the only church that is catholic without qualification. It is a divine, a supernatural, and a continuous creation. It embraces all the faithful. Its unity is indestructible; and into it as living stones are built all true Christians. That church is not an institution; it transcends them all; none of them, nor all together, can fully represent it. But it is certainly by the will of Christ and the inspiration of his Spirit that Christian men come together in visible societies. When we call their association "voluntary," we mean that it is the personal act of each believer; and that this spiritual fellowship cannot be entered by proxy, nor under external constraint. We do not mean that an arbitrary human decision is involved. The believer is not a law unto himself; he is subject to the law of Christ—the "perfect law of liberty" implicit in the relation of faith. Now the Christian man is inevitably social. That personality transcends stark individualism is no recent discovery in religion; it is psychology that arrived late! "The Bible knows nothing of a solitary religion," said a "serious man" to John Wesley. Of course not: faith involves fellowship. Does not the New Testament describe believers as "children of God by faith in Christ Jesus"? The common relation to the Father implies relation to one another, and constitutes them in a peculiar sense the family of God, the household of faith, brothers and sisters in Christ. The visible church represents this fraternity; and only in the community can the personal life rise to its noblest. It is "with all the saints" that we apprehend "the breadth and length and height and depth," and know the otherwise unknowable love of Christ. Living religion cannot be without "thou and I" between the soul and God, but it cannot halt there. In fellowship we move onward, "till we all attain unto the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

But some one may say: "You have not touched on baptism." Let me rather claim that every word I have uttered bears upon it. Is there anything in all the world to compare with our Christian baptism as a means of setting forth the supremacy of faith, its nature and its implications? Faith involves an immediate personal relation with God in Christ; the requirement of personal confession leaves that fact clear and unmistakable. It cuts at the root of any magical view of the ordinance. Baptismal regeneration is to us a doctrine as perilous as it is unscriptural. The paradox of our denominational life is that by means of a rite we offer decisive testimony against ritualism. In its very form the ordinance expresses the believer's reverence for the sole authority of Christ. The symbolism of immersion guards and proclaims great evangelical truths and experiences: the saving significance of the death, burial and resurrection of the Lord Jesus, the new life which is the common life of members of the church of Christ. Therefore we assert in action louder than words that self-dedication is an indispensable element. The christening of infants divests the ordinance of its full and proper meaning; to treat the infant as baptized deprives him of his right and privilege of making his own confession, and as a believer receiving baptism in the Lord's way. I recall an afternoon in a lecture-room at the Berlin university where years ago I listened to that most brilliant of teachers, Professor Harnack. He was speaking of the mediæval custom of celebrating a children's eucharist. The reformers, he said, made short work of this, merely by asking: "What possible value can a rite possess, apart from intelligence and personal faith?" And he added the searching question (which he left unanswered), "Gentlemen, if they had faced the same problem as to infant baptism, what would have been the effect on the standards of our church?" Baptists stand apart from the majority even of evangelical Christians at this point; and just here appears most clearly the fixed purpose of our community, the unwavering resolve to express and to guard the conception of the church as the fellowship of Christian men. Rightly understood, we cannot make too much of baptism. He who regards it as an indispensable condition of salvation is a sectarian and a ritualist; Baptists see in the ordinance a divinely appointed means of ensuring the simplicity and purity of the gospel. We exist for nothing else than the propagation and defense of the gospel; in the fulfillment of that purpose, as God gives us light and guidance, we find the final, the only, and the sufficient justification of our existence as Christian churches.

Observations of Religion in the Orient

BY GEORGE D. SHEPARDSON

ONE of the chief privileges of a trip around the world is the opportunity afforded to observe religious activities and tendencies. Having been favored also with interviews with a number of educational and religious leaders in various parts of the Orient, and having come into contact with numerous fellow travelers who also have been studying religious and other conditions, one is tempted to share with others the impressions so obtained. In China one is impressed with the strong movement among the students to emphasize the development of a national spirit, a rebound from the many activities of foreign powers in exploiting China, and a realization that China must not remain passive while the world is in a ferment. They admit that they are likely to make many mistakes, but they are pushing toward better conditions. One hesitates to say much about political matters in countries so disturbed as China and India, yet may mention some interesting sidelights. In view of the vigorous atheistic activities of the present Russian leaders, Christian people are inquiring about Russian activities in China.

A prominent young man, a Chinaman who does not wish to have either his name or his position indicated, gave us his understanding of the situation. Russia presents to the Chinese that she (Russia) is almost without friends among the nations, and is seeking the friendship of China; Russia calls China's attention to the ways in which the other nations have been and are taking advantage of China's military and political weakness, and offers to help her with advice and other assistance toward retrieving and maintaining her rights. China likewise realizes her own need of friends, and welcomes Russia's advances. Russia will make little progress with communism in China, for nearly everyone in China has an equity on one or many pieces of land by inheritance from his revered ancestors; Russia's atheism finds ready soil, for the more intelligent in China are finding their hereditary religions inadequate and are equally open-minded toward atheism or toward Christianity. Others remind us that many of the young men now leaders among the Chinese have been in America and other nominally "Christian" countries to get higher education, and have brought back the report that a large proportion of the people they meet in such countries have little or no religion that they can recognize.

The rising tide of antagonism to things foreign leads the thinkers in the Chinese churches to ask for a larger degree of independence, so that the churches shall really be conducted and controlled by Chinamen, though with the advice and temporary financial assistance of the foreign missionary friends. Such independence will enable the Chinese Christians to tell others that their church is a Chinese institution and not foreign, and will relieve them of the suspicion of outside propaganda with possible ulterior motives, since many Chinese suspect missionary efforts to be fostered directly or indirectly by foreign governments in order to obtain more concessions. There seems to be a rapid growth toward a unified church of Christ in China, conducted by Chinese as Christians and not as denominationalists. An agreement among the various evangelical denominations in America and Europe to pool their contributions to religious work in China turning the joint sum over to the church of Christ in China to be distributed and used according to their judgment, would seem to be a long step toward realizing Christ's prayer "that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

A Contribution of Chinese Christians

Another contribution that Chinese Christians may return to western Christianity is a better understanding of older and less perfect religions. Jesus taught "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." The western mind refers this thought to the Old Testament with which there is some familiarity. The Oriental is more familiar with the teachings of Confucius and of Buddha, and realizing that originally they had much of truth and of high moral standards, the teachings of Jesus readily fit in with their background and suggest that true Christianity is a fulfillment and more perfect presentation of the elements of truth imperfectly set forth by their Oriental leaders. With this approach, the Chinese Christians can readily make effective contacts with the more intelligent and devout worshippers through other religions and can more easily help them to see that Christianity is vastly superior and more satisfying than their ancestral beliefs, especially as many are losing their faith. In other words, their early Christian contacts with non-Christian prospects are constructive rather than destructive. There is, of course, an element of danger lest much of paganism be carried over and adapted to Christian ideas without fully realizing the distinction, as apparently has been done by some nominally Christian sects: for in the depraved worship observed in the Orient one is startlingly reminded of observances in some that are called Christian churches. One of the Buddhist priests, while showing the writer through parts of his temple and dwelling on alleged analogies between Buddhism and Christianity, emphasized that the apparent acts of devotion were symbolical and not actual worship of the idols themselves. Nevertheless the observer had serious doubts as to how many of the worshipers thought beyond the actual animals or images (we did not see any of them apparently worshiping pictures).

In India we learned from one competent to judge, that a great change has come within the past twenty-five years. Instead of the former antagonism to Christ, there seems now to be general respect, and large numbers of non-Christians are voluntarily buying copies of the New Testament. While many are antagonistic to Christianity as they see it exemplified, they have great respect for Christ as a religious teacher and are eagerly studying him.

Seeking an antidote, the more intelligent Buddhist leaders are recognizing the need of something more modern in their system, and in places are trying to adapt features of the Y. M. C. A. by establishing Y. M. B. A. plants for Buddhist young men, apparently without as yet reaching startling success. They seem to have much to learn from the skillful development of the Knights of Columbus.

In India also attention is called to the great superiority of Mohammedanism over Hindooism, as indicated in the outward lives of the adherents. Mohammedanism is one of the forces that is tending to break down the caste system of Hindooism. This, and the worship of one God, Mohammedanism has in common with Christianity; and when one compares the Hindoos with the Mohammedan servants with whom ready contact is made, the latter seem at least half-brothers. When in the minority and when desiring favors, Mohammedans seem to be both intelligent and courteous and kind hearted. We met a number of Christians living in countries that had been under Mohammedan control and from them learned that the Mohammedan authority is very different from the Mohammedan seeking privileges from others. (Perhaps not so different in that respect as some others, except as to his cruelty.)

The condition of women under Mohammedanism seems to be almost as low as under Hindooism. Kept in seclusion and in ignorance, apparently considered as chattels to be bought and sold, treated like animals, their condition is to be pitied. It must be said to their credit that they do not make of themselves walking exhibits of anatomy in public. One shudders to see the Hindoo women performing some of the menial tasks of daily life. When one sees jeweled Hindoo women following the sacred cows in the pastures and gathering up the fresh manure into baskets which they carry on their heads and then with bare hands knead it with grass and twigs into cakes to be dried on the sides of their houses for fuel for cooking their food, one wonders that American women will receive the sleek swamis who come to extoll the excellence of Hindoo philosophy and will even abandon Christianity for Hindoo cult. By their fruits they should be known, though full and accurate accounts would not be considered suitable for transmission through American mails.

Breaking of the Caste System

The caste system, which continues to be a terrible curse under Hindooism, seems likely to be broken up. It is reported that even the Brahmins, who are considered to have fastened this on their countrymen as a means of maintaining their own superiority and wealth, are coming to see that it injures their whole people including themselves. People of various castes are brought into somewhat closer contact and into competition in the schools and in the civil service examinations, and the higher caste people are being forced to recognize that brain power, character and ambition are not measured by caste.

The Christian schools in the Orient seem to be doing effective work both toward general uplift and direct evangelization. Though at first limited in many cases to work among the lower classes of the people, they are increasingly finding favor with all classes. Various Christian agencies have established schools from kindergarten to college grade, and have succeeded in training teachers to so large an extent that the American and other foreign leaders can devote an increasing portion of their time and strength to organization and direction. The higher schools are training native teachers for the lower schools.

The training of native teachers for the Christian colleges in the Orient has become a real problem. By cooperation among the educational institutions, it is possible in some districts for native students to obtain a continuous education from kindergarten to college in Christian schools and surrounded by Christian influences. Real difficulty is experienced in securing suitably trained native teachers for the colleges. The non-Christian colleges and universities seem to be dominated by atheistic or heathen influences. When studying philosophy and kindred college studies, it seems important that future Christian leaders coming from heathen surroundings should have these subjects presented at least with open mind and not by one permeated with heathen philosophies or atheistic notions. In some cases the graduates of the Christian schools in the Orient have come to America to obtain higher education in a supposedly Christian country and in universities supposedly favorable to Christianity, and have been stunned to find agnosticism where they expected strengthening of belief. Some have come to America to lose the faith they had found in Christian schools in the Orient, and some have held on.

Some of the educational leaders in China hope that it may become possible to establish a really Christian university in the Orient that shall show in no uncertain manner that the highest scholarship in the most learned subjects is not incompatible with the deepest faith in God and in Jesus Christ. Meanwhile the Christian people in American university towns have a great opportunity to show Christian hospitality and other interest in Oriental students, especially those already Christians, not forgetting the potential value for good or evil of each Oriental student who returns to his own country to tell of what Christianity really is in nominally Christian America. Contacts with Christian homes will go far to counterbalance the teachings and insinuations of those who profess they "do not know" of the verity of Christian teachings, or who even deny them.

Rome, May 5.

A Saint in Overalls

BY OWEN PHILIPS EACHES

AMOS was an Old Testament saint dressed in a farmer's garb; Bezaleel was a saint dressed as a foundry man, wearing overalls. He lived in the days of Moses when the tabernacle was in process of construction. He did not have the eloquence of Aaron or the executive ability of Moses, but he had what they did not possess—in artistic task, acquaintance with the fine arts, a skill in all manner of workmanship in gold, in silver, in brass, in woodwork (Ex. 31:3-5). Isaiah was fitted by the Holy Spirit to deal in world views, in statesmanship, in guiding the state, in predictions, in words of counsel and salvation, in high moral questions. Bezaleel was fitted by the Holy Spirit to deal in material things, in machinery, in tools, in things that could be fashioned by the hammer and the chisel. The work of Bezaleel was as essential in its place, in building up God's kingdom in the earth as the work of Isaiah.

Jehovah needed a tabernacle for the worship of himself, for the instruction of his people in righteousness. The tabernacle was in its outline and structure, a visible revelation of God's will. It spoke of sin, its expiation and forgiveness, the need of holiness in access to God, an actual fellowship with God who, in a symbolic way, dwelt among his people. To make the tabernacle a beautiful structure, fitting for the dwelling place of God, a man with Bezaleel's capacity was needed by Jehovah. It was a holy work to which Bezaleel was called, needing a spiritual preparation. And therefore we read, "I have called Bezaleel by name and I have fitted him with the Spirit of God." In his line of mechanical work he was a spiritually-minded man.

In the Old Testament times God was not the God of prophets, of high priests, of national leaders alone, but he was also the God of farmers, of workers in brass, of architects, of men making a livelihood in the ordinary modes of life. Stradivarius could reverently say that God could not make a Stradivarius violin without the help of Stradivarius. In like manner Bezaleel might say that Jehovah could not adequately beautify his honor without the help of an adequately trained mechanic fitted for this work by God's grace.

Distant from that period by thirty centuries, is God today a God of ministers and missionaries and theological professors and Y. M. C. A. workers alone? Does he give them a call to service and are all others, mechanics, clerks, teachers, physicians, bankers, passed over without any definite call, drifting along in life's current? That was a sermon that made the nation think, the sermon by Bushnell—every man's life a plan of God. That teaching seems to fit in with the New Testament conception of God as a Father of his people caring for them, guiding them and with a providence in the world that works for their real good.

The call to the ministry may not be abandoned or abridged, the power of the ministry consists in the personal call of God to a particular work. It imparts a sense of the worth of that life. Why not break down the fence that separates the ministry from all others, why may there not be calling for the man who drives away malaria by digging ditches, for the printer who does his work and uses his life to build up God's kingdom? Was that mechanic insane who put on his sign the words, "A shoemaker by the grace of God"? Every Christian will have an additional story put in his life who can say "I am here in this position by God's providence with capacities given by him, answerable to him for the right use of them, I am living a called life." Every mechanic may be a Bezaleel building up God's temple in the world. To be a Christian means to live a called life.

But Once!

WE go this way but once, O heart of mine,
So why not make the journey well worth while,
Giving to those who travel on with us
A helping hand, a word of cheer, a smile?

We go this way but once. Ah, never more
Can we go back along the selfsame way,
To get more out of life, undo the wrongs,
Or speak love's words we knew but did not say.

We go this way but once. Then let us make
The road we travel blossomy and sweet
With helpful, kindly deeds and tender words,
Smoothing the path of bruised and stumbling feet.
—British Weekly.

The Changing Religious Order in Mexico

BY ANDRES OSUNA

Resume of the address of Dr. Andres Osuna, former governor of Tamlipas, Mexico, delivered, Friday morning, May 28, in the Washington (D. C.) auditorium at the annual meeting of the American Baptist Home Mission Society held in conjunction with the Northern Baptist Convention.

THERE is a great deal of confusion in the minds of the American people in regard to the religious agitation in Mexico. It has been said that there is religious persecution where there is not the slightest idea on the part of the government to curtail religious liberties. The government is only trying to enforce existing laws to control the political activities of any church. We have had there a state church for more than 330 years, which used to control all public activities, and that church has not given up her political program at all.

During the 300 years of Spanish rule the church played a very important role in the political life of the colony. It followed a program which produced dissatisfaction and created divisions in its own ranks. The task of education was left in its hands entirely by the government, but in spite of the fact that the church had more than three times as much income as the colonial government and had a real army of religious teachers, it did not educate the people. When Mexico secured her independence only about one-half of one per cent of the people knew how to read and write. That was a great disappointment to the patriotic and thinking people.

In order to follow the requirements of the Spanish government the church never treated fairly the native clergy, who loved their country and desired the well-being of the people. Ecclesiastics were brought from Spain to occupy the high positions of the church in the colony, in order to keep the most rigid submission to Spain and to Rome, no matter if the colonial clergy were intelligent, well educated and well qualified to fill such position. That created a division in ranks of the clergy and a great animosity from the lower to the higher clergy. The first group was for the colony, fought for her independence and were always ready to work for the uplift of the people. The latter one was always against such a program.

When the independent life of Mexico began, the church formed a political party and began to struggle for power. When an election could not be secured in behalf of its party, the church appealed to all sorts of means to get in power, using its money and great power in many ways. That was purely a political work and had with it the bitterness and violence of all political struggles in a new country.

Church and State

The leaders in the liberty party could not accept the plan of combining the religious with temporal affairs, and tried to separate the one from the other. So we had the constitution of 1857 and the Reform Laws of 1859 separating the church from the state, establishing the liberty of worship, the liberty of thinking and of teaching, which the church never accepted and always fought bitterly. The main contention with us has been to separate the church from the state not only legally but in fact. The fight has gone on through our history up to the present days. About ten years ago, when the last revolution was at its highest peak one of the leading Catholic Mexican priests, the Vicar General of the archbishopric of Mexico, published the following statements which will explain this most unfortunate long and bitter struggle, from the point of view of the clergy itself:

"The Catholic clergy in Mexico is divided into two large groups—the creole clergy, self-denying and poor who have as a rule charge of the village parishes; and the imported clergy, mostly Europeans, rich and proud who have great influence in the episcopates and bishoprics as also in the rich parishes, and who have charge of the spiritual direction of the high social classes. The first mentioned have always been devoted to the duties of their office, and in the struggles which have broken out from time to time for the progress and freedom of the Mexican people have sympathized with those movements. It is this group that Midalgo and Ocampo belonged to, and to which belongs the majority of the poor clergy.

The Intolerant Catholic Group

"The other group in Mexico has always worked in favor of reaction and against freedom. It has advocated and defended not the principle of religious freedom, but intolerance and privileges; its members have tried to constitute themselves a privileged class, and have been shedding the blood of the people in useless struggles ever since Mexico became an independent country. It was this portion of the Catholic clergy that we owed in 1821 the ephemeral command of Iturbide. It was they who placed all their power, material and spiritual, at the disposal of the ominous government of Santa Ana, spreading the conflagration of civil war with the cry of 'Religion and Privileges.' It was they who furnished arms to Naro and Tamariz and enabled them to stain with blood the state of Puebla. It was they who influenced Comonfort to give the coup d'état against the constitution of 1857. It was they who provoked and incited the horrible three years to the cry of 'Religion and Privileges.' It was they who attempted with Maximilian to establish the Empire in Mexico. It was they who prepared the conspiracy against Madero, contributing money to bribe the army to treason—money which was intended for the maintenance of religious faith and for the relief of the needy. They conspired, as was proven beyond doubt by the documents which have been published, to maintain the usurpation of Huerta. They abused the pulpit and their moral influence over the ignorant classes to support the dictator. They forced lay teachers to bind themselves that in the instruction of children they would not observe the principle of liberty of creeds, and they were made to promise that they would act in the interest of the Catholic church. They armed priests to enable them to head rebellious bands, with the ever-resounding battle cry of 'Religion and Privileges'."

"It is not a masonic conspiracy that is making war on the political Catholic clergy of Mexico. It is the majority of the people of Mexico, who today, as in the memorable time of Juarez, cannot and will not tolerate the existence in Mexico of a privileged class, however respectable, who under the pretext of defending a dogma, perpetrate a kinds of excesses and constantly disturb the public peace unmolested and unrestrained."

The Mexican government is only trying now to enforce existing laws to control the political activities of the small group of the hierarchy of the Catholic church, or of any other church which may have a similar program. There is no attempt to interfere with religious liberty. C the contrary the government is determined to protect the liberty of worship by keeping religion out of politics entirely so that every person may be left free on matters pertaining to human conscience. If every church would confine itself to a religious program there would be no conflict whatever for the government is also doing a real human and highly Christian labor. Let me quote at this point what President Obregon said some three years ago to the Catholic bishop of Mexico:

"The fundamental program of the Catholic church as it is interpreted by those entrusted with its destinies consists principally in guiding all souls along the path of virtue, morality and brotherhood—using these terms in their broadest sense . . . aiming on the basis of these noble purposes to assure infinite happiness for all in the life eternal.

"The fundamental aims of the present Mexican government in which it believes it is faithfully interpreting the desires of people may be summed up thus: to guide all the people of Mexico along the path of morality, virtue and brotherhood—using these terms in their broadest sense—aiming on the basis of these purposes to achieve a greater well-being for the earthly life. If these two programs could be realized there would result the most far-reaching conquest of well-being ever known on earth because the well-being and happiness thus sought would have been attained both in this and the next life.

"The Catholic religion requires of its ministrants that they should nourish and guide the souls of believers. The revolution which has just ended requires that the government born of it should nourish the stomach, the brain and the soul of each and every Mexican. In this basic conception of the two programs there is not only nothing mutually exclusive, but there should be on the contrary, indisputable harmony. . . ."

There may be some misunderstanding on the part of local authorities with regard to the application of the constitutional provisions. The original law regulating these general principles has not yet been enacted, but the government officials have said publicly that the spirit of the constitution is to control only political activities of any church and that such spirit will always prevail in interpreting the law.

Vague and inaccurate language will soon be corrected, the complete separation of church and state secured and the most ample religious liberty reaffirmed. If the anti-Mexican propaganda would recede, our religious problem could be satisfactorily settled in the very near future.

What Has Become of John Bunyan?

By W. W. KEEN, M.D.

LET me quote a few lines from a review by Lord Macaulay of Southey's edition of the "Pilgrim's Progress," in the Edinburgh Review for 1831.

"In the wildest parts of Scotland the 'Pilgrim's Progress' is the delight of the peasantry. In every nursery it is a greater favorite than 'Jack the Giant-Killer.' . . . The Wicket Gate, and the Desolate Swamp which separates it from the City of Destruction . . . the stately front of the House Beautiful are as well known to us as the sights of our own street. Then we come to the narrow place where Apollyon strode right across the whole breadth of the way to stop the journey of Christian, and where afterwards the pillar was set up to testify how bravely the pilgrim had fought the good fight. . . . At length the towers of a distant city appear before the traveller; and soon he is in the midst of the innumerable multitudes of Vanity Fair . . . and right onward are the sheepfolds and orchards of the Delectable Mountains. Beyond is the land of Beulah, where the flowers, the grapes, and the songs of birds never cease, and where the sun shines night and day. . . . [Beulah-land was probably better known through Bunyan than through the single mention of it by Isaiah (LXII:4).]

"The mind of Bunyan was so imaginative that personifications, when he dealt with them, became men. . . . The style of Bunyan is delightful to every reader, and invaluable as a study to every person who wishes to obtain a wide command over the English language. . . . We have observed several pages which do not contain a single word of more than two syllables. Yet no writer has said more exactly what he meant to say. For magnificence, for pathos, for vehement exhortation, for subtle disquisition, for every purpose of the poet, the orator, and the divine, this homely dialect, the dialect of plain workingmen, was perfectly sufficient.

"There is no book in our literature on which we could so readily stake the fame of the old unpolluted English language; no book which shows so well how rich that language is in its own proper wealth, and how little it has been improved by all that it has borrowed. . . .

"We are not afraid to say that, though there were many clever men in England during the latter half of the seventeenth century, there were only two great creative minds. One of those minds produced the 'Paradise Lost,' and the other the 'Pilgrim's Progress.'"

How many of my readers remember that "Beulah"-land, "Vanity Fair," the Delectable Mountains, Giant Despair, Mr. Greatheart and other similar names all were originated by John Bunyan in this most famous of all allegories in any language?

Recently I went into a large bookshop. The first saleswoman whom I asked for the "Pilgrim's Progress" did not know the book and had to ask a second saleswoman. I found that that was the only book by Bunyan that they had. This I bought for our church and Sunday-school library, which strange to say contained no copy, and I also ordered his "Holy War." But I find that of all Bunyan's many books only the "Pilgrim's Progress" has survived.

This generation is losing a great education, a great lesson in the best use of pure idiomatic and forceful English.

On my first visit to England, now sixty years ago, I made a pilgrimage to "Bunhill Fields' Burial Ground" in London and stood with uncovered head beside the altar tomb of John Bunyan. The original name was "Bone-hill Fields" on account of the great number of burials there during the Great Plague in 1666. There too lie the remains of two of Oliver Cromwell's sons, of Isaac Watts and Daniel de Foe. I also went out of my way by rail to visit the jail at Bedford, because Bunyan being a Dissenter was imprisoned therein for twelve years. During his imprisonment he wrote the "Pilgrim's Progress" and other works.

I trust that this note will arouse a new interest in that inspired tinker, John Bunyan.

But I am reminded that Bunyan lived three centuries ago and is out of date. Even Macaulay died sixty-seven years ago and belonged to the second or even the third generation earlier. Well I suppose that if I live long enough myself, I may in time become an old man. So, in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us every one."

The Devotional Life

Nothing Can Separate Us From the Love of God

"They need not depart."—Matthew 14:16

BY GEORGE H. MORRISON

ONE recognizes how in that crowd there would be folk of various occupations. The dresser of the olive-tree was there, and there the keeper of the vineyard. There was the crofter from his barren patch, and the muscular and hardy fisherman. And the Master says of all of them, no matter what their occupation be, "They need not depart." It is one of the wonderful things about our Lord that he is the Christ of every occupation. He is the Christ of the policeman as surely as the Christ of the professor. And by that I mean that we can have his comradeship, and his delightful presence, and his grace, no matter what our occupation be. That is why Paul counsels the Corinthians to abide in the callings wherein they have been called (1 Cor. 7:20.) There was no need to leave them to find Christ. It would not be easier to be a Christian anywhere. Just where we are, whatever be our task, whether we be on the bridge or at the desk, we can have the fullness of the fellowship of Jesus.

Various Outlooks

In that crowd there would be folk of the most various outlook. There would be points of view as different as the morning is different from the evening. In the crowd that evening were poetic souls, dreaming dreams and seeing visions, just as there were prosaic men of business. For some of them it was heaven to be alive, for they were lovers, and the world was full of music. They did not want the voices of the angels if they could have the voice of their beloved. For others the world was strangely empty, for the lamp was quenched, and the golden bowl was broken, and the beloved was sleeping in the grave. I think it was this which touched the heart of Christ as he looked round upon that multitude—this strange diversity, this differing outlook, this various reaction on experience. And the beautiful thing is that the universal Lord is equal to the needs of all, and says authoritatively, "They need not depart." The universal heart of Jesus ought ever to be heard beating in the church. There must be room in the church for the most various outlooks, as there was in the breast of the Redeemer. There are a thousand avenues to him. On every side of the city there are gates. The curse of the church is the tyranny of type.

In that crowd there would be folk of the most various character. That is always true of crowds, whether in Gadara or Glasgow Green. Some were there, traveling to Jerusalem, to make their offerings and keep the feast. They sang the psalms of David as they journeyed, and the fear of God was in their hearts. Others there were, worthless characters, men who had broken every commandment, and whose hearts were just as false as hell. Does the Lord suggest that some should go away? Does he sift and separate the crowd? Does he carefully exclude the non-elect before he shows his power and works the miracle? Perplexed by the fore-orderings of heaven, how comforting it is to take our stand beside him and hear him say of all that varied multitude, "They need not depart." The best need not depart, for he has always a better than their best. The worst need not depart, for he is the one Saviour of the worst, with his abundant pardon for the past, his power to set the feet upon a rock, his love that will never let them go. Some of my readers, outwardly respectable, have a past that has been one long lie. And sometimes in the quiet hour they tremble lest they should hear one day, "Depart from me, ye cursed." May I say to them, in all the love of brotherhood, and yet with all the authority of Gadara, "Ye need not depart."

Various Ages

Lastly, in that great crowd there were folk of various ages. The gospels leave us in no doubt of that. We read that there were children there; probably the mothers could not come without them. We know, too, that there were schoolboys there from the presence of the lad who gave his lunch. One likes to think of the children in the crowd, wondering at everything and knowing nothing, and of the schoolboys rejoicing in a holiday. Little feet and little brains were there, and dirty, pushing, irritating boys, and some who had just left school and started life, and some who had quite recently been married, and many in the midtime of their lives, and some who were going down into the grave—and the Lord looks round, and says of all of them, "They need not depart." There are books that charm us when we are one and twenty, but when we are fifty they have lost their charm. There are teachers who thrill us in our youth, but leave us cold when we come to know what life is. But Christ, the Friend of childhood, is the Guide and Guardian of maturity and the Rod and Staff in the valley of the shadow. He never bids us leave him. He never passes us on to higher masters. Living, dying, waking beyond death, we need not depart. For I am persuaded that neither life nor death, nor things present, nor things to come, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for July 18

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys To Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

There is a whole book written on this subject, and you will find it very interesting. J. Paterson Smyth's "How We Got Our Bible" tells very fully about the translation of the scriptures into the English language.

For this meeting, why not have a "closed order" service? Arrange a program in advance, picking out the number of the hymns, etc. Write backwards on a slip each number on the program; for example, "We will sing hymn No. 56." It will be necessary for the persons holding these slips to hold them up to the light in order to read them.

Each slip containing the program numbers should be placed in an envelope and sealed. Then in large numbers, with colored pencil or crayon, put the order in which they are to be read. A statement might be made on the envelope to the effect that "this is not to be opened until your number is called for."

Give these envelopes out to several of the members before meeting. When it is time to start, have the person holding the envelope marked "1" open it and read what is contained on the slip.

It is understood, of course, that the person holding the envelope and reading the slip is not to do what is called for. For example, the one holding the slip saying, "Our scripture will be Acts 2:1-12" need not read the scripture. One of the group members, or the leader, should do this.

If the entire meeting is conducted in this way, the young people will get an idea of "translating" (the backward writing) and also the "closed service" which would be applicable today if our Bible had not been translated.

A Triple Contest

A triple contest is a new feature in the work of the Inland Empire (East Washington, North Idaho) B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school association. This contest is intermember, intersociety, and inter-district.

The goals of the Christian life program which could be accomplished by every member of a society (such as daily Bible reading, attendance at meeting, contributing to the church, etc.) are each given a certain number of points for the period of the contest. For example, each person who reads the Bible daily during the time of the contest is given twenty points. Only registered active members of a society may be counted in this contest. This means that all societies entering the contest must be organized completely and must have an up-to-date list of members. Each week a check-up is made in the local society of each member participating. At the end of the five months' contest period the credits are totalled, and the individual in each society receiving the largest number of credits is to have expenses paid by the society to the summer assembly.

The total number of credits made by the entire district is sent to state convention headquarters, and the district having the largest number of credits is allowed a representative at the Baptist Young People's Convention at Los Angeles, with expenses paid by the state convention. This representative is to be the person in the winning district who has totalled the largest number of credits.

Under this program every society may have one representative at the summer assembly. If the society works hard enough it can have two representatives at the assembly. And if the individuals within the society work hard enough the society stands the chance of having two representatives at the assembly and one representative at the Los Angeles Convention.

Although the contest idea is an old one and is sometimes a misused method, this triple contest stands out as unique and worthwhile. It gives the individuals in the society a four-fold incentive for working. They have before them the possibility of going to the Los Angeles Convention, an opportunity which alone is worth striving for. Then they have the chance to go to the summer assembly, a prospect which is also worthy of effort. The members, too, may have before them the idea of bringing honor to the society and by so doing may show their love for their own local church. Best of all, the individuals in the contest have the chance of putting into practice the teachings and ideals of Christ, for they are consciously striving for the attainment of the Christian life program, the aim of which is to help young people to lead a truly Christian life by giving them definite objects toward which to work.

No, there isn't much time left this year for instituting such a contest. But in September—well, a word to the wise is sufficient.

Convention Hall of Fame

MR. MERLE J. LUCAS

who is president of the B. Y. P. U. of the Chicago Association, author of "Letting the World Know" in Young People's Leader, and chairman of the publicity contest committee of the B. Y. P. U. of A., will conduct the conferences on publicity at the Los Angeles Convention, July 7-11.

In recognition of his distinguished accomplishments in the field of mathematics and in university administration the honorary degree of Doctor of Science was conferred on President Max Mason, of the University of Chicago, by Columbia university on June 1.

At the annual meeting of Chicago association in May, a resolution was introduced affirming belief "in the New Testament as the sole guide of faith and practice, in immersion as the scriptural mode of baptism and in immersion as prerequisite to membership in a Baptist church"; also ordering that a committee be appointed "to confer with the churches in the association, which have adopted or are now practicing the policy of receiving members into their churches, who have not been immersed upon a confession of their faith in Christ, to request these churches to reconsider the advisability of continuing this policy of inclusive membership." For lack of time at that meeting to consider the resolution, a special meeting was held at Immanuel church June 14 to consider this among other matters, and the resolution was adopted.

The Chimney Corner

The Conversion of the Revered Judge

BY JOHN WINTHROP

(Continued from last week)

STILL, the Judge regularly saluted his eloquent pastor deferentially and prayed graciously for the shepherd of the flock. The pastor's wife might have accounted for this. She engaged the affections of the whole Yantis tribe, keeping the door to all hearts ajar.

The committee soon secured the organ money. Though the Judge would not attend the opening recital it was whispered that he loved this music in the regular services. No one ever heard a word of complaint from him or yet a word of approval.

It was the same in the case of the financial secretary. The helper succeeded in raising the deficit, but the Judge could not be brought to commend him. Only a truce, not the vanquishment of opposition, opined Thomas. Mary thought differently; the old order changeth; surely the Judge would acquiesce.

In search of reassurance Thomas found himself studying the characteristic motions of the Judge. From day to day the revered man walked two blocks downtown from the new office, which he had chosen after his old one burned, in order to get the street car on the same corner where he had gotten it for the past twenty-five years. Regularly as the clock he returned to his home in the afternoon for an hour's work in his garden before dinner. Steadfastly he refused to enter the gate of the county fair because it kept open in violation of the Sabbath day. Persistently he resisted every attempt to lure him for a ride through Huntsville's beautiful new city park because, he said, it added to the city's mad spirit of revelry and flagrant laxity in morals, a rendezvous for petting parties! He rarely went anywhere for that matter, except to his office and to church.

Human nature change? In realms ordered and fixed, like the laws of the Medes and Persians which altereth not? Mary undertaking to gossip intimately with him about endless matters of sentimental interest! As if he were a girlish pal!

The meager congregation grew steadily to gratifying proportions. The sedate Judge winced and flashed his one good eye when he heard the people talking of "the living messages."

The Bible school overflowing all rooms, the Pastor contrived without much church action to provide temporary shacks for the accommodation of whole departments. All the lot space available became completely covered with these flimsy structures. The aesthetic sense of the congregation revolted. Its feeling of obligation toward its growing church demanded a new building to stand beside the big rectangular Gothic auditorium in which Doctor Paulson had thundered. The members talked of an adequate educational plant.

The hour had struck—the pastor leading in the direction of such progress must assume the full responsibility or step down and out. He meant to see this enterprise through!

The Judge astutely attacked what he described as worldly expansion at the expense of spirituality. And while the proposed building met with wide popularity the righteous misgivings of the highly revered Judge were by no means unheeded. There was an ominous grand swell. The Rev. Thomas Peters marveled that there could be so much of reactionism in church members. The appalling specter of a divided church haunted him. Even Mary—able to hope all things—trembled.

Judge Yantis did not lead the battle against the new building. He accented another matter of prior importance. As Cato of old Rome stood among the senators warning them that Carthage must be destroyed, he now never lost an opportunity to give his solemn judgment that the church must have a change of policy. He based this conviction on the pastor's habitual avoidance of strict denominational preaching, resulting, he said, inevitably in a break down of all the church's doctrinal standards.

This analysis of the church's precarious condition he gravely communicated to all with whom he held audience. He protested the vitiating of the church's spirituality by banquets, athletics and the like. Every time the treasurer read an item of expenditure for such in the monthly business reports in the church conference the Judge would make a terrific indictment of this folly, pronouncing certain doom on the church that followed such practices. The church that had struggled for years with debt was about to be plunged into colossal, hopeless debt by this rashly dreaming pastor—a disgrace unbearable! And for what purpose, pray? To build moving picture halls, banquet rooms, swimming pools and gymnasiums! What would the apostles think of such a perversion of the holy Christian church?

Even worse tendencies of the preacher now came in for especial attack. Peters would not agree that every word in the Bible must be construed literally. That was because Peters would not berate science. The Judge had studied the classics in a private school and read law in a private office. He had never studied science, but he knew enough of it, he thought, to know that it undermined the fundamental beliefs of Christianity. Admitted the amiable pastor used the terms of the old theology glibly enough—he interpreted them in harmony with hateful scientific meanings. Unless the situation were soon righted God would remove the candlestick out of its place.

Mary Peters shuddered at that.

"I may have to oust the Judge, but I won't fail," Thomas told Mary.

But it was the Judge's first move. He introduced a motion in the church conference calling for the resignation of the pastor—on grounds of irregularities affecting the historic standing of the church!

Then Thomas Peters had to think quickly—he decided he would stand his ground before the deacon if the stars fell. He stood up to say so but was interrupted.

"I offer a substitute motion that the church declare the office of all deacons vacant for the purpose of a new election." The steady voice, that of young Alvin Walker! First time ever uplifted there!

This was completely dumbfounding—most of all to the Judge!

"I feel it unnecessary to make any defense," he said with unspeakable dignity. "If the church after all these years sees fit to retire its faithful board of deacons, I for one will accept that incredible verdict without a word."

In the amazing tangle no one ventured to say anything. After an excruciating moment there was a call for the substitute motion. It carried overwhelmingly.

The Judge arose to leave the meeting, to shake the dust of the place from his feet as it were.

He did not reach the door before Peters, astounded, "in the interest of a free expression of the church's wishes," offered his resignation, begging the church to accept it without discussion.

"Move it be accepted!" Again the voice of young Walker!

"Question!" came from all sides in volume.

The Rev. Thomas Peters, a little taken aback, but assuming victory in the bungled, unexpected turn of affairs hastened home, trusting the outcome to his friends.

Three days passed, and he was left in perfect seclusion. Every one avoided him. He tried in vain to get one word of the church's action after he left the conference—everybody kept consistently mum. He finally concluded that the church had tired of the controversy and meant to get rid of him as the exciting cause.

At 11:30 Sunday morning Thomas received a committee from the church.

"We're having a meeting, and we want you at once!" they said.

When they arrived at the church he

(Continued on page 673)

BOYS and Girls

Fibs and the Fidgety—Finger Man

By M. T. A.

THIS is the story of a typewriter; also of Twinkle-Toes, Broom-Sticks, the baby who was only a Remnant, and a nut. Now Broom-Sticks, being "only a girl," was forever busy, watching the boat, collecting firewood, grinding the meal, minding the baby, going to the well for water, and all the dozen other things a girl in India does; whereas, Twinkle-Toes seemed to be off on little secret errands of his own. And one of those errands had to do with the Fidgety-Finger-Man. Nobody sent him on that errand: it was his own idea! But after he got there it made cold shivers ripple up and down his backbone, and to have such cold shivers in India is saying a good deal, for no doubt you know that India is always as hot as our hottest summer days.

Yet there stood Twinkle-Toes shuddering, all on account of putting his eye up close against a certain hole in a certain wall to watch certain fidgety fingers dance a certain little jig: click! went the fingers, clack! went the fingers, as they rattled down on round white circles, clickety-clack! clickety-clack! Every once in a while a little bell would tinkle, thereupon the fidgety fingers would stop, make a swooping movement toward the left and start dancing their merry jig all over again. Poor Twinkle-Toes ran away to the house where the brownies lived as fast as he could caper! But when he reached his little mud hut he began wondering if he had not been dreaming. "I guess maybe I made it all up," said he to himself. So of course he had to go skipping back to that hole in the wall to make sure.

It was while he was looking this second time that he saw that every single time those fidgety fingers danced their busy jig they made little rows of curious black marks on a sheet of white paper. All of which was rather alarming, for he never heard of dancing fingers, clattering on white circles and leaving a trail of black marks? Twinkle-Toes tore away quickly to the safety of his little mud hut. But surely you have guessed that he really had to tiptoe back again to see if he had not been dreaming, and this time the thing that he saw was the most upsetting sight of all. For, my stars, those fidgety fingers were white! White like my fingers—white like your fingers, and Twinkle-Toes had brown fingers! Broom-Sticks had brown fingers, too; everybody had brown fingers in the house where the brownies lived. Yet all this time here you and I sit with fingers as white as the Fidgety-Finger-Man's; and because you have probably guessed that his fidgety fingers were merely typewriting a letter, you will surely be excited to know that that letter was addressed to you and to me. And this is what it "Dear Baptist children in America:

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLEGARTH

Here I am in a little mud hut, my new home way over here in India; so I want to send this letter far across the deep blue sea to America to tell you a little about my neighbors—dear queer brown neighbors whom I love with all my heart already. They live close around me in their own mud huts—gloomy mud huts—dirty mud huts—silent mud huts. I keep wanting to make them sing, for once upon a time I learned this little verse:

'Out of the mud and scum of things,
Something always, always sings.'

So I stand in my doorway and look up and down the street saying to myself: 'Which of these little mud huts will begin to sing first, I wonder?'

But how can they sing with painted idols on the god-shelf of each hut? How can they sing when the brown mothers are not treated fairly by the brown fathers? How can they sing when the girl-brownies are hardly worth counting? How can they sing when they are sick and don't know how to get well? How can they sing until your Saviour is their Saviour, too? So that is my task in town—to bring the Lord Jesus to each person, and to cure the sick just as he used to do when he was here among men long years ago. The money you gave in your offerings last year has built a tiny hospital in this town where no one has ever known how to get well, and I want you to pray every day that in this hospital of yours somebody may soon learn to love the Saviour and go home to make the mud hut sing and sing and sing."

Now I come to the sad part of this story, for you will notice that it is named "Fibs and the Fidgety-Finger-Man"; yet so far not a single word has been said about fibs. But Twinkle-Toes knew those fibs, for it was he who said them: such ridiculous fibs, such useless fibs.

For when he came on his fourth visit to look through the hole in the wall, there were no fidgety fingers to be seen, but directly behind Twinkle-Toes stood the Fidgety-Finger-Man himself. "Hello!" he said in his friendliest voice, "I'm ever so glad to meet you. Come on in and sit down."

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" squealed Twinkle-Toes, frightened almost to death. But before he really had a chance to begin dying, he was sitting indoors answering twenty times twenty questions and realizing that there was nothing to fear in this friendly white man, whose questions were all about school and reading and writing. Twinkle-Toes said he thought school was only for high caste Brahman boys—was it really for a boy like himself? Indeed he would like to learn, this was wonderful news, Sahib. So in the course of time the white man asked: "Are there any other children in your home?"

"No!" said Twinkle-Toes, solemnly; but surely you know what a monstrous fib this was—for wasn't there Broom-Sticks? And wasn't there the Remnant? And weren't there his four older sisters? Oh, it was a very conceited fib! But of course you realize that it was just what his own father often said when asked how many children he had. He only counted Twinkle-Toes, and left out his nice daughters entirely. Fathers have a way of doing that in India.

"I had hoped that there were dozens of you," laughed the Fidgety-Finger-Man, "for my wife and I are starting a school; we want every boy and girl in town to come to it. We want you and we want all your neighbors. So if there are any sisters or cousins in your hut be sure to invite them, won't you?"

"Yes, Sahib," said Twinkle-Toes politely. But I fear that that "Yes" of his was only another fib, for he never told Broom-Sticks a single word about school. The next morning off she went to mind the goats and tend the baby, while Twinkle-Toes sallied forth to school. Oh so proud of it! Why, nobody ever went to school in that town, for where was there a school to go to? Yet now there was one, and he had been asked. He swaggered and strutted and felt almost a mile high. But I think the Lord Jesus was watching dear little Broom-Sticks all this time—for the Saviour knew about the foolish fibs and I think he knew that in spite of them it was going to be a girl and not a boy who would soon turn the house where the brownies lived into a singing mud hut. A girl instead of a boy, in spite of the fact that Twinkle-Toes was learning all the hooks and curves of writing and becoming wondrous wise in our tiny little new Baptist school in India.

* * *

I would like to join the Explorers' Club, and my find which I "explored" is that a mission study book said that if people wanted a substitute for war they would find it in the modern missionary enterprise, where those who go have to be brave and face all kinds of adventures.

Ernestine P. Black,
Springfield, Mass.

Churches at Work

DISCUSS DENOMINATIONAL BELIEFS

The men's organization of the Cumberland church, Indianapolis, Ind., is known as the Roger Williams brotherhood. During the past year, the men have put on an ambitious program at their monthly meetings. Under the supervision of the pastor, Rev. Howard L. Spangler, the program committee arranged for the discussion of the beliefs of the various denominations, from month to month. A leading representative of the denomination under consideration was invited to make the address of the evening. The response to these invitations was most generous and the discussions were exceedingly profitable.

NEW STAIRWAY POSTER FOR WISCONSIN

Secretary LeGrand of Wisconsin is planning to issue another stairway poster this year to aid churches in reaching their goals. The way in which the First church of Eau Claire in that state used the poster last year offers an interesting suggestion.

Not only did it fill in the space showing the total amount of the goal and the amount to be raised on a monthly basis in order to meet that goal, but it filled in the amount raised on the step, month by month. Thus the church goal was constantly kept before the people on a monthly basis. This church went over the top without a hard pull to make up a deficit at the end of the year.

ANOTHER TRIUMPH FOR THE EVERY-MEMBER CANVASS

Doctor Garst and the First Baptist church of Spokane, Washington, invited Rev. John R. George, field missionary of eastern Washington, to lead in the annual "Every-Member Canvass," for which seven days from Apr. 7-14 were allotted. Three days were assigned to whip the teams and the church into line, and four days to do the canvassing. Of course, this week was preceded by the careful working out of the new budget by the finance committee and its adoption by the church, and by thorough detailed preparation on the part of the church office force. On the first Wednesday evening Mr. George preached on stewardship and thereafter conducted the first instruction meeting for the forty canvassers. On the following Sunday morning, he preached again and had all of the canvassers make their pledges before the church congregation, then take lunch at the church, and go out by pairs in autos. At 7 p. m. they returned to the church for their first report and remained for the evening meeting, when Mr. E. H. Rhoades gave the address.

This page is conducted by the Board of Missionary Cooperation, New York City, as a medium for circulating items about local churches which are carrying on their own and denominational projects in an effective way. If your church has developed any interesting ideas or methods we shall be glad to have you write about them to the Board, at 276 Fifth Avenue. Brief outlines of denominational plans, important news, etc., will also appear here from time to time.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the canvassers worked and reported to the church office during the day, and at the 6:30 luncheons of the church. By Wednesday the pledges for missions had gone over the top, and the current expense pledges were made until all of the current budget was climbing nearer. After Mr. George's address Wednesday evening, additional pledges were made until all of the current budget was provided. Thereafter the church unanimously voted to request the pastor to accept the salary raise which had been granted by the church but declined by the pastor.

The mission pledges total the largest amount the church ever pledged for missionary work in one year, and the current pledges total the largest amount ever subscribed to that fund.

INTERESTING FACTS FROM THE STATE BULLETINS

Northern California: "More churches cooperated in the unified work of the denomination in 1925-26 than ever before. Of the total number, forty-nine sent their missionary contributions to the state office once a month or oftener."

Minnesota: "Churches using the Every-Member Plan, and making monthly remittances, find it easier to make or exceed their quotas. Churches emphasizing missionary education throughout the year's program are the churches which find it easier to secure missionary contributions. The greatest falling down in missionary contributions has been in some of the larger churches. This counteracts the splendid efforts of many of the smaller churches."

Wisconsin: "A year ago we received $5424.96 in designated contributions. This year only $2850.41 of the missionary money was designated. It is evident that we are realizing more and more the value of a cooperative program and churches are more and more willing that the money should be divided according to the plans worked out by the representatives of the various denominational agencies. Underneath all, it means a growing spirit of confidence in one another.

"Sixty Wisconsin churches sent more money during 1925-26 than in 1924-25 and seven others gave an amount equal to that contributed during the previous year. One church, at Portage, not only raised its pledge for mission in full this year, but in addition, more than made up for what it lacked on last year's pledge."

Rhode Island: "Churches which made their full missionary apportionments for the year 1925-26 number thirty-nine. This is more than twice as many as were on this roll a year ago. Every church but three in our convention contributed something to the denominational budget during the past year.

"The Every-Member Canvass is more widely used by our churches than it has ever been before. Where it is enthusiastically adopted and thoroughly worked it yields an income for local expense and missions far in excess of any amount the church has ever realized.

"A larger number of churches remit to the state office monthly than in any previous year. All of which clearly indicates that our people are developing a high sense of obligation to the missionary enterprise and are beginning to feel that it is as binding upon them to raise the missionary apportionment in full as to pay any other item of the church budget."

Michigan: "One hundred and forty-three churches reached or exceeded their missionary quotas for 1925-26 sixty-one, while not reaching their quotas, gave more than for the preceding year."

CHURCH ASSIGNS REASONS FOR SUCCESS

The First Temple church of Oshkosh, Wis., had a most successful year during 1925-26. A debt of several years' standing was wiped out, the missionary apportionment was met in full and there was a balance left in the treasury after paying all bills. The pastor states that three things have contributed to the raising of the church missionary allotment for the year: the educational value of two schools of missions, wider vision inculcated by a reading contest in which the church attained a total of 3411 points, and constant emphasis on the monthly plan of forwarding denominational funds.

Among Ourselves

Academic Freedom for Missionaries

BY C. T. HOLMAN

ONE of the most acute problems now being faced by our denomination is that of the relation of the foreign missionary to the home church and to the Board of the Foreign Mission Society. Some are insisting that the home church, acting through the board, must determine what the missionary shall say and do. The home church will dictate his message and method. The relationship insisted upon is perfectly definite and simple; it is the employer-employee relationship of an autocratically conducted industrial enterprise. Others (and I heard a number of pastors in Washington energetically supporting this proposition) insist that the missionary shall have the same freedom from dictation, particularly in the matter of doctrinal belief and in teaching, that the Baptist pastor at home enjoys. But the reply offered to this contention is that the pastor actually is responsible to his church and the pastoral relationship may be ended by the church if his doctrinal views are widely divergent from those of his people. In the same way, it is said, the Foreign Mission Board must terminate the service of the missionary if his doctrinal views are divergent from those of the home churches.

The board, apparently, has accepted this proposition. One missionary's resignation has been asked for; others, we are told, have resigned voluntarily. Many missionaries, I have been given to understand, regard the conditions under which they must labor as intolerable. There seems to be real danger that we shall lose some of our best workers; there is even greater danger that the mind of young men and women we need most will not volunteer for this service. The best brains and the most devoted hearts have been going to the foreign field. Can we afford to adopt a policy which will hold them back? But the question is not so much one of expediency as of soundness. Is this policy correct, or is it fundamentally unsound?

The question I want to raise is whether we have rightly conceived the relationship which ought to obtain between the board on the one hand, and the missionary on the other. Or is some other relationship than that which seems to obtain desirable and indeed essential if our foreign mission enterprise is to prosper? Before that can be answered it is necessary to raise the question as to the nature of the task which the missionary is asked to undertake.

Is the missionary sent out simply to treat with phonographic exactness a system of doctrine held in the West?

Or is he sent out as the expression of our desire to share with all the world the knowledge of Christ, to bring men and women everywhere face to face with him and under the control of his Spirit, leaving to them the same freedom to work out doctrinal interpretations that we ourselves have exercised? If the former, then our present procedure is quite correct, only it needs to be made much more rigid. The doctrinal statement already in use needs to be given more detailed and exact form, and our disciplinary measures need to be stiffened. If the latter is the correct interpretation of the missionary's task, then what is most of all needed is that we shall send out men and women in whom the Spirit of Christ is incarnate and who have the training and enjoy the liberty necessary to interpret Christ to peoples with wholly different historic and cultural backgrounds from our own.

It is this last element in the situation which has been too much neglected in current discussions of the problem. We may be sure that Asia, for example, will not exactly copy our western Christianity either in doctrine or ecclesiastical organization. It is altogether probable that the East, from whence Jesus came, will understand him better than we have done and will improve on our thought and method. And the kind of missionary needed today is one who, in genuinely fraternal spirit, will take to our brethren across the seas the knowledge of Jesus that we enjoy, and will gladly accord to them the same measure of spiritual self-determination that we insist upon for ourselves. It is not going to be easy for our churches and our boards to adjust themselves to the support of the missionary enterprise so conceived, but that, if I understand the spirit of many Oriental students with whom I have talked, is precisely what is necessary today.

The relationship that I should propose, therefore, to be established between the board and the missionary, in place of the employer-employee relationship, is that which obtains between the board of trustees of a university and the members of the faculty. I am speaking, of course, of genuine educational institutions. The trustees do not ask the professor going into his laboratory to bind himself, before beginning his investigations, to discover there only verifications of certain already agreed upon interpretations, and then to teach only these to his class. He is given liberty in his field. It is the essential condition of scientific work. All the trustees ask, in this regard, is that the instructor be trustworthy and competent, that he have authoritative knowledge in his field, and that he be apt to teach. And the same conditions are essential to successful work in the present-day foreign mission enterprise. A man must have liberty so that he may fearlessly face the truth and adjust himself to it, no matter from what quarter it comes, together with men of widely varying backgrounds and cultures. As the teacher must have competency in his field, so must the missionary; his life must show forth the Spirit of Christ. And, like the teacher, he must be able to impart to others that which he possesses. If, then, genuine academic freedom can be given to the missionary, and a relationship established between him and his board similar to that which exists between the trustees and faculty of a university, the board will be able to turn its attention to things that really matter, instead of spending time checking up on the specific details of doctrinal belief held by the missionaries.

Dedication at Ipswich, South Dakota

THE First church of Ipswich, S. D., with a membership of 130 dedicated a new $45,000 building on Easter Sunday. The first service was a baptismal service at which time the pastor, Rev. A. Pierce Waltz, baptized twelve candidates. The first one to be baptized in the new building was his son Allen. The dedication services were held in the afternoon and John L. Barton, state superintendent, preached the sermon to a packed house. This service was unique in that every bill was paid in advance and not even an offering was received at the services.

The building is Gothic in style and unusual in that it is constructed of boulders

Stand Lojally

BY MARGARET B. PLATT

JUST where you are in the conflict
There is your place!
E'en though you think you are useless,
Hide not your face.
God placed you there for some purpose
Unknown tho' it be
Know he has chosen you for it,
Stand lojally!

Just where you are in the conflict
Stand undismayed!
Fear not the forces of evil
Howe'er strongly arrayed.
They're but wrong's puny might!
Over 'gainst infinite right!
Where'er your place may be,
Stand lojally!

Just where the Leader has placed you
Be faithful and true.
It may be the turn of the battle
Depends upon you!
Tho' just to stand and wait
May seem but a coward's fate,
If that your task may be,
Stand lojally!

(nigger heads) of the best fine grained granite left in this section of the state by glacial action. From the grade to the window-sill level and all the tower the stone is laid up in broken ashlar with all sizes and color of rock. Apart from the water table, the window sills and caps, there are no straight seams more than six feet long. Each rock was dressed by hand and matches the one next in multiple size. For the large rock a portable air drill was used to split boulders into pieces that could be hauled to the place of operation where they were dressed and fit in place. Every stone in the building, except in one fire place, was gathered from the county in which it is located. The roof is of red asbestos shingle.

A. PIERCE WALTZ

People come from all parts of the country to see this building. Among these was an engineer whose books are leading authorities on architecture, civil engineering, and bridge building. He said: "I have seen and studied nearly all the great buildings of the world, but for its size, for beauty of material, exactness of workmanship, and promise of permanence, I have never seen anything that surpasses this and I do not recall having seen its equal."

The building stands fifty-eight by seventy-five feet. It is modern in every way, making adequate provision for worship, religious education, and recreation. It is in a "T" shape, the auditorium which seats 300 people being the stem with beamed ceiling, gothic windows and balcony. The other part contains two stories with class rooms of all kinds, pastor's study, parlor, etc. The wood work, pews and furniture are in oak and finished to match. It contains two stone fire places. One is in the parlor and the other in the young people's room just over the parlor. The latter is faced with all kinds of curios and stone from many different parts of the world. Some came from Palestine, Alaska, Georgia, Arizona, Montana, and many Indian relics from South Dakota. There is a full basement with large dining and recreation room, lavatories and a furnace room. The heating plant is the fan type where both heating and ventilating are possible. The entire congregation cooperated in the enterprise. Mrs. Leota Beebe, a charter member of the church, furnished half of the cost. The pastor worked out the plans of the building and the details of the interior, and acted as superintendent of construction. Mr. C. J. Madison, a master mason is the originator of working up these prairie boulders in such a unique manner. Mr. U. L. Freed of Watertown, S. D., was the architect.

Nothing was left undone that would make the building substantial, convenient, and durable. It presents an ideal to the average church throughout the country. The pastor's aim is to show that the three departments, the worshipful, the educational and the recreational, can be built into one structure, making each stand out as distinct in itself and yet maintaining the architectural harmony and beauty. When sketches were first submitted to architects the cost was estimated at $60,000. Thus he not only provided a splendid arrangement but saved the church a great deal of money.

Rev. A. Pierce Waltz, the pastor, is a graduate of Bucknell university, and Crozer seminary, graduating from the latter in 1910 with the degree of B. D. and receiving at the same time his master's degree from Bucknell. After leaving the seminary he immediately came to South Dakota as a pioneer pastor in the newly opened territory of the Rosebud reservation. He has spent all his ministry in South Dakota, in three different fields. Mr. Waltz is the oldest regular pastor in time of service in the state. In his present field he has served over eight years.

The Annual Conference of the South China Mission

By NEWTON H. CARMAN

WHATEVER may have been the effects of the Shanghai incident of May 30, it would seem that an over-ruling providence is using it to open the way for much-needed changes, political and social. And so too, it would seem, has God been using such an upheaval of national spirit and feeling, to awaken a church in South China. In the face of such an awakening and its organized expression through the Ling Tung Baptist Convention and its executive council, the annual conference of missionaries could scarcely help awakening to its changed status, to the need of a new attitude, and a revision of the old forms of thought and service. No wonder, then, that those seven days, ending on April 1, were full of challenge and stimulus, and warm with the consciousness of His presence and help.

At the opening session, the retiring president, Mr. Waters, gave the keynote for our gathering. As Moses passed on his unfinished task to Joshua, as David committed the cherished building of the temple to Solomon, as Paul gave over to Timothy the shepherding of the infant church, and as Jesus himself assigned the carrying on of his three brief years of ministry in his great commission to the disciples, so we, as missionaries, must in large measure hand over to the Chinese leaders our unfinished task. Let us, then, take courage and face thoughtfully and prayerfully the question of our own place and work in the new day.

The devotional meetings which form part of every session were helpful. Two of them were led by Chinese leaders.

FIRST CHURCH, IPSWICH, SOUTH DAKOTA

Pastor Chiu of Canton, who has been holding evangelistic meetings among our schools and churches, and Doctor Tai, recently returned from America. A third was led by Doctor Ehr Gott, pastor at Berkeley, Calif., and formerly pastor of Immanuel church, Rangoon, who is now making a visit around the world, giving especial attention to the mission fields. His plea for a stronger emphasis on the training of Christian leaders was timely. The Chinese speakers both made the plea that the missionary must not interpret the new movement of the Ling Tung churches as a signal to "keep hands off" or as a polite suggestion that we are no longer needed and might as well go home. On the contrary, they urged our heartiest sympathy and co-operation with this still youthful organization.

In discussing the relation of the mission to the Chinese church, many knotty questions presented themselves, such as the following: Shall we say, "We have given you autonomy, now you make good"? or shall we cooperate in the spirit of brotherhood and faith? Are our Chinese leaders making good? Are they, the locomotive, making proper connection with our 5000 laymen, the train? How shall we decrease our missionary staff? Do the Chinese want it decreased at present? Shall we form a "Reserve List" of missionaries to be kept at home until needed? Shall we insist on sharing the control of finances, or shall we encourage the spirit of the Chinese in demanding power by giving them more complete control of funds? Is our annual conference necessary to our present work? Will it be more helpful to publish our willingness to go without the protection of the treaties, or to keep quiet for the present?

One afternoon was given over to a joint meeting of our reference committee with the executive committee of the Ling Tung Baptist Council. Later in the afternoon, these and other Chinese leaders, men and women, were asked to join with the conference in an informal social gathering. The opportunity for mutual discussion was too good to be lost, and after a brief half hour of tea and cakes and conversation, we came to order with Principal Fu of the academy in the chair. There followed nearly two hours of discussion concerning many phases of the political and social situation, especially as it affects the church and the missionaries. While many of the questions raised could not be easily answered, the fact of facing our common difficulties together, and of better understanding the different points of view, proved very helpful to us all. The element of humor was not lacking in some of the allusions to the American gunboat anchored in Swatow harbor. Missionary Lewis, from Unkung, forty miles away, reminded us that a gunboat was of no value to him or other of our inland families. They must rely, as in the last analysis we all must rely, upon the confidence and good will of the people, for our personal safety as well as the success of our work. Reliance of the Chinese church upon foreign treaties and protection, while more and more infrequent of late, was nevertheless held by Mr. Fu and others to be largely responsible for the branding of Christianity as a "foreign religion" in the minds of the people. The Ling Tung church has determined to remove this stigma and secure the recognition of its own government and rely upon its protection.

The conference was fortunate in that two of its members, just returned from furlough, were present and able to interpret to us the findings of the Conference on Mission Policies held in New York last November, and the attitude of the board on many of our present pressing problems. Much time was spent in the discussion of these reports, ably led by Doctor Groesbeck, with the help of Mr. Whitman, also just returned.

Illustrative of the new conditions and of the reaction of the mission to them, the following items of conference action may be cited:

1. Hearty endorsement by the conference as a whole, of the declaration of an informal meeting of missionaries in November, which expressed itself in favor of taking steps for the revision of treaties and of existing regulations concerning extraterritoriality and the customs.

2. Motion to cooperate with the Ling Tung council in taking steps to meet more adequately the need for trained Chinese Christian leaders.

3. A motion to definitely request the opinions of Chinese co-workers as to the return of any missionary who has spent a term of service here.

4. The fact that at this time, and ever since the "Independence Movement" of last summer, the questions of the budget and distribution of the mission funds have been discussed by the joint committee of the mission conference and the Chinese convention.

5. The virtual deletion of certain important conference committees, i. e., evangelistic and educational, on the ground that this work should be placed primarily in the hands of the Ling Tung convention committees, with their missionary advisors.

6. The adoption of an official statement or letter to the Ling Tung convention, pledging our hearty support and assuring it of our sympathy, and desire to help. This was but an official statement of the attitude already displayed by the mission ever since the new developments of last summer. You will doubtless find a copy of this letter published in the denominational papers. As representing the reaction of your missionaries to a new type of situation, at least for us here in China, you will find it interesting.

These were a few of the significant actions which reflect the spirit of the conference. One might say that although the Chinese were physically present at only three or four sessions, they were in our thoughts and plans at every session. That this was true at this conference far more than at any preceding one, is largely due to the fact that for the first time there was an alert, self-conscious organized Chinese church with whom we could deal. That the mission and its reference committee have so completely responded to this sudden demand for a new type and degree of cooperation cannot be accounted for except by a large measure of the Spirit's leading. Failure to respond thus might easily have had tragic consequences for both the mission and the church.

A sad element in the conference was the disturbing news from Kaying. The college (non-Christian) which had been by courtesy occupying part of the buildings of our academy, claimed them now as its own and accused the academy of "squatting" in borrowed buildings. It demanded that the academy evacuate, a move which it refused to make until driven out by a mob of some thousand persons, backed by the anti-Christian element and indeed by official influence. Although we were much relieved at the correction of earlier exaggerated reports, the difficult situation there called for careful consideration. The presence of Principal Tshia of the academy and of Miss Foster and Mr. Whitman, who had just come from Kaying to attend the conference, greatly helped us to understand the whole unfortunate affair, whose details need not be gone into here. The American consul in Swatow has ordered the Griffins and Miss Mason to leave and Miss Foster not to return for the present. Our prayers and thoughts have been much with them and the Chinese Christians there.

In conclusion, the spiritual eyes of the missionaries assembled in conference at Swatow in April, 1926, seemed to see the dawning of a new day in the history of missionary work in South China. The Chinese church is coming into its majority. The senior partner—the missionary—is now in the process of handing over the conduct of the King's business to the junior partner—

The Baptist

Chicago, June 26, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 21

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Rates: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Remittances: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add exchange.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send in renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No manuscripts returned unless accompanied by full return postage.

the Chinese Christian leader. The latter has urged the missionary to stand by, ready with help, advice, encouragement. "This the missionary must be more than ready to do, while rejoicing and thanking God for the fresh vigor and vitality of the wide-awake junior partner. God grant that the business of the kingdom may prosper as never before, by this new alignment of the forces of Christian leadership in South China.

A New Baptist Orphanage and a Home for the Aged

TWO large fine residences, 1618 and 1624 Oakland avenue, Des Moines, once the homes of ex-Governor Jackson and Judge Ladd, came upon the market at very reasonable prices. Dr. J. F. Sanders made arrangements to buy these houses. Articles of incorporation were at once drawn up and recorded in the Polk county court house in Des Moines, Dec. 2, 1925. President, Frank E. Foulk, M. D., vice president, Dr. J. F. Sanders; secretary, Mr. J. H. Cochrane; and treasurer, Mr. Lynn G. Fuller, are the first officers chosen for the corporation, with Dr. J. F. Sanders as financial secretary. Later Rev. Jay A. Lapham and Mrs. Lapham were chosen as publicity directors and solicitors.

So important and desirable does President Foulk consider this enterprise that he pledges to give his services as a physician to the institute free for five years. Doctor Foulk has been a leading physician in Des Moines for twenty-three years and is an active member of the First church. He is also vice president of the Baptist laymen's council of Iowa.

Dr. J. F. Sanders was pastor of the Baptist church in Clinton for nearly nine years, and in Keokuk, Ia., for nine years. For ten years past he has been active in Baptist denominational service, raising money for Des Moines university, for Hillsdale college, for the new world movement and for the Midway hospital in St. Paul.

Mr. J. H. Cochrane is an active and popular business man of Des Moines. For nearly twenty years he was superintendent of the Sunday school in the First church. For many years he has been treasurer of the Iowa Baptist State Convention.

Mr. Lynn G. Fuller is vice president of Central State bank, one of the most conservative banks in Des Moines.

Rev. Jay A. Lapham was a teacher in the Cedar Valley seminary at Osage, Ia., for fourteen years, and in Central college, Pella, for nearly thirteen years. He served the Publication Society and Iowa Baptist Convention for twelve years as director of religious education.

Mrs. J. A. Lapham was state president of the Women's Baptist Missionary Society for six years. She was the leader in founding the Girls' Missionary Education fund in Iowa that has helped twenty-five Baptist girls prepare for missionary and other service.

Article two of the incorporation papers says: This corporation is and forever shall be controlled by members of the Baptist churches of the Northern Baptist Convention, who shall become life members of the corporation.

Article four declares that the object of the incorporation is: 1. To provide a home for orphaned children; 2. to secure homes for homeless and dependent children; 3. to control and dispose of minor children as provided for by law; 4. to provide a home and proper care for aged people, and for aged Baptist ministers. Thus the object covers definite, needed Christian service, commanded by our Lord, "I was hungry and ye fed me."

The deed for the property has been placed by the board in the Baptist denomination. The members of the board are to be chosen annually by life members of the corporation. One of our national secretaries from New York city was in Des Moines, December, 1925, attending the pastors' conference. He saw the plant and studied the plans and endorsed the enterprise heartily from the platform, as worthy, well-located, and desirable for our denomination.

Any member of a Baptist church in the Northern Baptist Convention may become a life member by paying $100 or more within a period of five years, which is only $20 a year. This will give a large constituency who will have a voice in controlling the orphanage and home for the aged. Thus the interests of the Baptist people will be carefully guarded.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

Newton Commencement

NEWTON more than fills this letter. Indeed the space usually given to the Boston Letter would not be sufficient to do justice to the many and rich features that appear during the days of commencement. Hence some must be overlooked, and only the few high spots be noted that compelled attention.

President Faunce's Baccalaureate

The mere announcement that President Faunce was well again, and would be the preacher, was a sufficient joy, but the sermon itself both heightened and brightened commencement Sunday. The settled conviction of many that Doctor Faunce, in the high and full range of his pulpit ability and habit stands preeminent among our Baptist preachers, was abundantly justified by the sermon. With his recent serious illness in memory, we were reassured by the physical and mental vigor apparent in the discourse, and the old-time ring of spiritual reality, that he had returned to us with even nobler power.

He developed the theme from Romans 1:11, "I long to see you that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift." At the outset, the timely question raised was, just what is this spiritual gift possessed only to be imparted? The search for answers leads into a quest for the essential meaning of Christianity. Paul's long journey to Rome was not to get, but to give; and what he gave swept much of pagan sport and worship off the earth. What did Paul give to Rome, and what are you men to give to modern cities?

BAPTIST ORPHANAGE AND HOME FOR THE AGED

Will it be ceremony—or something deeper and more dynamic than all the rituals of the earth? Will it be organization which in the modern church amazes and appals us with its mighty mechanism—or the mightier vitality always needed behind it? Will it be creed—intelligent statement of great truths and principles, lying behind all activity? Yes, but creed is what is believed, not what must be believed. It is never something clamped down on a soul by exterior authority. Ceremony, organization and creed, are each but the expression of life, not the creation of it.

What is Christianity?

Real Christianity is the vision of God revealed in Christ: a new attitude towards God and man; a new scale of values; a new purpose in living. It tells us what Christ meant when he said, "All ye are brethren," and what Jesus would do in this complicated, surging civilization, which has swung away from its old moorings, and is rolling and plunging like a rudderless ship on a storm-beaten sea. Our world is crying for the "Mind of Christ," not his garb of Galilean homespun, nor his tomb for which Crusaders vainly fought, nor his exact syllables, but his Mind; his attitude towards God and his fellows, his spiritual serenity, courage, self-dedication, immortal love for all mankind. He that hath his spirit, whether born in Boston, Moscow, Tokyo, or Bombay, whether or no he ever heard of the thirty-nine articles of the New Hampshire confession, belongs to Christ, and shall share in his eternal kingdom.

This bare outline does only meager justice to a noble specimen of real and timely preaching.

Newton Night

This social union feature of Newton's commencement holds a unique place in the festivities.

It is befitting that our only distinctive Baptist school in New England for the training of ministers should be thus honored. The seminary furnishes and fills the program, and the members of the faculty occupy the chairs stretching behind the platform table. President Easton was a keenly sympathetic and sententious toastmaster, managing the union with happy promptness. Charles Henry Atkinson spoke for the graduating class on "Newton, a Memory and a Message." It was an address of modest sincerity, and put us in the point of view of consecrated youth equipped for service. Professor Donovan, the acting president, said the faculty's word on, "The Useful Man," with consistent wisdom and soundness. The main address of the evening was by Rev. Frank B. Fagerburg, the eloquent young pastor at Springfield, who was graduated from Newton three years ago. He spoke with maturity and conviction on "Position and Partial Knowledge." We know in part.

Vacation Time Is Here

July and August are America's great Out-of-Doors Recreation Time.

Whether in the home, in the hills, in the woods or by the lake or seaside, vacation time gives opportunity for reading.

What Shall I Read????

THE BAPTIST offers you in condensed form just those elements of knowledge that you need. Keep in touch with the Kingdom program week by week.

"Facts, Folks and Opinion," will give you general information in tabloid form.

"Editorials and The World in Transit," will keep significant questions fresh in your mind.

"Special Articles," brief, snappy and timely will give added zest to life.

"Among Ourselves," will narrate those activities that never cease among us.

"Station W C O Y," will keep telling you that all the time including vacation time, "We Count On You."

"THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE," will carry its deep worshipful meditation every week. Men who know God and the deeper things of the Spirit will lead us into the inner meaning of Life.

If you have only time for one page, read "The Devotional Life"—Keep the heart with all diligence for out of it are issues of life."

Single Subscription, $2.50 per year.

In 10% clubs, $2.00 per year.

THE BAPTIST and Missions, $3.00

Trial Subscription, Six Months, $1.00

The Baptist

2320 South Michigan Avenue

Chicago, Illinois

It was plain that close study of recent theological discussion had lead him to certain clear and helpful distinctions. Sometimes we claim more than we know, or know more than we claim. The speech was fully up to the occasion, and was a real gospel for a time of contentions and confusion.

Alumni Day

Passing over the more conventional features of the day, such as the memorial services, and the annual business meeting in Colby chapel, we halt at the alumni luncheon, and get its impressions. President D. J. Neily makes an ideal toastmaster. He has up-speaking good nature and brevity, and puts his speakers at their best. Of course the "fifty-year man" is the hero among them. This year he was Dr. John Alexander Gordon class 1876, the theologian of Brandon college, Ontario. He blended sound theology with abundant sense and reason, and talked like a genuine "old boy." Another hero is the "twenty-five year man" Dr. Otis W. Foye, who spoke for class 1901. Befittingly, he was younger and more festive, and in a fine vein of reminiscence, even made allusion to some of the inconvenient "extras" of student days. Other speakers were Rev. Harry I. Marshall of class of 1903, our accomplished and devoted president of the Karen Theological seminary at Insein, Burma; Rev. Albert C. Thomas, class of 1911, of New York City, and Everett A. Greene, our treasurer, and partner in temporary administration with Professor Donovan. Always a free and friendly feast, this alumni luncheon reached the high level of comradeship.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot

In the larger sense, Doctor Cabot stands out as the "beloved physician" among the wide medical fraternity. Also, he is professor of social ethics in Harvard. When he was announced to give the address before the alumni on the "Minister's Opportunity in the Study and Appreciation of Personality," at once we were conscious of an academic expectation. But in its disappointment, we found something richly pragmatic and more useful. He found close kinship in the spiritual and physical, and claimed that both must have equal recognition. Then we find that man's unique personality evidences a child of God. He called attention to the prominence of abnormal personality, which shows us the close relation of morals, and mental hygiene. Thus we add the tools of modern psychology, whose books are yet to be written. Gamaliel Bradford has shown us that there is a science of the soul apart from art. Then develops racial psychology, the study of city and country types, the child, adolescence, old age, senescence, and the problems of middle life. In a most realistic fashion, Doctor Cabot took the minister into hospital, alms-house, insane asylum, and death chamber, in none of which is he as familiar and constant as the Roman Catholic priest. Ministers were shown how to be "sons of consolation" by one who for years has married religion to healings and teachings, becoming eminent in both.

Dr. Arthur W. Cleaves

Dr. Cleaves of First church, Providence of class 1901, a former editor of THE BAPTIST, came on in the evening, with the "Oration to the Alumni," upon a theme that provoked general curiosity: "The Intriguing Adventure of the Modern Minister." Alas, your scribe had to scuttle before the intriguing. Cleaves smiled us through the maze! His oration is spoken of as the production of a practised writer, keenly interesting, and ably handling the materials of current theological contention, seeking the way of the level head and the sound heart, as his "Adventure" leads him through changed conditions, and shifting differences.

Commencement Proper

Supposedly Wednesday is the great day, but the greatness depends upon the class, and the weather. We had June at her loveliest, and the class, though not as large as usual, made a strong impression of intelligence and seriousness. For the first time, we had a representative on the program of the college women's department of religious education, Miss Ellen S. Daniels. Thirty degrees were granted, Prof. W. N. Donovan presiding, and Dr. F. W. Padelford offering the graduation prayer.

After the commencement service came the trustees' banquet. Here, tension is relaxed, hearts open, social feeling comes, free speech is indulged in, and loyalty and faithfulness enjoyed. Pres. Albert L. Scott of the trustees, presided, and struck a note of high confidence. Professor Donovan who so wisely has born responsibility in the absence of Doctor Horton, spoke to us with inside knowledge and with deep hopefulness. Everett A. Greene, who with the willing-hearted efficiency of his father, has proved himself such a trieless "efficiency man," gave words, ringing with interest. Dr. C. N. Arbuckle, the Newton pastor, found the smiles and satisfactions that break forth from ordaining councils and early pastorates; and Charles L. Seasholes, the scholarly minister of Watertown, struck the high Newton note of intelligent loyalty to truth, and wise adaptation to new conditions without compromise. That truthful word about Newton was benedictory and the response to it came from loyal and grateful hearts that cherished it.

Now for the new president when he arrives, and the new Newton that he may bring with him!

Obituary

Nellie Harrington, wife of Rev. Harry Z. Davis, pastor of St. Clair Baptist church Mich., died after an operation at Harper Hospital, Detroit, May 29, and was buried at Pontiac. Mrs. Davis was born in Pontiac in 1870. She subsequently lived a Stewart, Neb., attended Gates college a Nelegh, taught school for some time, and married Mr. Davis in 1893.

Few pastors' wives were more capable and devoted in the home, the church, and the community generally.

She leaves two sons and four daughters—one of the latter a home missionary—and a husband, who sustain a great loss

Here, There and Everywhere

REV. F. M. HOLT of Hyannis, Mass., is in the third year of a very successful ministry. The church carries a budget of $5000. During the past year $2000 was expended on the buildings.

PREACHERS at the University of Chicago for the summer quarter include Dean Shailer Mathews, Prof. T. G. Soares, Prof. H. L. Willett, all of the university faculty; also Rev. Robert Freeman, Pasadena, Calif.; Prof. Archibald Main, Glasgow, Scotland; Dr. Josiah Sibley, Pasadena, Calif.; Rev. Preston Bradley, Chicago; Prof. Daniel Evans, Harvard university; Prof. G. B. Smith, Chicago, and Pres. Ozora S. Davis of the Chicago Theological seminary.

THE CHURCH at Concordia, Kan., has let the contracts for the erection of a three-story edifice to cost approximately $42,000. It is to be completed by Sept. 1. Rev. W. G. Holmberg is the minister.

THE REV. LEWIS JACOBSEN of the First church, Sioux City, Iowa, was the principal speaker at the First Lutheran church of that city when the annual banquet was given to the class in confirmation. Mr. Jacobsen has recently spoken at the Jewish synagogue, at the Catholic men's luncheon club and at four different high school commencement programs.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Visalia, Calif., Rev. C. M. Northrup, minister, reports forty to seventy attending mid-week services. The pastor assisted in evangelistic meetings at Glendale, Ariz., where he was formerly located for nine years.

THE WOMEN of the Fulton Height church of Medford, Mass., have a regular service for prayer and Bible study a 2:30 p. m. on Tuesdays. Rev. John Shad Franklin is the pastor.

REV. ALFRED L. MURRAY was received on May 19 into the regular Baptist ministry by a council composed of delegates regularly called by the Boston East Association of Massachusetts, composed of twenty-seven messengers from sixteen churches. The action read that the council, after listening to statements of Christian experience, call to the ministry and views on doctrine, was "heartily to advise"

Want Ads

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., Modern comforts, scenery unsurpassed, no hay fever—No mosquitoes. Parties made up for Mountain Trips. Special arrangements for families of Parties, either in the Hotel, or the Cottages, or the Tents. Rates reasonable. Booklet B. A. J. Newman, proprietor.

Young Baptist minister, married; twelve years' experience; producer in every department, especially young people. Wishes to change location. Well fitted for city or large town. Prefer church of over 350 members. Baptist Minister, c/o Baptist.

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

the First church of Malden that we endorse the previous ordination of Brother Murray and admit him to our fellowship in Christ." The moderator was Rev. Walter E. Woodbury, clerk, Rev. Ernest A. Elwell.

REV. HERBERT T. PUNCHARD was duly ordained by a council composed of fifty-four delegates from twenty-three churches, at Anglesea, N. J., on May 21. Moderator, Rev. J. S. Teasdale of Vine-

BOB-LO PICNIC, annual outing of the First church of Detroit, Mich., Rev. Mark Sanborn, pastor, will be held on June 29. Bob-Lo is an island. The Jefferson Avenue church, Rev. A. V. Allen, pastor held their outing at the same place on June 24.

REV. A. E. COWLEY began his third year with the church at Lebanon, Ind., on June 6. In two years he has received 100 members.

THEODORE M. HOFMEISTER

and and clerk, Rev. E. W. Rumsey of Salem. Ordination sermon was delivered by Dr. Milton G. Evans, prayer by Rev. Chas. A. Nylund and hand of fellowship by Rev. A. S. Allyn.

REV. EDWARD BLEAKNEY of the Tabernacle church of Utica, N. Y., will sail for Europe on July 17. While in Great Britain he will preach in the Lauriston United Free church of Edinburgh and in the Tollington Park Congregational church of London.

AMONG THE SPECIAL speakers at Frances Shimer school during the closing of the scholastic year were Dr. Theodore G. Soares, Dean Shailer Matthews, Prof. Valter Sargent and Dr. Nathaniel Butler, all of the University of Chicago. Dr. John Timothy Stone and Dr. Chas. W. Wilkey, Chicago pastors, were also on the st.

REV. CHARLES G. STONE has withdrawn his resignation recently tendered to the First church of Brandon, Manitoba. A marked strengthening and enlarging of the program was heartily adopted by the congregation.

REV. CHARLES RUFUS OSBORNE, pastor of the Morgan Park church, is president of the Chicago Baptist Ministers' Association.

REV. JAMES ERNEST GIBSON has closed his work as associate pastor in the church at Oak Hill, W. Va., and is now pastor of the Main Street church of Petersburg, Va.

REV. W. D. BANCROFT is the stated supply for the Temple church of Lincoln, Neb.

Please mention "The Baptist" when writing to advertisers.

AN ORGANIZATION known as the Baptist Evangelistic Bureau is announced by Dr. T. M. Hofmeister as its director. The object is stated as having in mind "the promotion of evangelical soulwinning." "Scriptural evangelism" will be its keynote. The office of the director will be at South Solon, Ohio.

REV. R. A. JENSEN of the Second church preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Missionary Training school in the First church, Chicago, on June 13.

REV. HERBERT FORD, who supplied the First church of Lincoln, Neb., during the past winter, preached at Billings, Mont., on May 16. Billings is pastorless at this time.

THE BAPTIST UNION of Lincoln, Neb., is back of a movement to erect a new $100,000 building in the College View section of the city. The union will contribute as much as is raised by the local church. Secretary H. Q. Morton of the Nebraska State Convention has pledged $10,000 for the first unit which will be erected this summer.

REV. E. P. CARTER is the new minister at Wellsburg, West Va.

DR. G. R. MCGUIRE, who came recently from Montreal, Canada, to Clarksburg, W. Va., finds his new field opening up with large promise. Doctor McGuire is widely known in the Northern Baptist Convention, having served for a long period at the Ruggles Street church in Boston.

REV. JACKSON WHITE was ordained at Weston, W. Va., on May 19. Secy. A. S. Kelley, moderator, and Rev. R. M. Dorrill, secretary. Ordination sermon was by Rev. Hugh Pickett; ordaining prayer, Doctor Kelley, and charge to candidate by Dr. E. J. Woolfer.

THE CHURCH at Gillett, Pa., Rev. J. Sidney Kane, pastor, held its golden anniversary on May 30-June 2. The anniversary sermon was delivered by Rev. F. W. Tomlinson of Philadelphia. Former pastors present and speaking were Rev. W. A. Grover of Candor, N. Y., and Rev. A. J. Booth of Galway, N. Y. The church dates back in its activity to 1840 but was not formally organized until 1876.

SIoux FALLS COLLEGE held its forty-third annual commencement on June 3-7. Baccalaureate sermon was by Pres. Fred G. Boughton and the commencement address by W. I. Early, of the local high school.

PROF. CHAS. E. DECKER, a native of Nova Scotia, and now an instructor in the Illinois State Normal school, gave his address on "Acadia—the Land of Evangelism," in the First church of Bloomington, Ill., on June 9.

REV. STANLEY A. GILLET of Caldwell, Ida., gave two addresses at the district rally of the B. Y. P. U. at Nampa, Ida., on May 30.

FRIENDS at Augusta, Ga., listened in by radio to Dr. J. W. Brougher's service on Sunday evening at Oakland, Calif. Dr. Brougher broadcasts over KGO.

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE on Better Church Music will be held at Chataqua, New York, on July 22-25. The council on the Fine Arts in Religion will be held at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, Aug. 6-8. Both are under the direction of H. Augustine Smith, professor of fine arts in the Boston University School of Religious Education. These conferences offer the highest type of instruction and

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"

2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN, 1912 "G" Street, Northwest

Parker School for Girls

"Prepares Girls for College and for Life"

UNDER BAPTIST AUSPICES

Thorough preparation for all female colleges. High grade curriculum; careful discipline; Christian atmosphere. Winnebago, Minnesota

BAPTIST OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Maywood, Ill. Rev. L. T. Foreman, Ex. Sec.

Nearly a score of years of blessed service. Fifteen thousand days of kindly ministry to worthy aged people every year. Seventy-five requests yearly for rooms. Require new building for 150 people at once. Gifts gladly welcomed for our $250,000 goal.

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

demonstration under the leadership of one who is recognized as an outstanding authority in America.

LENTS CHURCH, Portland, Ore., Rev. R. B. Thomas, minister, has had special meetings conducted by Mr. Milo Bentley.

REV. E. L. ALBRIGHT has resigned at South Bend, Wash. His future plans are not announced.

DR. DAVID BOVINGTON, president of Brandon college, has resigned and will close his work with the college in September.

DR. LLEWELLYN BROWN of Elizabeth, N. J., spent a few days in Toronto, Canada, in May.

REV. H. J. HAMILTON has resigned at Fowlerville, Mich., and on account of ill health will not immediately take another field. He will reside at Laingsburg, Mich.

REV. W. B. JARMAN of the West End church of Bay City, Mich., has received sixty-eight members during the past year, fifty being baptized. The edifice had been put into first-class condition.

DR. J. F. VICHELT of Rochester, N. Y., preached on May 23 in the Central church of Toronto.

PRESIDENT C. M. HILL of Berkeley seminary, delivered the commencement address at Linfield college on June 6.

MRS. ELON THORNTON, wife of the senior deacon of the Sugar Creek church, died on May 30. Funeral services were conducted at the residence, Washington Court House, Ohio, by Evangelist T. M. Hofmeister, assisted by Rev. Harold Phillips of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Deacon Thornton is eighty-two years old and active in the church.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Watertown, N. Y., Rev. Guy L. Brown, pastor, received 114 new members last year, raised $24,000 for all purposes and maintained what is reported to be the largest prayer-meeting in northern New York.

New Midway Hospital Ready for Service

BEAUTIFULLY builded, completely equipped, ready for its years of service to thousands—the new Midway Hospital will be dedicated Sunday, July eleventh.

¶ This new edifice of the Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association is a genuine credit to Baptists of the Northwest and others who have made its erection possible—a credit because of the manner in which the program has been completed—a credit because no other Baptist Hospital has been more thoroughly equipped, nor more beautifully built.

¶ As it stands in a stately fashion back from University Avenue in Saint Paul, it is more than a monument, because every hour of every day and night of the years which are to follow, it will carry on in its christian service.

The Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association

Saint Paul, Minnesota

MORE THAN HALF a hundred babies brought their mothers to a Cradle Roll party in the First church of Malden, Mass., on May 26. All the charming tots were there in their best "bibs and tuckers."

MORNAY WILLIAMS, a prominent layman of the denomination, active for many years in missionary work in connection with his official position as a member of the Board of the Foreign Mission Society, passed away at his home in New York on Friday, June 18. A suitable tribute will appear in an early issue of THE BAPTIST.

REV. SAM P. GOTT has closed his work at Chico, Calif., and accepted the call of the church at Susanville, Calif. He began work on his new field on June 1.

REV. A. A. HOLMES, pastor of Bismarck, N. D., died May 29 at St. Paul, Minn. The deceased was born in Plainfield, Ia., Mar. 9, 1874. He served as pastor at Estherville, Corwith and Audubon, in Iowa; in Sumner and McCook, in Nebraska; in Corning and Modesto, in Calif., and in Medford, Ore. For several years he was engaged as evangelist in California, in Florida and in South Dakota. Funeral services were held in Plainville, Iowa, conducted by Rev. J. M. Carlson, Rev. W. A. Simmons and Rev. Howard Beldin.

"THE FIRST AMERICAN" and other studies in biography by Dr. Chas. J. Baldwin, for twenty-five years pastor at Granville, Ohio, has been published by the church. The church has a few copies left and will dispose of them at a very modest price. Inquiries should be addressed to C. F. Lusk, Granville, Ohio.

PROF. JOHN W. JOHNSON will give a series of lectures on "Evangelical Religion" at the summer assembly for eastern Washington and northern Idaho.

BROWN UNIVERSITY held its 158th annual commencement on June 16. President Faunce presided. Orations were given by George Livingston Cassidy, Mathew Wilson Goring and Jacob Mark Jacobson. Mr. George Grafton Wilson, '86, presided at the reunion of alumni. Speeches were delivered by Rev. James Edward Freeman and Mr. Walter Hampden.

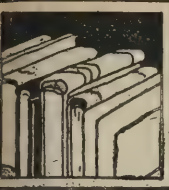

PROF. SANDFORD FLEMING of the Berkeley seminary, after completing work at Yale university, will spend some time in England and return to California in August.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES for Prof. Albion Woodbury Small were held on June 8 in Mandel hall, University of Chicago.

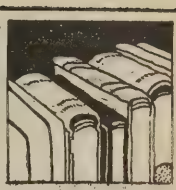

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY held its annual commencement on June 9. Pres. Emory W. Hunt presided. The address was by Hon. George Wharton Pepper, United States senator.

DR. C. O. JOHNSON of Tacoma, Wash., addressed the interdenominational ministers' conference at Washington, D. C., on May 24, on the subject of "The Passing of the Prince Albert Coat."

DR. D. J. EVANS of Kansas City, Mo., preached in Calvary church, Washington, D. C., on May 30, for Dr. W. S. Abernathy, who was his predecessor at Kansas City.

New Books

How to Get Right with God, by James M. Gray, D.D. New York: Fleming H. Revell.

In these five talks, stenographically reported in a Chicago theater during the seven hours of Holy Week, Doctor Gray shows how a man who is a sinner may get into a state of rightness with God and how one who has fallen away from communion with him may be restored and have fellowship with God every day.

—F. H. FAHRINGER.

Stephen Gardiner and the Tudor Reaction, by James Arthur Muller. New York: MacMillan. $4.

Perhaps there is no better statement even from an admiring reader than this on the jacket: "Stephen Gardiner as Secretary to Cardinal Wolsey and Henry VIII, Bishop of Winchester 1531-55, chief minister of Henry VIII after the fall of Thomas Cromwell, and Lord Chancellor of England under 'Bloody' Queen Mary. From these vantage points, he led the conservative forces of church and state during three reigns. He served his day in the three-fold capacity of lawyer, statesman and diplomat. His repudiation of the papacy under Henry VIII, his opposition to Cranmer and the other reformers under Edward VI, his return to Rome and share in the persecutions under Mary, make his career one of outstanding significance for the Tudor period. Doctor Muller's presentation of the man and his times will appeal to lovers of well-written biography; students of political history; to close observers of the religious tendencies of our own day; and especially to those members of the Church of England, the Episcopal church in America and the Roman Catholic church who are interested in forecasting the further development of the Anglo-Catholic movement."

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

The Key to the Kingdom, by James Reid, and In the Form of a Servant, by Frank H. Ballard. New York: Doran. Each $1.25 net.

The two belong together as members of a series of "Little Books on the Christian Life." The first is an exposition of the beatitudes in Jesus' sermon on the mount, based on the idea that in the beatitudes Jesus was sketching his conception of the character of a true Christian. And it makes some of those sayings of Jesus luminous at points where they are usually regarded as of difficult meaning. The general effect is to make the reader want to be the kind of a man there described. The second is not so well done. It contains eleven rather desultory studies of the life of Jesus from different viewpoints and at different stages, under the general idea that the life of Jesus was built upon the principle of service in a sense far higher than that of the ordinary Rotary club. The book is not without merit. It is worth the price and will repay the reading.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

Healing in the Churches, by Francis M. Wetherill. New York: Revell. $1.25.

The thesis of this book is well stated in two of its own sentences. "The church in modern days is missing its opportunities in neglecting the nervous and physical prophylaxis of its members. The proper function of the church is to embrace a happy mean inclusive of both spiritual and bodily welfare and health of those whom it serves." The author is candid, judicial and informed. One reading the book carefully will be convinced that the church is, indeed, missing

THE Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary In Philadelphia

True to our historic Baptist beliefs

Loyal to our denominational interests

High educational standards

Courses leading to degrees in Theology and Religious Education.

A Faculty of teachers who are scholarly, wisely conservative, vigorous and thoroughly up-to-date.

Prepares for the Ministry, Missionary Endeavor, Pastors' assistants with opportunities for special training in Religious Education and Gospel Music.

Located in the heart of Philadelphia.

Ten minutes by trolley to the University of Pennsylvania.

Surrounded by great libraries affording opportunities for research work.

Many opportunities for self help. For such information write Harry Watson Barras, Dean.

Tuition, room, light and heat free.

Board $6.00 per week.

For additional information address

AUSTEN K. DE BLOIS, Ph.D., LL.D., President

1812-1814 S. Rittenhouse Square

Philadelphia, Pa.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Illinois.

"Tonight we want to visit with you. There are several things on our list for consideration. The Western Recorder says (and of course, no one can dispute it) that 'not more than one southern Baptist in every six ever reads a denominational paper.' But we think that is a great batting average. We congratulate those southern brethren. Wonder, if the truth could be known, what percentage of northern Baptists read a denominational weekly. What is your guess? Well, no matter. You can improve our rating by boosting for THE BAPTIST.

"Percy S. Foster led the singing at the great convention at Washington, D. C. He was a great and inspiring leader of song. He has an only brother, Allyn K. Foster. Allyn said a good word into Percy's ear about THE BAPTIST. Next mail brought a letter from Washington, D. C., saying, 'Here's my check for $2.50 for THE BAPTIST. It ought to have been given to your representative at the N. B. C., but I was too busy leading the music. I am a new subscriber. Al says you are all right. Best wishes for success.' Thank you both. Keep passing the good word along. It all helps.

"THE BAPTIST For Sale,' will be the sign over a table in the vestibule of the First church of Burlington, Vt. Pastor C. J. Oxley and State Secretary W. A. Davison are behind a movement to increase the subscription list there. For a period of several months a good supply of up-to-date copies of THE BAPTIST and the Vermont Baptist Informant will be on sale. Copies of THE BAPTIST, Missions and the local state bulletin should be on sale or for free distribution in every church of the Northern Baptist Convention. Why not?

"I loan out my copy of THE BAPTIST,' writes Mrs. M. S. Featherston of Visalia, Calif. 'I cannot see why more members of our churches do not take the paper. It is a fine periodical to read.' Suppose that every reader should begin turning his subscription into a miniature circulating library? There are people in your church that are not interested in the paper because they know nothing about it. Suppose you adopt a worldly slogan for the coming year, 'YOU TELL 'EM.'

"Anent the flood of cheap and demoralizing magazines with their lurid covers and worse contents that one finds for sale everywhere, Rev. C. L. Kenagy of Pontiac, Mich., writes: 'I recently reviewed a group of these modern magazines for a group of ministers here in Michigan under the heading, "An Introduction to Modern Sensual Literature." An introduction was enough. What little good appears in them now and then is lost in the alluring lies and moral rot and rubbish that largely make up these publications. I shall pull harder than ever for THE BAPTIST and decent literature in our homes.' To which holy purpose there should be an 'Amen' from our readers around the world. Some 'Amen,' but 'them's our sentiments.'

"Rev. Fred F. Shields of the First church, Bellevue, Pa., has a little poem in his calendar that we will slightly amend and use here. Fred is a live wire. He won't mind.

"Forget the trials you have had,
 Forget the weather if it's bad,
 Forget the knocker, he's a freak,
 Forget him seven days a week.
 Forget you're not a millionaire,
 Forget the grey streaks in your hair,
 Forget to have those mean conniptions,
 But don't forget to pay subscriptions
 To THE BAPTIST—$2.50 please."

"The office boy will conclude by saying that in his opinion Shakespeare, for such a time as this, put those immortal words into the mouth of Brutus: 'There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of our lives is bound by shallows and in miseries. On such a full sea are we now afloat. And we must take the current when it serves, or lose our ventures.' This year given to evangelism, missionary education, systematic giving, and the united support of all our constituency for all our accredited agencies of service including THE BAPTIST should give us a memorable year.

"WCOY now signs off. Watch and pray and PAY. Goodnight."

a great opportunity, in sidestepping the ministry of healing.

—FRED E. DEAN.

The Daily Vacation Bible School Guide, by Homer L. Grice, Nashville, Tenn.: Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. 296 pages. Cloth 75 cents; paper 50 cents.

A passionate plea for the D. V. B. S. and a detailed guide for the promotion, organization, and administration of a standard school. The author is the promoter of this type of religious education in the S. B. C., and has gathered practical suggestions from a wide range of workers in city, town and country. It is a book of methods, programs, and standards.

—W. C. DEER.

The Saving Sense

An old farmer posted the following notice: "Positively no more baptizing in my pasture. Twice in the last two months my gate has been left open by Christian people, and I can't afford to chase cattle all over the country just to save a few sinners."—The Churchman.

An artist stood before one of his paintings on exhibition. Near him were two women studying the same painting.

"Isn't that awful?" remarked the one.

"Terrible!" said her companion.

"I'm sorry to hear you say that," said the artist. "That's my picture."

"Oh, whatever made you buy it?" asked one of the women.

"I didn't buy it. I painted it," said the artist.

"But you mustn't mind what we said about it," said the woman consolingly. "We don't really know much about pictures. We're just saying what everybody else is saying about it."

Valet: "What shall I do with this old clothing, sir?"

Philanthropist: "Give it to the Near East Relief."

Valet: "And these old books and magazines?"

Philanthropist: "The Salvation Army."

Valet: "And shall I throw away these old pen points?"

Philanthropist: "No. Give 'em to the Post Office Department."—Life.

Two small girls were playing together one afternoon in the park.

"I wonder what time it is," said one of them at last.

"Well, it can't be four o'clock yet," replied the other with magnificent logic "because my mother said I was to be home at four—and I'm not."—The Tattle.

In one of his recent sermons Dr. Frederick F. Shannon told this story: Out on a country road the motor of a princeling car went dead. The owner of the car tinkered with it for some time but apparently it became "deader," if possible. Just when Mr. L., in discouragement, was giving up his efforts, a man in overalls, driving a car that in popular parlance is known as a "tin Lizzie," came along and offered his help. After a short time he told Mr. L. that his car was a right.

"How much do I owe you?" asked Mr. L.

"You don't owe me anything," replied the man in overalls. "You see I don't need money so I wouldn't want to take pay for what I've done."

Mr. L. looked at the overalls and then he looked at the man's car.

"You know I can't think you're telling me the truth," he said. "For a man wouldn't drive a car like that unless he needed money."

"But I don't need money," insisted the mechanic. "And maybe you'll believe me when I tell you that I'm Henry Ford."

Folks, Facts and Opinion

(Continued from page 647)

Rev. John W. Elliott, director for special education of the American Baptist Publication Society, has prepared and published a new leaflet on "The Churches and Prohibition," which may be had for free distribution by writing to the society at 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

By a gift of $1,385,000 from the Carnegie corporation the University of Chicago is to have a great graduate library school, which Pres. Max Mason says will meet an urgent need in the national library situation. The new school will emphasize the broad principles of library work and its relation to society, and opportunities for study and research, leading to advanced degrees, will be offered to library students.

An effort to discover evidence of early relations between Egypt and Palestine is now being made by the University of Chicago expedition to Megiddo, at a point thirty-seven kilometers southwest of Haifa. Previously archaeologists who searched the ruins revealed six or seven well defined layers, each representing successive cultures, ending with the one known as the third semitic, and representing about 10,000 years.—Jewish Daily Bulletin.

Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton of Chicago, in his memorial sermon before the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington, May 30, said: "Put America into the family of the nations where unsuspected and trusted and loved she can teach the world to do what she has already done on this continent. If we can gather all the nations here under one flag; if we can have an international frontier to the north of us 4000 miles long, without a gun and without a soldier patrolling it; if we can do that at home we have done it so magnificently, then we ought to be able to go abroad and teach the other nations to do it and disarm and forever destroy the instruments of war."

What is the net effect of the anti-Christian movement in China? President F. J. White of Shanghai college tells the outlook highly encouraging. He writes: "The anti-Christian movement has strengthened the Christian cause more than anything that has happened in the whole history of Christianity in China. It has sifted out some unworthy adherents; it has kept out of the Christian ranks all but the thoroughly convinced; but, best of all, it has compelled Christians to re-evaluate their religion and to take a firmer hold on God. Therefore, it would seem as though a sudden tempest might sweep away the whole Christian organization. But during this year, while it has not been striking new branches, it has been striking new root. This process has been going on before our eyes. Many branches are unfruitful, but the root is there and will remain until the tree will blossom forth and hang heavy with the fruits of the Spirit."

The Moslem World Congress, called by Sultan Ibn Saud, victorious leader of the Wahabis, is said to have opened in Mecca. The purpose of the congress is to restore Moslem religious unity and to abolish the differences between the various Moslem communities regarding certain rites and beliefs which have caused friction among the Moslems for many centuries.

Attend to this call from the Baptists of New York City: "In order to establish relations with members of out-of-town churches who have removed to our city, the New York City Baptist Mission Society has created a bureau under the leadership of a Baptist layman, to welcome new arrivals and assist them, when desired, to find a new church home in our city. As the bureau cannot function without information furnished by out-of-town churches, pastors are urged to send names and addresses to the bureau, upon the removal of their members to New York."

Enthusiasm is the note of the annual report of the United church of Canada. It shows more than 700,000 members; more than one million children and young people for whom the United church is directly responsible; more than 125,000 teachers, officers, leaders and workers—giving their voluntary service in Sunday school and young people's work; more than 500,000 young people enrolled in the earlier and later adolescent groups, and more than 6,500 young people in the colleges and schools of higher learning under the care of the United church. The missionaries of the ten foreign mission areas total 645. There are also 2,152 native Christian helpers, such as Bible-women, teachers, evangelists, native doctors, nurses, colporters and native Christians engaged in the production of religious literature.

Gorillas seem to have copied the tactics of the tribe of Benjamin. At least a story from Spanish Guinea gives one the "creeps." It runs: "Above the cataracts of the Benito river, near Otocho, the gorillas have raided the villages and have captured native women, whom they are keeping prisoners in the dense jungles around the town. Nightly the women's screams are heard by the villagers, who are afraid to seek to rescue them. The general announces he is preparing an elaborate military expedition to rescue the women and to kill or capture the gorillas who also are devastating the plantations." One admires the brave general who, in the usual form, is going to get ready to begin to prepare to start the organization of a movement to assemble men and material for a relief expedition. It is a great story and somebody will believe it.

The Conversion of the Revered Judge

(Continued from page 660)

faced the largest congregation he had ever seen in the building. The chairman of the meeting, young Alvin Walker, addressed him in the hearing of all: "Brother Peters, we're doing what we wanted to do exactly like we want to do it. You have been reelected pastor of this church by the largest vote ever recorded here. Earnestly, lovingly we invite you now to accept. Our new board of deacons—I'll read the names of the seven in a moment, of whom Judge Yantis will serve as chairman-emeritus—is pledged to lend you its united support. I am also instructed to say to you that the church has voted to purchase all needed grounds and at once begin to erect a great educational building—we think God is speaking to us to go forward!"

Thomas Peters mounted the pulpit to give his answer. "With my whole heart I accept," he started out bravely and broke down.

They stood and sang, sang till the vaulted skies received their joyous shout, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!"

All except the Judge. He stood erect in dignified silence, stroking his long white beard, gazing on the scene as fixedly out of his one good eye as out of the glass one. He accepted the will of the church, however.

He listened, too, the next Sunday, his rigid face relenting and giving evidence of respect as the pastor unfolded a reinterpretation of a cherished old doctrine of the church in harmony with new knowledge.

Persistent, invisible forces further conspired. Mark Warmton, coming with his wife for a visit, consented to preach—a powerful sermon it was, a plea for consecration to practical ministries in the wide fields of human need. It was extraordinary, deeply subduing, tremendous in its appeal. "My people shall be willing in the day of my power." As he is broadly discussed in

INSTITUTIONAL FINANCING

THE CHART BOOK

a new publication describing the most efficient methods of raising money for denominational, educational and other publicly supported institutions.

It will be sent on request without obligation

THE HEWITT COMPANY
TRIBUNE TOWER
CHICAGO

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 352, Minneapolis.

closed volunteers pressed into the altar. The first to come was Frances Yantis.

"It means settlement work for me," she said, quietly weeping.

"Oh Frances," sobbed the little barking mother who sank down in the altar.

The Judge strove hard but also crumpled and melted. With that everybody wept out loud.

The happy pastor looking on suddenly thought he saw something miraculous—it was as if the osseous frame of Isaiah Paulson, the strong muscle of Mark Warmton and the heart blood of the lovely Frances had all been fused by Pentecostal fires into a new saintly patriarch. The Judge had been converted!

"I feel the change is as great as if one had risen from the dead!" Mary cried in ecstasy on the way home.

"No," said Thomas, "the change is like that of Saul of Tarsus—not half as sudden as it looks—the big crisis is only a culmination of forces long at work. You are one of them, and there are others."

Weeks went by. One day the Judge showed his pastor his will. In it he had left most of his large fortune for institutional work among the factory settlements adjoining the church, and for a school in the heart of China.

Address by Frederick L. Anderson

(Continued from page 648)

stances the only instrument by which the limits of liberty can be determined fairly and wisely in the particular cases which arise, is the living voice of the denomination uttering itself continually through ever changing executive boards and officers, freely elected by the denomination in the most democratic manner, guided by the scriptures and led by the Spirit of Christ.

As knowledge widens, spirituality deepens, and problems change, a changing board will not feel bound by what we may have said, but will be free to have and perhaps publish, as we have done, their statement. But this which we have given you is ours.

We say frankly to the society that we shall not harry our missionaries with any general inquisition into their opinions. The board has never done this in the past, and it is so un-Baptistic that we can not conceive that any future board would bring itself to do it. On the other hand, whenever in our correspondence or intercourse with a missionary, we become convinced that he has seriously departed from the truth of the gospel or the Spirit of Christ, we shall deal with him. At the same time, we renew the pledge which we have repeatedly made that whenever important charges of any kind are made against any missionary or officer of the society in writing over the signature of responsible parties, we shall investigate them thoroughly. We wish, however, to add that they must be more than hearsay.

At Seattle, your board plainly told the convention that on account of the decreasing income from the churches and the low purchasing power of the dollar, we were compelled to say that unless the convention would provide us then and there with a substantial increase of funds, we should be forced to go from Seattle to begin the process of withdrawing from whole fields or abandoning a number of mission stations.

This explicit statement was meant most seriously. Your board did not know what effect it would have on the convention, but it felt that it must tell the denomination that the crisis had finally arrived. We should have been justly criticized by the denomination if we had kept silent, taken no action to remedy the situation, and proceeded to cut off fields or stations without notice of our intentions. We offered no plan at Seattle by which we might be provided immediately "with a substantial increase of funds," only indicating that all was involved in the report of the finance committee.

Friends immediately took the matter in hand and worked out the plan with the finance committee and representatives of our foreign societies. After mature deliberation of two days, the convention voted unanimously and heartily to "authorize and request the two foreign societies to solicit during the current fiscal year as specific gifts over and above the amount they receive from the distributable funds" the sum of $263,662, and to refer the details of the arrangements to the finance committee with power.

Your board can never adequately express its gratitude to God for his divine leading in this matter, and the quick and cordial response of the finance committee, our sister organizations, and the convention.

Thus there were two items in the plan conceived at Seattle: (1) the special Lone Star fund to meet the immediate emergency; (2) the raising of the entire unified budget.

The two foreign societies, then, at the request of the convention, organized their forces, planned their campaign, and

(Continued on page 675)

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for July 4

EARLY LEADERS OF ISRAEL
Lesson Text: Exod. 1:1-14. Golden Text: Psal. 94:14

From Genesis we pass to Exodus which derives its name from the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt under the leadership of Moses. This lesson is introductory to the lessons of the third chapter which deal with the early leaders of Israel. Joseph has been dead a long time, the Israelites have multiplied in Egypt, a change of dynasty has placed upon the throne of Egypt a Pharaoh who did not acknowledge the original influence of Joseph and who stood for "Egypt for the Egyptians."

A Policy of Defense

The reason given by the Egyptian authorities for the oppression of the Israelites sounds very modern. "If we permit them to go on as they are going they will become too many for us, so in sheer self-defense we must do something about it." Does not that sound like the jingoes who exaggerate the situation as it exists between Japan and the United States? Repeatedly the newspapers tell about some gigantic preparation for war Japan is making. And against what nation is such preparation directed? The United States, of course. The alarmists would have us believe that Japan, fearing the United States is becoming altogether too powerful, plans to weaken the United States by warfare. On the other hand, the fearful and unbelieving persist in the obsession that Japan is becoming altogether too powerful in both army and navy for the safety of America and therefore American must arm to defend herself. That is the old story. Back of it all are economic causes also. The Egyptians were afraid of the economic prosperity of the Israelites and as they wanted to hold their primary place in the sun there was nothing to do, they thought, but to put the Israelites out of business. Had anyone asked an Egyptian why the Israelites were being oppressed he could have given a reason that would be acceptable to some modern business men as an economic expedient under the circumstances. If a certain modern millionaire who recently gave $23,000,000 to charity were asked why the girls in his numerous stores are paid starvation wages he would give an answer largely acceptable to the economic world. The economic world is not based upon the golden rule but rather upon the rule of gold.

A Policy of Defiance

Every foolish policy of defense always leads to a policy of defiance. The Israelites did not submit to the oppression of the Egyptian bosses without a defiant protest. Nor did their reaction end in protest. The very oppressor strengthened and unified them as they never could have been strengthened and unified without it. The plan of Pharaoh intended to solve the problem of the growing power of the Israelites in Egypt only served to intensify the problem and to strengthen the very forces it was designed to weaken.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing out its for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired, Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs

21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices.

A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
215 Englewood Ave. Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO. HILLSBORO, OHIO

BLMYER
BCHURCH
BELLS

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DUR-ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Dept. 12, Cincinnati, O.

Address by Frederick L. Anderson

(Continued from page 674)

found not only the amount asked for, but found on Apr. 30, that it had been over-subscribed and paid by 36 per cent. It was a great and heartening victory and doubtless did much in helping to raise the unified budget, to which the Lone Star subscribers designated $78,855, of which 36 per cent surplus.

If we had had only the response of the convention, we might have thought that represented only the 1600 delegates present at Seattle, moved to action in a movement of enthusiasm by a forceful appeal. But when with only a few workers, and a very imperfect organization of mostly volunteers, improvised, as it were, for a night, the denomination responded to us so quickly, so warmly, and so generously, we took the whole transaction as a deliberate and well-considered expression of our northern Baptists against retrenchment in the foreign fields.

The second element in the Seattle plan did not work out so well. The denomination failed to raise the unified budget of some $720,000. Our share of the $100,000 was about $140,000. The Lone Star had given us about $200,000, so we needed only about $60,000 from the Lone Star fund ($200,000-$140,000).

Of course, the Lone Star fund did us a great deal of good. It kept us going another year without retrenchment, and, as a result, you will see the new missionaries tonight who but for the Lone Star fund would not be going out. No wonder, moreover, is likely to over-estimate the heartening effect of the raising of this fund on the morale of our missionary work and our native Christians and workers.

We are reluctant to believe that the denomination has decided against maintaining the present volume of its foreign work, especially after our experience with the Lone Star, but the outcome on the unified budget and the report of the finance committee leave us but one alternative so far as action is concerned. We are sure, a new situation has developed since a year ago, which has somewhat improved our financial status; considerable changes have occurred in sections of our field, which enable us to save money temporarily at least; the number of missionaries is decreasing; self-support is increasing; some gifts aside from the Lone Star fund have come in. While the present situation then is a little better than it was, it is still nearly comparable to what we faced at Seattle.

We must, therefore, say to the denomination that your board, in accord with the decision of the convention on the finance committee report, goes from this convention to re-examine its work with the greatest care and to cut off as much as the situation demands, and as much as we may. Indeed a committee has already been appointed with this task in view.

We fully appreciate the fact that many of our sister organizations are facing the same prospect, and we deeply sympathize with them for our work is one. Home and foreign missions are the two wings by which we fly forward and upward. If either is injured or weakened, it reacts on the other. Only when both are strong, can our flying be rapid and sure.

Lastly, we wish to say a word of gratitude and deep feeling to the self-sacrificing thousands, rich and poor, whose hearts are burdened as heavily as ours in our day of trouble. Let us cheer our souls with the thought that God knows all our self-sacrifice and all our sorrow, and that every dollar we have given has saved just so much work, has made the retreat just so much less disastrous.

Great praise is also due to our heroic missionaries during these critical and trying years of retrenchment. In spite of it all, they have wonderfully maintained their faith and courage. More than this they have given an example of self-sacrifice which challenges our self-indulgent life at home. Nothing more amazes the returning missionaries than the evidence on every hand in this country of unprecedented luxury and untold wealth, and they naturally ask, how can such people justify their failure to support our work according to their promise? Our slowness in sending recruits is killing our missionaries with over-work. Just now we get news of one of our finest men, who has for a long time through our failure been compelled to do three men's jobs, broken down and in the hospital. This is surely one way to cut off missionaries. It is no isolated case. Such things, to our shame, are becoming all too common.

While the year's outcome and the critical situation calls for repentance, humiliation and prayer, yet we should not be discouraged. It is a poor army after all, which can not endure an occasional setback. Tomorrow, too, is a day. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Best of all God is with us, with us in the dark days as well as in the days of sunshine. He will work out some good thing even from this result of the lukewarmness and the self-indulgence of his people. After all, we trust that only a small per cent of our work must be lost; the rest will go on and will be blessed. The aged veterans on the field, the fine young men and women whom God is calling out of our homes to take their places, the faith and courage of our leaders, all testify that God's work is going on to victory. God will still work wonders at home to match the out-pourings of his spirit on our fields.

The word now is "steady," not an inch more of retreat. From this hour it must be advance. The total giving of the denomination can and will be increased, and with a well-planned, united, vigorous effort, the unified budget set before us by the finance committee for the current year can be over-subscribed and over-paid. It all depends on the amount of real unselfish love we have for the souls of men. What we need most of all, therefore, is a deep revival of religion, which will make sacrifice sweet and the advancement of the kingdom of Christ the main business of our lives.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request. "Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

MISSIONS

An International Baptist Magazine

A Magazine of World Horizon and World Understanding

MISSIONS interprets the missionary news of all nations for you. It carries you into all lands and fields with its contributors. Indispensable to Pastors who would develop missionary churches. Something for all ages in the home.

Subscription price, $1.00 in clubs of five; $1.25 single; with The Baptist, $3.00. Send for sample copies to

MISSIONS

276 Fifth Avenue
New York

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

Board of Missionary Cooperation

The purpose of this Board is to promote and obtain support for every denominational activity, as provided in the united program of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Literature or special information concerning any phase of the work will be promptly furnished on request.

W. H. BOWLER
Executive Secretary

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

Partnership Opportunities

The 800 missionaries of The American Baptist Home Mission Society are to be found in nearly every State in the Union, and in Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Haiti and Jamaica. They serve as missionary pastors, teachers, colporter-missionaries, chapel-car and auto chapel-car directors, evangelists and Christian center workers.

In the making of your will and in the purchase of annuity agreements you may have a share in the home mission tasks of your denomination.

For annuity booklet and samples of single and survivorship agreements, please address

CHARLES L. WHITE

23 East Twenty-sixth St., New York City
The American Baptist Home Mission Society

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society (Corporate Name)

Address all communications to
276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Last year 19,956 converts were baptized on mission fields in the non-Christian world. This is the largest total ever reported in a single year in the history of the Society.

When you make a will be sure that the full corporate name of the Society is used. Correspondence concerning gifts on the Annuity Plan with income ranging from 4 to 9% should be addressed to the Home Secretary. C. E. Milliken, President
Frederick L. Anderson, Ch'rm'n of the Board
James H. Franklin, Foreign Secretary
Joseph C. Robbins, Foreign Secretary
P. H. J. Lerrigo, Home Secretary
William B. Lippard, Associate Secretary
George B. Huntington, Treasurer

AN ANNUITY

Written by

The Board of Education
of

The Northern Baptist Convention
(Legal name)

will assure you an income for life at the rate and terms agreed upon by all the Boards and will

HELP BOYS AND GIRLS

to secure their education during all the coming years.
For information on this and all educational subjects, address,

FRANK W. PADELFORD, Secretary
276 Fifth Ave., New York City

News Notes

The Board of Missionary Cooperation is asking of the churches three specific things, namely: That every local church accept a quota representing its responsibility in respect to the denominational budget; that the local church put on a well prepared every-member plan; that the money so pledged be punctually collected and forwarded on the basis of one-twelfth of the year's quota every month.

Wedding bells have rung several times in the last year among the missionaries of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission society. Miss Evelyn B. Bickel is now Mrs. Willard Topping of Japan; Miss Edith L. Dulin is Mrs. Dr. Morton of Chicago; Miss Virginia M. Barrett is Mrs. Edwin Fletcher of Burma; Miss Ruth Smith is Mrs. Ralph Leonard of New Hampshire; Miss Lelia Droz is Mrs. Hilcoat Arthur of East China; and Miss Harriet Brittingham is Mrs. Edwin Poteat of East China.

The Board of Managers of the American Baptist Publication Society has issued a call for a special meeting of the society to be held in the board room of the society's building, 1703 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa., on Wednesday, July 28, 1926, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, daylight saving time, to consider and pass upon the election of officers, and other actions taken by the society at meetings held in Washington, D. C., in the month of May, 1926, and to consider such other business as may lawfully be brought before it.

The reduced budget of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society made it necessary to withdraw twenty-four missionaries and teachers from the fields last year, making a total of eighty-six less missionaries and teachers than this society had on the field in 1920. This does not include reduced appropriations to many of the mission schools. The work has been seriously crippled because of these withdrawals and this has also made it impossible during the last five years, to enter any new fields. On a number of fields the work has been closed entirely and in other instances one missionary is attempting to do the work of two.

Baptists hold a peculiar position in India, and the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society a place of primary importance in the Christian forces at work in this non-Christian land. According to the new Missionary Atlas of the World, there were in 1922 in India and Burma 2,242,798 Christians—of whom 185,173 were related to the work of the society. Of the ten leading missionary societies having the largest work in India, the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society is third in total expenditure; first in total receipts from Indian sources; first in the number of missionaries; first in the number of schools; second in the number of native workers; first in the number of communicants; and first in the number of communicants added in that year.

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

WHEN YOUR WILL IS READ Will it contain a bequest for The Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Avenue, New York

If it does it will help the Board help worthy aged Baptist Ministers & Missionaries, their Widows and Orphan Children.

If you prefer or need the income while you live we shall be glad to have you take an

ANNUITY BOND (Gift Agreement) whereby you will receive a high and safe return on your gift throughout your lifetime. At your decease the income only will be used in the work. Your gift may be made a memorial to yourself or others.

Write for Information.

Two Kinds of Permanency Are Guaranteed

Your Annuity Payment
Our Christian Work

Invest in our Annuities
Put our name in your will

Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treas.

Woman's American Baptist
Home Mission Society

(Corporate Name)

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

A SIMPLE PLAN:

You send to us:

1. Your check as an annuity gift.
2. Date of your birth.
3. Address in full.

We send to you:

1. A receipt for your check.
2. An annuity agreement.
3. Annuity payments every six months.

For full particulars regarding our annuity plan—Write to

Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer

Woman's American Bapt. Foreign Mission Society
276 Fifth Ave. New York City

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

The denominational publishing house for the extension of the kingdom through the printed Word, Religious Education, and Sunday school development.

FOR OTHERS

Put THE BAPTIST into your Public Library. Do it Today.

Annual Subscription, $2.50

THE BAPTIST

2320 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Volume VII

July 3, 1922

No. 22

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

UNIV. OF ILLINOIS LIB.

JUL 6 1922

By William Wendt

*Today I have grown taller from walking with the trees,
The seven sister-poplars who go softly in a line;
And I think my heart is whiter for its parley with a star
That trembled out at nightfall and hung above the pine.*

—Karl Wilson Baker in "World's Great Religious Poetry" (Macmillan)

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Storer College for Negroes has been in operation at Harpers Ferry fifty-nine years. Its graduates are doing creditable work in many lines and many lands. Although it has power to confer degrees it has never conferred even an honorary one. It has never gone into debt. When funds ran out it stopped until they came in again.

Unemployment is on the road to extinction. A commission of twenty experts under the direction of the Russell Sage Foundation has reported a plan to forestall periods of unemployment by giving advance information concerning the trend of employment. Of course this is not sufficient but it is fundamental. Mere information, without adequate remedy may be a Tantalus cup. When one's children are hungry he wants not a "trend" but a job. To meet this need is the practical problem.

How far we have yet to go in the adjustment of race relations is indicated in the official statement of the Committee on Interracial Relations at Washington: "So long as suspicions, fears, misunderstandings, prejudices, and indifference prevail, so long as negroes cannot get lodgings or food in some towns, and have in many places, North as well as South, inferior wages, housing, police protection, street lighting, and schools, and are treated by many professing Christians as the Jews treated the Samaritans; there is need of emphasizing the spirit of Christ in race relations."

In reporting the series of addresses upon "Some Living Certainties in Religion" which Rev. F. C. Spurr gave at Archway-road church, Highgate, The Hornsey Journal prints an interesting pen picture of "the man from Birmingham." The local journal says that "in dealing with the problems that perplex the man and woman of today, Mr. Spurr has created a strong impression with every address. Obviously sincere, he is very much at home in applying literature and events concerning big figures of the past to the problems of the day. Social inequalities and deficiencies have seized him. He is an interesting figure. The impression that he has Latin blood in his veins was confirmed by his own statement that he can claim a Spanish admixture. He stands straight up to his audience, but his body talks unconsciously. His finger, even, takes on a sort of personality in ticking off little points until they accumulate sufficiently for both arms to throw all the weight of his arguments at his audience. His mellow—almost musical—voice is hardly English in its lack of harshness; his pointed beard is suggestive of Spain, but his outlook is entirely British."

A recent canvass shows that twenty-four of our Baptist institutions are in the field now for $10,620,000, of which they have secured in pledges more than $6,530,000. The prospect for complete success in many cases is excellent. In addition to this list the University of Chicago is in the field for $17,000,000, much of which has already been secured. The most notable gift of the year was $282,000 for the construction of the indoor athletic and field house at Bates college, which, at the request of the donor, is to be known as the Clifton D. Gray field house.

The campaign against compulsory military training in the public schools is fairly under way. A bill introduced by Congressman Welsh and now in the hands of the committee on military affairs, provides "that no officer of the United States army or any other person in the employ of the United States shall teach any course of military training in any university, college, school, or other educational institution, other than essentially military schools, if such institution requires any student to pursue such course as a prerequisite for graduation or for any other reason." It is gradually becoming apparent that those who wish to prevent the militarization of the mind of America must concentrate for the present on the abolition of compulsory military training in the schools. All persons opposed to drafting students for war in time of peace may address John Nevin Sayre, 383 Bible House, Astor Place, N. Y.

Tower and wall of the First Baptist church, Kenton, Ohio, fell as the result of a cave-in of the basement, June 2. The News-Republican local paper, immediately started a campaign among the citizens with an editorial slogan: "Buy a Brick and Help the Baptists." The church has only seventy-five members. It had been struggling to raise a fund to improve the property.

Governor Pinchot is "real hero and victor" in the Pennsylvania primary, according to Wm. Sheafe Chase of the National Reform Federation. Mr. Chase comments: "One of the most serious blunders in the campaign was when 100 clergymen, who of all people ought to be able to see a moral issue and bravely endorse a man who is on the right side making a brave fight for it, signed a petition without any conference and actually asked Pinchot to withdraw his candidacy. It reminds one of the time when Abraham Lincoln was standing for human freedom. Only three clergymen out of twenty-two in Springfield, Ill., at that time supported Lincoln. The rest failed to understand both Lincoln and the importance of the real issue, human slavery. They were led by mistaken sense of expediency." He proposes that the drys unite on the Democratic candidate for senator, Wm. B. Wilson.

President Million of Des Moines university, in a discussion of academic freedom at Washington, suggests this example: "Suppose a boat-load of new manuscripts should be found, texts in Greek history and literature, the literature of mythology, copies of various parts of the New Testament bearing unmistakable evidence antedating anything we now have, providing many instances in both sacred and secular literature to prove that "baptize" meant "to sprinkle" instead of "to immerse," what is the duty of those who make the discovery? No one will have any trouble answering that question if he understands what intellectual and religious liberty mean in America. We must be willing to have the bases of our faith checked up upon by all of the developments of historical, scientific and literary investigation. One of the places for doing this work and having it done honestly and sympathetically is out in the open in our Christian colleges and universities. This means that we are not set for the defense of a phrase for the sake of the phrase. We are not to make a fetish of any word, phrase or form. It is the letter that killeth, it is the spirit that maketh alive." Thus far the case is easy. But suppose further that such discovery should be made by a professor in a Baptist theological seminary, who insists on telling what he has found: What will follow?

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	678
PEACE-MAKING NOT PECULIAR TO BAPTISTS, BY ROBERT GORDON..	680
THREE STALWART MEN AND TRUE, A TRIBUTE, BY CLARENCE M. GALLUP	680
EDITORIAL	681
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	683
ORGANIZED ATHEISM, BY J. EUGENE REED	684
THE APPEAL AND CHALLENGE OF AFRICA, BY JOHN E. GEIL....	685
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—GETTING INTO THE WIND OF GOD, BY JOHN A. HUTTON.....	687
CHIMNEY CORNER	688
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	689
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	690
CHURCHES AT WORK.....	691
AMONG OURSELVES	692
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	698
NEW BOOKS	699
OUR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.....	700

This year there were eighteen members in the graduating class of Grand Island college. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. H. C. Whitcomb and Rev. John A. Foote, and twenty-six were granted teachers' certificates.

Suppose that there were an international agreement to abolish wartime conscription. A consequence would naturally be that all war must depend on volunteer service of both men and money. It sounds perfectly logical, for if patriotism will not support a war, there is something wrong with either the war or the patriotism. But it also sounds perfectly chimerical, for how can a nation make war if it cannot compel its own people to fight? But this is the proposal of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom: No conscription and no armament. With Miss Jane Addams at their head, these women are requesting that these two subjects be placed on the agenda of the arms conference at Geneva.

From a cavalry captain in the U. S. army comes the following welcome tribute of appreciation: "Permit me as a soldier and a believer in Christianity to express my appreciation of your editorial article, 'In Memory of the American Soldier,' appearing in THE BAPTIST under date of May 29. As the son of a father who was educated for the Baptist ministry at Bucknell; as the descendant of those who have been Welsh Baptists for devout generations, among them those who suffered at Valley Forge; and as a member of the army of the United States, which I chose to regard as the constitutional agent of constituted authority in the republic, which seeks only to maintain national integrity and to serve the people and which I believe to be, excepting Christianity, the greatest force for peace in the world today, let me thank you for your tribute to the American soldier."

Religion is to be regulated by law in Japan according to the papers. The principal features of the law are reported to be: 1. The law to apply to Shintoism, Buddhism and Christianity, with the possible addition of other religions as may be specified by imperial ordinances. 2. Should a doctrine be recognized as one against order and peace or against the duties of a subject of the empire be propagated, or a religious rite of such character be performed, the government may prohibit the propagation of such doctrine or the performance of such rites. 3. Shrines, temples, churches and other religious buildings may be used for the purpose of teaching religious doctrines, and performing rites in accordance with the regulations of the respective religions and also for educational, charitable and social purposes. The law is not understood to be in any sense adverse to Christianity.

Mr. Cruz Gomez, a member of the Episcopal mission at Taljamulco, Mexico, was murdered in the presence of his wife and four sons, according to the Living Church, as he was coming from religious instruction on the night of Friday, May 7. The mission at this place is not under foreign direction, the clergy being the Rev. Efrain Salinas and the Rev. J. Diaz. The murderers were waiting for Mr. Gomez near his home, and when he and his family were attacked, the baby, whom he was carrying in his arms, was wounded also. On the same night an attempt was made to kill the Rev. J. Diaz and other members of the church. Members of the little mission generally have been obliged to flee for their lives. Commenting on this and other recent happenings in Mexico, the editor of the Living Church says: "Under the circumstances we suggest the immediate desirability of choosing and consecrating a native Mexican priest to be suffragan bishop for our missionary district of Mexico."

The preaching of our first missionaries in the regions west of the Mississippi river was confined to the English language, but in the decades that have passed, the number of languages has increased constantly, and among the new Americans who have come from Asiatic and European lands the gospel has been preached by faithful Baptist home missionaries during nearly a century in twenty-three different languages and among fourteen Indian tribes.

Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke has received a letter from the president of the Union of Baptists in the U. S. S. R. as follows: "After the latest information which has reached this union, I am compelled to call your attention to the fact that many reports over various matters and questions proceeding from here to England and America do not originate from the Union of the Baptists in the U. S. S. R. nor from its committee, but from private persons and organizations. I ask you to attribute to these reports no connection of any kind with our union, since our union can accept neither material nor moral responsibility for the same. It is desirable that all foreign brothers should be informed of the contents of this message."

The annual May meeting of the American Tract Society was held at the Marble Collegiate church, New York. The general secretary reported one of the best years in the history of the society. Mr. William Phillips Hall was re-elected president; Rev. David James Burrell, first vice-president; and Rev. David G. Wylie, second vice-president. Col. Charles Elliot Warren, vice-president of the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co., was elected treasurer. Rev. William H. Matthews, was re-elected general secretary, Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy was re-elected executive secretary and Mr. Arthur W. Cobbett was re-elected assistant treasurer. Representatives of thirty different foreign groups testified to the value of the literature distributed by the society among their people.

In the Dawn

BY ODELL SHEPARD

TOILING centuries have struggled upward on a stony way
Just to set the torch of freedom where it flames aloft today.

• Shall the children of the ages fail them in this mighty trust,
Let their beacon pale and dwindle, quench its beauty in the dust?

Rather, we shall hold it higher, shake its splendor through the sky,
Searching out each nook of shadow till the things of darkness die.

Where a woman still is vassal, where a child is still a slave,
There shall rise our instant bivouac, there be digged a tyrant's grave.

All the old forlorn lost causes, every fair forbidden dream,
And the prophet's hopeless vision and the poet's flitting gleam,

All the hopes of subject peoples, all the dreams of the oppressed,
Must be ours, our hopes, our visions. We can never stay or rest

Till our beacon pales above us, dies into the level ray
Painting every peak and valley with the light of golden day,

Till the rounded earth together, to the last isle of the sea,
All our many-languaged kindred shall be free as we are free.

—From "The World's Great Religious Poetry" (Macmillan)

Peace-Making Not Peculiar to Baptists

BY ROBERT GORDON

IN PASSIONATE pursuit of world peace, Baptists have gone beyond their province according to the Chicago Journal of Commerce. An editorial in the issue of June 2 says, "The Northern Baptist Convention has gone on record as opposing compulsory military training in high schools and colleges. We do not believe that the majority of Baptist laymen regard the question of compulsory military training as a proper subject for joint consideration by clergymen of any denomination."

Of course the editor is mistaken in the assumption that the Northern Baptist Convention is simply an organization of Baptist ministers. And in the opinion of many he is equally mistaken in his delimitation of the clergyman's proper sphere. However that may be, Baptists are not alone these days in opposing compulsory military training. All should be familiar with the action of the Federal Council of Churches. That body, voicing more or less officially the sentiment of many denominations, through its administrative committee has spoken most vigorously against all military training in high schools and compulsory military training in colleges. But more recent and even more significant was the action taken at the Speakers' Conference held at Chicago June 10 and 11 under auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches. In that group of workers for world peace, representing all parts of the country and all shades of opinion, there was absolute agreement upon the following declaration: "We are opposed to any tendencies which put undue emphasis on militarism in education. In particular we oppose compulsory military training in public schools, colleges and universities except in institutions established for the specific purpose of military education." This un-American policy or our war department unopposed will militarize the mind of the nation and more effectually than any other one thing will nullify our efforts to find a substitute for war by creating doubt and cynicism regarding all non-violent means of maintaining national security.

Another very important agreement of the Speakers' Conference is found in recognition of the necessity for a reconsideration of the doctrine of neutrality. Our immense war resources of every kind make it possible for us to render almost void any European effort for peace. We should declare now that we will not permit our resources to be placed at the disposal of any nation that resorts to war, refusing arbitration or other effort toward peaceful settlement in violation of its own previously made agreement. Let me quote the conference pronouncement: "We believe that in the case of war between nations which have accepted tests of aggression as applying between themselves, the United States should not so interpret its neutral rights of private trade in munitions of war as to become the accomplice of an aggressor, self-confessed by the violation of its own covenants." We have already acted on this principle in our dealings with Mexico under Taft and with China under Harding.

Many Christian people will be surprised to learn that this conference found it necessary to call upon our government so to participate in the general movement toward unlimited arbitration that "it may resume its place among leaders in this important field of war prevention." Doubtless most of our citizens are of the opinion that we now hold a foremost place in all such endeavor. It will come with a shock to learn for instance that we are the only nation that has refused the request to enter into an all-inclusive treaty of peace with Sweden. Her European neighbors have signed up but we reserved the glorious right to go to war on questions of honor and so forth. The unlimited material resources of our country are trifling compared with the boundless imagination of officials in our war department. Is there any ordinary American anywhere who is able to conceive of any possible contingency that would make us willing to go forth to war against Sweden or to imagine any combination of circumstances that would ever lead little Sweden to direct her dreadful guns against the United States of America? Most are unaware that great nations like Germany, France and Great Britain have covenanted mutually to submit "every case of international dispute to its appropriate tribunal, not even reserving questions of national honor."

The conference call for progressive re-
(Continued on page 698)

Three Stalwart Men and True

By CLARENCE M. GALLUP

(A tribute to three great leaders in the Northern Baptist Convention who died in the year 1925-1926.)

ERNEST DEWITT BURTON

*To know all facts, that truth might dwell secure
To serve all tasks, no moment rare to lose;
To greet all good, no path amiss to choose;
He built from dreams a tower that shall endure:
A tower of dreams for those who seek the pure
And vital vision, caught alone by those—
The prophet, teacher, scribe—who truth disclose
Through soul's sore travail and not sinecure.
A valiant will, in gentle habit pent;
A regal mind that ruled by humble power;
A loving heart which beat for service more;
He walked in paths his saving Master went;
God's citizen, alert to meet the hour;
A modern saint, whom kindred souls adore.*

HENRY BOND

*SCHOOLED in the order of the mart and gain,
Early he sought the wealth no thief can steal
Nor moth corrupt—enhancing thus his weal.
Then forth he fared with all his might and main,
Rousing, in city throng or country lane,
The earnest souls who heeded his appeal,*

*Resolved in kingdom wares still more to deal,
That Christ might o'er his own the sooner reign.
Giving of wisdom, goods, and service free;
Willingly to lead or be by others led;
Boldly campaigning, striving in the van;
Modest co-worker, humble in dignity;
Nourished in spirit, feeding and being fed;
Noble in word and work—God's gentleman.*

JOHN Y. AITCHISON

*MOULDED with grace, with gifts of varied kinds;
Glowing of heart, with softly-kindled eyes;
Careful of speech, his hearers to apprise;
Full as self-ruled as one ever finds;
Champion of causes born in godly minds;
Reaper of harvests grown from sacrifice;
Painter of hopes first sketched in paradise;
Wielder of power that loosens while it binds;
Traveller ever of highways up and down;
Faltering never, he daily met his task.
Bent with the burden, he stoutly carried on.
Claiming at last some respite for his own.
Lo! he was not!—when they did for him ask—
For God had summoned this his earnest son.*

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. MCGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Preliminary to Evangelism

IN NOTHING was the last meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention more united and enthusiastic than in the proposal that for the coming year the whole constituency and organization shall major on a ministry of evangelism. There is a general persuasion that nothing there proposed is more vital. With that persuasion THE BAPTIST is in full accord and it is preparing to contribute its utmost efforts to the promotion of such a ministry. For this purpose it hopes to make the most effective use of its news service, to place under tribute the resources of the best pulpits in the denomination all over the world and to attempt a current editorial interpretation of the spirit, message, meaning and measure of such an undertaking.

At the outset then, in keeping with the policy of the paper in the past, and if possible even more than in the past, questions that divide the denomination will be effaced from consideration. This policy is due not to any indifference to any principle of either doctrine or polity, but to other reasons. Divisive questions are likely to receive sufficient consideration through other agencies. There is little prospect that on such questions Baptists will ever be able to come to a common general statement of opinion. Aside from such questions is the far wider area of common conviction, common faith and common passion of love which is in danger of being obscured by controversy. In this area lie the great creative values of our religion, the great regenerative forces, the deep spiritual experiences, the supreme missionary impulse, the constructive social ideals.

This area of common faith and life is not a mere undefinable cloudland of sentiment. It is the clearly visible central plain of the kingdom of God. It has been repeatedly surveyed and charted by the most representative surveyors of the denomination. One of these sketches was given to the world by the last meeting of the Baptist World Alliance; another in the annual address of Pres.

J. H. Rushbrooke at the last meeting of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland in May; a third in the recent reply of the British Baptists to the Lambeth Appeal; a fourth nearer home in the keynote address of Dr. James Whitcomb Brouger at the last meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention. Taken singly or together, they make as clear as day the broad ground of unity, the vast spiritual reaches, the rich possibility of inclusive fellowship and the sublime common undertaking which God holds invitingly open to the Baptists.

Twice indeed within recent years a specifically divisive controversy concerning a definite question of doctrine or polity has arisen in the Northern Baptist Convention. At Indianapolis the question of an authoritative creed was decisively settled in favor of the authority and the sufficiency of the New Testament. So far as now appears that settlement is accepted throughout the constituency of the convention. At Washington the question concerned membership in the convention as it involves baptism. It was fully and fairly considered and decided by an overwhelming majority. In the clearest terms the convention declared that the immersion of believers is the only scriptural baptism, that only churches which recognize and practice such baptism exclusively shall be recognized as constituent churches of the convention and that only immersed believers shall be members of the convention. This declaration will also probably be accepted as final.

But there is danger that both Baptists and others may give to that action a mistaken interpretation. Instead of letting down the bars on baptism that action put them up. Historically there have always been Baptist churches in good standing which received members without immersion. Until the action at Washington it was perfectly possible and proper for such a church to send an unbaptized person as a delegate to the convention. Now it is impossible. Before that action there was a question whether a church could admit for baptism some other order than the immersion of believers and still be represented in the convention. Now there is no question—no such church can be represented. Now, as always heretofore, a Baptist church may receive unimmersed persons and still be recognized as a Baptist church. But now no church may accredit anything as baptism except the immersion of believers and still be recognized by the convention. The convention declares that any other act than the immersion of believers, no matter how or by whom administered, is not scriptural baptism. Whether a local church shall receive into its membership unimmersed persons remains, as it has always remained, a question for the local church to decide for itself. It would be a great mistake to give the public the impression that the convention discredited the historic demand for the immersion of believers as baptism.

No other divisive question is at present on the horizon. Varieties of opinion indeed may exist on many points. A close survey might discover here and there an opinion which if it should tend to become widely prevalent and aggressive would become keenly divisive. But for a general division of judgment upon any principle which has been historically vital to the Baptist movement or is logically vital to it now, one may search in vain.

Problems of administration of the kind that perplex, divide and hinder seem also to be absent. The policies of the great societies are settled and well-known, except as regards the new nationalistic developments in the Orient. And these developments have been fairly anticipated and are met as they arise thus far in a satisfactory way. Locally in the states, the associations and the congregations, perhaps the field was never more free from disturbance.

In the light of these facts, was there ever a time more propitious among Baptists for an evangelistic movement that shall be unusual in the pervasiveness of its effort, in the universality of its enlistment, in the clearness and vitality of its message and in the magnitude and value of its results? The occasion is opportune to let the world see what God can do through the stirring of the evangelistic and prophetic spirit among millions of common people, not in a wave of fanatical frenzy but in a sane and intelligent cooperation in a clearly conceived common effort to make Christ savingly known throughout the world.

To the Fathers of the Republic

INDEPENDENCE Hall, even though surrounded by the hurly-burly of the great modern city of Philadelphia, retains its quaint architectural simplicity and its silent but eloquent moral grandeur. The men who sat there on the Fourth of July, 1776, were creative and planetary thinkers. They understood, and so declared, that when they signed the Declaration of Independence, the trumpet of destiny sounded the jubilee note "for a new order of the ages." They were not, of course, the first men to discover the maxims of human rights, but their distinction was that they were unitedly dedicated to the maintenance of those rights in such an arena. The success of the revolution released liberty for the enterprise of taking possession of the most potential continental area on the globe. The established order of privileged caste throughout Europe felt the jar of that event.

The actors themselves foresaw but dimly the full significance of the declaration. Even twenty-seven years later when Louisiana was added to the territory of the United States, Fisher Ames is reported to have expressed deep misgivings about the future in the words: "We have a empire in the West, but God alone knows how it is to be governed." Say such a thing now to the great states west of the Mississippi which, by the peaceable process of law have been carved out of that empire! What one of the signers of the declaration could have foreseen that in the yet unborn United States there would be in the year 1926 fifteen million Africans far advanced on the way to the best culture and to the enjoyment of full freedom and human rights?

In the perspective of 150 subsequent years how much more perfectly do we, descendants of the men of the revolution, comprehend the meaning of that event. Quantitatively, we have the census reports covering a nation of more than one hundred and ten million people. Qualitatively, we have public schools, no imprisonment for debt, more humane treatment of prisoners, no slavery, provision in the constitution for universal and equal suffrage, a maze of reformatory and welfare agencies, business yielding more and more to the ethics of Christianity, a rapidly growing community consciousness, increasing care for unfortunates wherever found, a widening international outlook. We have not proved unworthy. The "Spirit of '76" is not dead. It is finding others ways to express itself.

The judgment day of time is always present, and the nation is still on trial. Coming years will have something more to tell. Today we sing the "Star-Spangled Banner" and feel an impulse to shoot. Tomorrow we sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and close with prayer. We have balanced between republicanism and imperialism. But we do not quite forget. We mean to carry on. So, in filial mood the American people of 1926 salute the Fathers of the Republic.

Blow Hot, Blow Cold But Blow the Preachers

Curiosity for the bizarre ought to be gratified by an editorial in the Chicago Journal of Commerce criticising the utterance of the Northern Baptist Convention on military training. The paper does not object to what was said. It objects to compulsory military training in high schools. The convention went a step farther and included colleges, to which the paper nowhere objects. Its objection is that the convention ought to have stuck to religion and morals and to have said nothing about war, because that "is not a proper subject for joint consideration by clergymen." Perhaps some people's memories are too short to recall that at the entrance of this country into the world war one of the first steps of the government was to call conferences of ministers all over the land in order to enlist them actively in the prosecution of the war. The argument would seem to be that prosecution of war is a holy duty of the minister but opposition to war is a secular perversion of his office. Is that the idea? If not, what is it? The Journal thinks that war is one of those subjects that ought to be settled by laymen. But the Northern Baptist Convention is essentially a laymen's organization. In it the minister functions only as a layman, and has only a layman's standing. May not even a Baptist layman express opposition to war?

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

No, We Have Not Overlooked These Scriptures

An honored and scholarly brother calls attention to the statement in the issue of June 5, page 551: "God is as truly and fully known as the universe itself is." And he comments as follows: "Did you overlook the saying in Hebrews that we understand that the worlds are made 'by faith' and also the saying 'No man hath seen God,' and the question, 'Who by searching can find out God?' As I go back in my own thinking into the farthest reach I come into an impenetrable haze like looking out over the ocean on a foggy day. In analyzing my processes I come on this: I take the testimony of all I can understand and find that a mind is back of it, and then instinctively and unconsciously infer that in the larger circles the formula are the same; like the ratio of the diameter to the circumference—3.141592." Science approaches truth by way of ascertained fact. But science that goes no farther than merely to note fact is not science. It must relate and interpret facts. Whenever it begins to do that it is using faith; it has entered the field of religion. Whenever it has discovered the real meaning of a fact it has found God. That meaning is his revelation.

Churches Begin to Shine With Light of a New Age

Few people realize the part played by the churches in Great Britain in averting the impending tragedy of the recent strike. The Manchester Guardian states that "nothing has been more significant than the action taken by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the manifesto issued by several Masters of Houses and Fellows at Oxford. In the nineteenth century the church and the old universities represented a body of opinion that was stiff and uncompromising on all questions in which the claims of property were challenged. . . . The workers never looked to them for sympathy in an acute struggle. In this crisis the church and the universities have taken the lead in demanding and preaching a wider spirit. . . . Their bold leadership in this crisis has been powerful influence in keeping the nation from the catastrophe of a bitter class war. It will have a profound influence on the future. It may, indeed, mark a turning-point in the history of religion and the history of the nation." Similarly the intervention of the churches with an investigation of the steel strike has already marked or made a turning-point in the history of the United States—as most Americans do not yet realize.

Accept the Self-Evident, Investigate the Doubtful

Anonymous communications may sometimes be worthy of attention. One of them proposes three posers. 1—"Should a poorly conducted business be permitted to use part of the country's supply of labor . . . and its capital . . . for unprofitable purposes?" Answer—"It should not." 2—"Are large profits prima facie evidence of guilty practice?" Answer—"No; but they ought to be evidence of management so efficient that it courts investigation." 3—"Do not profits presuppose service to the community?" Answer—"If by profits you mean earned gains, yes; if you mean any gains however got, you raise a moral question. Granted that profits presuppose service to the community, the community has a right to find out whether the presupposition is correct or not. The questions open up a fundamental problem. They assume that business is in its very nature a community service. In that case the community is the party having a major interest in the business, and it has the right to see that it gets the greatest service at the least cost. If not, why not?"

The World Is Too Needy For a Great Deal of This

Somebody sends to the desk of the assistant editor a little pamphlet written by Dr. Leander S. Keyser, Lutheran, bearing the title, "The Conflict of Fundamentalism and Modernism," and invites an estimate of the book. It is a polemic, not quite a philippic. The author gives seven points as defining the fighting ground between the two parties, namely: (1) plenary inspiration; (2) the virgin birth; (3) the deity of Christ; (4) substitutional atonement; (5) the bodily resurrection; (6) the visible second coming; (7) evolution. He says the modernist denies all of the first six and affirms the seventh; the fundamentalist affirms all of the first six and denies the seventh. He says that there is no possible statement of opinion on any of these points that can constitute common ground, and that the conflict is irreconcilable. Well, it does not appear that this controversy is saving anybody. Those who enjoy it may settle it as they will. Given the experience of union with God through personal faith in Jesus, his follower may be trusted to settle all dogmatic problems in a manner true to that experience. That is evangelical religion; who asks more?

Certainly, Judge, Go On; Push the Enterprise

Probably nowhere has the new attitude of the head of the United States Steel Corporation in regard to the ethics of business received a more cordial and sincere welcome than in these columns. It is therefore a pleasure to quote this news report of June 10: "Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, at a luncheon to Dr. Paul Reusch, retiring president of the Deutsches Museum, and one of the foremost industrialists of Germany, advocated the formation of an international association of steel producers as a step in the direction of abolishing war." Let steel producers, cotton producers, wheat growers, and all of the greater producing groups unite, every one in its kind, the world over, to ration supplies, to organize distribution, to allocate areas of operation with a view to economy, equity and peace. Let all other economic groups, whether of employers or employes, do the same. It has to be done first or last, and the sooner it is done the easier will be the political organization of the world for peace.

Is not This Policy Also Applicable to Other Countries?

A congress on Mexican and Spanish-American interests is to be held at El Paso next December. It will undertake "cooperatively to find and face the facts basic to the solution of the major problems affecting the Mexican and Spanish-American in the United States; to develop and focus a more intelligent public opinion on these problems; on the basis of these facts, to formulate a correlated policy for the Protestant agencies at work. Such conferences under church auspices or any other auspices of real friendship ought to render valuable aid in arriving at a solution of international and interracial problems in a hundred centers of irritation in our fretful world.

Organized Atheism

BY J. EUGENE REED

SOME time ago the supreme court of the state of New York refused to grant articles of incorporation to "The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism." This association has for its avowed aim the overthrow of all religion. The action of the court was denounced by Doctor Slaten, a Unitarian minister, as "an example of the misuse of the power of government to maintain religious belief." Subsequently the court, in response to a second appeal from the atheistical society, granted the articles of incorporation asked for.

Is the criticism of Doctor Slaten on the first action of the court a just one? Is the question of granting, or refusing to grant, a charter to a society for the advancement of atheism a religious question or a political question? In other words, would the action of the court be determined properly by religious or by political considerations?

The New York Sun, discussing this subject, observes that nothing is clearer in law than that there is a difference between the rights of persons and the rights of corporations. An individual may hold and express views and may seek to persuade others to adopt them, but a corporation has no natural rights, and has only the rights specifically given it by law. It is presumed that when a corporation is created it is created for the benefit of the public. The Sun adds:

"In the case under consideration it was not necessary for the court to inquire whether the proposed incorporation was objectionable as opposed to public policy, although it might have done so, and a decision on that ground would have been lawful. All it had to do was to determine that there is no statutory permission for incorporation for the purpose set forth in the application."

Good Christians and loyal citizens have no wish to evade the logical implications of the principle of religious liberty and that of the entire separation of church and state; but when under cover of these principles the state is asked formally to sanction by the granting of corporate rights an organized attempt to do something which, if successful, would destroy the state itself, it is well to consider seriously whether this is a matter in which the principle of religious freedom is really involved.

Some public journals discussing the question hold that if any organization is given freedom to propagate religion, another organization is equally entitled to government sanction to oppose religion. This, of course, is but a thinly veiled fallacy.

There is this fact to be considered: A society for the advancement of atheism is practically anarchistic in its aim. There is probably no society of anarchists, or nihilists, or radical communists that is not made up largely, or wholly, of atheists. We do not permit, certainly do not encourage, anarchists or nihilists openly to carry on their propaganda. Suppose they were to call themselves by another name; for example, "Societies for the Advancement of Atheism," would that entitle them to corporate privileges granted by the state? Yet under this new name they could just as directly and quite as effectively carry on their government-wrecking work as under the old name.

The breaking up of the established order, the overthrow of all existing governments is impossible without "the overthrow of the church and the clergy," which is the special aim of this atheistic society. The speediest way for atheism to succeed in its anarchistic aim is to destroy religion. The anarchists know this full well. The name "Association for the Advancement of Atheism" is used to camouflage a really political propaganda.

The question is: Should alleged consistency in the matter of religious freedom be carried to the extent of freedom to destroy government? Such freedom would not be religious freedom, but practically and obviously it would be political freedom, or, rather, political license. Surely we should not be overwilling, in the name of consistency, to encourage the enemies of law and order and of the agencies upon which law and order ultimately depend. There should be careful thought and thorough understanding before the most precious and essential things in Christian civilization are exposed by legal sanction to organized attacks that aim at nothing less than their destruction.

There would seem to be embodied in the very nature of men and of institutions the elemental right of self-defense, or self-preservation. If a consistent regard for the principle of religious freedom robs this country of the right of self-preservation against internal assaults, provided only that such assaults be made in the name of religion, or, as in the present case, of irreligion, there would seem to be something radically wrong in the application of the principle.

Religion is known to be a conservative, stabilizing force; irreligion is equally known to be a disintegrating or destructive force. If legalized freedom to propagate religion justifies, on the ground of consistency, a claim to legalized freedom to destroy religion, would not the same argument, in the name of political freedom, demand that persons seeking to overthrow the government be accorded equal freedom under the law with those who are seeking to uphold it?

Think of this glaring inconsistency in the administration of our government. Prior to Thanksgiving day, the official observance of which is itself a distinctly religious act, the president of the United States issues an address to the people, reminding them of our indebtedness to God for the blessings enjoyed by us, and earnestly advising them to assemble on that day, in their various churches, devoutly to acknowledge the source of their prosperity and render due thanks for the same. With few or no exceptions the governors of the several states issue to their people proclamations similar to that of the president.

By contrast, the supreme court of our most popular state grants to a society of militant atheists a charter giving legal sanction to their avowed aim to destroy religion. However consistent we may be in maintaining the principles of religious freedom and separation of church and state, we are obviously inconsistent in our governmental practice.

At a recent meeting of the commission on Christian education of the Federal Council of Churches, Prof. Luther A. Weigle, of Yale university, the chairman, said:

"The growing divorce between education and religion is in the judgment of many clear-sighted and responsible men one of the primary causes for the present distraught condition of the world. They believe that unless education can again be inspired by religious motives and religion be given a place in education . . . human civilization is in danger of further disaster and ultimate ruin."

Further he said: "The principle of separation of church and state must not be so construed as to render the state a fosterer of non-religion or atheism. Yet it is precisely what we are in danger of doing in America today."

The Appeal and Challenge of Africa

BY JOHN E. GEIL

A HALF century ago Africa was not only dark, but unknown. Its vast areas were unsurveyed, its geographical divisions were not mapped out, its wealth and resources were not known, its languages were not reduced to writing, its religion was not studied, its peoples were not classified. The curtain is now lifted from the great continent and the mystery and darkness which enshrouded its fever-haunted forests for centuries are being dispersed by the light of the approaching dawn. The whole continent has been explored, mapped out and divided among the European powers. In the first place the Africans were taken from Africa and later Africa was taken from the Africans. The peoples have been classified, the religion has been studied and many of the 843 languages and dialects have been reduced to writing. The true symbol is no longer a question mark facing westward but a gigantic listening ear which is wide open towards the West and is listening for that message which can bring hope into her hopelessness and transform her desert wastes into a garden of the Lord.

There is great need today of a correct appreciation and understanding of Africa and the Africans. This is pointed out and emphasized in the published report of the African educational commission which begins with the statement: "Africa is not the great dark continent but the continent of great misunderstandings." Comparatively few people are aware of the inspiring scenery, economic resources and human possibilities of the great continent. With the exception of Asia, Africa is the biggest continent on the globe. It is three times the size of Europe, one and a half times the size of North America or nearly as large as Europe and North America combined. It contains nearly one-fourth of the land surface of the globe and around the continent of Africa is as far as around the world. Every eighth person of the world's population lives in Africa.

Pestilential coast, great deserts, few harbors, unhealthy climate, impassable rapids and cataracts near the mouths of the great rivers are no longer "barriers of nature" but the heart throbs of the continent are pulsating over little railways to and from the coast and from the coast to the regions beyond. A half century ago there were no railways in Africa. Now sixteen lines from the west coast and eight from the east coast are penetrating the interior, spreading trade and commerce with their disturbing forces, their dangers and their opportunities. The completed Cape-to-Cairo railway is the longest transcontinental railway in the world, being 6944 miles in length. It has river and lake connections at the present time but 5600 miles of it are by rail. One other transcontinental trunk line is proposed and five trunk lines crossing the continent from east to west some of which have already been built in part. Africa has already more than 35,000 miles of railway and is building at the rate of 2000 miles per year.

Africa has 40,000 miles of river and lake navigation and water power which is said to be equal to that of ninety Niagaras. Victoria Falls on the Zambesi, "the most beautiful gem in the world's scenery," is a mile wide and 420 feet deep and is equal to three Niagaras. Sooner or later the unutilized water power of Africa will furnish electrical transportation and give light and power to countless looms, dynamos and factories. Already steamboats are plying above the cataracts on the great inland navigable stretches creating commerce and making communication easy and safe. Fifty years ago the commerce of Africa was a negligible quantity which attracted few steamships.

Today twenty-five lines of steamers are plying up and down the coast and the commerce of the country is estimated in billions of dollars. Commerce is progressing by leaps and bounds. Traders from nearly every European country are scattered throughout Africa and American engineers are prospecting in the heart of the continent for gold, diamonds and oil. Progress in Africa after discovery has been ten times as rapid as it was in America and a decade in Africa counts for as much as fifty years in Europe. The African has all the momentum of civilization behind him and a world of opportunities before him.

The immense wealth and varied physical resources of Africa are not yet fully known but enough is known to justify saying that it is the undeveloped treasure house of the world. The most valuable gold field in the world is in South Africa and furnishes more than half of the world's supply. Kimberly and associated mines furnish 95 per cent of the diamond output of the world. Diamonds are now being found in large quantities in the Kasai district of the Belgian Congo. The copper deposits of the Katanga district of the Belgian Congo are the greatest in the world. One great copper mine refines 20 per cent of pure copper while the best mines in America do not refine above 2 per cent. Coal, iron and tin are being produced in large quantities. There is a big oil production in Angola and good indications of oil are reported in the Congo and in other places. As the result of the discovery in the Belgian Congo of large quantities of pitch blend—a rich radium-bearing ore—the price of radium suddenly dropped from $120,000 to $70,000 per gram. Two-thirds of the ivory and one-half of the cocoa of the world come from Africa. Gum copal is found in great quantities in many parts of equatorial Africa and the rubber-producing possibilities of the Congo are not to be forgotten or overlooked. The oil palm trees of Africa are producing annually $50,000,000 worth of oil and kernels. The forests of Africa are unexcelled in value and variety of timber having billions of cubic feet of hardwood and other valuable lumber. Making due allowance for barren deserts, sterile mountains, unhealthy lowlands and parts occupied by natives Africa has still 5,000,000 square miles of good undeveloped land.

As far as the natives are concerned the future of Africa lies in the soil which is the real measure of permanent wealth. Asiatic and European countries are turning more and more to manufactures, the mineral wealth is being exploited by the white man who is also laying hold upon the natural resources of the country, and so it remains for Africa and the Africans to take a prominent part in the production of the food supply of the world. The country's most valuable asset lies in its wealth of human resources. She has millions of strong, willing, capable natives, who have a capacity for work, a willingness to work and who do work when incentive and employment are given. All that is needed is men who can and will provide capital and wise and capable supervision and instruction and the land and resources will be developed and this great continent will be added to the slowly growing list of the world's producers. It will no longer pass muster to say that the African is unimprovable and incapable for he is fast coming to his own through industry, education and religion under the tutelage of the white man. The African educational commission after wide observation and careful study cherishes the highest ideals for the progress and development of the native African.

The Africa of yesterday is gone and we have a new Africa in the making. One million black troops from every part of Africa shared with men of other races in the fight for civilization. Many of them paid the supreme price, others returned to their jungle hovels (not homes) there to relate around the village campfires the things which they saw and heard and experienced and consequently the life and ways of Europe have penetrated into the life and thought of Africa. The natives were perplexed and dumbfounded when they were called upon to unite with people, whom they regarded as being civilized and Christian, in a destructive and deadly warfare. However they responded to the call and suffered and bled and died that the world might be free. They may not have grasped the full meaning of patriotism, democracy and self-determination but they learned some things of what it was all about and with the learning became possessed with the feeling that they too should share in the benefits of the war, be freed from exploitation, have a due recognition of their native rights and privileges and an adequate provision for their development. The native may not know just what he wants or how to get it but his eyes have been opened, the horizon of his life has been pushed back and widened, he has been shaken out of his pagan inertia and realizes that he has been the victim of gross injustice and cruel oppression and his soul is crying out as never before for relief. His trust in the essential goodness of the white man has been shaken and he sees that the white man's boasted civilization, which is commercialized and sometimes misnamed Christian, is forcing the natives to lower depths of vice and degradation than paganism ever knew. All over Africa today there are blind reactions to poorly-understood influences and a feeling of discontent which is being fanned into active unrest and is producing in the natives mental attitudes which are dangerous to themselves and dangerous to the state.

There is in Africa today a new psychological atmosphere for mission work which is full of hope and full of danger. The leaven of racial consciousness is at work. Peoples, who for centuries have been at variance and at war with each other and did not realize that they had anything in common, are becoming conscious of common ideals and interests and are moving fast towards an organized expression of their hopes and grievances. The old fragments of African life are being carried across the tribal boundaries on the surface of many currents to meet and combine in a living, solid mass. New intelligence and new ideals of life are struggling for expression. The child race of the world is getting away from its swaddling clothes and the go-cart stage and must have sympathy and encouragement and a suitable outlet for its capabilities whether in the affairs of the state or of the church. There must be a recognition and careful study of the problem on the part of those who can and will apply the spirit and teachings of Jesus to the needs of the individual and of the community. The missionary opportunities are enlarged and intensified and that too at a time when the inadequate forces are crippled and depleted by the loss of 200 German missionaries and the support of their work. There is a widespread desire for schools and education which is turning the natives in large numbers to mission stations and missionaries. More than 90 per cent of the educational work for natives in Africa is in the hands of missionaries and will doubtless remain there for some time to come, so we have an overwhelming responsibility and an incalculable opportunity. Mass movements such as have already taken place in Nigeria, Kamerun, Uganda, Livingstonia and Congo will in all probability become more general and frequent. These people must be furnished with Christian ideals and be imbued with the mind and spirit of Christ. The white people who exercise authority over them must have the same ideals and be dominated by the same spirit.

What of the religious aspect and outlook? It is said that 90 per cent of the population of Africa is reached by commerce while less than 10 per cent is reached by the gospel. The largest unoccupied mission field in the world is in Africa. One-half of the territory is unoccupied by Christian missions and fully one-half of the population is as yet not included in the scope or plan of a church or mission society. Including all who do not belong to any of the book religions, six-sevenths of the pagans of the world are in Africa; one-fourth of the Mohammedans of the world are in Africa. One-third of the entire population of Africa is now Mohammedan and not more than 1 per cent is Christian. More converts have been won to Mohammedanism in Africa during the last fifty years than have been won to Christianity by the missionaries of the cross of Christ in all times since the beginning of the missionary movement. Seven million converts were won in the Sudan alone in ten years. Islam is disintegrating rapidly as a political and in some places as a religious power but no one who is familiar with conditions will delude himself with the idea that it is a spent and decadent force in Africa. In fact there is reason for believing that it is at this opportune time concentrating on Africa with the view and hope of capturing the entire continent. It is firmly entrenched in the north and aggressively organized and with confidence and assertiveness is pushing its way southward and into the interior over the caravan and commercial routes, capturing tribe after tribe. Two-thirds of the population of Nigeria is now Mohammedan. The Swahilis, the dominant artisan tribe of British East Africa, are fast becoming Mohammedans. Fifty thousand Mohammedans are now to be found in Nyassaland. There is great danger at the present time that the whole of Abyssinia may go over to Islam. Truly the hosts of Islam are on the march in Africa.

Shall the cross or the crescent, shall the Bible or the Koran, shall Christ or Mohammed possess Africa? Whether we will or not that question must and will have an answer.

What part have northern Baptists in the restoration and redemption of the great dark continent? Our only work is in the territory of the Belgian Congo. We began this work in 1884 by taking over the work of the Livingstone inland mission. This work was offered to us and accepted by us on the one condition that it should not be permitted to lapse but should be vigorously prosecuted. In six years of time and under pioneer conditions the Livingstone inland mission threw a chain of seven well-established stations through the cataract region, put a steamer on the 1000 mile navigable stretch of the upper river, made a good beginning at reducing the language to writing and was proposing to open a station at the upper extremity of the river. It had a force of twenty-three missionaries on those stations and three on furlough; twenty-six in all out of fifty who had gone forth, ten of whom had died and fourteen of whom had been obliged to give up the work for health reasons. After thirty-nine years of service under more favorable circumstances we are still reporting the same number of stations with the addition of the Kongo Evangelical Training institute at Kimpesi. Despite the fact that we have added twenty to the number of missionaries we are entering upon our forty-third year of service with all our stations understaffed. Why are these things so? Our Master has long stretched out his hands towards Africa and the Congo and sounded the silver trumpet that knows no retreat. When shall his followers hear, heed and obey the call and move forward?

The Devotional Life

Getting into the Wind of God

"Launch out into the deep"—Luke 5:4-5

By JOHN A. HUTTON

DEALING with fishermen who had failed, the Lord sent them back to the water where they had failed.

We don't like to be sent back to an atmosphere that has proved too much for us. Christianity is no system for dodging reality. If we have presented it as a kind of "dope," a way of putting blinkers on our eyes so as not to see what is before us, we have presented it falsely.

Christianity is the last word in moral realism. It declares that a man who has done wrong never can be forgiven in this world till God has suffered an agony comparable to the sorrow man should feel for sin, till in some mysterious way God has borne the burden of transgression. This system of moral realism runs all through scripture.

Knowing God

Sometimes it is easier to go to China than to go home. "There is no disinterested knowledge of God," said Luther. We get to know God through a personal Christ. Just where you fail, is where you find God. You must learn to ride the horse that threw you.

The reason that we do not make more progress in our spiritual life is because we do not take things deeply enough. The Bible speaks of the sin that doth so easily beset us.

Scripture is reticent and delicate. But it indicates that all of us have some moral task that keeps us in contact with God through a sense of danger.

God's Wave

St. Augustine in his "Confessions" tells how, when his divided life was becoming to him intolerable, he would go out into his garden and pray: "Lord, save me from all my sins, but not quite yet." Again, he would pray: "Lord, save me from all my sins except one." Nothing happened. At last one day he fell on his knees and prayed: "Lord, save me from all my sins, and save me now." It was with him as it is with us when we are learning to swim. We feel easier with one foot on the ground. But God sends a great wave from the ocean that lifts us off our feet and flings us on his breast. That is life. Its intention is to land us upon God.

Companionship

If you do not know the difference between facing life with a personal Companion as deep as the soul and facing life alone, it is too late for me to explain. It is a great difference. God never meant any man to live alone. Amiel said: "There is nothing to prevent us from opening our solitude to God."

If, when crossing to England, we should overtake in mid-Atlantic a man in a rowboat, suppose to the captain's offer to take him in he should answer: "It would not be so high, ethically, for me to cross that way."

Now, I used to be frightened at Greek words like ethical and anthropomorphic, but I have got over it. Anthropomorphic means speaking as if we were human, and there is no other way to speak. Two plus two equals four. That is an anthropomorphic conviction, but men build skyscrapers on it.

Well, if that man refused even a tow, I should say: "God never meant you to row across with oars. You are stupid or crazy to do it."

The Captain's Example

Paul once came to the church of Ephesus and found that they had never heard of the Holy Ghost. Then he told them what Christ had told him—that the wind always is blowing from the side of God. The great art of life is to get into that wind and to keep in it. How shall we keep in it? By keeping our eyes on Christ. How does the ship get into the harbor? The captain keeps his eyes on the lights.

An undergraduate friend of mine in a Scottish university told me of a heart affection that made it impossible for him to pass a certain point in the quadrangle. Approach to it always brought a numbness that began at his feet and spread upward. At last he confided in a friend.

"Peter, take my arm," said the friend. Together they walked past the point again and again.

"I believe," finally said the sufferer, "that if you will stand there and I can keep looking at you I can get by."

He did it; and he is living today, with a great ministerial record behind him.

The Test of Life

The test of life is the way of looking at it. Of course, there are shabby ways. Some men see in tears only a solution of salt and soda. Life is packed full of opportunity. Failure is the last thing that God wants.

The Chimney Corner

Escaping the Fourth of July

BY CAMELIA MERRIAM

THERE was an old lady who couldn't stand noise
And so of course she couldn't stand boys
For where there are boys there's bound to be noise!

But without the boys and their noise and their toys

Life would be lacking in a heap of its joys.

Such an "old lady" was Mrs. Bevington—not so very old really in years, but she had lived such a pinched-up, trying-to-please-herself sort of life that the years had settled on her heavily and she gave the impression of being old. Her face was thin and wrinkled and her eyes brown and peering.

The holiday of the year that she dreaded above all others was the Fourth of July, "because she couldn't stand noise and she couldn't stand boys"—and Fourth of July seems peppered with boys and popping with noise.

Mrs. Bevington had a plan. She said to herself that on this Fourth of July she would get up before even the earliest boy could be abroad and row out on the middle of a lake that belonged to a nearby untenanted farm and sit there all day. She would take some books and a sunshade and lunch and a thermos bottle of iced lemonade. Then when she came back in the evening the dreaded Fourth of July would be over, and she would have another year of comparative peace.

She did that very thing, and up until one o'clock it was a beautiful holiday—so quiet that she found herself dropping off to sleep.

Then suddenly she heard a great boom and another and another, and a zizz-zizz-zizz and a boom-boom-bommmmm-boom-boom-boommmmm-boom boom! Crash! Bang! And she saw the funny pagoda-like cupola of the farmhouse bounce to the ground and felt a prickling in her arm.

So it wasn't boys alone that made noise? Goodness, their noise was safer than this sort any way!

Boom-boom! Zizz-zizzizizzizz! Boom-boom-boom! Zizzizzizizzizizz! Boom!

A tree on the side of the lake crashed into the water.

Well, the boys weren't a pinch to this!

Mrs. Bevington longed ardently just then for the noise and the toys and the joys of the noisy boys. She reached for her oars—and discovered that one was gone.

"Can't you paddle?" piped up a shrill voice.

Mrs. Bevington jumped so she almost upset the flatbottom boat.

"I'll swim out to you and take you in," said the voice.

She saw a thin streak of white take the water—and knew it belonged to the voice. In a few minutes a red head, the curls matted down by the water, peeped over the boat and the voice said:

"Fierce old storm, ain't it? Thunder 'n lightning an' everything!"

For the first time in her life Mrs. Bevington was glad to see a boy!

Nimble he climbed into the boat and began to paddle toward the shore.

"What'll your mother say?" she asked when he had helped her to the bank and slipped behind the bushes to put on his clothes.

"I ain't got none. I'm an orphan. I came out from the home to tend the cows and the storm caught me."

The rain stopped and Mrs. Bevington went home. There was no noise anywhere when she unlocked her door and went into her little house so neatly kept.

The next morning she started from her pillow with a scream. A cannon cracker had gone off beneath her window. Then another and another!

"If they didn't save their celebration until today just so they could scare me!" she complained indignantly to her neighbor whose boy she suspected of putting the cracker beneath her window. "Yesterday was the Fourth of July—not today!" But she was not so indignant as she might have been before her experience with the red-headed boy.

"Yes, it was," replied her sunny-faced neighbor, a dimple twinkling in her pink cheeks. "If you went to church you wouldn't get mixed up—or if you had boys of your own. Really you ought to take one—with that yard of yours—"

"I might as well—I get all their noise anyway," she said shortly, but not as shortly as she would have spoken before her experience with the red-headed boy. "And I might as well get him today. His noise added to the other boys' noise won't be noticed."

So that afternoon the red-headed boy shot off crackers in Mrs. Bevington's own front yard and when evening came

My House—At Night

*In the dim hush of early moonrise
I take the long road's trailing curve
Down through the hollow—winding, upward winding*

*To my low gray house on the hill.
The daytime road is a wide thread of dustiness;*

*At night, it journeys silverly along.
My house is but a little human nest
Snuggled hill-close; when I come at night.*

*Returning home—its steadfast light
White-streaming with an eager tenderness*

Gives welcome more than one can ever guess!—Agnes Choate Wonson in Boston Transcript.

he and she had Roman candles—and then a big dish of strawberry ice-cream.

"Noise seems different when you've got a boy of your own," thought Mrs. Bevington. "I guess I just needed a boy to quiet my nerves. And now I'll have to go to church since I've got to see him a good example. And I'll make some of that gingerbread he liked so well, and a batch of doughnuts. He looks kind of pindling."

New Words for Old

IF there were such a thing as a dictionary to repeat our conversations at the end of the day—I wonder would we say so much?

We say so many things, and mean so little by them. We criticize so harshly knowing not, nor even caring who may hear us. Would we say the things to the person that we say about them? Walls can hear, and even the night has a thousand eyes.

What we say determines to the outside world what is in our hearts. Before we criticize our neighbor unjustly, we should justly consider ourselves. Let us think sincerely before we speak.

If trivial remarks, which perhaps have hurt someone, could be read to us on some future day, surely some of us would ask forgiveness before a new day dawned. Again, if we could know, perhaps we should not wonder at our list of friends.

Trivial remarks slip out—so easily! But they pierce the armor of the girl who does not know us. Words, the things we say, mean friendships, as do smiles. Friendships mean lasting lifetime happiness.

We cannot buy back the things we said yesterday!

But we have tomorrow!

—ISABEL BANDY, in Stephens Standard

Speechcraft

Question: In the sentence, "Inasmuch as we have finished the work we will go," is not the word as unnecessary since it is included in the word inasmuch?

Answer: On the contrary, inasmuch is always followed by as. In that respect the sentence quoted is correct; but do you mean you are determined to go or are you simply stating a future act. If the latter use shall instead of will. Shall and should with the first person express futurity; will and would with the first person express determination.

Lady—"We saw the advertisement about this house being for sale and we've come to see it."

Owner—"Yes, madam, but after reading the ad writer's description of it we have decided not to sell."—You and Me.

BOYS and Girls

The House Where The Brownies Lived

LAST week you met the Fidgety-Finger man with whom Twinkle-Toes became so friendly. Twinkle-Toes was one of the brownies living in the most solemn little house, the most sad little house, where some things were just a little bit wrong. In the first place, you stepped right from the roadway indoors; and the floor of the hut was exactly like the floor of the roadway—just plain every-day earth! But since half the people of India have floors exactly like the street, I think it would not be polite to say any more about it. And there were things much worse than the floor in the house where the brownies lived.

The roof of the brownies' house once grew out in the jungle. It waved in the breeze, it rustled when the night wind sighed through it—few roofs in America were ever grass growing in the jungles or waving when the night winds whistled through. But when once that grass was cut down and thatched into a nice little ragged roof, it did very well indeed to keep out the hot Indian sunshine, and as for the very wet Indian rain, it rolled off that roof like water off a duck's back!

The house where the brownies lived did look rather empty: not a chair in sight, not a table, not a bed—yet the brownies themselves did not think it empty at all. They saw all the chairs and tables and beds they needed the minute they looked indoors.

"What would be the use of chairs?" Twinkle-Toes would say, as he showed you how comfortably he could sit right down on the floor.

"And what would be the use of the things you call tables?" Broom-Sticks would say, as she showed you how easily a floor turns into a table the minute you lay anything on it.

"As for beds, what in the world would we use them for?" both Twinkle-Toes and Broom-Sticks would ask in a shocked duet, for wasn't there the plain everyday earth floor to lie on at night, without the dreadful danger of rolling off the affair called a bed?

Curry and rice is the food the brownies like best, but I imagine you would get very tired of it yourself for breakfast, luncheon, and dinner, day in and day out. Although as a matter of fact, the brownies never had three meals a day—just breakfast and dinner; and really, they were lucky to get dinner!

"Surely that sounds wrong enough," you sigh.

Yes, doesn't it? But not nearly so wrong as the way they ate it. For rice was cooked in a pot, of course, by the brownies' mother; and when it was ready to serve she would call to Broom-Sticks: "Get some plates, little daughter."

On the bushes there were plenty of dishes, so Broom-Sticks ran over to pull off green leaves—big ones, you know. Then when her grandfather and her father and her uncles and little Twinkle-Toes were seated on the floor she placed one big green leaf in front of each person, a plate apiece. They ladled their rice on it in big snowy mounds; then, with neither a knife, fork, nor spoon, they rolled the rice into little balls, dipped them in the hot curry sauce and popped them straight into their mouths.

"Oh," you cry excitedly, "now we know what's all wrong with the house. They eat with their fingers, that family!"

Wrong yourselves, my dears, for fingers were made before forks, and in certain ways it's exactly as dainty to eat neatly and nicely with one's own clean fingers that to eat with forks which somebody else will use at the next meal. But didn't you notice who sat down? Grandfather, father, uncles, Twinkle-Toes: all men! And where do you suppose the women were all that time—grandmother, mother, aunts, and Broom-Sticks? They were serving the meal, waiting on the men-folks.

"But," you cry, "will those men surely remember to leave enough in the pot for the women?"

No, they very likely won't even think of it. So granny will be hungry; mother will be hungry; the aunts will be hungry; Broom-Sticks will be hungry.

But there is something even more wrong than that. For Twinkle-Toes did this just before the meal began: he took a little rice from the pot, put it in a small brass bowl, knelt on the floor, bowed his head way down to the ground, then placed the bowl on a small shelf where there sat a wooden figure painted bright red, so solemn, so still, so unblinking, eyes staring straight across to the other wall. And this, of course, was the thing in the whole house which was absolutely wrong, for there is something fairly pleasant about earthen floors and straw roofs, about sitting cross-legged on the floor, about eating with one's fingers; but what about that wooden figure on the wall of the house where the brownies lived—looking like a wee cross man, treated like a man too, with Twinkle-Toes kneeling before him and sharing the family rice, when everybody knew beforehand that there was not going to be enough rice for Broom-Sticks or granny or the poor aunts.

The brownies thought of him as God. They were afraid of him! And all the time you and I keep remembering certain words: "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image of anything above the earth or underneath the earth, thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them."

It was children like Twinkle-Toes and Broom-Sticks whom the Saviour had in mind especially when he said to his disciples (and to us), "Go ye into all the world . . . and teach all peoples . . ."

It's a fascinating job, isn't it? Such a worth while happy job, telling people about a real God who loves them, and wants them to serve him only. Have you ever figured out exactly what you can do to help?

There is a practical kind of magic going on in India with the aid of the magic lantern, enlisted to combat disease and illiteracy and to help in the spread of Christianity. A program of education through lantern slides, started at the close of the war by Lieut. Waldo H. Heinrichs, a wounded American aviator, connected with the Calcutta Y. M. C. A., has expanded so that it now covers practically the whole of India geographically and annually reaches about four million people. Heinrichs, after two years in America, recently started back with his family to become associate general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Lahore. The work, since he left India, has been in charge of Victor M. Ilahibaksh, a graduate of Northwestern university, and formerly a Chautauqua lecturer in the United States.

New Contest

For July the Explorer's club is to have a contest on

What I Should Do If I Had a Million Dollars!

Surely this will be great fun, to sit down and explore the inside of your head, planning what you'd do if some wonderful person suddenly left you this nice sum of money. Here are the contest rules:

1. Write on one side of the paper.
2. Give name, address, age.
3. Send papers to Miss Margaret Applegarth, 21 Arnold Park, Rochester, New York, by July 15, 1926.
4. There will be two prizes, one for the best paper from a boy, another for the best paper from a girl.

The winner of the May contest was Elizabeth Parker, Spokane, Wash.

The June contest papers are just coming in. Announcement of winners will be made later.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for July 25

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

Since this is vacation time, perhaps your church has been holding "union" services with other churches of the neighborhood. If it has not, perhaps your young people's society could invite other young people's groups from the community to join with you for this meeting.

In planning for this meeting, why not ask each society to send a representative to work with your group? Questions might be considered which will make for more unity in doing the work of the neighborhood.

In meeting, if you can do so, be sure to read Bernard Clausen's talk "Denominational Disarmament" which is on pages 77-83 of "The Miracle of Me." Your pastor probably has a copy of this. If he has not, and your friends are also without a copy, you might get it from the American Baptist Publication Society. You will find this talk a source of great inspiration and it will make every one stop and think.

If you have further presentation of the topic, have representatives from the other young people's societies take part, while during open meeting everyone could be asked to speak on the advantages of a united force in the community.

It might be well, as an aftermath, to plan for a number of community get-togethers for the young people, such as socials, picnics, hayracks, hikes, etc., as well as meetings along the more serious lines of social service and community betterment.

Commissioners

Is the young people's work all that it should be? Is the church doing all that it can for the young people?

The First church of Malden, Mass., has decided to find out the answers to these questions. A young people's commission (and it is composed of young people) of five committees has been appointed by the church to look into the matter. These five committees are to specialize in one activity each. One committee is to look into the worship activities of the young people; one into the social activities; one into the educational activities; one into the athletic activities; and one into the organizational activities.

A mimeographed list of all the members of the commission, together with working suggestions for each committee, was given to each member of the commission. In this way each person becomes acquainted with the aims and the possible procedure for getting these things accomplished.

For example, the organizational activities committee was asked to make a survey of the present organizations in the church dealing with young people and to determine the relation of such organizations to the church. If any of the organizations seemed to be overlapping, the committee might suggest a union of two or more; or if it felt the need of more organizations, might recommend that new ones be formed. Certain questions were suggested, the answers to which would be of immeasurable help. Are our organizations giving the largest number something to do? Are they duplicating effort? Are they functioning so that all of their service contributes to the great work of the church—the winning of men, women, boys, and girls, to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ?

The committee on educational activities was asked to ascertain whether or not the present training agencies within the church were contributing all that they should toward the training of all young people for service; whether these agencies were teaching the subjects which should be taught; how the young people might make use of the community facilities and become affiliated therewith.

The committee on athletic activities was given to decide what athletic activities the church should sponsor; how the church might have an active part in the athletic activities of the community; whether or not the groups within the church might not receive athletic training at the "Y;" and just what might be done by each group.

The committee on social activities was to see what the purpose of social activities should be; was to determine if these activities should be for the benefit of the young people of the church or of the whole community; and was to suggest a possible social program for the entire year, setting dates, places, etc.

The committee on worship activities was to see if the young people needed more worship services than they now have; what the purpose of worship programs should be; and what changes, if necessary, should be made.

In other words, these young people were asked to make an inventory of present activities, suggest changes or additions for the future, and bring the matter to the attention of the church membership.

Can you see what that will do for the church? It will make the young people cognizant of what they have available. They will realize what needs to be done during the year and they can plan for the dispatch of the work. They will be bound to become interested in the work of the entire young people's curriculum. They will be made to study out the why's and wherefores of present conditions within the church and seek to find remedies for curing the ills which they are discovered. Further, the old members of the church will see what the status of young people's work. They will find out what interests the young people and what they can do to help them find their interests within the church.

If your answers to the two questions at the beginning are "No," perhaps something like this young people's commission would help to put your young people where they ought to be. A commission of several committees could be put to work to investigate the different phases of young people's activities, the commission to consist entirely of young people. Their findings and suggestion could be brought to the attention of the church for consideration. Your young people's work would probably take on a new life and vigor.

Christian Endeavorers Meet

There will assemble in London, England, July 15-21 the seventh World Christian Endeavor Convention, where hundreds of delegates from every land will be gathered to discuss the great subject of youth in relation to the kingdom of God. The theme of the convention is "The Youth of the World for Christ and the Church." Public meetings are being arranged in some of the largest halls in London, and well-known speakers from every country will be taking part. In connection with the convention there are to be excursions and other social functions for the young people. Young Baptists will be well to the fore in this great convention. Many of the speakers at the gatherings will be Baptists of renown.

THE LAKE ORION, MICH., Bible conference will be held July 18-25. Among the speakers listed are C. H. Woolston of Philadelphia and Hon. Grant M. Hudson of Washington, D. C. Homer Rodeheaver will be in charge of the music.

Churches at Work

WORLD FRIENDSHIP DAY IN LAWRENCE

Sunday, May 16, was World Friendship day at the Calvary church, Lawrence, Mass., Rev. A. T. Fowler, pastor. The plan was worked out by the pastor, who is deeply interested in the missionary cause, in cooperation with the state department of missionary cooperation. Rev. Isaac Higginbotham, field secretary for Massachusetts, took with him two missionaries, Rev. V. W. Dyer, Burma, representing foreign missions, and Miss Goldie Bailey, Kodiak, Alaska, representing home missions. Although the day was somewhat threatening, and there was a heavy rain storm in the evening, there was a large number in attendance and the day was a real success.

At ten a. m., there was a meeting for intercession. This was followed by the morning service when Secretary Higginbotham gave an address, "An Airplane View of Baptist Missions," giving in outline our whole task at home and abroad.

At the church school at noon, missions were emphasized in each department. Miss Bailey spoke to the primary and junior departments, and also to the women's classes, meeting jointly. Mr. Dyer spoke to all the young people in a joint session and also to the men's group. The latter was also addressed by Mr. Higginbotham.

A fellowship tea was held at five p. m., provided by the ladies, and attended by the officers of the church and the officers and teachers of the church school. This was followed by a conference conducted by the two men on the team. Miss Bailey spoke at a joint meeting of the Christian Endeavor societies.

The last service of the day came at seven o'clock when the two missionaries gave addresses on their work.

The people were enthusiastic about the day and felt sure that it would result in a deepening interest in missions in the whole life of the church. Such a program, as the state bulletin suggests, might be put on in smaller churches, two churches cooperating, so that a secretary and a missionary could spend the day with them.

HOW THEY DID IT AT OAKLAND FIRST

How did it happen that a church differing very little from other churches of the denomination, was able to increase its mission budget of some few years back from $3000 a year to its recent payment of approximately $16,000 a year.

How did it happen that the church with personnel and plans not unlike other churches in the state or on the

This page is conducted by the Board of Missionary Cooperation, New York City, as a medium for circulating items about local churches which are carrying on their own and denominational projects in an effective way. If your church has developed any interesting ideas or methods we shall be glad to have you write about them to the Board, at 276 Fifth Avenue. Brief outlines of denominational plans, important news, etc., will also appear here from time to time.

Pacific coast, was selected by the Rockefeller Research Institute as one of twenty-five churches in America (all denominations) to be the subject of analysis by experts?

How did it happen that the First Baptist church of Oakland, which had not aroused any considerable public attention in the past, is now able to call to its pastorate one of the outstanding men of the denomination, Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher?

The answer to these enquiries, may be found in the coming of Dr. John Snape as pastor in April, 1920, with his personality and leadership; the enlargement of the program of the activities of the church; and the loyal cooperation of its officers and members. If you couple with the features named, the unwritten slogan of all departments of the church, "Get Together, Stick Together and Pull Together," you have the secret of the success of the First church.

The victory attained in the financial campaign of the past year in raising the beneficent fund from a suggested budget of $11,420 to the budget adopted by the church of $15,000, and then exceeding that amount, is easily explained in the light of the statements above made.

In order that any church may successfully put over a financial or other program it is absolutely necessary that those charged with the tasks enter whole-heartedly into their completion.

The committee in charge of raising the mission funds had for its chairman, J. M. Davis, an active worker and leader in missionary giving; and in support of denominational activities, A. E. Caldwell, Sunday school superintendent. Deacons S. P. Meads and C. W. Brown were the other members of the committee engaged in this service and each one is an ardent supporter of missions, emulating the postage stamp, which sticks till it gets there. Given such a committee the First church raised its budget for 1926-27 10 per cent or to $16,500.

With Doctor Brougher at the helm, and with his wide experience and success in the ministry, the church expects to outdo in the coming year any of its previous accomplishments. — Reprinted from Northern California Baptist Bulletin.

A GOOD START

From May 1-15 this year, missionary receipts from the churches in the Idaho convention amounted to $497.80. Last year they received during the same period only $92.75. From May 1-15 last year, only one church sent in money. This year, for the same period, nineteen churches remitted missionary money to the state office. "The improvement," says the state bulletin, "is remarkable and very gratifying." Twenty-seven out of the forty Idaho churches had definitely accepted their 1926-27 missionary quotas by the first week in June.

POINTS FOR PRIDE

Among the fifteen points which the church bulletin of Seymour, Ind., tells the members of the congregation they have a right to be proud of are: the largest average Bible school attendance in the city, the largest church-night meeting in the city, the only church that meets all its financial obligations promptly, a church that sends the state convention paper to all its families, and a church that makes a missionary budget and pays it in full.

USE CHART FOR CANVASS

The First church of Green Bay, Wis., prepared a large chart with the name of every member on it, in connection with their every-member canvass. The chart was hung in a conspicuous place in the church and as rapidly as a member made his subscription the name was checked off.

The Wisconsin bulletin comments, "We understand that folks naturally wanted to have a check back of the name showing that a subscription had been made, and they wanted to be among the first to make this subscription. We should suggest that there be two columns, one for current expenses, and one for missions, and that checks be made in both columns as the subscription was reported."

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"

2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN,
1912 "G" Street, Northwest

Among Ourselves

Ohio Baptist Convention

OHIIO Baptists gathered in large numbers at Zanesville, May 10-13, to hold their Centennial Convention. Pres. J. H. Lloyd opened the first session with praise and prayer after which Rev. W. E. Hayden, of the First church, welcomed the visitors in the name of the 2000 Zanesville Baptists. President Lloyd responded in his pleasing manner. The address by Dr. John F. Herget which followed emphasized the present day need of spiritual energy. Pres. E. H. Rhoades, Jr., of the Northern Baptist Convention, and for ten years president of the Ohio convention, was invited to the platform and received with great applause. The next speaker, Rev. W. H. Bowler, executive secretary of the Board of Missionary Co-operation of the Northern Baptist Convention, pleaded with the delegates to give more abundant support to our missionaries by an adequate missionary budget in every local church.

At the next session Secretary Chambers presented the report of the board of managers which included the account of the work of the different departments of the convention. In the department of evangelism there has been the largest addition to the churches by baptism, 5400, of any year thus far in the convention's history. In the department of Christian education, training schools, vacation schools, young people's work, children's work, the assembly, conventions, and workers' library have been pushed.

The department of missionary co-operation could not give accurate figures of the year's work owing to the fact that the convention met before the books closed. It was estimated that the missionary income would probably not be quite as much as last year. The report of the treasurer showed a deficit of about $9000 but this was reduced during the sessions of the convention to $1500, with assurance that this too would be wiped out in a few weeks. The debt on the new headquarters' building in Granville has been reduced to $8500.

The endowment committee showed invested funds of $159,576.53. The amendment to the constitution proposed last year forbidding a trustee to succeed himself without an interval of two years, was lost after a spirited discussion. This year fifteen new pastors were presented and with them Mr. G. Clifford Cress of "THE BAPTIST" who was a visitor at the convention. As "just an Ohio Baptist layman" President Rhoades delightfully welcomed them. Rev. Griffith, of Newark, responded in acceptable fashion.

The devotional addresses this year were given by the new pastor of the Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland. They centered in the Holy Spirit and were of great strength and inspiration.

At the annual election of officers practically all the officers of the past year were again chosen. President Lloyd was called to the platform and introduced as his own successor. The presentation of the budget for the year brought the convention face to face with its task for the coming months.

"The Spiritual Conquest of America" was the theme of the address by Dr. C. L. White, executive secretary of the Home Mission Society, in which he reviewed the work of Baptists in their own land. Rev. A. C. Archibald's address on "The Voice of God Today" emphasized the fact of God's speaking to men and the obligation of men to hear him. Dr. Stilwell's address, "The Imperative Evangelism," pointed out the need of authority in religion and the recognition of the sense of the supernatural. Rev. John Raymond presented the report of the committee on obituaries.

The work of the women under the leadership of Mrs. H. H. Griffin, president of the women's society of the state, was presented. Mrs. George Eulette, of Chicago, brought a telling message on "The World Around," in which she spoke of the intertwining of the work of the kingdom in different lands.

Throughout the whole convention the centennial element was constantly manifest, but on Wednesday evening it had full sway in the historical pageant which reproduced some of the memorable events in the growth of the convention from colonial times to the present. It was written by Mrs. James Munn of Cleveland and adapted and staged by Prof. E. P. Johnston of Granville. Rev. I. N. Depuy read a most interesting paper, illustrated with pictures, before the pageant was given. It was brought out that the convention's income a hundred years ago was $177 in comparison with the present income of $33,987.23. It was further shown how Baptists of Ohio have grown from a small folk to the number of 87,000.

The closing session was one of the best of the convention with three able addresses. Doctor Lerrigo showed what Baptists are doing in medical missionary work. Rev. W. H. Main spoke of the challenge that our present day makes upon Christian workers. Doctor Snape followed with his third inspiring address on "The Holy Spirit and the Minister."

There were about 600 delegates and visitors. The invitation of the First church of Youngstown to meet with it another year was accepted, and Rev. J. S. Braker, of Springfield, was appointed the preacher, with Rev. C. T. Hewitt, of Martin's Ferry as alternate. The report of the committee on resolutions was unanimously adopted.

District of Columbia

BY HENRY W. O. MILLINGTON

THE annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary association of the District of Columbia was held with the Hyattsville church, June 8. The pastor, Rev. B. P. Robertson, led a devotional service and Mrs. Harrison of the Hyattsville woman's society gave a cordial welcome. The reports of various committees showed that splendid work is being done by the women in the various churches.

The women of the Eastern league, a group of four churches, gave a sketch entitled "The Garden of Books," which is a review of the new books in the reading contest for the coming year, and which was written for the occasion by Mrs. W. F. Brothers, a member of the East Washington Heights church. Miss Evelyn Speiden of Huchow, China, "Our Evelyn," was called to the platform and one by one representatives of the woman's societies brought gifts showing appreciation of Miss Speiden's splendid spirit and work. Announcement that she would return to China in August was made.

After a lunch, served by a neighboring Presbyterian church, Mrs. H. W. O. Millington gave an account of the meetings of the Woman's Missionary Union auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention. She told especially of the work of the women for students in the training school and the Margaret fund. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Millington for so ably representing the association at this meeting and for the splendid report she brought. The reading of letters from missionary societies of the various churches, always an interesting feature, followed. These letters reported much activity along all lines of missionary work.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. O. E. Howe; vice-president, Mrs. H. M. Kendrick; recording secretary, Miss Katherine Stickney; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. F. Brothers; and treasurer, Mrs. H. B. Waddy. The meeting adjourned after prayer by Mrs. G. G. Johnson.

Miss Elizabeth L. Richardson, daughter of Dr. Edward E. Richardson, pastor of the Congress Heights church, received the degree of Master of Arts from Columbia university at the recent commencement. Miss Richardson is a graduate of George Washington university and the Baptist institute, Philadelphia.

Two of our churches have recently observed important anniversaries. The Second church is 116 years old, and the event was celebrated by appropriate exercises, emphasizing also the fourth anversary of the pastorate of R v. Ellis Primm. The pastor preached a special sermon for the occasion, reviewing the history of the church, and on Monday evening June 7, a reception was held which special music was furnished and an address was made by Rev. F. W. Johnson of Grace church. The Second church has mothered several new enterprises and is planning to develop a new mission in the region of Lincoln Park. A fine lot has been purchased upon which a chapel is being erected in which a Sunday school will be opened next fall. The sixtieth anniversary of the West Washington church was observed for three days, June 17, 18 and 20. The church was first known as the Gay Street church and was organized June 19, 1866. The church was formally recognized July 9, 1866. The congregation worshipped for more than two years in a chapel on Market street, the use of which was granted by the Bridge Street rebyterian church. The church at the corner of Gay and Congress streets, now thirty-first and N streets, was dedicated October 11, 1868. The property was secured through the liberality of James W. Welch, and a legacy from the late John McEutchon of $5000. A reunion of the members, past and present, was held at which greetings were brought by a former pastor and an address was delivered by Rev. P. Roland Wagner of Rockville. The historical sermon was preached by Rev. George E. Truett who is a former pastor and has long continued his membership in the church and is now serving as a deacon. The pastor, Rev. Charles Austin, is carrying on the work with great success.

Annual Conference of Japan Mission

ASSEMBLED at Arima, a beauty spot in the hills behind Kobe, the Japan Baptist mission held its thirty-seventh annual conference May 22-28, J. H. Lovell presiding. In addition to the customary reports, business, and devotional services, considerable attention was given to the matter of foreign policies in general and closer cooperation with the Japanese Baptist Convention in particular.

The Japanese Baptist Convention, consisting of delegates from church and educational institutions, was held there at the same time. These two bodies were in joint session on May 25-26 for spiritual and social fellowship and the discussion of problems affecting both organizations. The question of merging them into a new organization which could absorb the functions of both was taken up in detail.

A feature of the conference was a series of book reviews on questions of vital concern to the missionary. "The attitude of the Far Eastern People towards Christianity," presented by Doctor Benninghoff, might be given special mention.

The conference was glad to welcome guests: Dr. and Mrs. Albert Ehr Gott, Berkeley, Calif., and their niece, Miss League; Miss Bentley of Toledo, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Duncan, Baptists from Melbourne, Australia.

Miss Lavinia Mead, of the Osaka Bible school, who is retiring after years of consecrated, fruitful service, attended her last conference this year. When she sails for America in July, she carries with her the deep appreciation and love of the mission family.

The Passing of a Notable Baptist Layman

By H. O. ROWLANDS

JOHN WINTHROP BALLARD died at his home in Davenport, Iowa, June 9, after a lingering illness aggravated by the death of his wife four years ago. He was in his eightieth year. Born in Thompson, Conn., he came to Davenport in 1865 where he became a druggist; later he became president of one of the city banks, but afterwards returned to the drug business.

Mr. Ballard was frequently compelled by his fellow-citizens to accept positions of trust and honor in the city and county. He was a man of literary tastes and wrote for several journals, especially those in his line of business.

During his life in Davenport he was a generous and faithful member of the Calvary Baptist church. He held every office of trust and service the church could give him except the diaconate which he persistently declined. He was a life-long Baptist by inheritance as well as by faith—active, liberal, and consecrated in all the activities of the church. He coveted no honor, nor shirked any burden which his time and purse could carry. No man in the city had a wider reputation as an upright citizen, a cultured gentleman, and a devout Christian, most courteous in his companionship and spotless in his behavior. The only thing in which he was poor was enemies; of these he had none. He was known to the Baptists of the state for his personal integrity, generous hospitality and loyalty to the Master to whom he had dedicated his long and honored life. His wife had been, up to the time of her death, a most fitting and worthy companion.

Mr. Ballard is survived by two sons and two daughters.

Commencement at Denison University

By C. M. EDDY

THE ninety-fifth commencement of Denison university witnessed the granting of 133 Bachelor's degrees, five Master's degrees, and four honorary degrees.

The commencement exercises opened with the program of Doane academy in the Granville church. Dean Hundley presided and Rev. J. Scott Ebersole, a graduate of the academy and also of the college, now pastor of the First church of Carbondale, Ill., delivered the address.

In the Samson Talbot Bible reading contest, which for many years has stimulated interest in careful and interpretative reading of the Bible in public, Phyllis Caul received first prize, and Grace Jones second.

Saturday was Alumni day. The Shepardson alumnae association held its annual meeting with election of officers and luncheon at noon. The alumni banquet was held in the Denison wigwam with places set for 550 guests. Never before have there been so many Denisonians together on such an occasion. Pres. V. Ernest Field of Indianapolis was re-elected to office. Emphasis was given to the project of the alumni to raise a fund of $225,000 to establish three distinguished professorships. It is proposed to carry the campaign to success before the centennial celebration of the college in 1931.

The baccalaureate services on Sunday were preceded by the decoration of Doctor Shepardson's grave by the senior girls. Rev. James S. West, pastor of the First church of San Francisco, was the preacher.

The commencement exercises were in charge of the acting president, Bunyan Spencer. There were abundant expressions of esteem and appreciation for the patient and successful service Doctor Spencer had rendered during the year. The address was delivered by Edward H. Rhoades, Jr., recently president of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Acting-President Spencer made announcement of the honor students, and conferred the various degrees. The following honorary degrees were conferred: Wallace H. Cathcart, Doctor of Humane Letters; J. Scott Ebersole, Doctor of Divinity; Edward H. Rhoades, Doctor of Legal Letters; James S. West, Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. H. F. Stilwell, president of the board of trustees, described the earnest effort that the board is making in the selection of a new president, and expressed regret that it was not yet possible to make any announcement respecting the presidency.

The present year has seen the erection of Chemistry cottage, which though a temporary building and outside any of the plans for the larger construction, is meeting the pressing needs of that important department. By the munificence of Dr. Ambrose Swasey the approach to the chapel with the great wall, driveway and terraces, with proper planting of shrubbery, has been brought near completion. Ground has been broken for two large fraternity houses on the hill set apart for these lodges. They are to be ready for use early in the next college year. Others will follow as rapidly as possible.

Hillsdale College Commencement

By JOHN MEIGHAN

COMMENCEMENT opened auspiciously with "moving-up" exercises with the seniors in charge on Thursday. The chapel was in charge of Ralph Taylor, president of the senior class, scripture reading by Josephine Kerr, vice-president, and prayer by Gladys Clark, secretary. The awarding of prizes and certificates was in charge of Registrar Herron. The Willisford prize for greatest proficiency in New Testament

A Sane and Glorious Fourth of July

Sane for You

Renew your subscription for THE BAPTIST promptly. It is an evidence of Sound Judgment.

Glorious for Us

Prompt renewals save postage, clerk hire, bookkeeping and interest on borrowed money. Prompt renewals bring the glow of new enthusiasm and efficiency.

National Independence was not achieved by talk but by valorous Deeds of Sacrifice.

Religious Liberty cannot be retained by mere words but by loyal and sacrificial support of those agencies that promote Religious Freedom.

The Baptist is such an Agency.

Single Subscriptions, $2.50 per year. In 10% clubs, $2.00 per year. THE BAPTIST and Missions, $3.00. Trial Subscription, Six Months, $1.00.

Sample Copies Free

The Baptist

2320 South Michigan Avenue

Chicago, Illinois

study went to Eliza Cowen; Kate King prize to Clara Burri of Switzerland Crandall literary prize to Alice Moore. Chi Omega economics prize to Donna Kelly; prizes for having been the greatest influence for good on the campus during the year, for men to Thomas Rowe, for women to Gladys Clark; Rice oratorical prizes to Genevieve Rowe, and Arthur Chafer; Taylor mathematics prize to Louise Hawks. The plaque for intramural sports was won by Delta Tau Delta.

Friday evening the dramatic department presented "Children of the Moon," and Saturday evening there was the annual concert under the auspices of the department of music, preceded by the class day exercises in the college church, and the historic giving away of the Central hall steps by the seniors to the juniors. Saturday closed with the annual fraternity and sorority sing on East hall steps.

The meeting of the alumni association was enthusiastic, with President Robinson of New York City and his executive staff working out new plans for assistance to the college program. The seniors appearing at the banquet in cap and gown were received into the alumni body formally, the banquet hall being crowded to capacity.

The seventy-sixth annual baccalaureate services were held in the college church on Sunday morning. President Emeritus Joseph Mauck gave the invocation, and Pres. William Gear Spencer preached the annual sermon. In the evening the Rev. Joseph F. Vance, D.D., gave the address before the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., the officers of the societies presiding.

Monday at 9:30, the academic procession including the entire student body the alumni, trustees, women commissioners, and faculty, formed in front of the Central hall and marched to the church, where the commencement address was given by Chancellor H. P. Whidden, D.D., LL.D., of McMaster university, Toronto, Ont. His theme was "Some points of Emphasis in a Liberal Education." Then came the giving of degrees, honorary degrees being conferred upon Pres. R. P. Sims, of West Virginia, Master of Pedagogy; Prof. W. M. Chester of Colgate university, Doctor of Science; Rev. Clinton Wunder of Rochester, N. Y., Doctor of Divinity; Chancellor Whidden, Doctor of Civil Law, and Walter Hulme Sawyer of Hillsdale, Doctor of Laws. Degrees were granted to sixty-two seniors.

Significant items were the plans announced with regard to the gymnasium and field house by the chairman of the board, Mr. Davidson of Bay City, with an authorization to the Prudential committee to proceed with construction, and the progress presented by the board of women commissioners through their chairman, Mrs. Emma Koon Stock, in securing funds for a new women's dormitory, with its location authorized and plans fully prepared for the building. The college feels keenly the resignation of its much loved dean of women, Miriam Hastings Rowe, who was married on Tuesday of the week following the close of college to Mr. Karl Katzenmeyer, a popular merchant in Hillsdale, the ceremony being performed by President Spencer.

Miss Eleanor Kelly, director of the conservatory of music, was honored with the degree of Doctor of Music by the University of Detroit, and Prof. Harold M. Davidson received his degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Michigan.

Baptist Missionary Training School Commencement

SIXTEEN young women, facing service under the Woman's Home Mission Society or in the field of religious education, received diplomas from the Baptist Missionary Training school June 15.

The baccalaureate service was held in the First church. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Ralph A. Jensen, pastor of the Second church of Chicago. It was a strong sermon urging the young missionaries, as ambassadors for Christ, to be faithful and to concentrate their efforts on teaching by word and action Jesus Christ, from whom comes all authority and power.

Monday was outstanding. After the alumnae luncheon at which each senior was adopted and introduced by an alumna, and following the usual class day exercises, the play "Tyndale" was presented by the class. It represented in a most vivid way William Tyndale's life and persecution in his effort to translate the Bible into the English tongue that all, even the humblest, might read it.

The address of the evening was given by Mrs. Clara D. Pinkham, retiring president of the school, who spoke on "The King's Highway," basing it on Isaiah 35. She drew forceful word pictures and emphasized the part each one should take in building that royal highway to Christ himself who said, "I am the Way."

Twelve of the sixteen girls were given commissions as missionaries under the Woman's Home Mission Society, and solemnly stood while the prayer of dedication was offered.

The crowning event was the commencement service on Tuesday evening. Dr. John Snape, minister of the Euclid Avenue church of Cleveland, took as his subject "Cui Bono," or crudely translated "What's the Use?" In a masterful way, he pointed out "the use" of preparation and the joy of Christian service. After this, the diplomas and Bibles were presented and the seniors became alumnae.

Sweetest and most precious to the students was the last Saturday night student prayer meeting, led by the three class presidents. The memory of those Saturday evening prayer meetings and the assurance that the alumnae on their fields are being remembered in prayer week by week has been and will be a source of comfort and strength through the years.

Commencement at Colgate

By A. E. ALTON

ONE hundred and seventy-five degrees in course were awarded at the Colgate university commencement June 14. Eight men received Master's degrees, fourteen the degree of Bachelor of Theology, forty-three the degree of Bachelor of Arts and 110 the degree of Bachelor of Science.

Honorary degrees were granted as follows:

Doctor of Laws: Major-General James Guthrie Harbord, deputy chief of staff, U. S. A., Judge Cuthbert Winfred Pound, court of appeals, New York state.

Doctor of Divinity: Prof. Douglas Clyde Macintosh, Yale Divinity school, Rev. George Dicker Knights, Long Beach, Calif.

Doctor of Pedagogy: Prof. Adna Wood Risley, New York State College for Teachers; Lamont Foster Hodge, superintendent of schools, Yonkers, N. Y.

Doctor of Science: Henry Eltinge Breed, president, American Road Builders Association; Prof. Albion David Morrill, Hamilton college.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached in the Colgate memorial chapel, Sunday morning, by Pres. George Barton Cutten, D.D., LL.D. He had as his subject "The Modern Idea of Sin." The text was Matthew 9:16-17.

Dr. George R. Berry gave the address

THE Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary In Philadelphia

True to our historic Baptist beliefs

Loyal to our denominational interests

High educational standards

Courses leading to degrees in Theology and Religious Education.

A Faculty of teachers who are scholarly, wisely conservative, vigorous and thoroughly up-to-date.

Prepares for the Ministry, Missionary Endeavor, Pastors' assistants with opportunities for special training in Religious Education and Gospel Music.

Located in the heart of Philadelphia.

Ten minutes by trolley to the University of Pennsylvania.

Surrounded by great libraries affording opportunities for research work.

Many opportunities for self help. For such information write Harry Watson Barras, Dean.

Tuition, room, light and heat free.

Board $6.00 per week.

For additional information address

AUSTEN K. DE BLOIS, Ph.D., LL.D., President

1812-1814 S. Rittenhouse Square

Philadelphia, Pa.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Illinois

"Welcome friends to our little party tonight. 'I hear you were at a party last night,' said one to his friend. 'What was it to celebrate?' Answer: 'It was for my wife. It was the tenth anniversary of her thirtieth birthday.' Just so. WCOY goes right on celebrating every week in the year.

"We apologize to the pastor of the Immanuel church of Scranton, Pa., for grabbing off and working over some wise cracks found on the back page of a recent church bulletin. They are entitled, 'DON'TS FOR CHURCH MEMBERS.' We paraphrase them (oh, how could we do it?) into, 'DOUGHNUTS FOR READERS OF THE BAPTIST.'

1. Don't visit with the paper—READ IT.
2. Don't go to sleep when you read the paper—you can't inhale it.
3. Don't break your neck or your glasses trying to find your name or that of your church in the paper. Move over and look for the other fellow's name. It might be more Christian.
4. Don't monopolize the paper even if you did subscribe for it. Maybe someone else would enjoy it. Pass it around—it won't cost you anything. Share your blessings. Makes 'em go further and last longer.
5. Don't throw your paper on the floor when you are through with it. The maid will sweep it up for junk and put it in the furnace. THE BAPTIST is to warm you up and not the furnace. Be thrifty.
6. Don't dodge the collection plate. Printers have to live. Pay your subscription once in awhile and see what a kick you will get out of it.
7. Don't criticize the editors. The neighbors' chickens scratch up their gardens and flowerbeds and the rain falls on the just and the unjust. The homely features you see reflected in the paper may be your own. Have a heart.
8. Don't sit and stare around while others sing, read and pray. Join in and go through the motions. The Good Book admonishes us to be 'imitators.' Nuff said. 'Doughnuts' are aus gespielt.

"This same pastor has some timely reasons 'WHY I SHOULD JOIN THE CHURCH.' These we would like to work over into 'WHY I SHOULD READ THE BAPTIST.' Here we are:

1. I ought to read THE BAPTIST because I ought to be better than I am. Henry Ward Schrecker once said, 'THE BAPTIST is not a gallery for the display of the portraits of eminent saints but a school for wiseing up imperfect ones.'
2. I ought to read THE BAPTIST because of what I can give to and do through it as well as for what I can get out of it. THE BAPTIST is not a dormitory for sleepers but a work-train for kingdom toilers.
3. I ought to read THE BAPTIST because every good man ought to pay his debts and discharge his obligations toward society. This paper is intended to yank me out of my smug complacency and set me on my feet with my face toward a needy world.
4. I ought to read THE BAPTIST because of the denomination it represents—the good men in it that need encouraging; the weak in it that need pep; and the over-ambitious and myopic who need adjustment. If I say I am not good enough to read the paper, my humility recommends me. If I say I am too good to read it, then my pride condemns me. I ought to play the game.

"Rev. Stanley A. Gillet of Caldwell, Ida., in his bulletin of May 2 has one of the most unique ads for THE BAPTIST that we have ever seen. He devotes a whole page to quotations from an article in the last issue entitled, 'Baptists Confer and Agree.' He thus gives the main facts about the Brougher conference in Chicago on April 13, quotes the actions and proposals to be submitted at Washington, D. C., and then concludes the page thusly: 'The above is taken from THE BAPTIST of April 24, page 370. For a list of men who attended the conference and voted for this see that article. An editorial appears on page 357.' And yet some folk wonder why one man gets on and another fails. There's a reason. You can't buy it. It has to be caught.

"The office boy will now recite a few lovely lines from Bailey:
 'We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
 In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
 We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
 Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.'

"WCOY now signs off. Two-fifty a year please. Goodnight."

to the members of the graduating class of the Theological seminary, having as his topic "Prophet and Priest."

The commencement speakers were Major-General Harbord and Doctor Macintosh.

The alumni dinner was held in the new gymnasium, which has just been completed at a cost of approximately $375,000. The new recitation hall, the gift of Col. Austen Colgate, costing $400,000, will be ready for use in September.

At the meeting of the trustees of the Baptist Education Society of the state of New York and also at the meeting of the society, action was taken favorable to the consolidation of the Colgate Theological seminary and the Rochester Theological seminary into a new institution, to be located in Rochester.

Here, There and Everywhere

THE MEN'S CLASS of the First church, Kansas City, Mo., had the Independent Order of Odd Fellows as guests on May 23. The class meets in the Masonic temple across the street from the church. On June 8 the Heinz Co. entertained the men of the class and their wives at a banquet. The attendance of the class on May 30 while Dr. D. J. Evans was in Washington was 1786. The attendance of the entire Sunday school on that day was 2746.

ON JUNE 16 the Tabernacle church of Milwaukee, Wis., held special exercises at the close of the activities connected with week-day church school work. Rev. R. C. Speer is pastor.

REV. P. J. VINCE, after three years with the Russian work at Pittsburgh, Pa., left on June 15 for Harbin, Manchuria, to take a position under his father who is in charge of a seminary for training ministers. Mr. Vince did a notable work in Pittsburgh.

REV. WM. W. EVERTS died at Roxbury, Mass., in the seventy-eighth year of his life. He had held pastorates at Providence, R. I.; Hartford, Conn.; Philadelphia, Haverhill, Mass.; Dorchester, Mass.; Omaha, Neb., and had been associated with Dr. George C. Lorimer in Tremont Temple, Boston.

DR. B. L. BAKER of Chao Chow Fu, South China, spoke, June 6, in the Calvary church of Syracuse, N. Y., in the morning and in the Delaware Street church in the evening.

NEW YORK LED in the state delegations at Washington with 734 registered messengers.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Girard, Ohio, Rev. W. I. Barnholth, pastor, has a fine boy scout organization that captured a silver cup for that division, while the women's missionary society won a silver plate given as a prize to the society making the most points in the reading contest in that association.

MRS. LOUIS S. BOWERMAN, wife of Pastor Bowerman of Casper, Wyo., is spending the summer in California.

Want Ads

PASTORS—Secure Baptist Evangelist for your next revival. Best Denominational references. Write, Pease Evangelistic Campaigns, 19 Highland, Battle Creek, Michigan.

SCHOOL OF SACRED MUSIC, Home, Rodeheaver, President. Summer session Winona Lake, Indiana, August 9-29, 1926. Intensive, sympathetic, practical. Danle Protheroe, Dan Beddoe, Charles Gilbert Spross, and sixteen other teachers. Write Secretary for leaflet "A".

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., Modern comforts, scenery unsurpassed, no hay fever—No mosquitoes. Parties made up for Mountain Trips. Special arrangements for families of Parties, either in the Hotel, or the Cottages, or the Tents. Rates reasonable. Booklet B. A. J. Newman, proprietor

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

Wanted: Protestant chaplain-pastor in Government leper hospital, Louisiana. Should be married and preferably over 40. Must be able to work without friction with those of other faiths. Apply to R. P. Currier, American Mission to Lepers, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

REV. C. J. OXLEY of the First church, Burlington, Vt., serves as chaplain and director of life work at the interdenominational school of religious education, Vermont academy, June 21-July 2.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., through its city B. Y. P. U. has invited the B. Y. P. U. of A. to hold the 1927 convention there. The official invitation says, "Springfield—with its rich associations and traditions of Abraham Lincoln is visited annually by thousands of pilgrims from all over the world who come to pay tribute at his tomb and to visit his home. Springfield therefore offers a culturally worth-while opportunity and an especially inspiring atmosphere in which to assemble our Baptist young people."

DR. H. F. STILWELL was given a luncheon in Washington, D. C., during the convention by the state directors of evangelism. Dr. J. E. R. Folsom of New Jersey presided. Short addresses were made by State Evangelists Curry of Michigan, Jones of New York, Strickland of Pennsylvania, Cooper of Rhode Island, McKim of California and Stull of Ohio. Frank A. Smith of the Home Mission Society was a guest.

REV. W. G. BIRCH, after some service in Central America, has been appointed missionary among the Mexicans in Detroit. He began his work on May 15. June 9 four converts were baptized in the Woodward Avenue church to which this mission belongs.

THE HUNGARIAN MISSION of Highland Park, Detroit, Mich., Rev. N. Dulity, minister, has just received twenty new members with ten more candidates for July 1. On a recent Sunday, the pastor with three lay assistants, conducted services in four different cities.

THE PARK AVENUE CHURCH of Mansfield, Ohio, Rev. L. A. Wood, pastor, has purchased a new site for $30,000. The present building will later be sold and a new edifice erected. Mansfield has a population of 38,000. Pastor Wood is completing his ninth year with this important church.

DR. THOS. H. SPRAGUE, formerly of the Emmanuel church, Ridgewood, N. J., is now acting pastor of the church at Hollywood, Fla.

DR. T. HARLEY MARSH, pastor at Decatur, Ill., and president of the Illinois Baptist Convention, who was stricken with illness at a board meeting in Chicago in the early spring is fully recovered and carrying on an extensive program in the new church building. The church has a very large vacation school.

REV. JOHN A. SWETMAN, pastor at Park Street church, Pittsfield, N. H., delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the high school on June 13. Mr. Swetman will sail from Quebec on July 16 for a vacation in England.

ESTES PARK TOURISTS are invited to attend Sunday services in the Longmont, Colo., church. The pastor, Rev. G. W. South has been given a permanent call and his salary increased $300 a year. The church has almost completed payments on its new $45,000 edifice.

THE EDEN CHURCH of Stromsburg, Neb., Rev. A. W. Lyons, minister, entertained the York association on June 16-17. The Sunday school has reached its largest attendance. There were forty-seven men in the Bible class on a recent Sunday. The church maintains a vacation school.

DR. J. G. OSTER, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., is now happily located with the First Swedish church of St. Paul (not Minneapolis, as formerly reported), Minn., succeeding Rev. F. C. Hamlin who a year ago disappeared, a victim of amnesia.

THE GARFIELD PARK CHURCH of Indianapolis, Ind., Rev. C. P. Greenfield, minister, dedicated a new structure on June 13. The morning address was by Rev. T. J. Parsons, dedication sermon by Dr. Fred E. Taylor in the afternoon, and evening sermon by Rev. F. A. Hayward, who also had special responsibility for raising $5000 remaining of a total expenditure of about $30,000.

REV. E. LEROY DAKIN of Brooklyn, N. Y., was given the degree of Doctor of Divinity by his alma mater, Acadia university.

REV. G. A. LEICHLITER of Prospect Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y., supplies the pulpit of Temple church, Los Angeles, during June.

(Continued on page 700)

The Saving Sense

The seed catalogue shows nice pictures of everything except the backache. —Baltimore Sun.

Two Scotchmen had planned a hike into the country and had agreed to meet at a certain place at five in the morning. Only one of them owned an alarm clock, but he finally hit on a solution of rousing the other.

"Mac," he said, "when the clock goes off I'll get up and ring ye on a public telephone. But be sure and don't answer it, so I can get my nickel back." —Pacific Mutual News.

Some of the new houses have breakfast nooks that are ample in size, provided you have nothing more than coffee and a roll for breakfast. —Kansas City Star.

His landlady, hearing the unusual sounds, appeared at the bottom of the stairs and shouted: "Mr. Tam, what are daein'?"

"Oh," said the student, "I'm trying a new violin I've just bought."

"Great guidness!" said the woman. "I thought ye wis shiftin' the bed." —Epworth Herald.

Grandmother: "William, I wouldn't slide down that bannister."

William: "I know you wouldn't, grandmother."

She: "Your judgment is much better than mine."

He: "I'm so glad you think so, dear. Can you give an instance proving it?"

She: "Well, you see you married me."

INSTITUTIONAL FINANCING

is broadly discussed in

THE CHART BOOK

a new publication describing the most efficient methods of raising money for denominational, educational and other publicly supported institutions.

It will be sent on request without obligation

THE HEWITT COMPANY
TRIBUNE TOWER
CHICAGO

Insurance At Cost

SAVE 10% TO 30%

RE
LIGHTNING
TORNADO
WINDSTORM

AUTOMOBILE:
Fire and Theft
Public Liability
Property Damage
Collision

(assessments; easy payments. Same management (over 25 years) as the National Mutual Church Insurance Company. Address:

Mutual Insurance Corporation

Henry P. Magill, Manager.
South LaSalle Street Chicago, Ill.

NEED MONEY?

J. A. O. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can raise the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

Church Furniture

Pews • Pulpits • Chancel Furniture •
Sunday School Seating •

American Seating Company

Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1069 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE

Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.

DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

Peace-Making Not Peculiar to Baptists

(Continued from page 680)

duction of armaments in order to keep pace with changing conditions will receive wide-spread approval. In 1925 we spent on our army and navy more than twice the total budget of the year before we entered "the war to end war." In the peace-time armies of today there are five and a half million men. Twenty-two millions more are ready on demand. Competition in armaments holds a perpetual threat of war over the heads of anxious peoples. It has long been maintained that there can be no disarmament without established security but Prof. William I. Hull says we must now call attention to the other side of the proposition, namely, that there can be no real security without disarmament. This conference also unanimously declared war should be made a crime under the law of nations and that our membership in the World Court is one of the immediately practical steps in that direction. The League of Nations was recognized as the one world organization for peace, and gratitude was expressed for our cooperation in its great services in the field of humanitarian endeavor. And the "Call to the Churches" adds, "This country should study the ways and means by which we can share more effectively in the activities of the League of Nations for world peace." Under all the discussion of those two days lay recognition of the fact that ultimately everything depends upon the goodwill of the peoples of the earth. We must cease to covet our neighbor's goods. And as President Judson said, "We must know more about our neighbors. Ignorance is the mother of prejudice." As Dr. Lynn Harold Hough put it, "Each of us should know the other man's assumptions when listening to his statements. We must know what the other man means by his phrases." He advised all to read the Unity series issued by the Oxford Press and edited by Prof. F. S. Marvin.

Confronting the present critical situation, we must keep alive in the public mind our substantial reasons for encouragement. There are more friends of peace today than ever before. Unprecedented things have been accomplished. For the first time in history, the Washington Disarmament Conference accepted the principle of a ratio. That had always been declared impossible. We were saved over $3,000,000,000 by that conference. Cynical newspaper comment is sufficiently answered by the fact that our government has declared other participants have lived up to their agreements. Through cooperation of victor nations, a defeated country, Austria, has been set on its feet. Nothing like that ever happened before. We have seen armies actually recalled from the field after the firing had commenced. War between Bulgaria and Greece, a war that almost certainly would have become world-wide, was averted by the league. In many ways we are cooperating with the league now. We are filing all our treaties at Geneva. Our government is cooperating with all the commissions. We are represented on the labor bureau. We had excellent official representation on the commission that met recently to prepare for the proposed disarmament conference.

Perhaps most cheering of all is the common understanding now arrived at among American workers for peace. As Dean Shailer Mathews said, "It is not always easy for peace-makers to be peaceable." At Chicago there were gathered the Quaker and the man who believes it wise to keep one's powder dry against the day of attack; the advocate of outlawry and the man who will take any practical step forward, and yet agreement of the heartiest sort was reached on all the above important questions. Plans are well under way for a world congress of religions at Geneva to consider what contribution each can make to the betterment of international relations. "The emotional impetus of the incalculable sacrifice made by millions of men that war might be abolished is moving this generation to the recognition of an inexorable duty," said Prof. James T. Shotwell. The above is written to report that significant conference and incidentally to make clear the fact that happily we may say peace-making is not peculiar to Baptists.

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for July 11

CHILDHOOD AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

Lesson Text: Exod. 2:1-10. Acts 7:22
Golden Text: Prov. 22:6

The first of the early leaders of Israel is Moses. He is the outstanding man of the whole Old Testament. We shall accompany Moses through all the lessons of this quarter and over into the lessons of the next quarter. We begin with childhood and shall follow him to death on Mt. Nebo recorded in the lesson for Oct. 17.

Train Up a Child

The history of nearly all great men begins in a childhood protected and directed by the wisdom and character of parents who knew the value of early training for the children. Moses is no exception. His mother, daring to disobey the mandate of Pharaoh, made provision not only to save the child's life but to train him herself. The plan was simple and so obviously naive that one wonders how Pharaoh's daughter fell readily into the scheme of Miriam and her mother. Be that as it may, the mother had the rare privilege of nursing and nurturing her own son. When we read that Moses as a young man refused to become the son of Pharaoh's daughter choosing rather to suffer ill treatment with the people of God, we know what lies back of that momentous decision. There was a mother back of it and a cause worthy of the adventurous faith of Moses. Where did Moses get this defiance of Egypt? From whom came his dispatch in deciding to accept the reproach of his people accounting this reproach greater riches than the treasures of Egypt? From his mother. She was greater force in the world than Pharaoh. Pharaoh could destroy child life, but Jochebed could conserve and develop child life.

All tactics such as Pharaoh's with regard to children prove costly to the powers that indulge in them. When children are neglected or oppressed, any nation that nation must pay the penalty. The same is true of the church or the home. There is no substitute for children. They are the seed by which humanity is continued in unbroken sequence from generation to generation. And whatsoever we sow that also shall we reap. If we sow ignorance among the children we shall reap all that ignorance produces in the next generation. If we sow in the children prejudice, wars, industrial oppression and poverty we must expect to reap a crop of the same things later. The same law holds for goodwill, peace, justice and well-being. Back of the decalogue lay the disciplined childhood of Moses and antecedent to the exodus of Israel from Egypt was the creative genius and adventurous faith of a mother who instilled into her growing boy the high ideals of his people and confidence in his own destiny as a leader of men. We need mothers and more fathers who will take the home seriously and train up the children in the way they should go and that way themselves.

Memories of a loved one are most fittingly symbolized in the sweetly musical tones of

Deagan Tower Chimes
Played by Organist from Electric Keyboard

The Memorial Sublime

Through no other means can you confer on your church and community a greater beneficence. Beautiful memorial booklet on request.

Standard Sets $6000 and up

J. C. DEAGAN, Inc.
163 Deagan Bldg.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Van Duzen Bells
formerly Van Duzen & Telford

Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal Bells made of Copper and Tin. Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

The Hall Organ Company
West Haven, Conn.

High Grade Pipe Organs

Churches Masonic Halls Residences

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.

Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

New Books

Amamental Christianity, by Francis L. Patton. New York: Macmillan Co. $2.25.

The American Presbyterian church produced no man the equal of Francis L. Patton in logical acumen. In analytic power, in sustained and orderly thinking and in courage to follow his premises to their full logical conclusion as never been surpassed. He is and always has been an intelligent conservative in his religious faith, of the highest order, without rancor, without bitterness of denunciation toward those who differ from him, and with a very fine understanding of liberal thinking; yet he has been merciless in exposing the deficiencies, as he regards them, of those who forsake the old paths. This book is a good example of Doctor Patton's wit and ability as a Christian thinker. He is intensely loyal to Christ and to the Scriptures. Since the controversy over modernism started there has been no fair discussion at once so scholarly and temperate and so keenly logical in support of the older views of Christianity. It is critical but constructive and faithful in its spirit. And it holds one in a tremendous grip. Even a modernist can read it with great appreciation of the high order of the thinking and the warm Christian spirit which pervades every page. It is a wholesome book. One can read it and still be Christian in his feelings.

—H. L. STETSON.

Progressive Christian Endeavor, by Amos Wells. United Society of Christian Endeavor Press. 1925.

This book is a comprehensive study of the methods of Christian Endeavor—how it builds to meet the needs of youth. It is to develop young people in responsibility, character and self-expression by having them do things themselves, that result in these qualities. Adult advice, not direction and control, is its policy. In chapter XXX, "The Relation of Christian Endeavor to the Sunday School," the author discusses the charge of Religious Educators that there is duplication and overlapping of effort between the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Societies, in these plain words: "This is almost wholly an imaginary problem, a difficulty made 'out of whole cloth,' in order that under cover of it Christian Endeavor may be destroyed and the church school become 'the whole thing.'"

Although written in concise and untechnical language, this book is monotonous reading because it is a series of questions and answers, two or three questions and answers for every page. That it is fine for a study group, but the book is longer than the average group of young people will wade through. Another bit of the author's style is to state as realities, things that are ideals: on page 80 is a good case of this: "All the wisdom they need is the good sense to obtain sound advice from their elders and follow it; this the Endeavorers do, especially by consulting pastors, society counsellors, and pastoral counsellors of the unions."

BABY COUGARS BEING RAISED ON THE BOTTLE

(Copyrighted by the Abingdom Press from "Animal Tales of the Rockies," by Albert B. Cunningham.)

HERBERT W. HINES.

Introduction to the Textual Criticism of the New Testament, A. T. Robertson. New York: Doran. $2.50 net.

Well-informed readers will anticipate the statement that anything from the mind and hand of Professor Robertson is scholarly and thorough. But there is something more to be said. One is surprised at the range and accuracy of detail and at the sureness and simplicity of the affirmations of fact throughout. For example, it would be an interesting adventure in scholarly companionship for any whose training fits them for such discipline to try to read the chapter on "The Use of Tischendorf." Nothing seems to escape attention or to be misplaced or mistaken in value. It is no wonder that the author complains of the lack among students of adequate college preparation for thorough and accurate study of the New Testament text. He laments: "There is no language which a modern scholar may be assumed to know, not even always his own. Many ministers today study neither Greek nor Latin in college, but take up Greek at the theological seminary. These come to the use of Tischendorf with the door shut in the face." As if this complaint were not sufficient humiliation for the man of ordinary attainment, Professor Robertson follows it up by giving a classified table of 4083 known Greek manuscripts of the New Testament, and confessing that even among the masters, "Obviously it is not possible for any one to claim intimate knowledge of this vast collection." But an adequate treatment of the book would require pages in a theological journal. All that can be attempted here is for one who recognizes such mastery of religious scholarship to send to one has achieved it a salute of honor.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

REV. L. B. FORD and wife of the Woodlawn church, Pittsburgh, Pa., after being sent to Washington convention by their church, returned to find the parsonage fully equipped with new shades. The church is operating a summer camp where twenty-six girls and over forty boys will be given vacations during the summer.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

Denison University For Men and Women

Nearly a century ago far-sighted men of faith laid the foundations of Denison. The outstanding purpose then was to furnish a thorough college course under distinctively Christian auspices. That purpose marks the character of this Christian college today.

Leaders for Tomorrow

have all the advantages of preparatory work in Deane Academy, complete musical training in the conservatory and a comprehensive college curriculum. Well regulated student activities. Moderate expenses. Wholesome campus life.

For information address

Secretary Clarence M. Eddy
Granville, Ohio.

Carleton College

Donald John Cowling, D.D., President

OFFERS exceptional training in music, the sciences, forensics, pedagogics, physical education, and art.

Its faculty carries on the noble traditions of its founders.

Its student body lives the democracy of the Middle West.

Its alumni excel in the professions and in Christian service.

Address: Willard W. Bartlett, Assistant to the President, Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota

COOK ACADEMY

Fifty-third year. Prepares boys for college or business careers. Graduates are successful in leading colleges. In Finger Lake region with splendid health record. All body-building athletics. Christian influences and training. Music advantages. For catalog, address
The Principal, Box B, Montour Falls, N. Y.

The Shortest Path to Leadership Lies Through the College

LINFIELD COLLEGE
The Baptist College of the Pacific Northwest
STANDARD COURSES AND DEGREES
For Catalog and Bulletins write to
PRESIDENT LEONARD W. RILEY,
McMINNVILLE, OREGON
In the Choice of a College Often Lies the Destiny of Life

THE PEDDIE SCHOOL FOR BOYS

A contribution of Baptists to the cause of Christian Education.
Splendid equipment, strong faculty, democratic spirit, Christian atmosphere.
Emphasis on preparation for college and the development of a well-rounded manhood.
Catalog and booklets on request. Address
R. W. Swetland, Headmaster, Box B-E,
Hightstown, N. J.

Frances Shimer School

For Girls and Young Women. 2 years College, 4 years Academy. Music, Art, Home Economics. Outdoor sports. 10 Buildings. New $40,000 library. Campus 25 acres. 74th year. Term opens September 8, 1926. For catalog address

WM. P. McKEE, A.M., B.D., President
Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study. Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write
President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D.
1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

Our Schools and Colleges

Gordon

A Graduate School of Theology and Missions, of high scholastic standards and evangelical loyalty. Degree of B.D. Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of 4 years, college standards, broad curriculum. Degree of Th.B.

NATHAN E. WOOD, President
Gordon College of Theology and Missions, Boston, Mass.

(Continued from page 697)

DR. W. C. BITTING of St. Louis, Mo., corresponding secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention from its organization, gave the address on June 14 before the Chicago ministers' meeting.

DR. JOHNSTON MYERS on June 27 turns another milestone with the Immanuel church of Chicago, having served it without any break for thirty-one years.

REV. ASA E. REYNOLDS died in Winter Hill, Mass., on May 21. He was eighty-six years of age and had lived some time in Chicago when Mrs. Reynolds was superintendent of the Missionary Training school.

PERHAPS NO ACTION of the Northern Baptist Convention was so widely advertised in local church bulletins as the one at Washington which defines the constituency of that body. From Maine to California that resolution appeared in hundreds of different bulletins.

THE OTTAWA UNIVERSITY male quartet, Herschel McKinney, Albin Dahlquist, Don Smith and Harlan Smith, will spend from June 6 to August 15 in a tour of Kansas and Colorado. They will travel by auto and will go as far west as Grand Junction.

REV. LEWIS L. HUTCHINSON of Reading, Pa., of the '26 class of Rochester Theological seminary, has been called to become assistant pastor of the First church, Terre Haute, Ind., to begin not later than July 8.

THE FORTY-NINTH annual commencement of Pillsbury academy was held at Owatonna, Minn., June 2-8. Dr. John G. Briggs of St. Paul, president of the board, awarded diplomas to seventeen. The baccalaureate sermon was by Dr. Ingraham Bill of Rochester, Minn. Dr. Milo B. Price is in the twenty-third year of his presidency and he and Mrs. Price are held in highest esteem.

IN SIX AND ONE-HALF YEARS of service on the chapel car "Grace," Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Blinzinger have led in the erection of eight church edifices costing in all about $80,000. Six of these are in Colorado, one in Nevada and one in California.

Ottawa University

(Founded 1865)

Ottawa, Kansas

Member of Association of American Colleges. Member of North Central Association.

Colleges	Degrees
Arts	A.B.
Sciences	Sc.B.
Music	Mus.B.

Assets over $1,000,000.00.

Campaign now on for $800,000.00.

Summer School opens June 3, 1926.

For catalogue, photo bulletin, and other information write

President Erdmann Smith, A.M., LL.D.
Box BB, Ottawa, Kansas

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

Emory W. Hunt, D.D., LL.D., President
THE COLLEGE

Awards the degrees of B. A., of B. S., in Biology, Education, Chemical, Civil, Electrical and Mechanical Engineering, after four years of work.

THE SCHOOL OF MUSIC

affords instruction in Piano, Pipe Organ, Violoncello, Voice Culture and Singing, Wind Instrument History of Music, Public School Music, etc. will apply Christian ideals in every department of human endeavor.

For catalogue and information, address

H. Walter Holter, Registrar,
Lewisburg, Pa.

mony, Composition, Theory, Vergil Clavier.
Bucknell aims to develop men and women with

Parker School for Girls

"Prepares Girls for College and for Life"

UNDER BAPTIST AUSPICES

Thorough preparation for all female colleges. High grade curriculum; careful discipline; Christian atmosphere.

Winnebago, Minnesota

COLORADO WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Two years of Liberal Arts, Home Economics, Art, Expression, Piano, Organ, Violin, and Voice. For information write to

ROBERT H. LYNN,
Acting President

Capitol Hill Station Denver, Colorado

Keuka College, Keuka Park, N. Y.

Standard courses and degrees. Christian institution with a home atmosphere. Beautifully situated on Lake Keuka, four miles by trolley from Penn Yan. Small classes personal attention to the complete development of the student. Board, room, and tuition $530 per year. New buildings, able faculty. Special attention given to training young women for Christian service. Keuka needs a million dollars for endowment.

A. H. NORTON, President

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Tuition and room-rent free. Scholarships available to approved students. Seminary within 13 miles of Philadelphia. Seminary's relations to University of Pennsylvania warrant offer of the following courses:

1. REGULAR COURSES FOR PREACHERS AND PASTORS. Seminary Degree of B. D. or Diplomas.
2. TRAINING FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE. Seminary and University. Degrees of B. D. and A. M.
3. TRAINING FOR ADVANCED SCHOLARSHIP. Seminary and University. Degree of Th. M. at Seminary, and Ph. D. at University.

For information address REV. MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., President, Chester, Pa.

84P
Volume VII

July 10, 1926

No. 23

III
Library
of the University of Illinois
Library
The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

—Courtesy of The Boston Transcript

White Birches Reflected in a Roadside Mirror

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Rev. J. M. Artman, for seven years professor of religious education at the University of Chicago, has resigned from the university to become general secretary of the Religious Education association. With his coming as general secretary, Dr. L. T. Hites, who for the past year has been serving in the dual capacity of editorial secretary and acting secretary, will devote all of his energies to the editorial work of the association.

Lay preachers will be emerging from the Baptist men's movement when it gets fairly to going. They will be interested to know that the Lay Preachers' Federation of the Baptist Union of Great Britain has issued a pamphlet entitled "For Lay Preachers." It may be had from the Kingsgate Press, 4 Southampton Row, London, W. C. I. It is worth all it costs and much more to preachers, whether lay or "in orders," who have not had systematic homiletic training. Its price is fourpence.

The Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland held its annual meeting at Leeds in May. The strike then in progress interfered seriously with the program. The two features of special interest to American Baptists were the address of Pres. J. H. Rushbrooke interpreting the present position of the Baptists, and the reply of the union to the Lambeth Appeal, showing why it is not possible for Baptists to enter into such union as the bishops propose. Both of these papers will be given whole or in part to the readers of THE BAPTIST.

Shurtleff college, Alton, Ill., closed its 99th year June 17 with concluding commencement exercises at which twenty-eight seniors received bachelors' degrees. Howard C. Tilton, professor of political science at Redlands university, and Dr. Myron W. Haynes of McMinnville, Ore., campaign director of the college, were awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Doctor Haynes was thus honored in recognition of his work in pulling through the great endowment drive which with the General Education Board gift of $133,000 will result in an addition of $400,000 to the endowment. It was announced at commencement that less than $10,000 remained to be raised by July 1, with every prospect of success. Four days after commencement, Shurtleff college opened its second annual summer school, June 21. With an attendance greater than that during the initial session in 1925, the second term is expected to be even more successful than was the first. About eighty students, many of them teachers, are enrolled for the session which lasts until July 30, closing in time for the summer Baptist assembly at Shurtleff to open the following Monday.

Lovers of humanity all over the world will rejoice at the following announcement from India: "The government of India, with the concurrence of the secretary of state, has decided to fix ten years as the period within which the export of opium from India will be progressively and finally extinguished. 10 per cent reduction will be effected in 1927 and the last export will take place in 1935. During this period exports will be by direct sale to the government of importing countries. The sale of opium by public auction at Calcutta has ceased since Apr. 7, 1926."

Since the death of Dr. Samuel J. Batten the social education division has secured Rev. John W. Elliott for director and has adopted the following items of policy: to maintain all existing contacts with interdenominational and non-denominational organization; to promote social education through assemblies, institutes, rallies, organized Bible classes, and brief articles in publications; the organization of adult classes and the promotion of worthwhile programs for them; the affiliation of all organized classes of men with the Baptist Brotherhood Federation, and the organization of local brotherhoods in communities; to specialize on a few major fields of social education, among those suggested being recreational activities of young people, respect for law, temperance, family, and home. How far this policy contemplates the interpretation of Christianity for the larger human relations, political, industrial, racial and international, is not yet announced.

Rev. David Bovington, D.D., president of Brandon college, has resigned. During the past year he was particularly busy in a successful campaign to raise the fund required to meet a conditional bequest. Notwithstanding its successful completion, the future needs of the college for maintenance and expansion will continue to make the same heavy demands upon the time and strength of its chief executive. Feeling that his strength was not equal to this heavy demand, Doctor Bovington deemed it wise to tender his resignation. He has won for himself a host of good friends in western Canada.

In an article urging parents to send their children to schools of a distinctly religious influence and to have in mind the facilities of the institution for building character as well as for producing a high grade of scholastic attainment, the Christian Statesman calls attention to the value of denominational colleges, and makes a plea for their support. In the same connection encouraging figures are given, indicating that in colleges and universities generally Christianity has a much greater hold on the students than is usually supposed. For Chicago university the figures are as follows: 93 per cent of the students are church members; three claim to be agnostics, and none claim to be atheists.

"We used to play bridge, but quit the game; not because of displays of temper, but on account of the postmortems held over every hand after it had been played, and the discussions of the demerits of plays. That appears to be a part of bridge education. Unless one can be keenly interested in all those debates, and able to argue scientifically all the points raised, he is unfit for the round table of bridge. We were so palpably deficient that we quit the game, and nobody was grieved because we did that." —Chicago Journal of Commerce.

That missionary effort on the foreign field is taking advantage of the best scientific methods is observed again and again in accounts of medical missions. But educational missionaries have fallen in line with the same spirit and are adopting the latest methods. In the Baptist Missionary Review a plea is made by Mrs. W. C. Owen for psychological tests in the mission schools. These tests if used in the mission schools will enable the teachers to eliminate waste by placing the child in the kind of course that will enable him to develop his capacities to the greatest extent without the years of time and energy often wasted in trying to adjust children to courses in which they do not fit or by which they have no ability to profit.

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	702
EDITORIAL	705
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	707
THE CONTRIBUTION OF THE QUAKERS TO CHRISTIANITY, BY C. A. DANIEL.....	708
MEN AND CHURCH ATTENDANCE, BY WAYLAND ZWAYER.....	709
THE TREACHERY OF SURRENDER, BY T. WILKINSON RIDDLE	710
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—OIL IN RESERVE, BY F. W. NORWOOD ..	711
CHIMNEY CORNER	712
BOYS AND GIRLS	713
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	714
CHURCHES AT WORK	715
AMONG OURSELVES	716
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	722

A telegram dated July 3 reads: "Shurtleff college campaign to meet the offer of the General Education Board of New York triumphantly completed. This adds $400,000 to the endowment fund of the college.—Geo. M. Potter." Congratulations to Shurtleff.

Slave trading and slave markets still exist in nineteen different districts of Europe, Asia and Africa, according to a report of the Temporary Slavery Commission of the League of Nations, appointed in 1924. Debt slavery and forced labor verging on slavery were said to be prevalent in many parts of the world. Following this report of the commission, the league passed a draft convention designed to correct these conditions, and forwarded it to all governments, whether members of the league or not.

On the question of naval disarmament the Baptist Times of London talks to the British people in straight terms. It says of the results of the Washington conference: "That conference nominally regulated the strength of the navies of the United States, Britain, France, Italy, and Japan. In actual fact, it has done nothing of the kind. All the nations, with the exception of America, have embarked on large programs of new naval construction. Since 1921 America has laid down only two cruisers, whereas Britain has laid down 11, Japan 12, France 6, and Italy 2, in addition to large numbers of destroyers, submarines, and other craft. The consequence is that the American navy is becoming relatively very weak. If the competition in armaments is renewed, it is we who will be chiefly to blame."

In the missionary sermon preached at the Grand Island college commencement, Dr. John A. Foote said: "Our missionary task is not complete. An erroneous idea is abroad that foreign missionary work can now be carried on without the aid from the homeland. This is untrue. Our task, while it has met with splendid success, is not completed, and it would be tragic to leave the work at a time when it is so encouraging. The fields are white unto harvest and the laborers are few. I am speaking the mind not only of the missionary, but of the native Christians of the Orient. A Chinese student leader says, 'You will misjudge the situation if you think your missionary effort has almost come to an end. Why, the work is at its very beginning. We are needing missionaries today perhaps more than ever before.' There never was a time when the opportunity was so great, nor the active cooperation of Christians here and abroad so possible as now. The Macedonian call is from Christians abroad. They feel and know the need of their own countries more keenly than we; they also know what we can do and will direct us. It is not a time for slackening our endeavors. The dayspring is at hand." Before the close of the commencement events, Doctor Foote was presented with purse of $50 by the Y. W. C. A., to be used in his missionary activities.

The Publication Society's LATEST BOOKS

Forest Friends

By H. R. Evans

Stories of animals, birds, and fish west of the Rockies. The charm of this book is in its simple realism. Most of the stories are the direct outcome of what the writer himself has observed in the woods, beside the streams, and upon bay and river. For the rest he has drawn upon the experiences of friends with whom he was associated for six years in the mountain valleys of the Pacific Coast. A book for every one who loves the great out-of-doors. Fifteen full-page illustrations from original photographs. $1.50 net.

Pillars of Gold

By Mitchell Bronk

A collection of charming sketches of Christian people, places, and experiences. Here is variety—from the home of Francis of Assisi to Jacob Stainer and his violins from an ox-cart on the way to a New England meeting-house to Rheims cathedral. $1.50 net.

Baptist City Planning

By Charles H. Sears

A constructive contribution to the denomination's task in the large cities. $1.00 net.

The Playtime Guide Book

By Frederick K. Brown

The author aims to present a practical graded course in play such as will help church workers to forestall the evils of wrong methods of recreation and capture the play spirit for God. Nearly one hundred games are described. $1.50 net.

The Brightening Cloud

By Russell H. Conwell

An interesting study of the Ninth chapter of John, written in Dr. Conwell's most charming style. $1.00 net.

The Second Century of Baptist Foreign Missions

By William B. Lippard

A careful comprehensive survey of the development of Baptist foreign missions from 1914 to 1925 by one who is qualified to speak with authority. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents, net.

The Baptist Family in Foreign Mission Fields

By Nellie G. Prescott

The different phases of foreign mission work are charmingly set forth in the form of a series of interesting letters. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents, net.

Early Baptist Missionaries and Pioneers

By W. S. Stewart

(Volume I and II)

In the series of which this is the second volume, Doctor Stewart has made available brief accounts of men and women who have been prominent in mission work at home and abroad, but whose stories must often be sought out with difficulty. Two volume, each, $1.50 net.

With Christ in Assam

By E. Elizabeth Vickland

Miss Vickland's chapters will enable the reader to gain a more penetrating understanding of the spirit and the results of that which Christian missions are seeking to bring to pass among India's masses. Illustrated. $1.50 net.

All books reviewed, mentioned or advertised in "The Baptist" can be secured from our nearest house. Send for Catalogs of Books, Church and Sunday School Supplies.

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA

16 Ashburton Place, Boston
125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago
313 W. Third Street, Los Angeles

1107 McGee Street, Kansas City
439 Burke Building, Seattle
223 Church Street, Toronto

The 238th anniversary of the old Pennypack church in the thirty-fifth ward of the City of Brotherly Love, the Sesqui-centennial city, on the banks of the creek whose name it bears, was celebrated on Sunday, June 6, with both morning and afternoon services. In this year, marking the great national birthday, there could hardly be a more marked historic and sacred spot than that of the old church site. Before the eminent fathers framed the document that declared us a national entity and Liberty bell "pro-

Of American merchant ships, 1068, with a tonnage of 5,600,000, are privately owned, and 1062, with a tonnage of 5,506,670, are owned by the government. As fast as possible the government is disposing of its merchant fleet, and in the meantime it is using the government vessels as hacks for use in such trade as may not be provided for by private agencies. Under such circumstances the papers will probably soon be pointing out the failure of government ownership in the American merchant marine.

claimed liberty throughout the land," our Baptist fore-fathers were struggling with the problems of a free church in a free land, and here laid foundations deep and strong for evangelical Christianity, as well as asserting their allegiance to democratic principles in government.

Is there a new ethical movement in the field of corporate business? THE BAPTIST has insisted that there ought to be and is such a movement, that it ought to be encouraged and that it ought to be carried through to its utmost implications. Confirmation appears in an interesting quarter. The Employers' News carries on its first page the following editorial comment: Those who have studied the history of American industrial development know that a new order of human relations has come into being and the employer who adheres to a policy of exploitation suffers more in the long run than those he employs. The employer is no longer a dictator containing within himself the power to control the destinies of those employed by him. Public opinion and the complexities of modern industry have brought him into a co-partnership with his work people, and the line of demarcation between his interests and theirs has become so fine as to be almost indistinguishable. Undoubtedly there are employers who are not yet in step with the new order of industrial relations. We hold no brief for these. They must get in line with the inexorable order of the day or be run over.

Last year was a record year for baptisms in the British India field. South India reported 6700 baptisms compared with 5725 for the preceding year. The Burma Chinese border near Mong Lem and Mong Mong reported 4629 baptisms. Similar reports come from the hills which form the border-country of the two fields of Assam and Burma. No country could be found with a wilder and, to outward appearances, more unpromising and rocky soil for the sowing of the gospel, and yet from those fields come glorious accounts of evangelistic achievement.

During the summer Pres. John M. Wells of Grand Island college, Nebraska, plans to fill engagements both in Nebraska and in the East. During the first ten days of July he is one of the speakers at the conference on religious education to be held at Columbiana, Lake George. He is to return to Nebraska the last part of July and will preach in the Calvary church of Omaha, on Aug. 1, and on Aug. 8 he is to give the "Decision Day" address to the boys at Camp Sheldon. During the assembly of the Grand Island college Aug. 9-17, he is to give a course of lectures entitled "Fundamental Questions." In this course he will deal with seven subjects: "What is Truth?", "How do I know?", "What is of Value?", "What is a Person?", "Has the World a Purpose?", "What is the Value of Religion?", and "How Can Science Help Christianity?" On Sunday, Aug. 22 he is to preach in the First church of Omaha.

The Baptist World Pulpit

WHAT?

The greatest series of sermons ever printed in THE BAPTIST. Fifteen or more sermonic masterpieces. The Christian Faith and Way of Life presented positively and eloquently.

WHY?

To give the readers of THE BAPTIST a resume of the choicest new sermon literature by the most loved and trusted ministers in the Baptist World Fellowship. To deepen the sense of world brotherhood and to exalt Christ the Saviour in this year of evangelistic effort.

WHEN?

Beginning early in the autumn of 1926 and appearing about twice a month through the series until Easter.

By WHOM?

Outstanding ministers in Canada, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, France, Sweden, Russia, Australia, India, China, Japan and one each from the great Conventions of the United States.

WHERE?

In THE BAPTIST! The great living preachers brought to your home for inspiration and uplift. Part of THE BAPTIST service. Watch for further announcement with list of preachers.

"THE BAPTIST WORLD PULPIT" will be worth five times the cost of an annual subscription. Renew your own and encourage others to subscribe at once in order to get the unbroken series. Get up a club in your church and save 50c on each annual subscription.

Single Subscription, $2.50 per year. In 10% clubs, $2.00 per year. THE BAPTIST and Missions, $3.00. Trial Subscriptions, Six Months, $1.00

Your Own Paper—

THE BAPTIST
—Your Own Paper

2320 South Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Clear This Ground for the Gospel

IF the churches of the Northern Baptist Convention are to make the most of a great evangelistic campaign next fall it will be necessary to clear the field of all possible controversial debris. One of the things to be done in this is to clarify our elementary thinking about science, philosophy and religion, so that our people may not be confused by apparent conflicts among these subjects. People need the simple gospel. They need to receive it intelligently, so that there may be no lurking questions in their minds about the possibility of being mistaken. They ought to see clearly how it hitches up with science, so that when questions of the scientific method arise they may have a feeling of comfortable assurance and shall not be under the necessity of meeting scientific inquiry with a shrinking suspicion or an artificially brave front of defiance. Our evangelism in order to be victorious everywhere must have the simplicity that renders it transparently true all the way from the tubroom of the laundry to the observation tower of the astronomer.

For the purpose of simplicity then, but also for the purpose of accuracy, science is the quest for actual facts, philosophy is the quest for true reasons, and religion is the quest for the best life. One of them cannot be followed out completely without running into the other two. Every one of them requires for its completeness all that the other two can give. The difference is that the first two derive their value from the third. A man may say that he pursues science for its own sake, but if his science either intends nor contributes any good to anybody what is it worth? He may find great interest in speculations about epistemology and about the principles of reality, but if those speculations contribute nothing to make human life better, happier or more reasonable, how are we to discover any value in them? That is, science and philosophy get no answer to their quest which is clearly worth getting until they get it in terms of religion.

It is interesting and apparently significant that in the successive stages of human life in its natural growth the religious quest normally awakens earlier than that of either science or philosophy. Youth is the period of special religious susceptibility. Faith assumes early and easily both God and ideal personality and evaluates both in terms of human experience. The rational pursuit of knowledge which normally awakens at a later stage accepts a universe, which also must be evaluated in terms of human experience, because no other terms are available. That is, science and philosophy proceed exactly as religion does upon a faith that awakens in youth and first awakens in the form of the religious quest. Consequently human nature in the very process of its growth warrants us in setting forth the ideal of the best life for acceptance by faith and for pursuit through all subsequent ranges of inquiry.

Where does Jesus come into the scheme? In him are assembled and revealed all of the perfections, the purposes and the potencies which we are able to idealize into life and personality. Critical investigations about him, no matter what may be the creedal conclusions to which they lead, are beside the mark. On any hypothesis there he stands as the New Testament portrays him. For present purposes it is enough for us to do all that persons untaught in the way of critical processes can do in order to determine their attitude towards him, that is, just look at the portrait. Men may criticize the story but they can never obliterate the portrait. To become acquainted with him merely by his portrait in the story is to have two things occur in one's personal experience. One is a perception of the self-evident fitness of his life and personality, ideally considered, as the foundation on which to build a character, a destiny, a society or a universe. The other is the awakening of a persuasive faith that he is the ideal answer to the religious quest and that he is realizable in personal experience. Conversion then becomes a scientific experiment. Give a life a fair exposure to his spirit and observe what takes place in experience. It is discovered that into that life are pouring the living, saving, regenerating, creative currents of his personality. It is becoming impossible to think him anything less than that he is the ever-living personal, spiritual, social, cosmic, transcendent, revelation of God, manifest in Jesus the divine Christ. He has brought to birth in personal experience a new term of expression for God. He cannot be conceived nor named apart from God. He is God humanly objectified. And it stands out clearly that henceforth all true science and philosophy must take their meaning and value from the personal worth which is found in him and is being reproduced in the believer's personal experience.

A full inventory of the values of this experience is impossible. But some of the most obvious values are faith, hope and love; a whole range of Christ-born motives; rapturous goodwill, social idealism and unselfish passion to serve the welfare of others; a clear rationalizing of the universe on the basis of personal values, as a good place for the right kind of persons to inhabit; the discovery of cosmic and sacred meaning in every fact of nature; the sense of communion with a perfectly worshipful God; the assurance of ultimate good, of triumphant right, of a fundamental harmony of moral adjustment in one's own life, and of personal immortality.

That experience in the realm of personal values is a fact. Science may investigate it with the utmost freedom but cannot deny it. Philosophy may try to rationalize it but cannot ignore it nor explain it away. Both must relate their processes to it. It grows in the common walks of life as freely as the goldenrod in autumn. It is a rich product of the order of things. It is a key fact, interpretative of the universe and compelling as sunrise. There is not a single nook or corner in the whole field of religion in which men are not perfectly free and God-invited to observe, to test, to rationalize, to form hypotheses, to criticize and to draw the most precise conclusions of logic; but the very life of science depends upon its recognizing this fact and adjusting to it the methods and conclusions of scientific inquiry. On the other hand, religious experience cannot realize its full values except as it is checked up, clarified and interpreted in the light of all the information that can be gleaned from the fields of scholarly research. "If the gospel be hid it is hid to them that are lost" somewhere in the wilderness of either ignorance or partial and misdirected inquiry.

Consequently our evangelism cannot accept from the schools a substitute for the gospel, nor shun the schools as a suspicious and alien area, nor set up emotional heat in the place of spiritual light. Evangelism must be directed towards the attainment of a genuine and sound Christian experience, towards clarifying that experience by all possible intelligent inquiry and towards giving to that experience its full personal and social expression. Such an evangelism will be not only clearly interpretative of God and the universe, but it will be both redemptive and creative wherever it touches human life. Let the Baptist denomination strip itself of all secondary luggage and prepare to run with winged feet as the messenger of such a gospel.

As We See It

THE consciousness of solidarity and the desire for better and fuller cooperation called THE BAPTIST into being. It is now in its seventh year. It is related for purposes of administration to the Board of Missionary Cooperation. THE BAPTIST has a very definite policy. It aims to reflect the life of the entire denomination and to give expression to its faith, principles, organized activities and general policies. Each annual volume seeks faithfully to reflect the life of our people in personal experience, church organization, evangelistic effort, social experiment, educational endeavors and world vision. Its annual survey number seeks to concrete in a single issue the planet-wide sweep of service to human kind.

THE BAPTIST conceives its primary duty to be the reflecting of our whole group life and the supporting of a united program of Christ-like service to mankind. It is non-sectional and non-partisan. Its columns are open alike to every type among us to give expression to vital Christian faith. In a great world-wide fellowship of one and a half millions of Northern Baptists are men of many minds. THE BAPTIST recognizes them all as brethren beloved partners in a common participation in the deathless life of Christ our Saviour, and seeks to serve them all in the same fraternal and inclusive policy that has built up our communion through the years. That which stimulates and cements us together as one body in Christ is always welcome copy. Our aim is to promote the unification of Baptists on the basis of the historic principles of the Baptist movement and in a cooperative fellowship to carry out our united program of service.

THE BAPTIST stands for the faith of our fathers and gives allegiance to all the truth tested by past experience. It sympathizes with the yearnings and restlessness of youth. It venerates no formula because it is old and fears no statement of truth because it is new. It accepts the fact that the present is dynamic with the Spirit of the living God. It believes that the God who spake to our fathers in ages past has not become silent, and that the living word will come to our children when formulas no longer precious are forgotten and when institutions now dear to us shall have crumbled into dust.

We conceive it to be our supreme task to promulgate the basic principles of New Testament evangelicalism—the inner awareness of God through personal faith in the eternal Christ. In a day like this when spiritual religion is menaced on the one side by rationalism and materialism and on the other by the perpetual recrudescence of legalism, dogmatism, ritualistic paganism and priestly autocracy, we dedicate THE BAPTIST to the exaltation of the gospel of the Son of God which is still the power of God unto personal salvation, to social reconstruction and to international goodwill in which alone the kingdom of heaven can come.

THE BAPTIST reaches all northern state convention areas, Canada, every southern state, most of the countries of Europe and all of our distant home and foreign mission fields. It seeks to promote unity and to inspire a united people to larger and more sacrificial service. "With malice toward none and with charity toward all" it works to bind all our scattered folk into one harmonious body in Christ. To make the paper a bond of fellowship, a herald of personal spiritual freedom and of Christian democracy on whose pages we may truthfully inscribe the beautiful Chinese Christian slogan: "Agreed to differ, resolved to love, united to serve," is the laudable aim of THE BAPTIST.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

And Such a Thing as This Writes Polite Courtesy

If the following information is at fault, the heading is withdrawn. But listen. The Mexican government expelled Monsignor Caruana, papal delegate to Porto Rico and the West Indies. Why? The Mexican consul general in New York states officially and exhibits confirmatory documents to prove that when Msgr. Caruana, an Italian, entered Mexico last March to make an investigation as a personal representative of the pope, he gave to the immigration authorities the information that he was a teacher, traveling in Mexico as a tourist, that he spoke no language but English and that he was a Protestant. And now he poses in the United States as a priest of the church suffering persecution in the holy cause of religion.

Wanted—a Heart-Moving Ministry Without a Mind

Maybe the Chicago Journal of Commerce was trying to say something else, but this is what is said: "Ministers of God, please do not come to us with messages to the mind regarding practical measures; come to us with messages to the heart. If with tenderness and with passionate belief you speak to our consciences, you will have done your duty, and you need have no fear as to the records that we shall do in our capacity as citizens." A gain of truth hides here in a bushel of sophistry. Motive is fundamental, of course, and religion that ignores it fails. But how are we to speak to conscience without teaching something about right and wrong? Conscience deals with duty. It waits to hear what the mind says that duty is. How can we reach the heart except through messages to the mind regarding conduct? The message that is worth most to the heart is the message that knows and shows the Christian way of living. The only way the minister has of knowing whether he has reached the heart is by seeing how men act. The real trouble lies in the fact that a minister who makes people think raises in certain quarters uncomfortable questions.

The Crown Sits Askew On Mussolini's Head

Of all the jokes of this farcical epoch, Mussolini is one of the hugest. He seized power and reinstated "big business," whereat all Mammonia shouted and proclaimed him loses Mussolini. Now he announces a new system of government. What is it? Mirabile! it is syndicalism! and it is so organized that in the lawmaking body organized labor shall always have at least equal representation and power with capital. It is not strange that John Clayton writes: "The big industrialists of the nation, who have supported him since his advent to power, are beginning to fear him and his theories." Frankenstein, safely directed to the terror of one's enemies, is all praise-worthy; but Frankenstein loose in the woods is another matter.

Ye Would not be Ungracious That This Cannot Go Unchallenged

Everybody has been trying to show the Eucharistic Congress and the visiting Catholics how hospitable the people of the United States can be. But Catholics know as well as anybody else the difference between self-respecting courtesy and effusive fawning. The thing in mind is the address of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis at the Coliseum in Chicago, June 18. In the presence of the assembled Catholic dignitaries he is reported to have said: "The members of your communion who settled in Maryland share with Roger Williams, the founder of Rhode Island and Providence plantations, in the honor of being the first American settlers to establish the principles of religious toleration." He may not be able to distinguish between the toleration which the Calverts permitted and the soul liberty which Williams proclaimed as a principle; but he may be sure that the prelates know the difference and appraise him accordingly. In America at least the Catholic church tolerates dissent as a grant to necessity. But where in the world do Baptists not defend religious liberty as a right?

Baptists Willing to Confer If Permitted to Speak

The Baptists of the British Isles have projected a problem into the proposed World Conference on Faith and Order. Secy. J. H. Rushbrooke of the Baptist World Alliance has given to the secretariat of the conference notice that the executive committee of the alliance is "unable to recommend to the Baptist unions and conventions of the world that they should participate in the World Conference on Faith and Order except under the condition that any statement that Baptist delegates might be impelled to draw up should have a definite place among any findings of the conference." Doctor Rushbrooke expresses the opinion that decisions taken by a majority, or any mere record of the "sense" of a conference, would involve unfairness to groups holding a distinctive position. In a Baptist assembly such a proviso would not be required. Free expression for record would be a matter of course. But the committee having the agenda of the conference in hand must take the suggestion under consideration. It is puzzled.

Sentimental Peace and Consequential War

Chancellor Seipel of Austria, also a prelate of the church, is authority for the following statement: "The real root of war is found in the peaceless hearts of men who love not peace." His word sounds so good. It is so true. It errs so far. It proves so futile. All of the peoples involved in the world war loved peace. They did not want war. They said that they were not responsible for the war. Every one shifted the blame to others. All said that they had done everything in their power to prevent war. Most of the peoples involved had been professed followers of the Prince of Peace for more than a thousand years. No, pacific piety is not enough. There must be statesmanlike removal of social maladjustments. Send the Quaker to Johns Hopkins university, the pacifist to a school of political science, the militarist to the mourner's bench.

America Rewards Men, Maybe, According to Their Deserts

Thirty years ago yellow fever was the scourge of tropical America. It carried off its victims by thousands. In 1900 a number of United States soldiers volunteered to expose themselves to the disease for the purpose of scientific experiment to discover the cause and means of prevention. The experiment was successful. Yellow fever is gone. But what of those men? Doctor Lazear contracted the disease and died. His widow receives a pension of $1500 a year. The fever left Private Kissinger paralyzed. He received a watch and $115. His wife supports him by taking in washing. Similar stories are told of the others. Compare these rewards with those of the contractors who sold to the army at that time the famous ration known as "embalmed beef."

The Contribution of the Quakers to Christianity

"O Spirit of that early day, so pure and strong and true!"

By C. A. DANIEL

THE doctrine of the "Inner light" is probably the most prominent feature in Quakerism. The ultimate authority with the Quaker was the "Inner light" or the "Christ within." With the Roman Catholic the ultimate authority is the church. The reformers refuted this idea and their great object was to draw the people away from the authority of the church to the authority of the scriptures. This principle was developed by the Lutherans. The Presbyterians and Independents carried it forward, but the Baptists were in advance of all others in their insistence on individual liberty of conscience. There is overwhelming evidence to prove that the "peculiar testimonies," which are generally understood to have originated with George Fox were anticipated and insisted upon by the General Baptists before the rise of Quakerism. Denna, the most powerful preacher among the Baptists, advocated the "Inner light" in "The Dragnet," a book published in 1646, before Fox had begun his public preaching. The points of contact between the early Baptists and the early Friends are indeed numerous. Dr. Norman Fox in his paper on the early Friends says: "The doctrines of the Friends were in many respects but a reproduction of Baptist doctrines and the early history of their society allies itself in many points with Baptist history." George Fox, born in 1624 in Drayton, England, began his ministry in 1645, was much persecuted and died in 1691. He founded the Society of Friends. He had an uncle named Pickering, who was a Baptist. Fox appears to have long and carefully studied the doctrine and discipline of the Baptists and his whole system of belief and practice was permeated by the ideas and customs of the General Baptists, together with those of the Mennonites and other Antipedo-Baptists of the continent. A shattered Baptist society at Mansfield, England, in 1648, first supplied Fox with congenial religious fellowship and under his leadership developed into the earliest Quaker congregation.

The Inner Light

Fox evidently opened his mind and heart to the intuitions and influences of the Spirit, listened to the Christ within and emphasized the "Inner light." It is not as some would have us believe simply the sane cool judgment of the reason or good common sense. Fox had both and a large measure of Christ's Spirit within him. Nor did he and his contemporaries belittle the scriptures. They were willing that their doctrines and practices should be tried by the Bible and in controversies with their adversaries they never refused the scriptures as the judge and test. It is simplicity at which they aimed. Consider this exceedingly simple creed of William Penn: "The grace of God within me and the scripture without me are the foundation and declaration of any faith and religion." These were the firm convictions of the early Quakers. Subsequent history shows that the Quakers failed just along this line. Many went to the other extreme setting aside even baptism and the Lord's Supper in their insistence on the "Inner light." Some even fell into a sort of Pantheism under the leadership of Elias Hicks, an able and influential preacher. The Hicksite movement drew away some 30,000 people. But the doctrine of the inner light held by the early Friends is nothing more than the "Christ in us." We know that in preaching and teaching the gospel, whether it be at home among nominal Christians, or in foreign lands among the heathen and backward nations, there is a witness in every human heart, which corresponds to the gospel. That is the "Inner light." It is more than reason, it is the medium, in which the soul sees, it is the soul seeing in its own light. It is more than conscience, for conscience is a reaction against wrong or affirmation of the sanctity of the right, whereas the light is a revealer of truth.

The Friends stood firmly for experimental religion and insisted upon personal experience as a prerequisite to membership in the church. Though in later history preaching became of less importance this cannot be said of the early Friends. George Fox and his people were great preachers. He himself sometimes preached for three hours at a time. He organized a band of sixty traveling preachers. Conversions took place among all classes and by the hundreds and thousands they joined him until at his death in 1691 the society was supposed to have numbered 100,000 in Great Britain and Ireland. As with every movement of spiritual fervor and power, fanaticism and schism followed, causing a separation as early as the year 1675. But Fox was not a fanatic for he said, "Many have taken more pains to unsettle and disquiet the church than they have ever taken for the cause of Christian truth." This was true and has been true ever since in Christian churches.

Silent Meetings

We have heard much of silent meetings, quiet Quaker meetings. This explanation has been given and it has some weight: "It is well known that the Friends were subjected to the most cruel and bitter persecutions. During some portions of this time of persecution many of their eminent preachers were in prison and when all of their ministers were there, they met in entire silence." Friends were imprisoned for traveling on Sunday, for preaching in the streets and markets, for not paying tithes, for refusing to take oaths. "Millions in property was confiscated, but the Friends suffered heroically and exhibited such a spirit of gentleness and Christian fortitude in all persecutions, that even their bitterest opponents were appalled and overwhelmed."

The Quakers have ever been known as a peace-loving people. The establishment of the great commonwealth of Pennsylvania by William Penn by peaceful methods is typical. The Quakers advocated that all men are brothers, therefore they refused to take arms; they set their slaves free in this country before any other church organization did. Some of them even paid the freed slaves for every day's work done during the time of their service. They kissed the hangman who branded their foreheads and pierced their tongues; they witnessed the destruction of their property with quietude and then carried on their devotion upon the ruins. When they were driven away, they boldly and faithfully returned and delivered themselves to the authorities. They kept their word without an oath, honest in their daily conduct, in business, in industry, and in trade. They despised crookedness in life and in business. They stood for quality in goods and they awakened confidence among people everywhere in their community. The manufactured products of the Quaker were sought everywhere.

Carlyle said of the Quakers: "There is in broad Europe one free man, George Fox, the greatest of the moderns. He looks heavenward from his earth and dwells in an element of mercy and worship." The Pall Mall Gazette had this to say of George Fox: "Of four great characters of the seventeenth century Cromwell, Milton, Bunyan and Fox, the last named has had the greatest influence upon the world and has been the least recognized."

Men and Church Attendance

The Results of a Questionnaire

BY WAYLAND ZWAYER

CLARION, Pennsylvania, is a typical American community, the largest town in its county, the seat of state normal school. It has a few industries but is largely residential; has few foreigners; has the usual number of churches. The following questionnaire was mailed to about 500 men and 209 replies were received: Are you a church member? How often do you attend church? Why is it, in your opinion, that so many men do not go to church? Why do you go to church? (or, why do you not go to church?) Since so many men do not attend church services, what would you suggest that the churches and pastors do to correct the situation?

The results of this questionnaire are presented as a study of the attitude of the men toward the church in the typical small community distant from the city. In all the replies, the automobile is mentioned but twice. The radio and "business" are excuses given only once each. There is something in the tone of the replies from those who are not church members and never or seldom go inside a church that reminds one of the prayer of the publican: "God be merciful to me a sinner." Carelessness, thoughtlessness, laziness: these are the words used by sixteen of his group in answer to questions four and five. A typical reply: "I believe in God, but it is two years or more since I have been to church, so I think I should call that carelessness or laziness." The large proportion of replies of this character is the distinctly unexpected feature of the results of the questionnaire. Only half as many live hypocrisy of church members as the reason why they and other men stay away from church. Six find members and ministers unsociable. Three admit they desire to have Sunday for themselves. Two farmers, presumably members of country churches, find the services inspiritual and the sermons too long. It seems the modern sermonette has not found its way into the country circuits! One admits frankly that he finds "more pleasure in the things of the world." The last of this group says that he did not get started right in his youth. It will be noted that of this group twenty-one blame themselves and sixteen find some fault with members, ministers, or services.

Shifting the Blame

Only two of the twenty-seven men who are church members but seldom or never attend church admit their own negligence as the reason for their non-attendance. The others offer with about equal frequency criticisms of the preaching, the unsociability of the members, and the inconsistent lives of the members. These do not, as in the former group, include the unsociability of the ministers. This seems a proof that the minister keeps after the delinquent member and the new arrival, but that he is not receiving the cooperation of the members. Those who criticize the preaching say variously that the sermons "lack thought," and are "behind the times—unprogressive," that there is "too much opinion and not enough fact" from the pulpits, as well as "too much haggling over little things."

Of eighteen men who are not members but attend frequently, nine censure the members for their unsociability, only two include the pastors. The others either state that the spiritual does not appeal to men, or criticize the men themselves for negligence and selfishness. Nearly all of these men say that they are attracted to church by good sermons, although some simply remark in effect that they like to go, that attendance is a "habit" or a "duty."

Replies from 127 church members who are regular in attendance divide naturally into two major groups. Sixty-three place the blame on the men themselves. Forty-six find the churches, the pastors, and the members at fault. Of the first major division, twenty-one say that many men do not go to church because of carelessness or laziness. Eight believe that men are not by nature interested in spiritual things. Six think that many men look upon Christianity as somewhat effeminate. A "spiritual timidity" inherent in men is suggested by a few replies. There are six answers from professional men which I am inclined to believe come closer to the truth than one might conclude from their minority. "Justifiable weariness of the flesh," is an explanation characteristic of four replies. A teacher writes: "Yesterday, I heard a business man say that men do not go to church because they are meeting folks every day. Sunday, they like quietness at home." Another brings this idea out more pointedly by stating that women go to church because they have little else outside the home, whereas men have everything but home during the week. Nineteen other replies which place the blame on the men are of a different character, they include no suggestion of justification. Examples of these are: "they do not love God," the lure of definitely "evil pleasures," and they "do not want to hear the truth."

Taking the Pastors to Task

The majority of the forty-six of the second major division say that men stay away because of un-Christian or un-Christlike church members, and because of the unsociability of the members. Eleven who take the pastors to task give various criticisms: pastors are poor teachers, sermons unattractive, uninteresting, unprepared, too long, "small" ministers, ministers mixing in politics and reform movements. One lone man gives, among other reasons for the non-attendance of men, that the ministers "preach one thing and then practice another." This is the only reply received reflecting upon the lives of the pastors. Not one of these church members speaks of his pastor as unsociable or unfriendly. The others of this division give indefinite criticisms of the organization of church activities and the "atmosphere" of the services. In addition to these two major divisions, fifteen feel that a lack of training in childhood is the reason for the uninterestedness of men in church.

In their replies to the fifth question, the majority of these 127 regularly attending church members show a tendency to attempt what they think may be a "proper" answer. Sixty-three, almost half, say that they go to church because it is a duty. Only eight state that they go to hear the sermon. Twenty-three replies I have summed up in the words "spiritual help." They go to church "to forget material things." Those of another group, thinking in terms of better living, of Monday as well as Sunday, give replies similar to one who writes: "I need to go to make me a better man and citizen." There are thirty-six of these answers which I have summed up in the word "need." Thirteen give no other reply. Next in frequency, twenty men add as one of their reasons that they consider attendance at church a "pleasure," they "love the services," or they "like to go," and "enjoy church." Ten men give no other reason than habit, and nine more give habit as a second reason. Some of them say they attend because they were "raised to go." Eleven men include the importance of the church to our civilization and its institutions. Nine men say they go because they have an interest, a part to perform, an opportunity to serve. A few go to church because it is proper, the right place to spend Sunday. One man goes to "prepare for the life to come."

It has been difficult to classify the replies to the last question. Taking the major suggestion of each, a rough division shows: fifty-six finding the remedy in the preaching and general conduct of the services; fifty-one offering ideas about church activity, organization, and policy; forty-six putting the matter up to the members; thirty-two who know of no remedy; twelve who see the solution in pastoral effort; eight who feel that nothing can be done until we convince men of their duty, or awaken in them a spiritual interest; four who leave success to the results of prayer. Over one-third of the entire 209 say that better sermons or a different emphasis from the pulpit will help bring men to church. As noted above, fifty-six of these give such ideas as their only, or only important suggestions. These offer such advice as: preach a practical gospel, not theology; practical teaching based on scripture; a constructive gospel; make Christian living seem attractive; make the gospel attractive; teach them Christ; present real gospel truth; preach the gospel to the best of your ability; independent thinking; be modern; implore rather than command; omit political discussion; shorter sermons; better sermons. Twelve of these fifty-six also mention unusual services, services which will arouse curiosity.

The Treachery of Surrender

By T. WILKINSON RIDDLE

WHEN Naboth refused to part with his vineyard in order to gratify Ahab's desire for a kitchen-garden adjacent to his palace, he did something greater than he knew. He indicated for all time, and for all men, that there are occasions in life when surrender is the supreme treachery, and when the sacred inheritance of life must be preserved intact, even though death should come.

There are, for example, some possessions with which we should never part for our own sake. All through life we shall find a subtle tendency at work in human nature to surrender the highest for the second best; or, to use the picturesque image of the Old Testament incident, to yield the vineyard that it may be used as a kitchen-garden.

Very early in life, for example, we discover that there is a faculty within us which is called conscience. It is sometimes a troublesome and persistent mentor. Its dictates are clearly heard. It is not a law-giver, as Butler pointed out centuries ago, but a magistrate. It does not tell us what is truth, but it tells us that we have to be true once truth has been perceived.

Now, if men and women could be made to give a common confession of their experience of conscience, they would all acknowledge that anything like infidelity is immediately registered by a genuine sense of remorse. There is nothing in human life which can be a fitting compensation for cowardice in the region of duty. But, thank God! there have always been men and women who have learned to reverence their conscience as their king. The psychology of martyrdom is simply that there were some men and women who believed that a few things in human life were without money and without price. The men who died at the stake rather than be false to their conscience were in a true succession with Naboth. They declined to barter away their precious vineyard that it might be turned into a common kitchen-garden.

Something similar is the case with the persistent challenge of truth. When a man is brought face to face with a truth which seems to upset all his previous calculations, he may be perfectly sure that he is likely to create antagonisms. For one thing, he will find himself out of joint with his friends and neighbors to whom the new truth will be unpalatable. He will quickly discover that faithfulness to new visions will produce a good deal of social discomfort. It is always easier to traffic along with the multitude than to preserve the independence of solitude; but human life loses something of its dignity and something of its godlike grandeur when we are afraid to stand alone. Like Naboth, we may ultimately be destroyed through our fidelity, but did not Jesus tell us that we should fear not those who kill the body, and after that had no more that they could do?

It should be pointed out, moreover, that there are some possessions with which we should never part for the sake of others. The things we defend we do not always defend for ourselves alone, but frequently because of those who are coming after us.

Is it not time that we should say something about the vital and undying principles of the Reformation? These principles are scoffed at in certain quarters today, and many have confessed that, in their judgment, the Reformation was a tragic blunder. What are the essential principles of the Reformation?

First, an open Bible. That is to say, a Bible no longer in the hands of prelate or priest; no longer the monopoly of the scholar, who alone could read it in the Latin tongue; but the loving message of God to ordinary men and women, translated into the vernacular, so that even the plough-boy and the fisherman, and the humble old woman can read it and understand it. If ever we part with the principle of an open Bible we shall be surrendering the first great victory of the Reformation.

The second principle is the right of private interpretation. By that phrase we mean that the humblest layman may claim the right to interpret the scriptures of truth as the Holy Spirit shall give him guidance. While we should be grateful to the scholars and doctors of the church who have spent their lives in the study of Biblical literature, we should be the first to repudiate the notion that we cannot understand the Bible apart from such specialists. We decline to accept the dogma of the Roman church, and we decline, with equal firmness, to accept the dogmatic of any well-meaning person. We say to all and sundry: "Hands off our conscience; hands off our Bibles; we claim the right to interpret the truth as it is in Jesus."

In the same way, we have something of priceless value to guard for the sake of those who come after us. We believe in freedom of faith and worship. We are free to make use of the best the church of God has known.

There are some things with which we can never part. We can never surrender our vineyard, and permit it to be a kitchen-garden, however near and adjacent it may be to a royal palace. We never purchase love, it is an unspeakable gift; we can never purchase honor, although until a few years ago it was possible to purchase honors; we can neither purchase confidence nor peace of mind. God Almighty has ordained it that the great things in life which are most worth having are without money and without price; and because of that it looks as though he demands an inward fidelity on the part of his people which shall make possible the safeguarding of any precious inheritance he has entrusted to their care—The Baptist Times.

The Devotional Life

Oil in Reserve

Matthew 25:1-13

By F. W. NORWOOD

THE foolish maidens did not carry, in addition to the oil within their lamps, a reserve supply of oil in some other vessel. If you are going out to meet a bridal party, and know not when it may pass, yet dare not be taken unawares with your lamp untrimmed, you are likely to need more oil than you originally anticipated. It is foolish to assume that anything in this world is not susceptible to accident or the unexpected, especially, one would say, a bridal party. The distinction between the foolish and the wise in this parable is simply that the foolish made no preparation for possible accidents, while the wise carried, in addition to the oil already in their lamps, other vessels in which they had a reserve supply.

The Spare Tire

Now every great truth begins among the buttercups and the daisies, though at length it spreads its wings and mounts up to high heaven. If you are going away for a day or two, do not calculate to the precise halfpenny what your expenses will be and put only that amount within your purse. It is the extra few shillings jingling there which you may never use that will give you peace of mind. If you are going on a motor trip, do not assume that you will not have a puncture. Carry a spare wheel. If you are building a business, do not assume that you will never have a fire. Pay an insurance premium for the quieting of your nerves. It is that element of something in reserve that makes the difference between practical wisdom and folly.

Is not life itself very much like that? Nothing is to be so surely expected as the unexpected. Life is an examination of the soul by fortune, which moves in inscrutable mystery until the very moment when her questions are thrust before you. Then you are thrown back upon your reserves. The difference between people is found in their reserves.

— Into our town once there came a preacher who electrified the people with his eloquence. Those who met him in private life and talked to him upon ordinary matters were puzzled to find that he seemed so different from what he was when he stood in the pulpit. It was one of the least literate in the congregation who made the discovery that the man was merely reciting the orations of a notable divine. That wick sputtered out quickly.

Life is a bigger thing for every one of us than its actual events seem to indicate. Every man and woman of any depth of character, carries reserves of knowledge and experience which life never seems to make demand upon. It is amazing how vast is the preparation that must be made in order to live with dignity and effectiveness. It is the unburnt reserves that seem so wasteful. There are some for whom life seems to have been no more than a waiting time. They had only just begun to draw upon their reserves when the cry was raised, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet him." The only comforting, indeed, the only rational belief is that the flame burns elsewhere.

We must all grow old. We shall draw more and more aside from the battle of life. Less will be asked of us, and the young will take our places. Our great accumulations of experience will seldom be called for, and the field of our operations will grow more and more restricted. It may come to pass at last that the armchair or the invalid's room will constitute our world circumstance, in its latest phase, calling forth only a flickering gleam from our accumulated experience.

The Squalor of the Past

Life is least to be estimated when the flame is flickering out. Once I knew a man who had lived a notoriously profligate and reckless life. In his last long illness his thoughts turned back to God. He had asked me to pray with him. As I knelt at the bedside, he followed the petitions with audible and reverent responses. After that he fell into a state of insensibility, and his mind apparently went back into the squalor of the past. His language was terrible and full of profanity. When he came back to himself he was like a child in the presence of God. He seemed utterly unconscious of his lapse. His spirit was hovering as with poised wings before the gates of the eternal.

They are telling us much about the unconscious mind these days. Though they tell us a good deal that is folly, they have succeeded in making it plain that the roots of our being run a long way back, and may be what will happen tomorrow is not nearly so crucial or important as what has already happened in the days gone by. It is our reserves that decide fate.

Of course, the other side of the picture is, equally and more gloriously true. We seldom know the meaning of an experience when we are actually passing through it. Most people are aware that the preparation for the crucial hour was mainly unconscious. The great hour always comes unexpectedly. Folk who are forever straining after it seldom meet it. Folly is not ready, but wisdom is attested by our reserves. Keep on the watch, then, "for ye know not the day nor the hour."

Thus, the homeliest truth is valid among the buttercups and the daisies or in that august moment when "the Son of Man comes."

The Chimney Corner

Cooling Drinks for Hot Weather

BY BETTY BARCLAY

LEMON juice or orange juice tends to counteract acidity when taken into the stomach. In spite of being known as acid fruits, both oranges and lemons have an alkaline reaction. You can include the juices of these fruits in a punch that you intend to serve when fish, potatoes, meat, bread, sweets, or other acid-producing foods are being eaten.

Here are some summer beverages that may be made quickly and are both healthful and delicious:

Peach Punch: 1 cup sugar, 2 cups water, 2 cups sliced peaches and juice, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup orange juice, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup lemon juice, ice water.

Boil the sugar and water together for one minute; set aside to cool. Force the peaches through a sieve and combine the pulp with the orange and lemon juice. Add the cold syrup and let chill thoroughly. Just before serving strain and dilute to taste with mineral or ice water.

Raspberryade: $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar, 1 cup water, 2 cups canned raspberries or logan berries, juice 2 lemons, juice 2 oranges, mineral or ice water, lemon or orange slices.

Boil the sugar and water together one minute. Cool, and add the berries with enough juice to fill the cup. Then add the juice extracted from the lemons and oranges and let stand in the refrigerator until icy cold. Dilute to taste with ice water or mineral water and serve, garnishing each glass with a thin slice of lemon or orange.

Tea Punch (twelve to eighteen servings): 2 cups sugar, 2 cups water, 1 pint tea infusion, juice 4 lemons, juice 4 oranges, 1 pint cherry juice, 1 cup crushed pineapple, 1 quart charged water, iced water, orange or lemon slices.

Boil the sugar and two cups of water together for ten minutes. When this is cold add the tea infusion, using only the best tea. Add fruit juices. Let stand a while, then add the charged water, and enough ice water to make of the desired strength. Garnish with orange or lemon slices.

Pineapple Lemonade (eighteen servings): 1 cup sugar, 2 cups hot water, 1 can crushed pineapple, juice 3 lemons, 4 cups ice water.

Make a syrup by boiling the sugar and hot water ten minutes. Cool. Add the pineapple and lemon juice. Strain, add the ice water and serve in lemonade glasses.

Orangeade: 2 cups sugar, 1 quart water, 1 cup orange juice, reserving rinds of fruit, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup lemon juice, orange or mint garnish.

Boil the sugar and water ten minutes with orange rinds. Remove rinds, chill syrup, add fruit juices and dilute to taste. Serve cold with orange or mint as a garnish.

Fruit Julep (for twelve): 1 cup crushed pineapple, juice 1 orange, juice 1 lemon, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup strawberry syrup, 1 pint bottle ginger ale, ice, 4 maraschino cherries.

Mix the pineapple, orange juice, lemon juice, sugar and water together and boil for ten minutes. Cool, then add the fruit syrup and ginger ale. Strain and pour over a cake of ice in punch bowl. Slice four maraschino cherries in paper thin slices and add to the bowl.

In sweetening a beverage made from fruit juices a syrup of sugar and water blends more smoothly than the two ingredients added separately. This may be made and kept in sterilized bottles to be used as needed. Six pounds of sugar and two quarts of water boiled five minutes make the right proportion. Allow one tablespoon to each glass of liquid in sweetening any fresh fruit drink.

Beverages such as these are better if prepared a little time before serving and allowed to stand and blend or mellow for a few minutes.

The Madonna of the Curb

ON THE curb of a city pavement,

By the ash and garbage cans,
In the stench and rolling thunder

Of motor trucks and vans,
There sits my little lady,
With brave but troubled eyes,
And in her arms a baby

That cries and cries and cries.

She cannot be more than seven;

But years go fast in the slums,
And hard on the pains of winter
The pitiless summer comes.

The wail of sickly children

She knows; she understands

The pangs of puny bodies,

The clutch of small hot hands.

In the deadly blaze of August,

That turns men faint and mad,

She quiets the peevish urchins

By telling a dream she had—

A heaven with marble counters,

And ice, and a singing fan;

And a God in white, so friendly,

Just like the drug-store man.

Her ragged dress is dearer,

Than the perfect robe of a queen!

Poor little lass, who knows not

The blessings of being clean.

And when you are giving millions

To Belgian, Pole and Serb,

Remember my pitiful lady—

Madonna of the Curb!

—Christopher Morley in Ladies' Home Journal.

WORD comes from London through the Associated Press that a new fad has come to distress men even though it may delight some women, for a certain type of women's hats are going to be more expensive. They are to be "signed" by the artists who design them, and the purchaser must pay for the name as well as the material. London modistes predict the fad has come to stay. They maintain that a tasteful hat is just as much a work of art as a picture or a poem and that the designer deserves to have his or her name made public. The name of the creator is stitched inside the hat on a tiny strip of silk, and usually the smaller the millinery the larger the price.

The Saving Sense

Prof.—"What do you mean by saying that Benedict Arnold was a janitor?"

Ferdie Fresh—"The book says that after his exile he spent the rest of his life in abasement."—Brown Jug.

"And are ye yourself or your brother? Seems like ye look too thin to be yourself."

"I'm meself. I lost round 'bout twenty pounds ye see."

A heading in a city daily reads: "After Seven Years of Hoping, Wife Is Certain Husband Died in France."

Teacher (to boy sitting idly in school during writing time)—"Henry, why are you not writing?"

Henry—"I ain't got no pen."

Teacher—"Where's your grammar?"

Henry—"She's dead."—Scratch.

"Walter Jones," said the teacher sternly, "you are not attending to the lesson. Did you hear Jessie Smith's description of the American product, hominy?"

"Yes'm."

"All right, then. Give me a sentence in which you bring in the word correctly."

With the courage of despair, Walter replied:

"Hominy marbles have you?"

—The Congregationalist.

Mother: "Oh, Victor, I must show you Clarence's school report—it's such a splendid one! You'll see the headmaster says he's the most perfunctory boy at his work that he's ever had in the school!"—London Humorist.

Question in a school examination: "What is Mars?" One of the answers: "Mars is the scratches you get on the parlor furniture."

BOYS and Girls

Famous Girls

BY ELIZABETH PARKER, Spokane, Wash.

Dear Miss Applegarth,

I received your letter and the book. I surely was surprised to find out that I had won. I appreciate the lovely letter which accompanied the book. It is a very interesting book and every one in my family has read and enjoyed it greatly. Thank you for it, it surely is a keep-sake for me.

Here is my article for the new contest: There are many famous girls whom we know nothing about. Here are some of them whom I have read about.

Rosa Bonheur was a very famous artist and began to draw when she was quite young. When she was in school he kept the pupils in an uproar by drawing caricatures of her teachers. She went to the Louvre where she copied pictures which were greatly complimented. When seventeen years old she specialized in animals. At nineteen her pictures brought her great fame.

Madame De Stael was only twelve years old when she wrote her first play. She had been writing before this but her mother had forced her to quit. Her mother taught her very difficult lessons and the girl was somewhat in awe of her. At fifteen she wrote two essays of great renown.

Harriet Beecher Stowe, when twelve years old, in school wrote an essay which was praised by her father. She loved reading and memorized many things. As she grew older she wrote more extensively.

Jean Ingelow, also an author, wrote her first book at the age of twenty.

That is all of my letter so I want to thank you again for your letter and book.

The Boy Who Got What He Wanted

BY ERMA WHEELER (11 years old),
Rochester, N. Y.

Dear Miss Applegarth:

I like this contest very much indeed, and I had a hard time deciding who to choose. But my grandmother with whom I live has been reading the life of Edward Bok, the man who made the Ladies' Home Journal famous, and I think things in his boyhood are very interesting. For instance, he wanted the autographs of famous persons and he went right after them, whether they were residents or poets; he went even on long trips to get these signatures and the famous people were amused at his luck. Then he had lemonade stands and earned money, and in every way showed the most resourceful mind in helping his family and himself. He tells a lovely story about a bare island to which his grandparents went from Holland. They planted trees on the bare land, and after these trees had grown up the first pair of nightingales came and nested in them, singing divinely, until today it's a wonderful home for them.

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

I read THE BAPTIST just for your page, and like it very much indeed.

The Cherries Taught One Boy A Lesson

BY ANNABELLE R. STONE,
Minneapolis, Minn.

This is a true story about Edward Steiner, the famous man who has done so much for immigrants in America. Before he came to this country, while he was still a poor little Jewish boy in the old country he began wondering about God, and why he himself was so looked down on because he was a Jew. So he went to the Jewish rabbi to ask his question, but he was not satisfied; so then he tried the Catholic priest, but he was not satisfied; then he tried the Protestant minister, who took more pains with him, but did not make him understand the differences between these three religions.

His own mother found out he was worried, and so she took three paper bags and went to a market with him. She went to a Jewish merchant and bought Jewish cherries. She went to a Catholic merchant and bought Catholic cherries. She went to a Protestant merchant and bought Protestant cherries. Each kind of cherries was in one of her three bags. Then when she got home she emptied the bags into a big bowl, until all the cherries were together.

"Now," she said, "what kind of a cherry is this one?" And Edward Steiner could not tell whether it was a Jewish cherry or a Catholic one, or a Protestant one. So he learned his big lesson that just as all the cherries were alike, so all the love of God in each religion is really alike, too, and nobody must look down on anybody else, but just try to lift them up. He has done this all his life in a very wonderful way, and that is why I like to tell his story here.

A Bible for Mary Jones

BY PRUDENCE BREWSTER,
Boston, Mass.

First Prize

Dear Miss Applegarth:

You will recognize this little story because we had it out of a book of yours called "Lamp-Lighters Across the Sea" where you told boys and girls about the great people who had passed on the Bible to us. It seemed to me and to my mother who helped me choose my heroine that Mary Jones has done more for the world than any little girl we know about. You told about the boy and girl who "got written into the Bible" because the girl helped Naaman to go to the prophet to get over being a leper, and because the boy shared his five loaves and fishes with Jesus. But Mary Jones has done more than they did.

She wanted a Bible very much. But in those days Bibles were very, very scarce and very, very expensive. The big ones had to be chained to pulpits for fear they would get stolen. Mary Jones had to walk to her aunt's house if she wanted to read the Bible. That is why she wanted one of her own. She began saving her money. It took eight years for her to save enough money. Eight years is a long time, but she lived in Wales and she was very, very poor.

Well, when she had enough money it was still a problem to know where to buy a Bible, they were so scarce. But she had heard that a minister, Rev. Charles, had some. He lived twenty-five miles away, and she had to walk that long distance. It was night when she got there; people were in bed. But she knocked, and it was too bad, but Mr. Charles had sold all his Bibles. Mary had been brave for eight years, while she was saving money, and brave for twenty-five long miles, so now she could not be brave another minute. She cried terribly, and Rev. Charles was so sorry that he gave her his own Bible to keep.

He went to London and told about Mary Jones; he said Wales was full of people who wanted Bibles, and he suggested it was time to start to print Welsh Bibles. Then up jumped a man who shouted, "If for Wales, why not for the whole world?"

So that is how the great Bible societies were started, so that everybody everywhere could have a Bible in his own language. It was little Mary Jones and her pluck which led to the whole thing, so she is my favorite heroine for this contest.

(Note. And mine, too! For did you know the Bible has been translated into more than 700 languages? Yet Mary Jones really did start the whole movement. It seems to me we owe this month's prize for girls to Prudence—don't you all agree? Who is competing for the July prizes? Mail your stories to me by July 15.

MARGARET T. APPLGARTH, 21 ARNOLD PARK, ROCHESTER, N. Y.)

"Spring in the air, Mr. Crochet." "Eh?" "I said, 'Spring in the air!'" "Why should I? Eh, why should I?"—Humorist.

Young People and the Kingdom

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for Aug. 1

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

This lesson is based on the fourth chapter of "God's Dynamite" and is a study of the Lone Star mission in Ongole, India.

If you want to make this lesson impressive you may have a "candle light" service. If your church has electricity, get a string of lights such as is used on a Christmas tree, each light having a star reflector, also used on Christmas trees. If you do not have these reflectors, you can probably borrow them from someone who has them, or you may be able to secure them at a variety store. If it is impossible for you to secure these, you may make some stars out of cardboard, spread glue over the entire surface, and sprinkle artificial snow over the glue—or cover the star with silver or gold paper, or gild it with silver or gold gilt. A hole in the center of the star would permit this to be used as a reflector for the electric lights.

Prepare a large star as per the above directions, as a reflector on a 60 watt electric light which is used on the end of an extension.

Both the string of lights and the extension should be connected up, with the large star placed in the center and the smaller stars around it. These could be placed on a beaver board backing, or could be held in place against a wall by means of staples or strings. All the bulbs should be slightly unscrewed, or the large bulb and one of the smaller bulbs.

If your church does not have electricity, secure "reflectors" but use them on candle sticks. A large star could be made for the large candle which is to be used. If candles are used, the candlesticks should be placed in position on a table.

If your meeting room is quite light, perhaps for the lesson period you might pull down the shades. In presenting the lesson, tell the story of the Lone Star mission and how it became a light to those in darkness. As this story is told, the large electric bulb could be screwed in tightly, thus lighting it, or the large candle could be lighted.

Then the stories of the other results of the establishment of the Ongole mission could be told, each story causing a candle to be lighted or at the end of all the stories, the entire string of small electric lights could be lighted by screwing in the one loose bulb. Try to impress on the young people that just so our light shines in this world, and although one light by itself is not much, all the smaller ones taken together produce much light. Therefore it is up to us to "let our lights so shine."

Given—A Predicament

A group of young people had met to discuss the work of their society. They hadn't accomplished much the past year and were determined to do more in the coming year. But they were at a loss to know what to do and how to go about it. One thing they knew: they must have a program, something toward which to aim, something definite by which to guide their activities.

"Yes," spoke up one young person, "it's all very well to say we need something, but who is going to draw that something up? It will take a long time. There are so many things we could do that it is hard to decide which things would do the most good."

"Oh," said the young chap who had been at the summer assembly, "there is something already prepared—the Christian Life Program."

"That's much too hard for us," exclaimed the president. "I have been looking it over. There are ten goals in the program and thirty definite things to be done."

"And the manual says that we need ten committees for carrying out the Christian Life Program. We haven't much more than ten people in our society and that would mean almost everyone a chairman," said the vice-president.

Perhaps you, too, are facing this same situation. The Christian Life Program may seem too much for your society because some think it needs such an elaborate organization. Yet our answer to you is that it can be carried out with a simple form of organization. Five people, two of whom are the president and vice-president, could supervise the work and make it possible to attain a reasonable score on the Christian Life Program goals.

For the society which faces such a problem, material has been prepared giving definite suggestions for this simple form of organization. For example, it is suggested that the president be chairman of the executive committee and that its general duties for the year have to do with "Plans-Promotion-Publicity." The vice-president, according to this plan, would be chairman of the program committee, whose tasks for the year center around "Devotions-Discipleship-Ignition." In addition there would be a chairman of membership, one of stewardship, and one of service. The committee on membership would be responsible for "Friendliness-Fellowship-Facts;" the committee on stewardship "Study-Show-Share;" the committee on service "Community-Church Loyalty-Consecration."

Now, so far that is simple enough, isn't it? And it will be easy to remember; the executive committee has the "P-P-P's," the program committee the "D-D-D's," the membership committee the "F-F-F's," and so on.

"But," you say, "what are the 'P-P-P's,' the 'D-D-D's,' the 'F-F-F's' and so on? These are the thirty points of the Christian Life Program. The president who is quoted above thought the thirty points were confusing. He wouldn't think if he could see them on this simple organization chart all divided up among these five committees—four to some and eight to others. Yes, it has all been laid out on a chart so that you can see the simple organization.

Now, of course, you won't find the "P-P-P's," the "D-D-D's," the "F-F-F's" and so on in the Christian Life Program goals. Therefore, these need some further explanation as to what they are and this has been done.

How quickly you will understand what you read: "Publicity: Tell the church and community what you are doing and plan to do. Use posters, window card announcements, letters, post cards, newspapers, the church bulletin, telephone personal calls and invitations. Make them attractive, varied, impelling." Or "Friendliness: Get acquainted, at regular meetings and social occasions; see that others are introduced; enlarge acquaintance; the discovery and development of mutual interests. Bring acquaintances made elsewhere into the church life."

"Well and good," you say, "but where are the committees to go for help? Surely they can't know everything just by reading this explanation." Sources of help for each committee are given; but definite materials are suggested and the names of the departments of our denominational machinery specializing in the phases of work handled by the chairman.

If you do not have a large society or feel that the Christian Life Program is too elaborate for your use, by sending to the B. Y. P. U. of America for a worksheet and manual on the Christian Life Program (they are twenty-five cents each), you will receive a copy of this simple plan of organization which will help you to put the Christian Life Program into action in your own church.

Churches at Work

IMPRESSIONS OF CHURCH EFFICIENCY CONFERENCE

Doctor Agar of the stewardship department of the Board of Missionary Cooperation, has held several large church efficiency conferences this spring. One took place in Troy, N. Y., and the pastor of the Fifth Avenue church in that city, Dr. Frederick Allen, writes Doctor Agar his impressions of the results accomplished. He says:

"I count that conference one of the great privileges which our people have been permitted to enjoy. You know something of the way in which the conference was received by our people by the size of the audience which met at an early hour and remained with increasing numbers and interest throughout the day.

"The discussions were of a high type and resulted in progressive measures being adopted by a number of the congregations represented in the gathering. While I have no definite report from all the churches, I have received enough of a report to enable me to state without reservation that the conference idea is the most practical and worthwhile bit of denominational procedure that I know. Without question it is doing more to produce interest and wise giving than many of the methods being tried.

"You will be glad to know that no less than seven churches are undertaking reorganization along financial and church membership lines in keeping with your suggestions. One church has purchased the pastor a new car, and another has allowed $400 in the budget for the upkeep of a pastor's car. Still another church raised the pastor's salary $500, bought him a membership in the pension fund, and took out liability insurance for all employees. Twelve churches sent their pastors to the Northern Baptist Convention with all expenses paid. Classes in training of deacons and deaconesses have been formed. Pastors have ordered your books on stewardship and church efficiency. There are undoubtedly other good results of which I have not heard, but the above fully justify the work done in putting on the conference."

HOW WELLINGTON FIRST GETS OUT ITS CALENDARS

The First church of Wellington, Kan., Rev. James Fisher, pastor, issues an attractive church calendar at the small cost of approximately $32 a year. The calendar is printed on the outside cover pages with a picture of the church, a directory of the officers, a list of regular services, activities, etc. A large enough supply is printed on the cover pages to last the entire year. The two inside pages are left blank, and each week on Saturday afternoon, the pastor mimeographs in the order of service and the news items and announcements for the coming week, including a statement of the offering taken for missions and current expenses on the previous Sunday.

We note from issues of this calendar that the church oversubscribed its 1925-26 missionary quota of $1250, and has accepted an equal sum as its missionary goal for 1926-27.

WILL OUTLINE CHURCH METHODS AT SUMMER ASSEMBLIES

Doctor Agar expects to be present at a number of the summer assemblies, where he will speak or hold conferences on church methods. He is scheduled to attend the School of Missions in Boulder, Colo.; the Mills College Conference in Oakland, Calif.; the B. Y. P. U. Convention in Los Angeles; the Mt. Hermon Summer Assembly, the Asilomar Assembly, and the Pacific Palisades Assembly, all in California; the Minnesota Assembly in Mounds, Minn.; and the Pastors' Assembly in Ripon, Wis.

One of his assistants, Mr. R. D. Williamson, will attend the New Jersey Summer Assembly and the two Pennsylvania assemblies at Collegeville and Saltsburg. Another assistant, Miss Helen K. Wallace, will talk on stewardship at the North Dakota Summer Assembly and also at Mounds, Minn.

NEW STEREOPTICON LECTURE

One of the greatest challenges to Protestant Christianity is the big city. Of all cities, New York offers the most difficult field and is the most strategic. The only conception which many people have of the United States is the impression they get from seeing New York.

"New York City On the March" is the title of a new stereopticon lecture which

SENDS THIRTY-EIGHT CENTS TO HELP CHURCH "KEEP FAITH"

It is many years now since Judson Conklin began to teach, preach, and pray missions at the Clinton Avenue church in Trenton, N. J., but he has never said, "I am tired of raising missionary money," and his church has followed his enthusiastic missionary leadership. This year he rose from a sick bed to write a letter to the state office in which he enclosed a check for thirty-eight cents. This, together with the money previously sent in by the church treasurer, exactly completed the church's missionary quota of $4500.

The state bulletin comments: "Thirty-eight cents is rather a small amount of money when compared with $5,360,000, but the sending of thirty-eight cents to complete a church's pledge shows a fine fidelity to one's share in a great task. If all our Baptists had a like passion to that of Judson Conklin, our denomination would have enough money to meet its every obligation."

OUT OF BALANCE

One of the points given graphic emphasis in the annual report of the Board of Missionary Cooperation is the fact of the steady shrinkage in the northern Baptist missionary purse during a period when the denomination very largely increased its donations for other purposes. With the fiscal year 1920-21 as a starting point, it is shown that whereas the current expense contributions have mounted in five years from $16,752,293 to $25,627,771, the missions side of the ledger records a decline in the same period from $11,290,642 to $5,431,869, the last amount having been the total for the fiscal year ending Apr. 30, 1925. "We rejoice," says the report, "that our people are able and willing to do so much for the local church. We would not diminish by a single dollar the funds may be borrowed from the Board of Missionary Cooperation at 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City. It is also available in Providence, Boise, Grand Island, and Topeka.

THE SHRINKING MISSIONARY PURSE

donated for this purpose. Our plea is only that as the local churches grow missions be enabled to grow with them, by providing support in an ascending and not a descending scale."

Among Ourselves

A British Causerie

By FREDERIC C. SPURR

The Coming Revival

A GREAT impression has been created in Scotland and among ministers in England by the address of Dr. G. H. Morrison before the General Assembly upon the subject of revivals. Coming from him the address carries weight. I confess that it has greatly stirred my soul. The moderator was evidently deeply moved by his own utterance. He admits that the Christian ministry was never more highly equipped than it is today. The intellectuals are everywhere, and yet he feels that there is something seriously lacking. "The lustre is there but it is unlighted." Doctor Morrison is convinced that the great revival is at hand. He pointed out that seasons of deadness have always been followed by great spiritual revival.

There can be no doubt that for a long time we have suffered from this deadness. I travel a great deal among the churches and come in contact with ministers of all denominations, and everywhere I find discontent with things as they are. Even where churches are crowded there are few conversions. Some vital thing is missing. Is the dawn of a new day at hand? Doctor Morrison wisely faced the objections to revivals. He admitted the danger of excessive emotion, but he pointed out that without emotion nothing is ever carried forward. It starts the movement which mind and conscience must carry on to the end. One of his most effective points was his reference to Wesley's movement, which he declared was no orgy of emotion as so many foolish people suppose, but a spiritual force which saved this country from the kind of revolution which devastated France. I have never read a more sane and forceful presentation of the case for revival than that put forward by Doctor Morrison. At the close of his address he said, "Let modernists cease to sneer at fundamentalists and fundamentalists to look askance at modernists; let all who believe in God unite in a deep and general expectancy, and sooner than we dream the windows of heaven will be opened and the evangel be with power again."

We cannot be too thankful for this great note struck by one who is loved and trusted by all the churches. England has had no great spiritual stirring since Mr. Moody's time. The time is overdue for another. What form it will take we may not predict, nor who will be its leader. There may be no one leader at all; the work may be spontaneous. All that we must leave with God. It is only right to say that the prejudice of many to a religious revival is due to some bitter experiences at the hands of professional evangelists. We have been visited by men of a hard and dogmatic temperament; and by others with a hypnotic gift, who have dragooned men into making confessions which almost immediately afterwards they have disowned. In two conspicuous cases where thousands of cards were signed, it was discovered that many of the names given were bogus names, and of the rest the majority were the names of people already in the church. The after effect of these missions has been disastrous. It is not this kind of thing we need, but a genuine movement of the Holy Ghost.

Mr. Lloyd George

As a rule I never touch party politics in this column; the subject is too thorny. But the rupture between Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Oxford is so serious and its consequences so far-reaching in many directions, that an exception must be made in this instance. Liberalism has stood for great moral principles in the past; it has inspired many of our greatest reforms. Without it we should be far less advanced than we are. It has fought privilege and reaction all along the line, and for this reason it has earned the gratitude of men of all parties. The present government has adopted many of the old liberal ideas. It is all the more unfortunate, for this reason, that the present quarrel has broken out. The ostensible reason for it is that Mr. George took a line of his own during the strike. But it is pretty clear that this is a mere excuse; the trouble is more deeply rooted than that. I shall not discuss the matter save to say that Mr. George stood by the churches in their effort to promote peace, and a good many of his colleagues did not want peace; they wanted what Mr. Churchill called a little "blood letting."

The pronouncement made by the churches was ignored by the government. It did not appear in the government organ, nor was it allowed to be broadcast. And I think that Mr. George in this matter had with him the best conscience of the nation. More than this I will not say. The position is curious; if the churches say nothing concerning a great moral question they are blamed for their apathy; if they speak they are ignored unless they say "ditto" to the popular cry or to official action. But officialism will not terrify the churches; the victory will at the last remain with them. They did quite right in seeking to mediate in a great moral struggle. As for the quarrel itself it is pathetically tragic. This is not the time for division among men who stand for great moral ideals. Both in politics and in religion some devil or other generally manages to sow discord at a critical moment. Mr. Spurgeon once preached a great sermon on "How saints may help the devil," and he showed that one way was that of misunderstanding and of needless division at a time when all the forces of righteousness were needed for a common attack upon evil. But how slow men are to understand this elementary truth.

An Anthology of Jesus

A new book has just come into my hands for which I predict a wide reading both in Britain and beyond the seas. I have taken it into the garden on these summer days and devoured its pages. It is a book to keep and use for the rest of one's days. It will appeal alike to fundamentalist and non-fundamentalist for it goes deeper than all controversies to the very quick of life. It is by that prolific writer and compiler Sir James Marchant and it bears the startling title "Anthology of Jesus." It is a collection of the richest thoughts of master minds in many departments concerning our Lord Jesus Christ. These are grouped in the chronological order of our Lord's life from his advent to his glorification, thus forming a complete chain. The quotations are drawn from Catholic and Protestant sources alike, from theologians, critics, and writers of all schools. Even unbelief is pressed into this service for we find the names of Renan, Rousseau, Cassels, Shelley and Thomas Hardy, men, who while not following Christ, were compelled to pay him their loftiest tribute. Here are the burning words of Lacordaire, Didon, Fenelon, Spurgeon, Liddon and many others, the stately phrases of Milton, Papini, Phillips Brooks, Brown-ing, Bunyan, and Dickens. The poets too are here, including Francis Thompson.

All these, with varying emphasis and fire, pay homage to Jesus. The value of a book like this is immense. Of course it is not complete. How could it be? There are names that I miss. What rare things there are about our Lord in the pages of Bersier, Monod, Félix and Monsabré, to name no others. The present volume, however, is wonderfully well balanced and well arranged. I understand from Sir James Marchant himself that the book represents the reading of twenty years upon this one subject. I can quite believe it. Its purpose is to quicken faith and love and to turn men to Him who alone can save them from sin and despair. It has stirred my own soul deeply. I mean to keep it in front of me for constant reading. It will probably become the most popular devotional book of the year. Anything that brings men nearer to Jesus will bring them nearer to each other. No book quite on these lines has been attempted before.

The Roman Hand

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." A statement made in the Dominican magazine for June on the relations

Catholics to the state makes one rub ne's eyes. The writer says, writing with authority, "We refuse to uphold or assist anything in so far as it repudiates the additional claim of the Catholic church in England to be the supreme judge in England of all moral questions that may arise here; and we hold that all economic, social, and political questions are moral questions." This is the iron hand with a vengeance, and it enables us to see quite clearly what would happen to this country were the Roman church once more to gain supremacy. It is not astonishing to find over here a growing uneasiness at the spread of Catholicism in the church of England. The truth is that our hard-bought liberties are being threatened. And Protestants are asleep or indifferent to the matter.

Baptist Women's Civic Program

By JANET S. MCKAY

A JOINT meeting of the Woman's Baptist Home Mission Society and the Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society, held in Washington, May 22, comprehensive instructions were given for the direction of the work of the joint civic committee of the two organizations as follows:

"We adopt the following objectives for our civic committee and for ourselves:

(a) To urge upon every Baptist woman recognition of the duty she personally owes to her community, her commonwealth and her country; (b) to enlist every Baptist woman in a campaign for better government, municipal, state and federal; (c) to induce every Baptist woman to vote—to vote regularly, to vote intelligently, to vote rightly, to vote fearlessly, and finally, to vote; (d) to inspire every Baptist woman with the fact that her duty is unmistakable, her attitude toward civic questions is important, her influence is vital and far reaching, and her responsibility is not transferable.

"We request the civic committee to issue a simple leaflet, correcting some of the wrong impressions which are current regarding present conditions, and containing helpful facts and statistics regarding the operation of the Volstead Act and the 18th Amendment.

"We request the civic committee to give its attention to a service for use in our churches in recognition of those who from time to time come into full citizenship, either as natural-born citizens, or so-called naturalized foreign-born men and women. The purpose of this service shall be to instruct these new citizens in the true meaning and responsibility of citizenship and to link the performance of their civic duties with their religious life in order that Christian motives may control their civic activities.

"We request the civic committee to confer with the social service committee of the Northern Baptist Convention and with the National Woman's Committee on Law Enforcement regarding the use of the above leaflet and service."

The civic committee was instructed to take steps to get in touch with the Baptist women of New York state and to impress upon them the importance of the referendum to be held in November and the necessity that each woman vote and use her influence in getting other Christian women to vote.

It was further proposed that partisanship and party lines be disregarded and candidates be supported because of their character and fitness for the office, and that candidates be requested to declare their position with regard to the 18th Amendment and law enforcement.

Pacific Coast Letter

By LEONARD W. RILEY

Mt. Hermon School of Missions

AS an affiliated denomination, it has come the turn of the Baptists to have the chairmanship of the Mt. Hermon Federate School of Missions and Mrs. C. W. Brinstad, wife of state executive secretary, Dr. C. W. Brinstad, has accepted the chairmanship of the school. The Mt. Hermon Federate school meets at beautiful Mt. Hermon in the Santa Cruz mountains July 3-10. This is the twentieth annual session. Dr. Frederick W. Agar preached morning and evening on July 4. Another Baptist on the program is Rev. J. C. Garth, pastor of the church at Willows, Calif. The foreign text book "Moslem Women" by the Zwemers will be taught by Mrs. G. Bayard Young of San Diego. Her husband, Doctor Young, was for seventeen years connected with Roberts college at Constantinople. A story hour for children will be conducted by Mrs. Bertha Hageman.

"Weonahome"

This is the suggestive name given to the meeting place of the East Washington and North Idaho Baptist summer assembly. It is located on Coeur d'Alene lake in Idaho. The director of this assembly and the dean of the faculty is Rev. H. W. Vodra. The date of the gathering is July 20-30. Among the teachers this year are Rev. A. B. Baird, Dayton, Wash.; Rev. M. E. Bollen, D.D., of Linfield college; Mrs. Edker Burton, Moscow, Idaho; Miss Isabel Crawford; Rev. Owen T. Day; Rev. J. W. Johnson, D.D., Berkeley, Calif.; Mrs. W. A. Kemp, Spokane; Rev. J. M. Nelson, Spokane; Dr. A. W. Rider of Los Angeles; Prof. G. R. Schlauch, Linfield college; Rev. T. S. Young, D.D., of Philadelphia; and executive secretary, Dr. A. H. Bailey. This list of names is sufficient to indicate that a profitable time is ahead for the young people of that section of our country.

Dr. Tralle in Northwest

Dr. Henry E. Tralle has been spending a number of weeks in the northwest to the delight and profit of many who have attended his lectures. He spent eight days with the First church of Seattle, supplying for Dr. Ambrose M. Bailey while he was in attendance at the Northern Baptist Convention. He and Mrs. Tralle gave lectures and conducted conferences on religious education. Fifty churches cooperated in this week of meetings and the attendance was uniformly large. Doctor Tralle delivered the address at the annual meeting of the Portland Council of Churches on June 8, and, at the close of his address at 10:40 p. m., he was cheered until he was compelled to make further response.

During the first week of the Linfield college summer school Doctor Tralle gave two lectures daily, one on the book of Revelation, and the other on the psychology of leadership. All reports of these messages indicate that Doctor Tralle will find a hearty welcome awaiting him when he comes again to the northwest country.

Christian College Activities

A Christian college has the great privilege of making itself felt in the region surrounding its location. This has been a long cherished ideal of the administration of Linfield college. During the past college year more than fifty students, young men and young women, were selected and assigned to as many churches in the county in which the college is located. The duty of each student was to confer with the pastor or Sunday-school superintendents as to any help that consecrated students might bring to that church such as teaching a class, missions, music, etc. All the churches were visited once or many times with blessings to both churches and students. Classes were taught, missionary addresses given, programs of music rendered and souls led to Christ. Four churches in the county, not one of them a Baptist church, have been turned over to the college deputation committee for student supply work. This plan makes it impossible for any church in the county to say, "We have no workers," and on the other hand no student can say, "I have nothing to do."

Besides this work, deputation bands of the ministerial association visited five different places for the purpose of holding evangelistic meetings of from one to three days. Good results were accomplished in these meetings.

For the third consecutive year, "College Sunday" was observed on May 16, when more than fifty students visited as many churches, each speaking on the subject "The Value of a Higher Christian Education." The Council of Religious Education of Yamhill county has contributed $50 and the West Willamette Baptist association $75, for this deputation work to cover the expenses of transportation of students.

Another interesting advance movement is that the American Baptist Publication Society and the state conventions have agreed to cooperate with the churches in using students who have taken the courses of religious education in Linfield college. Five of our Linfield students are this summer at work in the northwest jointly supported by the three organizations. These students are to receive as remuneration the same amount which they would have been able to earn in other occupations. This is certainly a step in the right direction and should do much to stimulate interest in church work during the summer months. These young people, with the enthusiasm of inexperience, will see many things done which otherwise would remain undone.

Thus the department of religious education, under the leadership of Dr. William J. Sly, is seeking to develop consecrated and capable workers for our Lord.

News Items

The Palouse Baptist association in eastern Washington, held its forty-sixth annual gathering with the Colfax church this year, Rev. J. L. Peringer, pastor. This year being the semi-centennial anniversary of the Colfax, Wash., and Moscow, Idaho, churches, one evening was occupied with a celebration of this event. Miss L. L. West, a pioneer, told of the early days of these churches. This association has changed the time of its meeting to the fall of the year. Mr. J. V. McCall was elected moderator for the fourteenth time. Moscow was chosen as the next place of meeting and Rev. J. L. Peringer of Colfax will preach the annual sermon.

Rev. Elbert H. Hicks, pastor of the Fremont church, Seattle, on his way to the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington, held a revival meeting in his father's church at Doeville, Tenn., which resulted in twenty-seven baptisms. Doctor Hicks' father has a country parish composed of 1183 members and at seventy-five years of age is doing a great work among them.

The First church, Tacoma, Wash., C. O. Johnson, pastor, had 401 additions during the past year, 250 of them being by baptism. A total of $53,382.46 was raised for all purposes, $6,113.83 going to missions and charity. For next year this church has fixed a goal at 500 new members by the end of April, 1927, and adopted a budget of $5000 for missions. This is certainly not asking too much of a church of more than 1300 members.

At Pullman, Wash., Rev. W. E. Monbeck, pastor, the reports of the annual meeting showed that thirty-six new members had been received, eighteen by baptism. The total receipts for the year were $3193. This church pledged $250. for missions but actually raised $329. The total budget for next year is $3521.

The first anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. F. R. Leach, at Bremerton, Wash., was celebrated recently. Here eighty-six new members were received, thirty-nine being by baptism. The subject of Doctor Leach's anniversary sermon was "The Church at Work."

Groesbeck on China

Rev. A. F. Groesbeck, D.D., of Chaoyanghsien, China, was a classmate of mine in Rochester Theological seminary. In a recent letter he gives utterance to the following concerning conditions in China:

"The currents of life are running strong here in China these days, and we sometimes wonder toward what they are sweeping us. The failure to understand China today is the common failure to understand the deep movements of race life. Only God knows what is going on deep down in the very soul of China. We poor mortals see a few bubbles on the surface and then spout away as to what is going on in China. In most minds a few bombs dropped on Peking are of more importance than the whole uprising of young China. Yet, somehow the future of the world is to some extent bound up in one of these, while the other merely marks another chapter in a surface militarism. And yet, the nations of the world may, because young China is thinking of getting back of it (militarism), be creating their own great menace."

Detroit Baptist Doings

BY ALBERT H. FINN

Annual Meeting Advisory Council

THURSDAY, June 17, the annual meeting of the advisory council for negro work of the Detroit Baptist Union was held in Calvary church. The afternoon session opened at 3:30 with a devotional service, led by Rev. W. A. Tutt. Vice-President Hill called the business session to order at 4 p. m. The annual reports were encouraging. Chairman Finn, of the finance committee, recited the achievements of the year in building operations; Chairman Kaiser, of the Baptist Christian center reported on the larger aspects of that promising institution, emphasizing the urgent need for a larger and more modern building to adequately carry on the work in the congested east side negro district. The Detroit Community Union is urging Baptists to supply this pressing need. Superintendent Pace and his official corps of workers gave more intimate details of the educational, social and spiritual work being done. Doctor Gleiss amplified these in a helpful and inspiring manner. His heart is in this great denominational opportunity and challenge, as there are now more than 100,000 negroes in Detroit, and more are coming every day.

The ladies of Calvary church spread a much appreciated chicken dinner. Pastor Mastin is a host in himself. Two years ago Calvary church was but a feeble beginning; today it numbers nearly 3000 persons. At 8 p. m. President Ernst called the large audience to order, and after inspiring music, Doctor Gleiss had thrown on the screen pictures of the outstanding negro churches in Detroit, and especially those which have been assisted to modern houses of worship by the advisory council and the Detroit Baptist Union. It was a wonderful showing and proved to be of great inspirational value. Dr. O. Clay Maxwell, of St. Louis, was introduced and gave an address that touched every mind and heart. He believes in his negro brethren and declared that he had never seen such a spirit of cooperation as was evidenced between the white and colored Baptists in Detroit. As a whole, the annual meeting was the most cheering of any yet held. It was stated that negro Baptists in Detroit already have church property to the value of nearly $1,500,000.

Dexter Boulevard Church

The Dexter Boulevard church (formerly known as Maranatha) is now nicely settled in its beautiful new house of worship on Dexter boulevard at Davison avenue. This is in one of the newer residential districts of the better class. The new edifice is of brick and stone of a modernized Gothic type, the auditorium having face brick walls and stately windows of cathedral glass. The Bible school will assemble on the ground floor, which is a trifle lower than the surface. The new pipe organ will be installed in August, and the formal dedication will be held the week of Sept. 12, the program to cover the entire week. This is a real addition to the Baptist forces in Detroit, as under the leadership of Rev. W. W. McMaster, former pastor of the First church, Washington, D. C., the church is developing a new spirit and consciousness. The property is valued at $150,000.

Vacation Bible Schools

Detroit Baptists are thoroughly convinced as to the educational and constructive value of vacation Bible schools. Each year sees a larger number and better ones in action. This year a new standard of equality has been set up, and we look for gratifying results both in our white and negro schools. Rev. B. T. Leonard, director of religious education of the Detroit Baptist Union is the leader.

Centenary

Work proceeds in preparation for the centenary of the Detroit Baptist Association. The program covers Oct. 6-8, and the best of speakers assures an event of wide interest. It will undoubtedly prove to be a sort of home coming for many who have entered into the history of the first century.

Detroit Baptist Union

The present fiscal year of the Detroit Baptist Union will no doubt prove the most active in building of new and much needed Baptist churches in the metropolitan area. Bethel church (formerly First German) while an important member of the D.B.U. will carry on its own building operation, which involves a new structure to rise in the Indian village on Mack avenue and which will cost $175,-

INSTITUTIONAL FINANCING

is broadly discussed in

THE CHART BOOK

a new publication describing the most efficient methods of raising money for denominational, educational and other publicly supported institutions.

It will be sent on request without obligation

THE HEWITT COMPANY
TRIBUNE TOWER
CHICAGO

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

000. The First church is also planning the addition of an educational and social unit that will probably cost $100,000. The Detroit Baptist Union will function in the building of the new Jefferson avenue auditorium, River Rouge, Grand River avenue, Ferndale, and others of lesser size, but all vitally necessary in their various communities.

Commencement at Bucknell University

BY LEO L. ROCKWELL

THE seventy-sixth commencement at Bucknell was quieter than those of the last few years. Because of the shift of date to the first week in June, fewer of the alumni returned, but those who came found excellent weather and a spirit of good fellowship.

Music lovers attended the undergraduate recital of the school of music on Friday evening, June 4, and the pipe organ recital the next morning, and agreed that both were up to usual standard of excellence.

On Sunday President Hunt preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates and a group of friends who crowded the Baptist church. He emphasized the difference between Christianity conceived as a theology and Christianity thought of as a way of life, urging the young men and women of the class of 1926 to live their Christianity. Doctor Hunt pointed out the injury which has been done the spirit of Jesus by "political Christianity," the twisting of Christ's teachings to serve temporal ends. By historical reference and contemporary allusion he showed the danger of conceiving our Christian inheritance to be a matter for definition and controversy rather than a principle for guiding conduct.

In closing he quoted the statement made to his own class by his own college president, Martin B. Anderson, forty-six years ago: "Young gentlemen, all my life I have been a student and for many years I have tried to be a scholar, but I have found that the one thing worth knowing is Jesus Christ."

The oratorio given Sunday evening was Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul." It showed the finish which has come to be expected of productions given under the leadership of Director Paul George Stolz, of the school of music.

Monday's program included the senior recital of the music school; the alumni luncheon, at which the committee in charge of the fund for a new women's building announced several gifts and recommended that the building be named for the late Katherine B. Larison, for many years preceptress of the old Female Institute; the presentation of three-one-act plays by the men's dramatic club; and the fraternity symposiums.

Tuesday was alumni day. The meeting of the alumni was important because an entire reorganization of the association was effected: a new alumni council, composed of delegates from each class and each local club, will henceforth conduct the business of the alumni. Thomas A. Wood of Muncy, was elected president of the council and the association.

The board of trustees, at its meeting, approved the placing of the Mathewson memorial gymnasium on the North field; authorized a Bucknell booth at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition; and approved the renting of an additional house to accommodate college women. It also elected to membership on the board W. W. Kelchner, '86, of New York city, and W. C. Walls, '73, of Lewisburg.

In the afternoon the varsity baseball team achieved its ninth successive victory over Penn state; and the classes held their reunions in the memorial stadium. The evening saw the annual informal reception at the home of President and Mrs. Hunt, at which the usual genial spirit engendered by the cordial hospitality of the Hunts prevailed. The day was closed with the alumni assembly in Tustin gymnasium.

Commencement day beheld a delightful innovation—an open-air commencement. In his opening remarks President Hunt explained to the auditors who filled the quadrangle that the weather had been chosen after careful experimentation, and the choice was well made.

Sen. George Wharton Pepper delivered the address. Lkening a college to a training camp, he urged the graduates to enter the battle with a will to victory, warning them that one may be licked, but not defeated, if one has that will.

"I know the odds seem to be against the recruit," said Mr. Pepper. "Every profession seems overcrowded. The casualties are heavy. Most people fail. The waves are high; there is a strong undertow. Yes, but the swimming is fine; come in boldly. Make as little splash as possible. Use a breast stroke for distance, and pay no attention to shark stories. Pick yourself for a winner, but make no public announcement

New Midway Hospital Ready for Service

BEAUTIFULLY builded, completely equipped, ready for its years of service to thousands—the new Midway Hospital will be dedicated Sunday, July eleventh.

¶ This new edifice of the Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association is a genuine credit to Baptists of the Northwest and others who have made its erection possible—a credit because of the manner in which the program has been completed—a credit because no other Baptist Hospital has been more thoroughly equipped, nor more beautifully built.

¶ As it stands in a stately fashion back from University Avenue in Saint Paul, it is more than a monument, because every hour of every day and night of the years which are to follow, it will carry on in its christian service.

The Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association

Saint Paul, Minnesota

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You) broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Illinois.

"Good evening, friends on the air. Tonight we are going to think about our brothers and sisters who are in prisons. Jesus came to set at liberty those that are bound. He identified himself with those who were in prisons when he said, 'I was sick and in prison and ye ministered unto me.'"

"THE BAPTIST is being read by hundreds of men and women in state prisons from ocean to ocean. Sympathetic friends are giving sums of money to pay for annual subscriptions to prisoners who are appreciative. We have no fund to send the paper except that given and designated for this 'Prison Work.' You may send any amount for individual subscriptions or to pay for copies to go to prison reading rooms.

"A prison chaplain where a roll of THE BAPTIST goes, wrote to a religious paper asking if it could not send one copy free for the prison reading room. This is the reply he received from the editor: 'Replying to your request for a free copy of our paper for your prison, we would say that our paper is intended rather for the best educated and highest type of members in our church rather than for the masses. It would probably not be appreciated at all in the prison. We thank you, however, for your interest.' Sounds like asking for bread and being handed a stone, doesn't it?"

"!!!!—In that prison was a man who was member of the denomination whose editor wrote the above reply. He was shown this letter. He asked to have the privilege of answering it. Would you like to hear what he wrote? Adjust your loud speaker and we shall read it for you.

'Dear sir: As the son, and son-in-law, of ministers in your church with whom I am still on terms of confidential and affectionate intimacy, I have asked for and obtained leave to reply to your letter of the first instant to an officer of this prison.

'Prior to its perusal I was inclined to regret the misfortune that spelt for me an enforced vacation amidst "the masses" whose spiritual welfare is a matter of such small moment to "the best educated and highest type of members of our denomination" who constitute presumably, the elect circle of readers of your paper.

'I must confess, however, that your letter has left me a little doubtful; for, thanks to the superiority of your moral and mental equipment, I have at least been spared the perusal of your paper.

'The Master for whom you claim to speak addressed his simple doctrine to those same "masses" from whose association you are so anxious to withdraw. His pride was the pride of service humbly performed, irrespective of circumstance.

'He left the mock-piety derived from hypocritical comparison with the less fortunate "masses" to the Pharisees, who were, presumably, "the best educated and highest type of members of the church" of that day.

'The highest type of intellectuals go wrong at times, and superior education is not incompatible with penal servitude. If the ingenuous ignorance of humanity manifested in your letter is reflected in the pages of your paper, I am heartily in accord with your views that "it would probably not be appreciated at all in the prison."

"Let me read you a few lines from a sheaf of letters from prisoners who are getting THE BAPTIST. (1) 'I am glad to say those papers have helped me more than anything else here. I may send in a subscription as soon as I go home.' (2) 'I appreciate receiving the paper and wish you would thank the party or parties sending it to me.' (3) 'Thanks to you and those friends who are sending me this wonderful Christian paper.' (4) 'I was sick when THE BAPTIST started to come. I like it. Now I look for it before it is due. I thank you and my friend for even thinking of me.' (5) A mother writes that she has just visited her son in a state prison, and he, not being allowed to write, sends his thanks through her.

"The office boy closes with a bit of familiar verse: 'What a Friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to bear; what a privilege to carry, everything to him in prayer. Do thy friends despise, forsake thee, take it to the Lord in prayer; in his arms he'll take and shield thee; thou wilt find a solace there.'

"WCOY now signs off. Goodnight friends, near and far."

to that effect. Life is bursting with opportunity."

After the address 180 baccalaureate degrees were conferred in arts and science, and the usual prizes awarded.

Four honorary degrees were granted. Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, '95, for many years a member of the Bucknell faculty and now president of the Bloomsburg State Normal college, was invested with the degree of Doctor of Laws. Dr. A. T.

(Continued on page 723)

Connecticut Notes

BY HORACE B. SLOAT

ON Friday evening, June 11, Central church, Norwich, gave a reception to the pastor, Rev. David A. Pitt and Mrs. Pitt in celebration of the fifth anniversary of Doctor Pitt's settlement. A large number of people attended the reception. In the course of the evening, Judge Allyn L. Brown, of the board of deacons, presented Doctor Pitt with $100 in gold, a voluntary gift from the church. Doctor and Mrs. Pitt have been outstanding leaders in the church and the city. The cooperation given them by the church has been whole-hearted and genuine. Doctor Pitt is the president of the Connecticut Baptist Convention.

Central church, Norwich, and the First church, Waterbury, conducted a men's contest in church attendance for the period beginning the Sunday after Easter and closing on Children's day. The Central church won by a small margin. The interest of the men, however, in both churches was greatly stimulated.

Rev. Henry E. Hodge has been called to the First church, Putnam, settling on June 1. Mr. Hodge comes from the neighboring state of Massachusetts. He finds a local people in the Putnam church and is warmly welcomed to the brotherhood of Connecticut.

Here, There and Everywhere

DR. JOHN NEWTON GARST of the First church, Spokane, Wash., supplied the pulpit of the First church, Chattanooga, Tenn., on his recent trip to the East.

AN EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN of three months just concluded by Rev. Earle D. Sims at Spencer, S. D., resulted in bringing an abandoned church back to God. Spencer is a town of 700 people. The church was organized there in 1883 and in 1914 built a church building which would be a credit to any city. The property is valued at $25,000 and is perhaps the finest church building in the Dakotas. But a few years ago dissension set in among the members, they disbanded their organization and for the past six years all work discontinued. Early last March Mr. Sims found the building in Spencer a wreck on the inside. No one encouraged him or offered him a bed or board, so he broke into the building, purchased bed, stove and cooking equipment, and spent the first week alone in the building working with shovel, hoe, broom, mop, hammer and saw. The second week he started evangelistic meetings. At the close of three weeks of meetings he raised money and began to overhaul the building. It was replastered and redecorated. Parlor and kindergarten rooms were equipped, the parsonage revarnished inside and some furniture put in, and a big garden plowed and planted—all at an expense of $1600. When the building was completed a council was called to recognize the newly organized church and ministers from all er South Dakota gathered at Spencer the council. Rev. E. G. Boughton, D., president of Sioux Falls Baptist college, preached the recognition sermon. The following Sunday Rev. John L. Barre preached the dedication sermon and Sims baptized a number of candidates. Then he started another evangelistic campaign in the new building which resulted in putting the church on feet. The church now has a membership of fifty, Sunday school, ladies' aid society and B. Y. P. U., and does not owe a dollar. Rev. Chester W. Baer, who, on May 22, graduated from the Northern Baptist Theological seminary at Chicago, was called as pastor and he and his wife are now on the field.

FIRST CHURCH, SPENCER, S. D.

THE CHURCH at Brockton, Mass., Rev. J. MacLean, minister, has repaired and decorated its auditorium to the extent of several thousand dollars and has installed a new organ.

REV. JOHN W. PARKER has resigned at Chambersburg, Pa.

BY ACTUAL COUNT 5755 persons entered the White House grounds to be photographed with President Coolidge on Thursday at the Northern Baptist Convention. 5550 of these are in the official photograph which is a marvel of clearness. These may be obtained from Rev. E. O. Clark, 217 Raymond St., Chevy Chase, Md., at $1.00, $1.50 or $2.00 according to size. It is a historic picture and the largest ever taken at the White House.

MRS. OLAF HEDEEN, wife of Rev. Olaf Heeden, general secretary of the General Swedish Baptist Conference of America, died on June 12.

DR. G. W. CASSIDY, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, L. M. Darnell and Rev. John Pearson were the Utah delegates to the Washington convention.

REV. C. W. ATWATER of the Lincoln Park church, Cincinnati, Ohio, received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Rio Grande college on June 9.

ON JUNE 10 Rev. D. Heitmeyer entered the fourth year of his work with the church at Crawfordsville, Ind. A reception marked the anniversary date. During the three years past a fine new building has been completed and 255 new members added to the church.

REV. C. W. HIDDEN of Carver, Mass., is in his ninth year with this church of the open country and has to his credit already the honor of having served this church more consecutive years than any other pastor in the one hundred and thirty-five years of its history.

TEN SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES were held in Idaho during June under the auspices of the Idaho Council of Religious Education. The speakers were Rev. C. S. Rice, Rev. Stanley A. Gillet of the Baptist convention and A. M. Locker, secretary of the council. The meeting places were in order of dates: Nampa, Gooding, Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Burley, Twin Falls, Mountain Home, Caldwell, Payette and Weiser.

IN THE CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICE of the First church, Detroit, Mich., Rev. Mark F. Sanborn, minister, forty-eight children from the cradle roll were listed for the dedication exercises. This church has outgrown its great plant and a committee of seven on a new building project has been named together with a building finance committee of five. This is one of the great churches of Michigan.

THE BUILDING of the church at Kenton, Ohio, which was being repaired, enlarged and redecorated at a cost of several thousand dollars suddenly collapsed on June 10, one wall crumpling and the tower falling. Damage estimated at $20,000. The local daily paper and public spirited citizens immediately launched a campaign to aid the church of about seventy-five members to raise this amount at once. Rev. A. W. Snow is the minister.

REV. C. L. HERINGTON was ordained on June 11 at the Bethel church of the Rock Island, Ill., association. Eight churches were represented in the council of which Rev. E. A. Gilmore was moderator and Dr. J. M. Jones of East Moline was secretary. In the ordination service Rev. Walter Ingram preached the sermon, Rev. Wm. Master gave charge to the church, Rev. T. M. Porter gave charge to candidate and Rev. W. S. Whiteman offered the prayer.

Fifty Years Old

If you have lived fifty years, the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society will be glad to pay you a guaranteed income of 6 per cent for the remainder of your life in return for a gift of any amount on the Annuity Plan.

Such a gift would enable you to furnish support to world evangelization and at the same time would bring you an assured income as long as you live. This arrangement is of special interest to those desiring to give who require an income in the meantime to meet financial needs. After death the net remaining principal would be immediately released for the work of the Society.

Write today to Home Secretary P. H. J. Lerrigo, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York, for complete information. All correspondence treated in strictest confidence.

If you are younger or older than fifty, the rate of income would vary accordingly, ranging from 4 to 9 per cent on single life annuities and from 4 to 8.3 per cent an annuity agreements covering two lives.

Here is a unique opportunity for making a gift, large or small, and receiving in return an annual income as long as you live. Many annuitants have been so pleased with this plan that they have made similar gifts in later years.

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society

*Have you made your will?
Read it again and see that the full corporate legal name of the Society is written as above.*

R. R. Richards, Grand Island, Neb., who is available for evangelistic work.

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

PIPE ORGANS
of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home. Electric Organ blowing suits for organs of any make. Write, stating which catalog is desired. Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

OLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY. Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Dept. 12, Cincinnati, O.

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs
21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices. A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
215 Englewood Ave. Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

THE CHILDREN'S DAY offering in the First church of McKeesport, Pa., Rev. P. H. Lynch, pastor, was $642.

THE LAKE AVENUE CHURCH, Rochester, N. Y., Dr. A. W. Beaven, pastor, makes a moving picture record of its church and school annually on children's day. It is taken for historical purposes but can be used indefinitely for projection.

REV. H. E. SHADE is serving the church at Homestead, Pa., as interim pastor with gratifying results.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Atlantic City, N. J., Rev. Hinson V. Howlett, minister, extends the same cordial welcome to all visiting Baptists. Although housed in the lower story of the old church which was partly burned in January, the church is pushing a campaign for funds for a new edifice. $86,000 has already been subscribed. Plans are being prepared by architect Vivian B. Smith, a son-in-law of Dr. Thomas J. Cross of the Chelsea church, in collaboration with George E. Merrill of the department of architecture of the Home Mission Society. Ground will be broken early next autumn.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN" 2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN, 1912 "G" Street, Northwest

REV. AND MRS. J. H. HUGHES were sent to Washington by the Temple church of Chicago. On their return there was a reception to all new members who have united with the church during the past year. Pastor Hughes enters his second year with large promise.

IN NEWARK, N. J., the South Baptist church, the South Park Presbyterian church and the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, have united for their worship services from June 20 to September 5. Rev. Finley Keech is pastor of the South church.

CENTRAL CHURCH of Springfield, Ill., on June 6, turned over the full morning service to a set of "duplicate" officers elected from the young people of the congregation. Every officer in the church from pastor to janitor was represented by some young person. There was discussion and instruction in the duties involved in running a modern church. The elders saw their successors in action.

REV. FRANK B. FAGERBURG, minister of the First church, Springfield, Mass., has received about 130 new members during the past year. The church has 919 subscribers to current expenses. The Sunday school averaged 441 during the past year.

THE CHOIR from the church at Wilmette, Ill., Rev. F. C. Stifler, minister, gave the sacred concert of station WLS on June 13. The program was two hours in length.

DR. JOHN SNAPE of Cleveland, Ohio, delivered the address at the graduation exercises of the Baptist Missionary Training school in Chicago on June 15.

TRINITY CHURCH, Minneapolis, Minn., gave $21 per member for kingdom work; the First church of Albert Lea gave $19, and Calvary church of Minneapolis gave $17. These are rated as the highest per capita churches in the Minnesota convention during the past year.

REV. J. C. GARTH of Willows will teach the home missions study book at the assembly at Mt. Hermon, Calif., July 3-10. Other teachers are Dr. F. A. Agar, Dr. F. W. Russell, Mrs. Bertha Hageman, and Miss W. Rouzee.

REV. J. T. MUSE of Woodland, Calif., assisted the Mt. Olive church of Oroville, Calif., in a special meeting that resulted in fourteen additions.

DURING SEVEN MONTHS PAST the First church, South Bend, Ind., Rev. J. Burt Bouwman, minister, received eighty-eight new members and dismissed thirty-three. Twenty-five of the new members now hold definite offices of responsibility, one deacon, one trustee, eight teachers in Bible school, etc. The budget for current expenses for the year is $9535. Accepted quota for missions, $2500. On Sept. 1 an assistant pastor will be employed. The church has six baseball teams in its own league.

PASTOR WALTON of Yuba City, Calif., has seen the church membership double in less than a year. A new edifice is being planned.

MRS. ELIZA UHLINGER, one of the loved members of the White Temple church of San Diego, Calif., died at the age of ninety-one.

(Continued on page 724)

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for July 18

THE CALL OF MOSES
Lesson Text: Ex. 2:11-4:18.
Golden Text: Ex. 3:12

The call of Moses came to him after he had tried to go upon his own commission in his own way. Forty years Midian discipline had to follow the rash attempt to champion the cause of his people before Moses was ready for the call. He had to become thoroughly acquainted with the territory through which he would have to lead his people during forty years more of discipline for them.

The Call

The call came to Moses in a memorable spot and in a most significant manner. The place was none other than the Mount of God where afterwards the law was given, and the significance of the call lay in the symbolism of the burning bush. Both the place and the symbol must have made a profound impression upon the mind of Moses. Mt. Horeb, towering above the surrounding plain, was a proper setting for the call that came to Moses out of the burning bush. And the burning bush itself must have spoken to Moses in a language which can neither be spoken nor written. Possibly Moses had thought after his first failure in espousing the cause of his people that there was nothing for him to do but to spend his life in the quiet of the hills as a shepherd. The flaming bush of his ambition to be the leader of his people out of bondage had become nothing but a smoldering ash for years, but in the bush that burned and was not consumed he saw again flaming into new glory his never-dying conviction of leadership which first expressed itself when he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Not all calls of God to special service have been such an experience as Moses enjoyed. And yet everyone really called of God to specific service must have heard his voice as clearly as Moses heard it. The voice of God may have been heard in circumstances, through a friend, by some crisis occurring at a definite point in life or echoed in the Bible. But whatever the medium employed in the call the main thing was the call itself.

The Caution

One great evidence of the fact that man has been called of God to some difficult task is his deepened sense of uneasiness for it and his sincere attempt to avoid the commission. This was the experience of Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, Paul and all the others who have really been called of God. The man who accepts a call to moral or spiritual leadership without a deep sense of his unworthiness and inefficiency has probably made a mistake in ever thinking God called him. After forty years of discipline Moses shows a very different spirit from that which actuated him to kill the Egyptian. Now he finds his fitness in the eternal God whose resources are inexhaustible.

(Continued from page 720)

enberger, '09, professor of applied hology at Columbia university, was n the degree of Doctor of Science;
E. A. E. Palmquist, executive secy of the Federation of Churches of delphia, was made a Doctor of ity; and Senator Pepper was crea Doctor of Civil Law.

The closing exercise was the corpora-dinner, for which graduates, friends, alumni gathered in Tustin gym-um. President Wood of the alumni ciation presided at the symposium h followed, at which toasts were reded to by President Swartz of the ed of trustees, by the recipients of rary degrees, and representatives of eunion classes.

The Peddie School

By F. L. FERRIS

HTY members of the class of 1926 received their diplomas at the six-annual commencement exercises of Peddie school, held in the First
th, Hightstown, N. J., Monday, 14.

The commencement exercises opened Friday, June 12, with a baseball game a dramatic club presentation of ge M. Cohan's "Seven Keys to Bald-
." Rev. Frank M. Swaffield, of West erville, Mass., delivered the sermon unday morning, and Hon. Charles A. n, congressman for the fourth New y district, addressed the student L. C. A. at the evening service. An noon campus concert by the school and glee club was also an enjoyable ire of the program.

The commencement address was de-ved by the Rev. C. Wallace Petty,
L, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Following the presentation of diplomas on. Horace Roberson, president of board of corporators, prizes and ds were made by Headmaster R. W. land. The Wyckoff honor prize for larship, character and promise of e success was awarded to Jose el Miyar, of Santiago, Cuba, and the ell service, given annually to that ent who has rendered the greatest ce to the school, went to Russell ahias, of Milwaukee, Wis. The exer-es were followed by a reception in the gon by Headmaster and Mrs. Swet-

Commencement at Frances Shimer School

V. CHARLES W. GILKEY of the Hyde Park church, Chicago, delivered e commencement address on Wednesmorning, June 9. Doctor Gilkey is own as one of the ablest speakers in United States, and his visit here was ticipated with pleasure. His theme that the atmosphere of the place in h we live or the school in which we y has more influence on our later life merely the subjects mastered in the -room. He opened his talk with the ation of a tree which is commonly posed to live mainly by what it ses through its roots, but which in reality would not be able to exist if it were not for those elements, principally carbon, which it receives through its leaves from the atmosphere. These are the lasting elements, for if the tree were burned all would be destroyed except the carbon which it secures from the atmosphere. The comparison lay in likening the student to a tree, whose academic activities are the roots, but who is permanently influenced by the atmosphere of the school. The results of academic activities are curiously temporary. "If I were to try to take examinations in subjects I had in school," said Doctor Gilkey, "I should flunk all of them. In the crucible of life they have turned only to ashes of memory." If one acquires and develops a dozen avocations and then proceeds to forget them, what is the use of it? These things are inadequate for actual use later, but the things which are absorbed at the same time, without our knowledge, come to us as unconsciously and invisibly as the tree gathering carbon from the air.

This atmosphere, the pure carbon, is what stands in the crucible of later life.

To the graduating classes Doctor Gilkey gave a special message. "Have they really finished their education," he asked, "when they have graduated from school?" Graduating classes are usually divided into two parts: the one thinking they have finished their education when they receive their diplomas, and the other, the minority, thinking they may have finished their school course but begun their education. The matter of continuing education after school is a matter of the atmosphere of the school, which can continue to educate after the student leaves school.

President McKee spoke on the condition and prospects of the school, saying that the attendance this year is the largest it ever has been, and that it has had 246 students from nineteen states and the Republic of Panama. This is the 100th anniversary of the birth of the founder, Mrs. Shimer, and the 73rd year of the school. "The drift seems to be toward a larger junior college and toward the ultimate elimination of the first two years of the high school," President McKee stated. He mentioned the new buildings, the Campbell Memorial library and the Winona Branch Sawyer house, and the efforts of the school in increasing the endowment through the expansion program.

THE FIFTH AVENUE Presbyterian church of New York City formerly served by Dr.
Harry Emerson Fosdick, a Baptist minister, has called Dr. Henry Howard, a Methodist minister from Australia. Doctor Howard is sixty-seven years young.

DR. F. B. MEYER of London, England, has passed his eightieth birthday. He plans another visit in America at an early date.

DR. ARTHUR T. FOWLER, after a period as acting pastor of the Calvary church, Lawrence, Mass., has accepted the call of the church to the full pastorate. The church has 1168 members.

DR. H. W. VINCENT, for many years pastor at Toledo, Ohio, has accepted the call of the Calvary church of Minneapolis,

Minn. Dr. W. T. Dorward of Milwaukee, Wis., has been acting pastor of the Calvary church since last autumn and has had a constructive and fruitful ministry there.

Obituary

Rev. Arthur Lester Wilkinson, D.D., died at his home in Ann Arbor, Mich., May 23, 1926. He was born at Cambridge, N. Y.,
1845. When he was eleven years of age his parents moved to Ann Arbor, where he received his education. He served in the Civil war with the seventh Michigan cavalry under General Custer. He was ordained to the ministry at the annual meeting of the Nine Mile Association, Du Quoin, Ill., Oct. 4, 1866. His pastorates were at Sparta, Ill., Rockton, Ill., Elkhorn, Wis., Richmond, Ind., Springfield, O. (two pastorates, 1873-1877 and 1881-1889), Leroy, N. Y., Madison, Wis., Centralia, Ill., and Sterling, Ill. Following the Sterling pastorate in 1902 he has not been in the active ministry. In 1923 the Sterling church elected him pastor emeritus. He visited the church in April of this year and on one Sunday occupied his old pulpit. It was his last sermon. In 1876 while pastor at Springfield he preached the sermon at the fiftieth anniversary of the Ohio Baptist Convention, held at Toledo. Early in May of this year he went to Zanesville to be present at the 100th anniversary of the convention. He met only one or two others who had been present fifty years before.

Denison university, in 1887, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

In 1867, Mr. Wilkinson was united in marriage with Miss Emma Otis of Ann Arbor. Mrs. Wilkinson died in 1923. Dr.
Wilkinson was married a second time, May 7, 1924, to Mrs. Clymena Teats Jenkins of Sterling, Ill. He is survived by his widow and one son, Arthur Cleaver Wilkinson of Toronto.

Funeral services were held at the Ann Arbor home, conducted by Rev. Howard R.
Chapman of Ann Arbor and Rev. J. G. Little of Sterling, Ill. Burial at Forest Hill cemetery, Ann Arbor.

Dr. Wilkinson was a man of noble character. His mind was alert and vigorous.
He never lost the zest of life. Every forward movement of his denomination interested him.

R.A. HOLDEN DECORATIVE CO.

Kenton, Ohio

Interior Decorators
Church Lodge Residence

Want Ads

PASTORS—Secure Baptist Evangelist for your next revival. Best Denominational references. Write, Pease Evangelistic Campaigns, 19 Highland, Battle Creek,
Michigan.

SCHOOL OF SACRED MUSIC, Homer
Rodeheaver, President. Summer session,
Winona Lake, Indiana, August 9-29, 1926.
Intensive, sympathetic, practical. Daniel
Prothero, Dan Beddoe, Charles Gilbert
Spross, and sixteen other teachers. Write
Secretary for leaflet "A".

Experienced young woman desires position as pastor's assistant or director of religious education Sept. 1. Address Pastor's Assistant, 110 Metropolitan Life Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., Modern comforts, scenery unsurpassed, no hay fever—No mosquitoes. Parties made up for Mountain Trips. Special arrangements for families of Parties, either in the Hotel, or the Cottages, or the Tents. Rates reasonable. Booklet B. A. J. Newman, proprietor.

Young Baptist minister, married; twelve years' experience; producer in every department, especially young people. Wishes to change location. Well fitted for city or large town. Prefer church of over 350 members. Baptist Minister, c/o Baptist.

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices.
Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

Here, There and Everywhere

(Continued from page 722)

IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWING the Washington convention, Dr. A. W. Ryder gave a number of addresses in Idaho churches.

REV. B. T. GILLETTE, deacon of the First church, Phoenix, Ariz., is eighty-five years of age. Deacon Gillette was born in England and came to Arizona thirty-three years ago. For several years he preached for the church at Naco.

THE FIRST SWEDISH CHURCH of Oakland, Calif., plans to dedicate its new building in July.

DR. J. C. MASSEE of Boston conducted special meetings on June 14-17 in the First church of Vineyard Haven, Mass.

REV. C. A. ALDEN of Chicago has been called to the Swedish church of San Jose, Calif., and will begin his pastorate on Sept. 1.

THE BAPTIST SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP will hold its second annual session in the Baptist Temple, Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard Island, Mass., July 31-Aug. 8. The faculty consists of Rev. Miles W. Smith, dean, Dr. Spencer B. Meeser, Dr. Clarence M. Gallup, Prof. J. Gordon Ogden, Dr. Wilson T. M. Beale and Dr. Geo. E. Horr. The preachers for the two Sundays are Dr. M. T. Twomey of New Jersey and Dr. Francis W. O'Brien of Brooklyn.

REV. SWAN A. ENGVALL has resigned at Turlock, Calif., to accept the call of the Swedish church in Pasadena. The new pastorate will begin Aug. 1.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Youngstown, Ohio, took advantage of the absence of its pastor, Dr. A. C. Archibald, and added $1000 to his annual salary.

REV. H. L. PROPPE of the College Avenue church of Indianapolis, Ind., was sent to Washington as a guest of the church, which, at the same time added $250 to his salary.

REV. LEONARDO MERCADO, a graduate of the Spanish-American Baptist seminary of Los Angeles was ordained at the First church of San Pedro, Calif., on June 8 by a council composed of messengers from fifteen churches. Moderator Dean J. F. Detwiler preached the sermon. Mr. Mercado goes to the First Mexican church of Phoenix, Ariz.

A TRAINING SCHOOL was held in the church at Lakeport, N. H., with an enrollment of eighty and an average attendance of fifty-five. Miss Ella B. Weaver headed the faculty. Other instructors were Miss Meme Brockway and Rev. I. J. Enslin. The attendance was drawn from the following New Hampshire churches: Lakeport, Ashland, Meredith, Belmont and East Tilton.

REV. W. E. PARK and Rev. T. J. Davis, missionaries among the Cheyenne and Arapaho tribes in Oklahoma, held a special meeting at the Concho school that resulted in forty-three baptisms.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Jeannette, Pa., Rev. A. A. Cober, pastor, dedicated its new $125,000 building, June 6-13. The sermon was given by Dr. C. Wallace Petty of Pittsburgh, prayer by Dr. W. C. Chappell of Pittsburgh, and afternoon and evening sermons by Dr. H. J. Whalen of Greensburg and Rev. Oliver H. Sisson of Wil-kinsburg. This building takes the place one destroyed by fire two years ago. The lower floor is devoted to religious education and the upper floor contains, besides the auditorium, an assembly room for adult division of the church school. Anthony H. Price was chairman of building committee.

PASTOR HUGH W. STUART of Trumburg, N. Y., was surprised on his return from Washington, D. C., to find a church filled with happy people, many of them having been received during his ten-year pastorate, who proceeded to express their love and appreciation for their leader with suitable speeches and gifts. The June report showed thirty additions during past year, five waiting baptism and $1000 given to denominational missions.

DR. E. HERBERT DUTTON, superintendent of missions in Buffalo, N. Y., and sailed on June 12 from New York for a tour of the Holy Land. Later he will visit central Europe to gain a first-hand knowledge of the lands from which large numbers of new Americans have come to Buffalo. At the farewell reception given Doctor Dutton on June 10 in the Edin Street church, a reception was given by Rev. Pedro Saltarelli.

REV. F. E. BRININSTOOL of Parkersburg supplied the pulpit of the Temple church, Charleston, W. Va., while Dr. C. Kemper preached the baccalaureate sermon at the New River state college, on June 10.

REV. RUSSELL M. BROUGHER of Paterson, N. J., spoke before the Christian Endeavor rally at the Clinton Avenue church, Newark, N. J., on June 10.

THE Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary In Philadelphia

True to our historic Baptist beliefs

Loyal to our denominational interests

High educational standards

Courses leading to degrees in Theology and Religious Education.

A Faculty of teachers who are scholarly, wisely conservative, vigorous and thoroughly up-to-date.

Prepares for the Ministry, Missionary Endeavor, Pastors' assistants with opportunities for special training in Religious Education and Gospel Music.

Located in the heart of Philadelphia.

Ten minutes by trolley to the University of Pennsylvania.

Surrounded by great libraries affording opportunities for research work.

Many opportunities for self help. For such information write Harry Watson Barras, Dean.

Tuition, room, light and heat free.

Board $6.00 per week.

For additional information address

AUSTEN K. DE BLOIS, Ph.D., LL.D., President

1812-1814 S. Rittenhouse Square

Philadelphia, Pa.

Volume VII

July 17, 1926

No. 24

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

JUL 15 1926

THE JORDAN RIVER

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

Board of Missionary Cooperation

The purpose of this Board is to promote and obtain support for every denominational activity, as provided in the united program of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Literature or special information concerning any phase of the work will be promptly furnished on request.

W. H. BOWLER

Executive Secretary

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

Partnership Opportunities

The 800 missionaries of The American Baptist Home Mission Society are to be found in nearly every State in the Union, and in Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Haiti and Jamaica. They serve as missionary pastors, teachers, colporteur-missionaries, chapel-car and auto chapel-car directors, evangelists and Christian center workers.

In the making of your will and in the purchase of annuity agreements you may have a share in the home mission tasks of your denomination.

For annuity booklet and samples of single and survivorship agreements, please address

CHARLES L. WHITE

23 East Twenty-sixth St., New York City
The American Baptist Home Mission Society

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society (Corporate Name)

Address all communications to
276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Last year 19,956 converts were baptized on mission fields in the non-Christian world. This is the largest total ever reported in a single year in the history of the Society. When you make a will be sure that the full corporate name of the Society is used. Correspondence concerning gifts on the Annuity Plan with income ranging from 4 to 9% should be addressed to the Home Secretary, C. E. Milliken, President
Frederick L. Anderson, Chairman of the Board
James H. Franklin, Foreign Secretary
Joseph C. Robbins, Foreign Secretary
P. H. J. Lerrigo, Home Secretary
William B. Lippard, Associate Secretary
George B. Huntington, Treasurer

AN ANNUITY

Written by

The Board of Education
of

The Northern Baptist Convention
(Legal name)

will assure you an income for life at the rate and terms agreed upon by all the Boards and will

HELP BOYS AND GIRLS

to secure their education during all the coming years.

For information on this and all educational subjects, address,

FRANK W. PADEFORD, Secretary

276 Fifth Ave., New York City

News Notes

Baptism on Latin North American home mission fields during the last convention year exceeded all past records with a total of 1321 distributed as follows: Cuba, 245; Salvador, 96; Haiti, 68; Mexico, 156; Nicaragua, 128; and Porto Rico, 637.

In the Bengal-Orissa field 120 have been added by baptism to a Baptist church membership of 1700. In Africa also the revival which began several years ago has continued. From all of the fields come reports of renewed zeal and increasing achievement in winning men to Christ.

A new medical plant including a hospital, dispensary, and doctor's residence, made possible by gifts of $25,000 from a friend and $13,000 from the E. W. Clark estate, is being built at Jorhat. With this medical equipment and with its schools Jorhat should become a great center for all Assam. "The medical work is very heartening and at the same time very heart-breaking," writes Dr. G. S. Seagrave at Namkham as he tells of 104 surgical operations and 17,391 treatments for the year. "Heartening" because of the opportunity; "heart-breaking" because of the inability to meet it adequately.

A new day is dawning in Assam. No more should it be called a pioneer field, for all our Baptist stations are now connected with automobile roads with the exception of Impur. Even in that remote station great progress has been made among the Nagas, and the tribe is fast turning to Jesus Christ. The schools have continued to train Christian leaders, but this has been a year of special significance when it is remembered that the Nowgong girls' school celebrated in September its jubilee. On this fiftieth anniversary there were gathered together four generations of students, and "grannies" and "great-grannies" rejoiced to see results of ten years of the teacher-training department which was not available for them in the earlier days.

"Our churches are growing steadily in a sense of their own responsibility for the evangelization of Mexico. Perhaps no previous year has seen finer growth in this regard. One fact will make clear what is meant. At the last meeting of the Mexican National Baptist Convention—which was, perhaps, the best ever held—a movement was launched looking toward the intensifying, during the months of March to June of this year, of the work of evangelism. The idea is that each church shall take up the matter for itself, seeking to enlarge its sphere of influence, converting its membership into an evangelizing group for individual and collective prayer, for the distribution of tracts, for personal work. At this early date we are only beginning to see the fruits of these special efforts. The spiritual advance is on; the harvest will be gathered later."—Rev. A. B. Rudd, general missionary for The American Baptist Home Mission Society in Mexico.

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

WHEN YOUR WILL IS READY Will it contain a bequest for The Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board

of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Avenue, New York

If it does it will help the Board help worthy aged Baptist Ministers & Missionaries, the Widows and Orphan Children.

If you prefer or need the income while you live we shall be glad to have you take an

ANNUITY BOND (Gift Agreement) whereby you will receive a high and safe return on your gift throughout your lifetime. At your decease the income only will be used for the work. Your gift may be made a memorial to yourself or others.

Write for Information.

Two Kinds of Permanence Are Guaranteed

Your Annuity Payment

Our Christian Work

Invest in our Annuities

Put our name in your will

Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treas.

Woman's American Baptist
Home Mission Society

(Corporate Name)

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

A SIMPLE PLAN:

You send to us:

1. Your check as an annuity gift
2. Date of your birth.
3. Address in full.

We send to you:

1. A receipt for your check.
2. An annuity agreement.
3. Annuity payments every six months.

For full particulars regarding our annuity plan—Write to

Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer

Woman's American Bapt. Foreign Mission Society
276 Fifth Ave. New York City

The American Baptist Publication Society 1701-1703 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The denominational publishing house for the extension of the kingdom through the printed Word, Religious Education, and Sunday school development.

FOR OTHERS

Put THE BAPTIST into your Public Library. Do it Today.

Annual Subscription, $2.50

THE BAPTIST

2320 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Dr. James Whitcomb Brouger's keynote address on "The Common Denominator," delivered at the Northern Baptist Convention and published in THE BAPTIST of May 29, is reproduced in full in the Religious Press Digest for June, with all proper credit to the speaker, the occasion and THE BAPTIST. In fit return it should be said that the Digest, though small in compass, is one of the most convenient and useful periodicals of reference coming to the editor's table.

The Episcopal church congress, held at Richmond early in May, ventured to debate the subject of "The Church and War." Major-General Wm. M. Black, retired army officer, argued the necessity for preparedness from the probability of war. Rt. Revs. Paul Jones and G. Ashton Oldham argued the evils of war, its essential immorality, the "prussianizing" of the schools, the equivocal attitude of the churches, the abridgment of freedom of speech, the intolerance of militarism. Mr. Jones pictured Christians praying on opposite sides, while engaged in efforts at mutual destruction by methods "that you can't pray for."

The Gideon International Convention will be held in Toronto, Canada, July 22-25. The Gideons are devoted Christian business men, chiefly commercial travelers. One of their characteristic activities is the placing of a Bible in every guest room of every hotel. This work began in 1907. At first the hotels were shy. They feared that the Bibles might offend the guests and embarrass the hotel bar. But now a hotel room is not regarded as complete without a Gideon Bible. The order has placed nearly 800,000 Bibles in hotels in Canada and the United States. In Chicago alone 3185 of these Bibles were placed in hotels within the last year and orders are waiting for more than 5000 more. The money required for this work is provided by the Gideons themselves.

One hundred and forty-five prominent churchmen and educators have signed a memorial to the United States senate availing the ratification of the Lausanne treaty. Reasons assigned are: "The best government that Turkey has ever known is now in operation. A series of remarkable reforms without parallel in Turkish history has been put into effect within the last three years. These changes all move definitely in the direction of the recognized standards of modern civilization. The question of the treaty involves an issue more fundamental than the treaty itself. The only really constructive agencies for reform which America is sponsoring in Turkey are threatened and the whole problem of the Christian approach to Turkey is involved."

In both the Northern and the Southern Baptist Conventions there is serious consideration of plans for a more effective organization of their work.

Plans are forming for the production of a series of moving picture films to cover the whole course of Baptist history. The suggestion comes from Pres. E. Y. Mullins. He has already taken up the matter with the Hon. Carl E. Milliken of the moving picture industry. It is hoped that the films will be ready for exhibition at the next meeting of the Baptist World Alliance in Toronto in 1928.

Hearings on the Welsh bill in congress to abolish compulsory military training in the public schools are bringing to the surface all of the arguments and animus on both sides. It is becoming increasingly clear that in the present state of public sentiment no scientific and deliberate judgment on the subject is possible. He who favors the bill is a "pacifist," with all of the bad connotations of the term. He who opposes it is a "militarist," equally sinister.

"Shall we junk our doctrines?" M. T. Andrews is writing a series of articles for the Baptist Standard in answer to this question. Of course one can tell beforehand what he will say. There is only one thing that can be said. Doctrine can be junked when men quit thinking. Dr. John A. Broadus used to discuss the same subject forty years ago and to urge a revival of doctrinal preaching. When was there ever more earnest and intelligent propagation of Baptist doctrine than in the last ten years?

Prohibition laws of the United States are ruled by the circuit court of appeals to be in force in Porto Rico.

Religious debates are not yet dead however archaic they may seem. The Illinois Baptist announces a debate to run four days between "Eld. W. J. Moore of Carbondale, Baptist, and Eld. J. D. Tant of Mississippi, Campbellite." Editor Throgmorton is experienced in the business and says he has known great good to come out of such debates. He is a good judge of religious values and he ought to know.

Since Dr. George L. White has accepted the position of western secretary of the Baptist Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board, it has been necessary to secure another director for the Northern Baptist Correspondence school. The Publication Society has chosen Dr. J. D. Springston, who understands educational problems thoroughly. Hereafter all applications for correspondence courses should be sent directly to Dr. J. D. Springston, 313 West Third Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. Nellsine I. Jose, recording secretary, announces that the annual meeting of the Free Baptist Woman's Missionary Society will be held in Jordan memorial hall, Ocean Park, Me., on Thursday, July 29, at 10 a. m., to hear reports of officers and committees, for election of officers, and for such other business as may come before the meeting. She also announces that the annual meeting of the board of managers of the Free Baptist Woman's Missionary Society will be held in Porter memorial hall, Ocean Park, Me., on Tuesday, July 27, at 2 p. m.

Something of the meaning of the war in China is indicated in a letter from one of the British Baptist missionaries in the Baptist Times. He writes: "On the second day of the attack, more than a fortnight ago, a shell landed right into our house, making a neat hole in the side door and crashing into a wall opposite and through the boarded floor in the passage just outside my study. The explosion was terrific, but mercifully no one was hurt by pieces of steel that flew all over the place; we were all at morning worship in the next room. Other shells have come very near—one through the garden wall, another on an outhouse, and many have burst over our heads. Mr. Watson's house has just had a corner taken off, and two shells have fallen during the night on the girls' school only just vacated by the boarders. So far we are all safe and sound. As yet there is no definite prospect of this senseless strife ending."

Index
	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	727
EDITORIAL	729
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	731
IS THE CHURCH NECESSARY FOR RELIGIOUS EDUCATION? BY THEODORE GERALD SOARES	732
IN ANSWER TO PRAYER, BY HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY	733
THE THREE ESSENTIALS OF CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, BY GEORGE T. MCCOLLUM.....	734
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE — THE CHRISTIAN HERITAGE, BY GAIL CLELAND	735
CHIMNEY CORNER	736
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	737
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	738
CHURCHES AT WORK.....	739
AMONG OURSELVES	740
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	746

Can Young Ministers Preach?

A Notable Series of Sermons

More than a score of sermons covering a wide range of Christian truth have been secured for THE BAPTIST. They will be a fair cross section of the best pulpit utterance of our younger generation of pastors in the Northern Baptist Convention.

A Noble Group of Young Preachers

All nominated by their own colleges and seminaries. The following schools will be represented in the series: Linfield, Yale, Shurtleff, Denison, Moody Institute, McMaster, Newton, University of Chicago, Redlands, Grand Island, Northern Seminary, Peddie, Louisville, Crozer, Kansas City, Brown, Colby, Kalamazoo, Sioux Falls and others.

THE BAPTIST Featuring Great Sermons

THE BAPTIST believes in our young men and seeks to serve the entire denomination in this year of evangelistic effort by broadcasting their best sermonic efforts.

"The Baptist World Pulpit" combined with this series by our younger preachers will be the most notable series of sermons ever published by this paper.

These Unusual Sermon Series Will Begin Early in the Autumn and Continue Through the Winter and Spring.

Single subscription $2.50 per year.
Club rate is $2.00 for 10% lists.
With Missions, $3.00 per year.
Trial subscriptions, 6 mo., $1.00.

The Baptist

2320 South Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

One of the largest gatherings which Baptists have had in the Sona Bata district of Belgian Congo occurred in February when 2500 people collected at Kilumbu. Rev. Thomas Moody writes of a baptismal service on Feb. 5 in which two candidates at a time were baptized until 197 had been received. It rained during the last hour of the service. On the following Sunday, after the morning service, 104 more were baptized. At a meeting in Kinzazi on Feb. 14, 1500 were present and 176 were baptized. The Sona Bata revival is in its sixth year.

At the recent commencement exercises of Sioux Falls college, Sioux Falls, S. D., Pres. Fred G. Boughton tendered his resignation to take effect on July 31. During the four years of his ministry as president, Doctor Boughton has labored incessantly to build up the endowment and equipment of the school to a point at which the college might be recognized by the biggest and stiffest standardizing agency in the country, the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges. But Sioux Falls college has still some considerable distance to go before it is so recognized, and it is not alone in this handicap because some of the other mid-western Baptist colleges are in a similar disadvantageous position. The one great task of a college president in the middle west seems to be the burdensome and wearing task of getting money for the growing demands of a modern and standardized institution of higher learning.

The committee on evangelism appointed at Washington held its first meeting in New York on June 29. Most of the fifteen members were in attendance. It was decided to hold evangelistic conferences in not more than twenty-five centers with J. C. Massee as inspirational leader if his church will consent to release him for this special service, the conferences to begin in the early fall and to be concluded by the last of December. The committee sees clearly that only as local pastors and people are aroused to the need of evangelism will the revival come which is so much desired. It is therefore the hope of the committee that a spontaneous movement nourished among the local churches will awaken the dormant spirit of soul-winning and bring on a flood tide of personal work in behalf of the salvation of individuals who have never professed loyalty to Christ as Saviour and King. The moratorium on money-raising which was one of the points stressed by Doctor Massee in his address at Washington was interpreted to mean no less stressing of personal stewardship during the year but that the chief emphasis should be on awakening Northern Baptists to the responsibility and joy of winning men to Christ. The committee on evangelism goes about its epochal and important work with the full sympathy of all national boards and societies and with the closest cooperation on the part of the executive secretary of the Board of Missionary Cooperation, W. H. Bowler.

Col. Wm. J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney-general of the United States, speaking to a meeting of the New York bankers, made the significant statement that the growth of the movement towards the creation of great mergers in business will produce a reaction that will lead to the general adoption of government ownership.

During August, Dr. Wilbert W. White, president of the Biblical seminary in New York, will personally conduct two courses of Bible study for pastors exclusively at Columbiana on Lake George, the estate of 100 acres owned by the seminary, and adjoining the famous Silver Bay association grounds. Each course will continue two weeks, the first beginning on Aug. 3, and the second on Aug. 17. The design is to illustrate method of mastery combined with largest spiritual and practical results.

Between the Federation of Woman's Clubs and Motion Picture Producers of America a gap has developed. Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the former organization, is reported to have expressed disillusionment as to the state of the motion picture industry in the following terms: "When the industry sees fit to withdraw a number of most objectionable films now being shown, it will go a long way toward establishing a greater degree of confidence in the oft-repeated statement that the industry is doing everything possible to raise the standards of motion pictures. Personally I am not content with any program that limits itself to emphasis on the good pictures with the idea that by this method alone the bad pictures will disappear. The bad pictures are popular, they swell the box office receipts. But inasmuch as such pictures are a direct menace to the morals of young people, they are criminal and should be eliminated."

Danish Folk high schools are schools for people of both sexes in the early adult years from eighteen to twenty-five. They are altogether independent of any state control. There are no text-books, the personality of the teacher is the main influence. There are no grades, no credits, no examinations, no diplomas, no graduations. The only entrance requirement is that one be eighteen years of age. There are now sixty of these schools, located in various parts of the country. About 30 per cent of the adult rural population has been in these schools. The lecture method obtains in these schools, but endless discussions by the students and by students and instructors are carried on after the sessions. These schools are not avenues of escape from work and responsibility. Through them work is to be made intelligent, and responsibility is to be touched with imagination and rescued from both drudgery and the spirit of petty tyranny. In other words, this education is not to be a means either of escape from life, or of complete submergence in a changeless past; it is to liberate the student into a resourceful and creative future.

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

One Salvation for All Seekers

AN EARNEST Christian woman who trusts in Jesus with full and joyful assurance of personal salvation and shares his passion for the salvation of the lost, is perplexed about those who never heard of Jesus, and inquires, "What became of those who followed God before Christ came? If he is the only Saviour, how could they be saved?"

No answer will suffice that rests upon a doubt of the historicity of Jesus or of his unique sufficiency as the Saviour. Albert Schweitzer has traced the process and results of a century of historical criticism upon the story of Jesus and shows that after a hundred years of the most exacting investigation, often at the hands of students who sought to undermine Christianity, Jesus stands in history today right where the gospels place him as a veritable historical character. Not only so, but a generation of scholarship devoted to the study of comparative religion discovers that today Jesus stands as the only serious candidate for the world's acceptance as Saviour. There is salvation in him. There is no salvation without him.

But his unique saving sufficiency is due primarily not to the fact that he was born at a certain time and place, but to the fact that whenever and wherever born the illness of God's eternal truth and grace was in him. He was then what God is eternally. The Spirit that was in him is the eternal Spirit. He has a value for both time and eternity. God has revealed in him in time and place saving grace, purpose and process that transcend all the bounds of time and place. In his person then and there he showed what God is and is doing always and everywhere.

One eternal principle which Jesus brought to light is that God graciously saves those who believe in Jesus. But what is believing in Jesus? Whatever else it may imply as incidental there is one indispensable mark of faith, namely, a longing to be like him. That longing carried out enlists all that one is, in quest of all that Christ is. What this quest consciously achieves is limited by the believer's ability to discover him. Such longing, which is the very heart of faith, is not limited to those who came into personal contact with Jesus during his earthly ministry, but is awakened in millions who having never seen him, have heard more or less imperfectly about him. It may be awakened even where he has never been personally known at all, but where people search in the midst of half lights and broken lights for a God who is righteous, good, gracious, merciful, fatherly, forgiving, saving—as Jesus has revealed him. That is, true faith, in any age or place, whatever its possessor may or may not know about Jesus historically, longs and seeks for the good that Jesus has to give, and it will not be finally disappointed. From the beginning to the end and throughout the world, all who so believe are his and the eternal Christ in him saves them. The more perfectly they discover him, the more perfectly do they realize in themselves the values of salvation.

On this principle one can understand why from the standpoint of Christianity it is said that Abraham believed God and it was counted to him for righteousness. He believed in view of a promise that had a Christward trend, and his faith followed the trend. His example may stand for millions who during the ages preceding the birth of Christ followed a light or even merely a longing that gave the same trend to their lives. All such earnest souls joined in a concourse of faith of which Christ the Saviour is the only possible final goal. For them the Lamb was slain from the foundation of the world. For them as for us God was doing far more than they knew. Far beyond any measure of which they were conscious, they were saved by grace through faith.

Whatever changes the appearance of Jesus in history may have made in the evangelistic program it made no change in the principles of salvation. Those principles were built into the constitution of the world. Jesus revealed them in a new and clearer light and with greater effectiveness and finality. Never before and never otherwise had it been so clear that always and everywhere God saves men by grace through faith. Never was it so clear that when true faith sets out in its Godward quest it will never be able to stop at any fully and finally satisfying goal short of Jesus Christ.

This survey carries us into another field. What access to salvation has been open to the unnumbered host of human beings who never came within range of that historic course of revelation that culminated in Christianity? Here it is easy to speak words without knowledge. But if Jesus has revealed the grace of God in such measure as to include those Hebrews who, although they never knew the historical Jesus, had his Christly urge in their souls, on what principle is such a privilege limited to them? If they were saved by grace through faith, if the only faith they could have possessed was the urge of religious hunger prompting them to follow the clearest light they saw, and if the clearest light they ever had was a suggestion or a series of suggestions of untold good that God's people have reason to expect from him, why may not such grace extend to any human being anywhere who feels and follows the same kind of an urge in such light as God has providentially given him? Jesus himself said at least once, "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." If this benediction is too narrow to cover all who so hunger and thirst, then we have the task of finding and fixing its more restricted limits, and of designating those for whose soul-hunger God's grace revealed in Christ offers nothing.

We have a full gospel. It is partly defined or definable in terms of historical record and of theological statement. Let it be so defined with the utmost fullness and exactitude. That is the gospel in books for the study. But beyond such power of definition lies a vast possibility of its realization in personal and social experience. That is the gospel in the current life of the people. Let it be sought in its fullest measure.

Still beyond is the Christward sweep of God's eternal purpose embracing the cosmic gospel for the world and carrying its momentum through the ages, offering all of God's grace to all who have faith, doing for them under all circumstances more good than any of them ever know, and never stopping short of the believer's salvation in Christ. That is the world gospel of which Jesus, in virtue of his Christhood, is the author, mediator, and messenger. Let it be proclaimed with joy in his name, not as a polemic in comparative religion, but as an invitation to hungry hearts to trust the Father's boundless grace and to follow the clearest light he gives them. All who do so are Christward bound and their feet are in the way towards the one and only salvation by grace through faith. Calvary is the true and final meeting place of all who seek God.

What Will Come of the Catholic Wooing?

ALL of the splendor of the International Roman Catholic Eucharistic Congress has come and gone. What remains? No man knows the complete reply. But a few vital things lie on the surface which ought to be noted in a spirit as friendly as that of the whole city of Chicago in welcoming the visitors in attendance upon the congress.

Obviously, the foreign prelates felt themselves impelled to pay tribute to the principle of religious liberty which they found so fully exemplified in this country. Archbishop Curley of Baltimore in his eloquent Eucharistic address in the Soldier's Field in the presence of an assemblage estimated at 250,000 people, emphasized with enthusiasm the effect of the gospel in emancipating the human spirit and human institutions. More unequivocal Mr. L. A. Taschereau, prime minister of Quebec, addressing the French section of the congress said: "If the Christian code has proclaimed fraternity, justice and charity as essential elements of the new religion, must not one of the first consequences be the liberty of religious liberty full and complete, free from all hindrance and permitting all of those who believe to practice and proclaim openly their faith?" This is the word of a layman, and of course is not spoken "ex cathedra," but it is spoken and to hear it spoken in such a quarter is compensation for four long centuries of Baptist pleading sometimes through persecution and death for religious liberty.

It is clearly apparent that there is in the Roman Catholic church a sincere and earnest longing for Christian unity and that there is a definite and persuasive propaganda to win all non-Catholic Christians to the church of Rome. Protestants of all sorts are named no longer as violent heretics to be harried out of the land, but are spoken of with tenderness as "straying sheep" to be sought and brought back to the fold. Rome courts them and there is a note of discovery in the approach. It may be the discovery that Protestants who have proved invincible against the use of force may possibly yield to persuasion.

At any rate the pope communicated to the congress his deep desire for Christian unity in these words:

"Those sheep, those souls, that belong to Christ through their belief in him, their eagerness to hear his voice and to do his will, their cleanness of heart and their charity abounding in many good works—these, too, must I brought together in his church and nourished with the Bread of Life, that so in reality and not in name only there may be 'one Lord, one faith, and one baptism.' The shall the reproach of division be taken away from the Christian name, and from those who glory in it, the evil of discord, then also, with single purpose and mutual support inspiring its members, shall a united Christendom under the standard of Christ the King, go forth to universal conquest and the spreading of his kingdom to the uttermost parts of the earth."

It is hard to see how any words could make a stronger appeal to the elemental impulse of every Christian soul and since they are used as a glowing testimony to the gracious urge in the heart of the Roman Catholic church it would be sad to find in the heart of Protestants a less gracious response. All Christians long for an unbroken fellowship in Christ. But speaking in the name of generations of Baptist martyrs and of eleven million living Baptists, we are compelled for the sake of a clear understanding to ask a question. Does the Roman Catholic church contemplate the unity of all Christians on the basis of a free faith in which Christ is the only Lord of the conscience, or is it proposed on the basis of subjection to the control of an ecclesiastical hierarchy? All other possibly divisive questions are subordinate to this. No mutual hunger for unity can be satisfied until this question shall have been clearly and finally answered. Baptists stand for a free faith with all of its implications. They demand nothing beyond it. We speak in love, but any evasion of the real issue would be futile. And we have waited with eagerness for a clear renunciation by the papal authorities of the right of compulsion in religion.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

This Looks Like News, Why Not Print It?

For six years the noted murder case against Sacco and Vanzetti has dragged along as a constant social irritant. The reactionary dailies have tried both men and pronounced them enemies of society, probably guilty of the crime, and whether guilty or not, deserving to be hanged on general principles as radicals. The radical papers have proclaimed both men innocent victims of a 'frame-up,' to be set alongside the case of Thomas Mooney and other "victims of capitalistic courts." The case has seesawed through all the courts to a final confirmed sentence of both men to the electric chair. But a tardy stay of execution has been secured on the ground that another man has confessed to having committed the murder with which they are charged. By the way, the dailies which gave plenty of space to the accusation of these men have failed to note this sensational turn of the case. There is not much call for comment except to reflect on the possibilities of trial by the newspapers and by popular prejudice.

Our Scriptural Rule Offends One Brother

He is Alva Martin Kerr, editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty. The offensive thing is the action of the Northern Baptist Convention with reference to baptism. And he writes caustic editorial words about it. The core of his criticism may be discussed in one quotation as follows: "There can never be warm-hearted and radiant unity throughout the church of Jesus Christ so long as some denominations presume to set themselves up on a pedestal of scriptural superiority and exclusiveness towards the other churches." It is alike distressing and perplexing. A "warm-hearted and radiant unity" is greatly to be desired. But on what non-scriptural basis as such unity yet been achieved? Does the Herald really think that it is to be sought on some other than a scriptural basis? Is its denomination (the Christian Church) making a larger contribution to the cause of Christian unity than the Baptist denomination is making? This question might be submitted with confidence to a jury of the other denominations. Is the tone of the very language quoted itself a contribution to the spirit of warm and radiant unity?

We Are Not "the Baptist Church"; We Do Not Disagree on Baptism

The Western Christian Advocate, in a perfectly courteous comment upon the action of the Northern Baptist Convention, admits that it does not "understand the significance" of the action. Manifestly it has not quite missed the situation. First it calls the constituency of the convention collectively "the Baptist Church." But Baptists reject on principle, utterly and perhaps unanimously, the practice of calling the denomination "the Baptist Church." The error is without blame, but it is error just the same. We are a family of Baptist churches. All ecclesiastical powers reside in the local congregation. Secondly, it understands us to "disagree on baptism." We do not so, by even a whisper. The only act that has any standing as baptism on the Northern Baptist Convention is the immersion of believers. Any church that recognizes or practices anything else for baptism, disqualifies itself for representation in the convention. But as in the past, so now, some Baptist churches receive into their membership unbaptized believers—anything but immersion being counted as no baptism.

If Words Could Kill, What Slaughter There Would Be!

Somebody sends a clipping for consideration containing the following remarks of Commander John H. McQuigg of the American Legion delivered on Memorial day: "Any one who could be contemptible enough to subscribe to the 'slacker pledge, the no-more-war oath,' is unworthy to live in any country, under any flag, anywhere." The words have a strangely familiar sound—"Away with him, away with him, crucify him!" Does the resemblance go any farther than the sound? One man thinks that the best way to stop war is to refuse to fight. Another thinks that the best way is to make a show of force that will cow the world. Is there not room in the world for both? If not, who shall decide which of them shall get out of the world? The best way to make pacifists is for such men as Commander McQuigg to talk as he talks.

American Pecksniffery Pecks at Pennsylvania

At this date the newspapers report that in the recent primaries in Pennsylvania, the total amount of money spent by or for three leading candidates for the nomination for senator of the United States is ascertained to be $2,000,000, with the investigation not yet completed. There is surprise and there is mild indignation. Why? Is the cost of the nomination too high? That is a business question, and the candidates were business men who are in the habit of expecting a good profit on their investments. Is the thing morally wrong? Certainly not by common and recognized business and political standards. For the manipulation of politics by business men for profits is a daily and legitimate operation. It is an "American institution" worth hundreds of millions annually to respectable citizens. The Christian standard of morals does not count in such delectable circles. It is fit only for "preachers, idealists and radicals." How many of these classes were responsible for the Pennsylvania slush fund?

This Does not Look Like Goose Step in Education

Henry McCracken, president of Vassar college, traces the youth movement to the professor's chair. He is quoted as saying: "Left to themselves, the students would probably have continued happily concerned with the enjoyment of their leisure time; brought face to face by their professors with world currents in politics, economics and religion, they have discovered that their own playthings were somewhat immature. It is much more fun playing with the tools of grown-up men. They responded with avidity. Free speech in the classroom and on the campus, for which the professors had been fighting in their university association, became in turn the rallying cry of the student. The right of a radical professor to retain his collegiate chair became in turn the right of the radical college organization to university toleration. The casting off of the narrower forces of denominational theology by the professor became in turn a movement for the abolition of compulsory religious ritual at the college." It should be recorded for future reference that the efforts of the last few years to muzzle the colleges and universities in the interest of powerful reactionary forces did not succeed. Educators bravely fought for freedom and have largely won it.

Is the Church Necessary for Religious Education?*

BY THEODORE GERALD SOARES

A VITAL subject of discussion today is the objective of education. We have not reached unanimity in our definitions, but there is a growing agreement in the general type of answer that is given to the question, "What are we trying to do for and with our children?" Nobody is content to answer the question in purely intellectual or utilitarian terms. From the kindergarten to the college the answer is in terms of spiritual values and moral efficiency. We are speaking of social relationships, of one's ability to live largely and contributively in the life of the world. All the culture, knowledge, skill, vocational ability, must be socialized. That is to say, our aim is a certain quality of life. What do we want to do for and with our boys and girls in school and college? For answer we think of the best kind of men and women whom we know, people of character and achievement, and we say that we should like to help the young folk to become like them. And what are we trying to do for them in religious education? For answer again, we think of the religious men and women who bring forth the fruits of the spirit, who are followers of Christ, with something of his attitude toward life, and we say that we are trying to help the young folk to come into some such experience and some such quality of living.

If, then, education in its more general aspects and religious education in particular are finding their objectives in a quality of human living, what has the church to do with it? It is quite evident that we might develop churchmanship without securing the type of life we have described, and, theoretically at least, there seems to be no reason why we should not develop the social qualities without the churchmanship. Indeed, we are in the midst today of a certain protest against church religion. Many earnest students of religious education who are deeply committed to the position outlined above feel that the church is somewhat of a hindrance to the attainment of the ends they have in view. They say that we are seeking now to find religion in the actual life of men; why then shut it up in an institution? Bring your religion out of the church; get it out of doors; let it play freely wherever there are human relationships. Do not segregate it; do not cloister it; do not have a place to which you go to be religious. Develop your religion in human contacts. There is plenty of room for it wherever folk are to be found. . . .

The Church Is Here

The principal fact about the church is that it is here, much as society is here. Some people talk of the church as if it were an institution that had been established by a convention and might be eliminated when the next convention met. It is somewhat as those doctrinaire social philosophers discussed the social contract theory of the state. They were trying to find out the function of the state, particularly with reference to the difficult problem of individual freedom. So they posited an initial condition of individual independence, and developed the theory that these individuals entered into a contract to cede certain elements of their independence to the state for the purpose of social organization. Of course, people never existed in any such independence, and they never made such a contract, and the state never was consciously developed as an instrument of political convenience. We are living, as all men are, in the great stream of social tradition, of political tradition. We find ourselves related to one another in this life of the state. We can change it, modify it, conceivably we can abolish it; but the main thing about it is that it is the way social living has developed, and we adjust ourselves to the life-situations and to the life-process in which we are. Whether men live without politics on some other planet might be a pleasant matter of speculation, but it would have little bearing on our own social problems.

The church is something like that. Religion institutionalized itself. We are the heritors of a church religion. Whatever the religious values are, they have come down to us connected with the experiences of men expressed in sacred books, with a day of the week distinguished for its special qualities, with a building set apart for certain types of social fellowship and especially to that form of social expression that we call worship, with its music, its symbolisms, its sacraments, its rituals, its liturgies. None of these things is religion, nor are all of them together religion. But they are inextricably connected with religion. We have our religion that way.

The Church and Our Children

It is most definitely to be remembered that this church religion has produced the great religious spirits. To be sure, it has sometimes produced the petty, contemptible, unsocial, churchmen who thought that religion was a church affair; but it has also produced the glorious liberating souls who have been just and generous and reverent, and that, not in spite of its church quality but from it and through it. It is true that men have sometimes come from worship and, thinking they had left God in the church, have made life hard for their fellow-men; but men have also come from worship and, with the inspiration gained from it, have become brothers to their fellow-men. The church at its best can do something. It can create moral enthusiasm; it can incite to noble endeavor; it can kindle heroic resolution. Therein is the responsibility of the church for religious education. It must do its part through the development of the best type of churchmanship to achieve those qualities of living which we are all seeking for our children.

This aspect of our task was greatly illuminated to me a few years ago by a conversation with a young student at Harvard. He came to talk to me about religion. He was very deeply interested in religion, and yet the conventional church religion had not found him at all. He had worked out a sort of religion of his own, and he wanted to talk it over with me and see what I thought of it. He had been reading Lord Charnwood's "Abraham Lincoln." This book had made the great American vital to him in a new and inspiring way. He said:

"It has seemed as if I have been living like Lincoln since I read the book. I have tried to look at things as I thought he looked at them. I have tried to meet circumstances and people as he would have met them. I have been almost possessed by his spirit. That made me think that perhaps one could have a similar experience with Jesus. I have therefore been reading the gospels and Jesus has become a new character to me. It seems to be living with him. Do you think religion is anything like that?"

*Used by special permission of the Journal of Religion.

Then he went on to tell me that he had heard a minister read the thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians, substituting the word "love" for "charity." This was a new idea to him, and it had flashed upon his mind that perhaps the essence of religion was loving relationships with one's fellow-men. He asked me if I thought that he was on the right track there. He further explained that these ideas had so taken hold of him that he had talked of them with a few congenial spirits among his fellow-students. They were meeting with him in his room once a week talking together, exchanging experiences in these aspects of life.

The boy was thoroughly genuine and naive. I might have smiled and told him that ordinary intelligence should have enabled him to understand the chapter in Corinthians, and that most people by the time they were his age ought to have heard that the essence of religion is love. Of course I did nothing of the kind. There is something wonderful about the discovery of an old truth by a young spirit. And these vital realities of religion are new every time they are new found. This boy had been born again. He had come into one of those regenerating experiences that illuminate life. But beyond the great interest that here was again the birth of religion in a human soul, this college student had rediscovered for himself, and had given to me in his simple recital, the three fundamental elements in religion. The first was the mystic experience. He might have applied Paul's words, "I live, yet not I, but Abraham Lincoln liveth in me," and when he had gone farther he could have used Paul's actual words, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." When he asked me if religion was anything like that, of course I told him that religion is exactly that, supremely that. Then he had found a social experience balancing the mystic experience. Religion was an outgoing in human kindness, justice, service. And third, he had found the church, not the ecclesiastical building on the corner, but the essential church. That little group in his room was the church in his house. Little communities like that Paul had established in every city in which he worked. To be sure the boys had no worship, no prayer, no songs, no sacrament. These might come later. But the essence of the church is the shared religious experience.

(To be continued)

In Answer to Prayer

BY HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY

WHILE I was at Northfield teaching the new study book, "Prayer and Missions," I received a letter from Mrs. Cronk so full of encouragement that I wanted to pass it on to the subscribers of THE BAPTIST. The letter of which Mrs. Cronk speaks was a humble request from a missionary in Japan to help secure an organ for the Brown memorial, a Lutheran building in process of erection in Japan. She stated that they had no organ in sight and would need one very badly for the church services. She was of the opinion that an organ to meet their needs could be gotten for $300 or $400.

"There were so many responsibilities resting upon me that I wondered how I could take on the responsibility of getting this organ. I read the letter with my secretary by my side, and as we talked together about it we agreed that we should both pray that the Lord would show where that organ, which certainly seemed to be needed for his glory, was to come from. I took the responsibility only to put it right back on the Lord. During the class hour, I told the class of this request that had come and that as we studied the book together it seemed that we should be able to have enough faith to believe that the omnipotent God was not so limited that he could not supply an organ that was so much needed in his work. We agreed together that we should make it a matter of special prayer that the Lord would show us how we could give the organ or any part of it ourselves, or that he would direct us to others who could do it if we could not. The next morning a woman called on me at the home of my hostess before I had gotten up and told me that the Lord had laid it upon her heart to give that organ as a thank-offering. I wondered whether she understood that it would require as large a gift as the missionary had suggested, and told her that possibly someone else would give part of it and that $5 had already been handed me. She said to use the $5 for eight, that she wanted to give this organ herself as a thank-offering to God. You can easily imagine how the faith of the class was strengthened.

"Another answer came in a most unexpected way: Not long ago I had a letter from one of the student secretaries saying that a Lutheran student who was in Boston university would have to drop out because of the financial loss of his family in Japan following the earthquake. This secretary said that only $60 would be required to make it possible for him to remain in the university until his course was completed and asked me whether I knew of any source from which the money could be obtained. I certainly did not know any one except the Lord to whom to turn at that time. A few days later I had a letter without any signature enclosing a cashier's check for $50 with the statement, 'Many years ago when I was a child I heard you tell a story of Japan. Enclosed is $50 which I hope you will use in some way for Japan.' When I sent it to the student secretary he reported that he had the other $10."

When I read these two instances I thought of the difficult situation in which our two Foreign Missionary Societies find themselves because of the severe cut in finances. I wondered why we Baptist women should not take all our needs in prayer to God; the same God who answered the prayer of faith of this consecrated Lutheran woman would hear ours.

Why should we not adventure ourselves upon God, laying before him all our difficulties and looking to him to remove them? In writing the text book for the present year, "Prayer and Missions," I was impressed as I never have been before with the willingness and ability of God to place all his infinite resources at the disposal of his children who are sincerely working for the kingdom of God.

God works for him who is waiting on him is the promise. Shall we not make this a year of waiting on God in a reality and fervor of prayer such as we have never known? We must work as if everything depended upon us and pray as if everything depended upon God.

Three Essentials of Church Architecture*

BY GEORGE T. MCCOLLUM

BEFORE considering plans for a new church or for remodeling an old church, it is necessary to understand the program of the church. Why does the church want a new building? What use will it make of the equipment when it is secured? If the church is to preach the gospel it should have a fitting auditorium; if it is to teach the scripture, religion, and life, to its children and young people, its building should be adapted to that purpose. If it is to provide for recreation—wholesome, innocent, constructive—this plan calls for certain equipment. When the program of the church in its various departments and in the numbers to whom it is to minister is understood, a plan can wisely be made and the church should be adapted to these needs in its own surroundings.

There should be adequate provision for access to the building, for its lighting, heating, ventilation, and it should all be in suitable character. New England has one preferred type of architecture, Southern California has its own type, and Florida is developing a type peculiar to its needs and conditions, simply illustrating the indispensable element of fitness.

Failure to apply this principle of fitness has resulted in lamentable failure again and again. I could point out a church which, by failure to observe this and the second principle which I mention, is suffering most grievously; essential activities of the church find no possible accommodations for their expression. The failure to build with strength is resulting in early decay; the probability seems to be that the building can last but a few years and it is seriously handicapping the activities of the church. I have in mind another church which, architecturally, would suggest almost anything but a house of worship; the first glance at it might suggest a club house, a business block or the home of a secret society; its first impression would never be that of a church. In contrast with such warnings, note the magnificent impression made by a single look at the fine building of Plymouth church, Cleveland. Its very exterior speaks volumes of memory and character, of beauty and power. One could never mistake such a building for anything but a church.

Religion is permanent, abiding, eternal in its character and the building itself should symbolize these sturdy elements in our religion. Its materials, its walls and beams and arches, even its roof should speak of eternal things. The tower, the steeple, the foundation and walls should suggest at once this element in the church itself and her ministry to humanity. It is probably the effort to meet this essential that suggests a tower or a lofty steeple. Whatever the location or surroundings, there should not be lacking this suggestion of truth and power and eternal life in the very structure of the house of God.

There is peculiar danger, in the construction of smaller churches, that this principle of strength may be forgotten or neglected. Massiveness is not indispensable to the expression of strength, but quality of material and suitable arrangement may give the desired impression.

Doubtless some will think that beauty is merely ornamental and not at all essential, but not so those who have given careful thought to the fitness of things. Ruskin places beauty as the keystone of his seven-fold analysis of architecture and every writer of eminence on architecture magnifies this essential element. By beauty we do not mean elaborate ornamentation, but beauty of material form, color and structure. Proportion, sequence, symmetry, make for beauty to the cultured eye and it is next to a crime to fail in reaching this high objective in church architecture. Great buildings speak eloquently on this subject, whether the Taj Mahal, St. Peter's, or St. John the Divine. Byron grew eloquent as he looked upon the Pantheon and cried, "Sanctuary and home of art and piety, Pantheon! Pride of Rome!"

If the church is to symbolize the presence of God, it must have beauty, whether of the sparkling Gothic type or of the simple but harmonious and perfect proportion of the classic. The secret of the success of the Greeks in the production of the Parthenon is that they devoted their genius for six hundred years to the development of their single type of architecture, justifying at length the boast,

"Earth proudly wears the Parthenon as the best gem upon her zone."

In most cases we cannot vie with these superlative achievements of architecture, but we should never forget that beauty is attainable and is essential to the best architectural result.

A church built in harmony with these principles is a source of both conscious and unconscious influence on the community in which it stands and upon those who use it. Our children are entitled to the subtle, elevating influence of a beautiful building perfectly adapted to the service which the church is to render and expressive at once of the very virtues of the gospel itself.

Such ends are not easily attained, but can be arrived at by care and study. The best money that a church spends in securing a new building is in the employment of the right kind of an architect, a man who knows church architecture and is devoted to the ideals that have been developed in American ecclesiastical building.

FIRST CHURCH, PASADENA, CALIFORNIA

*From an address given by the field secretary of the Congregational Church Building Society, at the annual meeting in Rockford, Ill.

The Devotional Life

The Christian Heritage

"I have called you friends." "My peace I give unto you." "My joy may be in you." "Go, make disciples of all nations."

BY GAIL CLELAND

DOWN through the ages has come that glorious thing which Jesus bequeathed to the world—that spiritual value which he spoke of as the life more abundant. It is the marvel of all history that he who was so poor that he had not where to lay his head was yet so rich that the world has not yet been able to calculate the worth of the vast estate which it inherited from him.

Certain elements of that heritage we know. It means the possession of treasures for which mankind has been yearning through all the years. The world is sad. Life is tragic. Sorrow and pain is the common lot of man. In the midst of life's sorrow, here is one who bequeaths us joy. "That my joy may be in you, and that your joy may be full."

Peace Promised

The world is torn with hatred and strife. From the beginning until now, men have warred one with another and nations have done battle to the death. There is none before me today, I think, so young that he is unable to remember the awful burden of the strife of war. In the midst of the world's fighting, here is one who promises peace. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth give I unto you."

The world is groping in darkness and error. In the midst of the world's folly, here is one who promises a knowledge of truth. "If ye abide in my words, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The world is hungry for friends that will sympathize and understand and love. In the very midst of the countless millions that crowd the earth's surface, we are lonely. Here is one who promises the bond of friendship. "Henceforth, I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth, but I have called you friends—and this is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you."

The world is sordid, and life is filled with sinful impulse and acts of shame. In the midst of the world's sin, here is one who summons us to nobility of soul. "To as many as received him gave he the right to become the sons of God. Ye therefore shall be perfect, even as your Heavenly Father is perfect."

The world is forever seeking, groping, searching after something, it knows not what—something worthy of its deepest love, its noblest worship. Without knowing what to call him, the world is seeking for God. Here is one who points the way. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. And this is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

In a word, the men and women who dwell upon this earth are forever driven by a kind of divine compulsion to find the highest meaning of life, to fulfill their rightful destiny, to come into the likeness of their true ideal. And here was one who has not only pointed out the answer to our deepest questions, but who has shown us in himself the meaning of life at its best. This is the Christian heritage bequeathed by Jesus Christ to those who should come after and seek the way.

Just in so far as we are richly endowed, we are deeply bound. Where much is given, much shall be required. And He who gave most requires most. "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all nations." The final element of the Christian heritage is the element of duty. Those who possess the sacred treasure of the life abundant can keep it as their own, only by giving it away.

And so the Christian heritage has come down to us, both a treasure and a summons. And those who are able to keep the greatest measure of the gift are those who labor most earnestly in obedience to the great commission. "He that saveth his life shall lose it, but he that loseth his life for my sake and the gospel, the same shall be saved."

The Heritage Enriched

Our fathers have earned their own right to the Christian inheritance of the life abundant by transmitting it to others. In their very toil and sacrifice, they have become rich in spiritual treasure, but they have kept our church alive because, in Christian faith, they could do no otherwise. In laboring for us and for our children, they have redeemed their own souls. The treasure of our Christian faith comes to us today after 100 years of church building, not alone in the pristine glory of the original faith delivered by Christ to the twelve disciples. It comes to us with all accumulative beauty and value of our beloved fathers and mothers, who through their own devotion have enriched the inheritance.

"And these all, having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us that they without us should not be made perfect. Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of God." That cloud of witnesses surrounds us today. In our victory they rejoice. In our strength they summon us to yet greater endeavor. We can almost see their faces.

The Chimney Corner

The Vision of a Veiled Woman

IN the heart of Central India, in the Vindhya mountains, there ruled until recently in the feudatory state of Bhopal, "the greatest woman of her age," says the New York Times. She was her highness the begum of Bhopal, a Mohammedan ruler who is an artist, author, scientist and engineer. She abdicated in favor of her youngest son, Nawab Zada Hamidulla.

In West Allis, Wis., at the Allis-Chalmers plant, a Hindustani, Islamul Haq, future state engineer of Bhopal, works from 7 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. as a student apprentice. He is finishing his engineering education, which has already yielded degrees from Bombay, Toronto and the University of Wisconsin, says the Milwaukee Journal.

It was at the selection of her highness's government that Mr. Haq six years ago left his own luxurious home in India to come to the land of the West as a state scholar. Here he has been gaining scientific knowledge which will aid him a few years hence when he begins to industrialize his part of India, to bring forth from the soil the minerals it has held since the world began, and to harness the wild rivers and rains of the Vindhya range.

All these things are to be done because of the vision and wisdom of a veiled Mahometan woman in the heart of India. She is an artist of the first rank whose pictures are exhibited in that peer of treasure houses, the British Museum in London. She is an author whose works in Hindustani have been translated into English.

She is a preacher of public hygiene, a scientist, an architect and an engineer, who has personally supervised the planning of buildings, industrial plants and engineering enterprises. She is a woman in whose feudatory state, contrary to British policy in India, prohibition reigns and, furthermore, is observed. Bhopal is probably the only state in the entire Orient where begging is a crime. She has founded eleven schools for persons of all ages in Bhopal City.

The state of Bhopal has always been friendly to the British. It was founded by Dost Mahommed Khan, an Afghan adventurer, who in 1728, raided down into India with a small band of adventurers. After terrific fighting against great odds and superior forces he wrested the territory from the reigning prince and established Bhopal.

Since 1844 the throne of Bhopal has descended in the female line and the begums have always taken a great interest in the governing of the state. Her highness, the recent ruler, was born in 1853 and ascended the throne on the death of her mother in 1901. She has been the most progressive ruler of all India, and under her guidance Bhopal has become the most modern section of all Hindustan, if not of all southern Asia.

Distractions

THIS afternoon the doorbell rang and I answered it and it was Mrs. Harper, being pops bosses wife, saying, How do you do, Benny, is your mother at home?

Yes mam, I sed. And she came in and sat down saying, Your getting to be quite a big boy, Benny, how do you manage to grow so quickly?

O, I jest wait and grow, I sed.

Which I do, and Mrs. Harper sed, Thats nice, and how are you getting along in skool?

Pritty good, fair, I sed. Ill go and tell ma your heer, I sed.

Thats nice, Mrs. Harper sed. And I started to go upstairs to tell ma and jest then I herd fire engines spounding as if they was going rite pass the house. Which they was, and I quick ran out and started to follow them and after I had run about 5 blocks the fire engines started to go pass slow the other way, proving it was a falts alarm, being a lucky thing for somebody but not for enybody expecting to see a fire, and jest then I saw Puds Simkins and Leroy Shooster looking disappointed and we all went to the fire house to see them unhitch the horses, and after a wile all of a suddin I remembered about Mrs. Harper, thinking, G, good nite, O boy, I better go in Cuzzin Arties house and telephone to ma.

Sonnet of the Seeker

IN frantic haste you dashed about your world

In search of culture with avid acquisition.

As each new cult its novel creed unfurled

You followed where it led without condition.

Each much-applauded book, or talked-of play

You scanned until its patter was your own.

Your hungry life you hoped to link this way

With that of those you envied. Thus alone

Could you find solace from the sacred dread

Of being less than first in everything.

One other place I'd have you search instead

Where wells of gentle understanding spring.

Look deep within your mother's quiet eyes.

The wealth of tempered wisdom therein lies!

—MARY ROSENBERG in American Israelite.

Wich I did, saying, Hello is this you ma?

Yes, wats a matter, ware are you? ma sed, and I sed, Im at Arties house, have you bin downstairs lately?

Downstairs, wat on erth are you tawking about? ma sed, and I sed, Nuthing, ony Mrs. Harper was down there wen I left the house and I was jest wondering if she still is, I forgot to tell you.

Ma saying several things and I dont know yet weather Mrs. Harper was still there or not on account of me deciding to stay at Arties for suppir and writing this erround there.—Lee Pape, in "Little Benny's Notebook," Chicago News.

The Saving Sense

A picket fence that would extend around the border of continental United States thirty times and about the earth ten times could be made from the ice-cream cones consumed in the United States in 1925, according to a report of the Illinois Agricultural association. But what would be the good of a fence that any small boy could eat his way through in less than five minutes?—"Hit and Miss," Chicago News.

A West Virginia danky, a blacksmith, recently announced a change in his business as follows:

"Notice: De copardnership heretofore resisting between me and Mose Skinner is hereby resolved. Dem what owed de firm will settle with me, and what the firm owes will settle with Mose."—The Outlook.

Item in local paper: J. E. Hannah, who at twenty-nine has had a painting accepted by the Royal Academy, began life as a mere boy.

Business man to secretarial applicant: "Yes, your writing is very good; the qestion is can you write shorthand?"

Would-be secretary: "Yes, I can. But I prefer to write longhand; it goes so much faster."

"Do you mean to insinuate that I can't tell the truth, sir?" demanded the pompous gentleman.

"By no means, by no means," retorted the suave youth; "it is impossible to tell what a man can do until he tries."

Johnny had been excited all morning, and finally burst out with: "We have a new baby at our house, teacher. Doctor Moore brought her."

Immediately another small hand was raised and a small voice piped up, "We take off him, too, teacher."—Chicago Tribune.

BOYS and Girls

Jack and the Beanstalk

BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

EVERY one likes a picnic! Especially a family picnic! The very mention of it brings up all sorts of nice memories—of shoeboxes full of sandwiches and hard-boiled eggs, of almost missing the boat, of getting lost, of being drenched in a thunder shower, and so on—do you remember?

So perhaps you understand how little a Jackenowski was thrilled when he heard of the picnic on which his family were to "go to beans," as the other Polish families called it.

At first it had really been fun. Certainly none of them had objected to leaving their stuffy room in the dingy apartment on that sizzling July day. For here they were, riding in an amazing thing called a train for the first time in their lives, with a cross sort of man paying their fare. And imagine such a long free ride—that alone was pleasant! Then, after hours of riding, the cross man bundled them out of the train at a small station, set in the middle of miles of green country. Immediately everybody was crowded into a wagon. Somebody shouted, "G'dap! g'dap!" and two horses began pulling along a road where green trees twinkled green cool leaves at the excited family.

As usual it was Jakobaa who spoke for all the tongue-tied sisters: "See, mutter, it looks like it did by the park that time when we went there. See, much greenness all over everythings. And it didn't cost us nothings for getting here—oh ne, my!"

But the picnic was a disappointment. To begin with, none of them liked their new home up in the loft of a ramshackle barn, where beds were empty bins with sacks of hay for mattresses. Four other Polish families slept up there, too, and the straw and bedding from one bunk spread over into the next, while everybody's extra clothes dangled from the rafters above. But Jan and Jakobaa hoped that the beans were going to be the real picnic. But—

Everybody had to pick hard and fast all day long out in the broiling sun, or in the rain, as the case might be, because they received so much money for each bushel picked at the end of the day. The cross man (he was known as a padrone, or boss) made everybody buy food from him, and he overcharged outrageously, so that every possible penny was needed. That was why the littlest Jackenowski had his pail and was set to picking beans, as well as the others. He was only about as big as a minute, but there was really nothing to picking beans, nothing at all. . . . "Hop-o'-my-thumb! hop-o'-my-thumb!" that was all, and plop would fall a bean pod into the

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

pail, making quite a jolly sound. But if the first few plops sounded jolly, it was not long before it became a very stupid game, you felt as if you really must sit

The Child in the Midst

WHEN the Lord of the great and the little,
The Potter whose hand shapes our clay,
Sets a child in the midst of the market
Where the world-peoples chaffer all day,
Sets a child with its innocent questions,
Its flower-face dimpled and fine,
In the very heart's core of the clamor,
A thought of the Maker divine.
And men, in their lust for dominion,
Their madness for silver and gold,
Crush the beauty and charm of that spirit,
Make the flower-face withered and old,
Bind the hands and feet with a tether
That childhood can never untie,
Deem not that Jehovah unheeding
Looks down from the height of the sky.
He sees, though we think Him unseeing,
He knows when the factory wheels
Grind down the life-blood of children;
When the poor little bond-servant kneels
In the pang of its frightful abasement;
Though all are deaf to its prayer,
There is coming a dark day of judgment
And the Lord of the child will be there.
The child in the midst, as we've marred it,
Bent-shouldered dull-eyed and a slave,
That cringes at word and at fetter,
That cries for the rest of the grave;
With our free flag unfolding above it,
So free, from the pine to the palm!
And our scared, pallid children beneath it!
There's a jar in the lilt of our psalm.
From the mine where the midnight engulfs it,
From the mill where the clogged air is thick
With the dust of the weaving that chokes it;
From the homes where it's fevered and sick
With man's toil, when God meant it for gladness,
The child in the midst of our clay,
God-moulded, man-marred, calls to heaven
For the vengeance we're daring this day.

—MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

down at the foot of the bean stalk and take forty winks. But forty winks bring in no pennies, and without pennies no food can be bought from the padrone. So it was hop-o'-my-thumb! all day long for the Jackenowskis until every single bean was picked.

You can see that this was no sort of a picnic at all, neither for Jan nor Jakobaa nor the littlest of all the Jackenowskis. And when I tell you that all over America there are Polish families who "go to strawberries" in June, "go to beans" in July, "go to peas, to corn, to beets" in August, you will be guessing that the vegetables on your own dinner table may have been picked by some such little foreign child who thought going to the country was going to be such a picnic until the dreadful monotony (of the pick in pic-nic!) made him tired and stupid. For after these vegetables are picked, the padrones rush the pickers into canning factories where the vegetables have to be cut up for canning. A few years ago, out of 4000 such factories in the United States 3000 employed boys and girls to snip the beans, pod the peas, peel the tomatoes, husk the corn, shuck the oysters. Those of you who have heard of the Child Labor Commission know that there are men and women in this country who have kept their eyes and ears open; they feel it is not fair for any Jan or Jakobaa to work so hard that his tired little body is worn out. Little by little new laws have been passed 'till more and more factories refuse to employ boys and girls. That does not mean that it is all over, but it is improving.

In the word "American" there are two wonderful words: "I can." Like a motto they have spurred every one who loves children to try to save the years of play and of school, so that every young American can be an American, not a cog, not a pair of hands, with ten fingers working, but some one like you: free, happy, loving summer for play days and winter for school days.

One of the two members of the first class to be graduated from Shanghai college, 1913, entered the ministry and practically every class since has had one or more ministerial students. Dr. F. J. White writes in the New East, "There are now thirteen graduates who are pastors of churches; one is secretary of a Baptist provincial convention; four are pastors of churches in four cities of a half million or more inhabitants and the others are pastors in small towns. Ten graduates are in other forms of direct religious work and sixty-one are teaching in mission schools." Out of 143 graduates in twelve years eighty-four, or 57 per cent, are in some form of Christian work.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for August 8

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys To Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

If you will read from the middle of page 15 on through to the bottom of page 18, and from the top of page 54 to the top of page 55 of "The Man Nobody Knows" you will learn something of what Christian living cost Christ. Read also the last chapter of this book, beginning on page 193. Read from the top of page 116 on through to the bottom of page 119 of "Modern Discipleship and What It Means."

Those of you who attended the Indianapolis convention last year may be able to dig out your notes and read over Doctor Agar's talk "The High Cost of Loving." Read also Lowell's "Vision of Sir Launfal" which may be had at all public libraries.

In presenting the lesson to the young people, tell of what Christ paid for his way of living. Then tell the story of the rich young ruler as it is told in Luke 18:18-23, showing that this man was not willing to pay the price for right living. Tell also the story of Sir Launfal, as told by Lowell, and if you have been able to secure Doctor Agar's talk, bring in some of these thoughts.

Throughout the entire meeting try to show the young people that right living costs a great deal in effort and mind and spirit—but show also that the final result is worthy of all effort.

Moving Mountains

"If the mountain will not come to Mohammed, then Mohammed will go to the mountain." Thus spake the prophet of long ago. Perhaps you have been wishing this were so—in essence. You may have said again and again in the past few weeks, "Since the Baptist young people's convention cannot come to me, I wish I could go to the convention." For to a great many of you "Baptist young people's convention" is synonymous with "mountain top." And yet, despite your efforts, going to the mountain is impossible.

But have you considered that perhaps it is possible for the mountain to come to you? So colossal may have seemed this task that you may not have even considered such a probability.

On Sept. 1, however, our task of bringing the mountain to young people will be completed. On that day will appear the first Baptist young people's annual. Yes, it's to be like the class annual of high school and college. The classes will each have a section, with pictures, snap shots, and what not. What are these classes? They are state and city young people's organizations. There will be something of interest about both.

A large part of this annual will be taken up with school history—the report of the Los Angeles convention. As far as is able, this report will bring to the young people the spirit and message of this great gathering of Baptist young people.

How much will it cost to have this mountain brought to you? Instead of the regular price of $1, readers of this page may have a copy of the annual by sending seventy-five cents to the Baptist Young People's Union (same address as THE BAPTIST).

I Prescribe

Are there some in your church—the young people's leaders perhaps—who are not interested in the Christian Life Program? Are there some in your association who are ignorant concerning it? Are there many others in both places who don't care? But the officers of the union, the society, the class, the association, are determined to have people realize the importance of this program and the value of getting it into operation. Listen!

An efficient doctor entered the room, donned his apron, and started to write. An excited young person came running in. She started to speak to the doctor, telling him that her name was "Membership" and that she lived in the church. When she told the doctor what troubled her, he consulted his chart on the wall, referred to his manual and told her what to do to be cured. No sooner had she left when a pale and haggard young man came in. His name was "Stewardship" and he lived in the collection plate, he said. After some consultation the doctor gave him remedies for immediate and future relief.

Upon Stewardship's exit, a young lady entered, saying that she was "Hospital." After telling of her ills, she received advice from the doctor and left the office. In a few minutes a young man was seen loitering near the doctor. He seemed bashful and afraid to speak. Finally he picked up enough courage to slip in and onto the edge of a chair near the doctor and said, when asked, that his name was "Publicity." After a consultation, the doctor prescribed something for him and sent him away happy.

A young lady who shook as if with ague came in accompanied by a sober individual. The sober person stated that she was "Missionary" and her friend was "Social." Both were in need of doctor's advice, she said. The doctor heard the case and prescribed something for each of them. Hardly had they gone when in came a young chap who said his thoughts were dull and his denominational blood pressure low. His name was "Education." The doctor had to do a lot of prescribing for this young man, but he left feeling happy.

The doctor heaved a long sigh and—What was it all about? Why, it is what the officers of the society did to show the young people what a good program the Christian Life Program would be for the society. Instead of telling them in prosaic language, they "played" before the young people the good points of the Christian Life Program. Little bits of humor and wisdom were scattered all through this playlet, so that the attention of the young people was held from the start.

Perhaps you want to bring the Christian Life Program before your young people in such a way that they cannot help but adopt it. A little sketch, such as is outlined above, would be the very thing to "put it over." If you want the remedies, questions, etc., just write the B. Y. P. U. of America (same address as THE BAPTIST) for a copy of "The Doctor's Prescription." You will find it well worth "giving" to your young people before presenting the "question" concerning the adoption of the program.

Five Jews were with Columbus. Thirty-four years after the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, Jews came to New Amsterdam (now New York) from Brazil where their presence was unwelcome. They were treated unkindly by the people of New Amsterdam, but the Dutch West Indies Company favored their staying. Freedom of worship was denied them, and they went to Rhode Island where they were made to feel at home and built their first synagogue. There were more than twenty Jewish officers in the Revolutionary army. After the Revolutionary war 2000 Jews, mostly Spanish, were in this country. In 1825 the number had grown to 6000. In the century since then great numbers have come, and now approximately 3,900,000 are scattered over the United States. In Greater New York there are 1,750,000.—Annual Report of the Home Mission Society.

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

EVERY BAPTIST CHURCH COULD SAY AS MUCH

The church of Midway, Pa., reports to the state convention office:

"We are pleased to note progress in all our departments of work. The annual meeting, held on Apr. 28, showed the church to be in excellent condition. All bills are paid and a balance in the treasury. Our accepted quota for 1925-26 has been paid in full. We have also accepted in full our new quota, and it is ready pledged and over-subscribed."

STAIRWAY CUT IN USE

Two churches have recently written to borrow the stairway cut. One, the Park Memorial church of Springfield, Mass., Rev. G. Bitt Beers, pastor, used it in the weekly calendar for June 27, commenting as follows:

"Do you know that it would be worth $100,000 to our missionary cause if every person paid his pledge every week, and every treasurer made remittance every month? Our treasurer does his part by forwarding all money promptly. Will you do your part by keeping your pledge paid up to date?"

"Do you know that the expenses of the church are just as heavy during July and August, when the attendance drops and you are away on your vacation, as at any other time? If you wait until you come back to pay your pledge, the church has to borrow and pay interest. If you pay up before you go away you are a 100 per cent cooperator."

Rev. Hammond S. Crossan, pastor of the Royersford, Pa., church, is going to use the stairway cut for the heading of a special letter which he is getting out in behalf of the membership canvass in July, in an effort to have the giving for missions more evenly divided over the twelve months.

"JOASH CHEST" IN NORFOLK, NEBRASKA

Read Exodus, 35 and 36, about the free-will offering for the tabernacle and then learn how the church of Norfolk, Neb., Rev. T. DeBoyce Franklin, pastor, adapted this method to the raising of the church budget.

In place of the every-member canvass, the church's finance committee decided to hold what they called a "Joash Chest" service this year, on the last Sunday in April. On the preceding Sunday, the pastor preached on "God's Plan of Financing His Work." During the week that followed the finance committee mailed to every family a letter outlining the plan, and enclosing pledge cards for each member.

On the final Sunday the pastor preached on "A Free-Will Offering Worthy of God's Work," using the story of the tabernacle offering as an illustration, and at the close of the sermon, while a march was being played, everyone marched past the chest and deposited his or her pledge.

A larger number of pledges was received than ever before, and the budgets for current expenses and missions were practically underwritten. After seeing the persons unable to attend the pledging service, the finance committee expects to go over the top without any difficulty.

The pastor writes to the state office: "I shall do my best to get the church to pay one-twelfth of its budget monthly. We plan to have regular monthly meetings of the finance committee, preceding the monthly business meetings of the church, when a report will be given of the financial standing of those pledging, and if we find they are falling behind, we shall do our best through statements and announcements from the pulpit to get them to bring up the arrears and to keep paid up."

NEEDING IMMEDIATE

ATTENTION

An article in the June issue of the Illinois Baptist Bulletin deals with the subject of giving for current expenses and benevolences. Total contributions of Illinois Baptists amounted in 1919 to $1,254,678, equal to $14.40 per capita; in 1925, to $2,402,549, or $26.30 per capita, according to the article. Only a small proportion of the total gain, and no per capita gain, is registered on the side of benevolence. In fact, the per capita giving for benevolence has steadily fallen from $7.23 in 1921 to $4.30 in 1925.

The last paragraph of the article comments: "A general conclusion is that the missionary and benevolent enterprises of the denomination are suffering not so much from indifference or from differences of opinion, as from a disturbed balance in the distribution of the Lord's money. In Illinois, the ratio last year was $22 per capita for home expenses and $4.30 per capita for all benevolences. If that is the ratio for the country as a whole, it needs immediate attention from the churches themselves."

MAY 1926 HONOR ROLL

Fourteen conventions sent in for May 1926 more money than they collected in May 1925, and so earned for themselves a place on the first honor roll of the new fiscal year. They are listed here in the order of the percentage by which they surpassed their own last year's record: Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Massachusetts, Western Washington, Delaware, Connecticut, Southern California, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Colorado, New York Metropolitan Board, Pennsylvania, and Idaho.

OHIO CHURCH USES

QUESTIONNAIRE

The Mansfield church, in Ohio, had to decide a question of policy—whether or not to leave its present location and move to a new site. To get a really comprehensive view of what the members thought, it decided to send out a questionnaire. In the business meeting called to act on the responses, it was agreed that unless the proposal to move should receive 95 per cent of all votes cast, the proposition should be dropped. However, the project was unanimously endorsed and plans are now going forward for the construction of a new church. The pastor reports that from that day to this, there has not been a word of opposition to the action taken.

This method of finding out how a congregation feels about church projects may offer a suggestion to other Baptist churches.

BOARD WILL LOAN CUTS

The First church of Waterbury, Connecticut, Rev. D. P. Gaines, pastor, prints in its weekly church calendar for June 22, a picture of the budget stairway which was used in the annual report of the Board of Missionary Cooperation. We have available a number of the cuts which were used in this report and shall be glad to loan them to churches which write in for them. Requests should be addressed to the Publicity Division of the Board of Missionary Cooperation, Room 931, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

In addition to the line cuts used in the report, we also have about eight or ten different halftone cuts, representing scenes from the life of Christ. These are of a good size for church calendars, but since they are fine screen cuts (133 line), they can only be used effectively by churches which print their calendars on glossy paper.

Among Ourselves

Philadelphia Letter

By ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

THE Sesqui-Centennial is the big thing on the horizon just now and bids fair to continue its demands for some time to come. Of its physical bigness I need not speak save to say that it is immense according to any standard of past achievement. I should advise our friends, however, not to hurry their coming. It is not complete yet and cannot be for some time. Those who come in August and September will be more satisfied.

The Sunday question has come up in connection with it and is causing a furore among the saints who have no historical record of a separation of church and state to steady them. At first through the activities of the Lord's Day Alliance, the old blue laws of Pennsylvania were accepted and the policy established that the exposition was to be closed on Sunday. Ecclesiastical politicians thought they had this lid nailed on tight. When the opening came, however, and people saw what it meant to have the gates closed, a demand rose at once for an open Sunday. By a vote of thirty-nine to one, the board in authority has voted to open it wide, "Gladway" and all.

The reception to this has been interesting as a revelation of conscience and religious ideals. The Baptist ministers had adjourned their conference for the summer and so did nothing. Presbyterian and Methodist conferences have expressed their disgust, shame and indignation at this desecration of the Lord's day. Other ministers just as boldly have expressed their conviction that our Protestant conscience has no right to bind the privileges of others of different training and beliefs. It has been pointed out that a great class of working people have no other day but Sunday to attend with their families.

Pennsylvania has had a quiet Sunday comparatively but it has been enjoying it on the momentum of influences long since dead. The present citizen, church member or not, is free in his outlook and is poor material for the Sabbatarian to depend upon for supporting his stricter program. The tragedy of the situation to my mind is not the open Sesqui but the host of indifferent people. What we need is not more law but more conscience, more idealism, more of what only a revival of religion can bring.

Since the convention at Washington a movement has been started among the pastors to concentrate attention on evangelism, as Doctor Massee suggested. A meeting was called of twenty pastors at the Baptist temple and after a thorough canvass of the situation a call was sent out for a larger meeting of pastors and deacons which would gather a week later. This meeting took place at the First church on June 25 with a large attendance. Out of this conference came the appointment of a special committee of twenty which should function during the coming year to promote definite and simultaneous campaigns of evangelism through the local churches. A. Ray Petty was made chairman and I. M. Rose, secretary.

It is good news to report that our able executive secretary of the Philadelphia Federation of Churches was given the degree of Doctor of Divinity at the commencement exercises of Bucknell university.

Wisconsin State Convention

By R. C. SPEER

THE Wisconsin State Convention met this year at Stevens Point. Rev. James Blake, now in his twenty-second year as pastor there, acted as convention host. Wisconsin Baptists are so scattered that when they meet for their annual convention they come from great distances and frequently from isolated churches. The three-day program consisted of many types of speakers brought from near and far, each with an inspirational message.

Dr. Robert Gordon of Fond du Lac lead a series of devotional hours. These were not opening exercises for the sessions but had the last half hour of each session, bringing the delegates to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

There was unity throughout the entire program. The theme, "The Enriching Christ" was the underlying thought in every session and in practically every address. The text, Ephesians 3:8, was the key-note of the convention. This was brought out from many angles and the entire range of church and kingdom interests was discussed by various able speakers during the course of the convention.

Pres. E. J. Steinberg in his annual address stressed the function of the church. He declared that when a church accepts responsibility in a community it must plan to discharge its duty in the best way possible. The real measure of success is the answer we give to the question, "How does this church supply the spiritual needs of the community?" The church must keep in mind the idea of service if it wishes to retain its influence.

The report of the board of managers including a review of the past five years, was given by Supt. A. Le Grand and showed a large increase in the annual income and in the permanent funds of the convention. Credit is due Doctor Le Grand whose keen judgment has brought about this condition. The report of the committee on findings was made in an interesting manner by Rev. W. S. Rydman.

In this rural state distinction attaches to the rural church. During the convention several of the smaller churches received trophies for various forms of work. Such churches as Antigo and Bancroft won distinction in the reading contest.

One of the outstanding things about the convention was the large number of young people in attendance. Rev. C. C. Browne, director of religious education is to be congratulated on achieving such an amount of interest among the young people. Green Lake assembly trains the young people to serve their community.

Visitors from outside Wisconsin included, Dr. Herbert W. Virgin, Dr. W. H. Bowler, Mrs. E. H. Kinney, Miss Mildred Cummings, Dr. Charles W. Gilkey and Dr. Frank Smith.

The Maine Convention

By E. C. WHITEMORE

THE delegates and visitors to the convention at Rockland were entertained with hospitality and they came in numbers that would have overwhelmed an ordinary city. Pastor Browne made an ideal convention host and Mrs. Browne as director of the great choir, made the music an act of worship and an inspiration.

The woman's state missionary society Mrs. C. W. Corey, president, enjoyed Miss Jennie Reilly, missionary nurse; approved the reports of the departments and took satisfaction in Mrs. Corey's report that Maine lead all New England in the missionary reading contest and in Mrs. Whittemore's report that the state lead New England in the White Cross service.

The ministers, under the presidency of Rev. E. M. Holman, heard a paper by Dr. Wm. H. Jones of Immanuel church Portland, and a talk by Mayor Smith of Saco on what laymen expect of their pastor.

Before a large audience Dr. J. C. Massee portrayed his conception of the gospel and the evangelism necessary to make it most widely effective.

In the regular session, Doctor Mower who has resigned the office of executive secretary after twenty-three years of steady, constructive work, read his final comprehensive and encouraging report. In all the associations actions of honor and gratitude to Doctor Mower were voted and these were collected in a testimonial volume which was presented to the retiring secretary. The women presented Mrs. Mower with a bouquet of roses. As a successor to Doctor Mower the committee elected Rev. J. S. Pendleton of the Columbia Street church, Bangor. Mr. Pendleton has had eight years of successful service at Bangor.

allowing a helpful pastorate at Farmington. He comes to the greatest opportunity and service in the history of Maine Baptists. He will have strong, prayerful and united support.

On Thursday evening Dr. C. N. Arlickle of Newton Center, Mass., inspired another vast audience. Friday was educational day and after Secretary Whitteford of the commission of education had reported a successful year in the colleges and schools, President Gray spoke for states and Professor Newman for Colby while Hebron, Coburn, Ricker, M. C. I. and Higgins were represented by principals or trustees.

Doctor Bowler visited the convention for the first time and received the welcome that his earnest missionary address and vigorous denominational program deserved.

The force of pastor evangelists and missionaries has been active, more baptisms being reported than for many years. Treasurer Graffam was able to report increase in funds and annuities and balance on the right side of the ledger. The interests of religious education have been well served by Director Fletcher H. Knollin. His report was favorably received. The department in young people's work was presented by Carroll Tripp who is graduating from Colby college.

Hon. W. O. Fuller of Rockland, the new president, sustained his reputation as the wittiest toastmaster in Maine at the men's banquet. In his words to the convention he made plain that he is one of the true-hearted, open-minded, loyal laymen so necessary in these days if the church is to realize her opportunity. Maine Baptists went home pledged in their souls and to each other to a year of greater endeavor, more prayer, faith, hope and love.

Letter from India

By W. L. FERGUSON

TO WRITE about India at the present time is difficult, for it is quite probable that before what is written gets into print and to the readers of THE BAPTIST most of the things mentioned will be obsolete or the conditions so changed that what is written fails to correspond with later developments. Things here are in chaos politically. With the retirement of Mr. Gandhi for a year's silence and rest, with the breakdown of the Hindu-Muslim pact of unity and cooperation and the recrudescence of the old religious and communal feuds between them, things seem to be in a worse way than they have been for some years. Few political parties are being formed and dissolved with great speed. The tendency to fall apart seems greater than the ability to cohere. As matters stand today there is not in sight any big, outstanding party leader. Death has claimed one after the other the towering men who have rallied the forces of the past, and Mr. Gandhi is not now actively engaged in leadership. He has seen his policy politically, and the policies for which he stood have failed. His name, once so potent, seems to have lost its magic with the politicians and to a large extent with the multitudes. There are not many who expect that he will "come back;" but he may do so.

There have been riots again in Calcutta, in Delhi, and in Khargpur, all of them connected with relations between Hindus and Mohammedans. It may seem trivial to western readers that such questions as the marching of processions and the playing of music in front of a mosque would be sufficient cause to occasion a riot, but those are just the things which touch things off in this land. The Hindus are fond of processions and music. They parade for festivals, with idols borne on palanquins carried on the shoulders of strong men; they have wedding processions, with mounted bridegroom, attendants, lighted torches, canopies, gift-bearers; and they likewise have processions at funerals. With each of these doings music is an accompaniment. The Hindus aver that music is an essential part of the procession; but the Mohammedans object to its being played in front of a mosque. So great has become the tension over this question that the governor of Bengal called a conference of leading men from the two communities to determine what really is the unwritten law and custom concerning the matter. If one is to believe the press reports, His Excellency failed to discover the truth. The Hindus aver that they have always had the right to play anywhere their processions moved; while the Muslims deny it and say that music must always be silenced when passing their places of worship. So tense has the feeling become that Calcutta witnessed the novel spectacle of a religious procession being escorted through the streets by the military as a safeguard against a communal attack. Whereunto all this will lead is not known; but it is very patent now that the political disruption between Hindus and Mohammedans is complete.

While the Hindus have been greatly stirred in regard to the color-bar legislation in South Africa by which Indians are placed on a plane of inequality with the whites, the Mohammedans have been sorely distressed at the plight of Islam ever since the great war. India was strongly represented in the recent Pan-Islamic congress, which met in Cairo, Egypt. The chief discussions centered about the restoration of the Caliphate; but so diverse were the religious views and the political interests of those gathered in the congress from all parts of the Mohammedan world, that no agreement could be reached except on ideal principles. No choice was or could be made of a head for Islam such as the former sultans of Turkey used to be. A delegation from India also visited the Hedjaz, to learn the truth about the condition of the "holy places," Medina and Mecca. Enough has been made public to reveal their dissatisfaction with the Wahabi rule which has recently been established in that part of Arabia. To say that Muslim India is not pleased with the present regime in Turkey would be putting the case mildly. It is as much aggrieved over the deposition of the sultan of Turkey as it is over the desecration of the shrines of Medina and Mecca, for both catastrophes took place at the hands of Muslim rulers. The interplay of sectarianism within Islam and political motives and ambitions account for the failure of the Cairo congress.

Further causes of disquietude among Mussalmans are found in the dispatches which tell of the surrender of Abdel Krim to the French and Spanish in North Africa. This contest has been long-drawn-out, and many secret hopes have been entertained that Europe would fail in its campaign against the desert tribes. Then, too, Signor Mussolini has been abroad, speech-making in Tripoli. His words and works have alarmed Turkey, and rumors of an impending war have reached India, where it is said that Turkey is about to be engaged in a struggle against Italy and Greece in coalition. The Geneva award concerning the frontier between Turkey and Iraq, which is nominally a Mohammedan state, but under the mandate of Great Britain, did not altogether please Islam in India, for it was suspected of being a decision against Turkey and in favor of Great Britain. Recent news, however, is to the effect that a treaty is ready for signature between Turkey and Iraq, whereby Turkey gets a share in the extensive oil fields of Mesopotamia, and Iraq retains possession of Mosul, the city and region most disputed. Thus it will be seen that the sabre rattlings of Europe, the diplomacy of Asia Minor, and the doings of the League of Nations, all find echoes and repercussions in this land of India. These added to India's own desires, difficulties and concerns, make the atmosphere electric at times. The turmoil at present going on in China too, adds to the inflammableness of the whole situation in the Orient.

The papers here are giving much space to the coal strike in Great Britain and the sympathetic general strike which accompanied it for a time. Indian labor is becoming more and more conscious of itself and is organized better than formerly. No leaders of great prominence have arisen from the ranks, as yet; but outsiders are not wanting, who for personal and political ends are seeking to lead the labor movement and to wield its force for their own advancement. The struggles of labor in the West are becoming better known, and the East is not going to be slow in adopting whatever methods seem to be most effective. The partial paralysis of traffic in England has made India receive scant mails this week. If the coal strike and the consequent deadlock continue for the thirteen weeks threatened, the steamship connections between the West and the East may be greatly weakened, for ships are still dependent upon coal to a large extent, though many oil burning ships are plying between Europe and the East.

High temperatures are all the go now in this tropical empire. Madras has registered over 108 degrees; Nellore 112; Kurnool 113; Cocanada 109; and other places 100 and above. The southwest monsoon has begun to blow, and the hot winds on the plains scorch and curl up the verdure. But these are the winds which normally bring the rains to the west coast of India. These will break soon we hope, and bring relief to the Deccan and Malabar especially. The east coast will have to wait till October before her turn for copious wetting comes. Meantime there will be a very slow subsidence of temperatures from the high ranges I have named above to the scale between the 90's and 100 daily. Schools, colleges, and most institutions are now closed and both students and staff are on vacation. This is the "hill season" and the time for conferences, conventions, and recreation, preparatory to the re-opening of work of every sort. Many missionaries become girded anew for service and go back to their stations and labors with new strength in their bodies, new songs in their hearts, and incentives and inspirations enough to carry them forward another stage in their endeavors for India.

June 1, 1926.

Mornay Williams

By WM. B. LIPPHARD FOR THE BOARD OF THE FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY

IN THE death of Mornay Williams, Esq., June 18, 1926, the Christian world, the Baptist denomination, and, in particular, the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, suffer a distinct loss. It is safe to say that few of his Baptist contemporaries, whether ministers or laymen, rendered a more conspicuous service to the Christian church at home and abroad.

Mornay Williams was born in the city of New York on June 21, 1856, of distinguished Christian ancestry. His grandfather, Rev. John Williams, came to New York from Wales in 1795 and was pastor of the Oliver Street Baptist church for twenty-seven years until his death in 1825. His father, Rev. William R. Williams, was for more than half a century pastor of the Amity Baptist church, and was also an author whose "Lectures on Baptist History" and other works placed him in the first rank among religious writers. With such ancestry Mr. Williams naturally inherited an interest in both culture and religion, and though a busy practicing lawyer he devoted much time to literary and religious activities. Possessed of a poetic imagination, a broad outlook on human affairs and a keen judicial mind, he brought unusual resources to any cause which he espoused. He was gifted with an impressive English style, in both spoken and written discourse. Though a man of positive convictions, he was conspicuously fair-minded and regardful of the rights and opinions of others. In all his relations he carried himself as a Christian gentleman, manifesting an ardent and childlike faith and a singular devotion to his Master and the interests of his kingdom on earth. He did not hesitate to make his personal interests secondary and to sacrifice time, strength and professional opportunity for the sake of the cause he loved.

Mr. Williams was graduated from Columbia university in 1878 with high honors and was admitted to the bar in New York in 1880. In his legal practice he specialized in the handling of estates, and he was also active in promoting laws for the improvement of labor conditions and for prison and other reforms. He was the author of an act revising the laws of charitable trusts in New York.

He gave many years of service to a variety of Christian and philanthropic agencies. For twenty-five years he was a director of the New York Juvenile Asylum and for thirteen years its president; for seventeen years a member of the New York Child Labor Committee and during most of that time its chairman; several years a member of the New York State Conference of Charities and Correction, and in 1909 its president; a director of the prison association of New York. He was especially interested in the cause of the sick and those in prison, and neglected children, especially the street boys in large cities. Many times he appeared before the state legislature on behalf of women and children. Removing to Englewood, some years ago, he was appointed by the governor and served for a term as a member of the Palisades Interstate Park Commission, representing the state of New Jersey.

He was well known for his connection with denominational and interdenominational agencies, especially of a missionary character. He was president of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, a member of the board of the American Bible Society, vice-chairman of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which was organized largely as a result of his initiative efforts; and chairman of the board of trustees of the West China Union university; the Young Men's Christian Association of the City of New York and the American Tract Society. For eighteen years he was a member of the board of managers of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, and at the time of his death was its senior member. He was at various times the chairman of the educational section and vice-chairman of the board of managers.

In his missionary interests he showed a keen and prophetic sense of the menace of race prejudice. He wrote and prayed and worked for its removal years before it came to hold the prominent place it occupies in present day thought. Some years ago he wrote the following prayer for freedom from race prejudice, which the board now incorporates in its records as an expression of its own conviction: "O God, who hast made man in thine own likeness and who dost love all whom thou hast made, suffer us not, because of difference in race, color or condition, to separate ourselves from others and thereby from thee; but teach us the unity of thy family and the universality of thy love. As thy Son, our Saviour was born of a Hebrew mother and ministered first to his brethren of the house of Israel, but rejoiced in the faith of a Syro-Phoenician woman and of a Roman soldier, and suffered his cross to be carried by a man of Africa; teach us, also while loving and serving our own, to enter into the communion of the whole human family; and forbid that, from pride of birth and hardness of heart, we should despise any for whom Christ died or injure any in whom he lives. Amen."

Mr. Williams is survived by his widow Mrs. Helen Hope Williams, and by a brother, Rev. Leighton Williams, rector of Christ church, Marlboro, N. Y.

Commencement at Bethel Institute, St. Paul

By E. A. FINSTROM

The first event of the commencement season was visitors' day when Dr. Frank Nelson of Minnesota college gave a stirring address on "The Christian Home and the Christian School." Rev. R. L. Moyer of the Northwestern Bible school also spoke.

Bethel athletes made a splendid showing in the field meet with Minnehaha academy. Bethel won first place in every event except one. The final score was Bethel 59, Minnehaha 21.

Gatherings in which both students and faculty take much interest are the junior-senior banquets. One of these was held in the seminary, the other in the academy. The preparation is usually elaborate, the decorations are beautiful and the program is well-planned.

Another gathering of similar interest is the alumni banquet. This was held May 28 in the Nicollet hotel, Minneapolis. The principal address was given by Prof. A. Z. Mann of Hamline university. The banquet was the largest in the history of the academy alumni association.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. V. E. Hedberg of Chicago. The services were held in the Central Swedish Baptist church. Mr. Hedberg is a member of the board of trustees of Bethel institute and of the executive committee of the Swedish Baptist General Conference. He had an important part in beginning the work of Bethel academy twenty-one years ago.

The program of the Olivia Johnson memorial missionary movement was given in the Elim church, Minneapolis. The speakers were Dr. Frank Peterson, Minneapolis, and Rev. George Magnuson, Midale, Sask., Canada. This movement has been organized in memory of the late Miss Olivia Johnson, a missionary to the Philippine Islands. Its purpose is to arouse the interest of students in world-wide missions. So successful has it been that about twenty faculty members and students from Bethel academy have already gone to the foreign fields, and four more are ready to sail.

MORNAY WILLIAMS

The seminary gave its commencement program in the Bethel church, Minneapolis. Pres. G. Arvid Hagstrom conferred the degrees and presented the diplomas and awards. Three students received D.B. degrees, five received Th.B.s, and four Th. G. degrees. There were five graduates from the Bible and missionary training course. Three of the graduates, Miss Mabel Hanson, Miss Elva Forssell and Mr. Hartley Grandin gave the commencement orations. Dean Karl J. Karlson Ph.D., and Rev. Frank Peterson D.D., delivered addresses.

The academy commencement was held June 11. At this time forty-eight students were graduated from the academic department while eight certificates and diplomas were given in the music department. The commencement speaker was Pres. Theodore Anderson of Minnehaha academy. Scholarship pins were awarded the senior honor students. Special mention was made of the fact that two graduates had not missed a single class period during the entire course of four years. One of these students had almost entirely supported himself.

This marks the close of one of the most successful years in the history of the school.

The University of Redlands

By W. H. ROBERTS

It is our privilege to report a year of extraordinary progress at Redlands. Enrollment shows the encouraging total of 567 with every likelihood that next year it will be over the 600 mark. Redlands is no longer obliged to struggle for the savings of other institutions but is attracting ever larger numbers of the kind of students it wishes to have—the finest of our young people. There is a spirit of earnest devotion to high aims, a wholesome Christian loyalty.

The material equipment of the university has very nearly kept pace with its growth in numbers. We are proud of our new dormitory for women and our new library. The former, Grossmont hall, was built at a cost of $100,000 and provides accommodation for one hundred women. The library, costing about $75,000, is a beautiful building and the facilities it affords are a delight both to students and faculty. The endowment has been increased by payments of pledges on the sum of $400,000 noted in last year's report. Immediate needs now are a central heating plant and an adequate gymnasium.

The third annual student conference was held at Redlands in April. Among the speakers were Dr. O. P. Gifford of Pasadena, Dr. Cortland Myers of Los Angeles, Dr. T. B. Frizzell of Long Beach, and Robert P. Wilder of all the world. As in the conferences that have gone before, there was a glorifying of Christ, a far-reaching vision of his meaning for the world's need, a strong inspiration to Christian thinking and living. We are glad that the Baptist college in southern California is privileged to have the part it does in thus holding up before Baptist young people these great ideals.

Redlands is peculiarly fortunate in the cordial relations that obtain between the college and the churches of the city. To this no one has contributed more than our own Baptist pastor, Rev. Norman Henderson.

The baccalaureate service was held in the Baptist church Sunday, June 6, with Rev. Lincoln Ferris of the Methodist church, Glendale, Calif., as preacher. His text was "When ye pray, say Father."

The sermon before the Christian associations of the college was preached at the evening service the same day by Rev. J. N. Field, founder, first president, and loved friend of the university.

At the commencement exercises Tuesday evening, June 8, degrees were granted to eighty-six young men and women. The address was delivered by Hon. Benjamin F. Bledsoe of Los Angeles. It was an earnest setting forth of American ideals and a stirring summons to loyal, strenuous endeavor.

West China Letter

By JOE TAYLOR

ANNUAL reports are not often consulted for interpretations of the national life of a people. They are usually given a wide berth and are left to the

(Continued on page 747)

Here, There and Everywhere

ON APR. 18 the new edifice at Vermilion, S. D., was dedicated. Rev. Hal P. Fudge is the pastor. Dr. H. R. Best of Fargo, N. D., preached the sermon of dedication. Dr. C. S. Thoms offered the prayer. A week was devoted to special meetings with outstanding speakers from near and far. The building is of granite and harmonizes with the section erected in 1890, under the leadership of Dr. R. N. Van Doren. In addition to the beautiful auditorium it has a social hall with stage, a modern kitchen, a kitchenette, rest rooms, church school assembly room, parlors, departmental rooms for religious education, a pastor's office and other facilities for meeting the needs of a university city. Under the inspiring leadership of the pastor all money was raised in advance, making appeals for funds unnecessary on dedication day. The finance committee was headed by Mr. R. A. Mor-

HAL P. FUDGE

THE NEW CHURCH BUILDING AT VERMILION, S. D.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Illinois.

"Good evening, friends, vacationists and fellow sufferers from prickly heat. We trust that you, like Adam in Eden, have walked in your gardens in the cool of the day and are now ready to 'get' a concrete idea. But remember that concrete ideas do not spring from concrete brains.

"Here's the idea: 'Three copies of THE BAPTIST will be available each Sunday for the next six months to the first three that ask for them. The price is five cents. Mrs. Kjelson is the newsboy. The issue this week contains the great "Keynote" address of the Northern Baptist Convention in session at Washington, D. C., by James Whitcomb Brouwer.'—Bulletin of the Temple, Mitchell, S. D., Rev. Ray Morris McCann, minister.

"Concrete this idea in your church. Subscribe for three, five, ten or twenty copies of THE BAPTIST for the next six months. The rate will be ONE DOLLAR a copy for SIX MONTHS, delivered to you in a bundle. This is a little less than four cents a copy. Sell them for five cents. If any are left over, take them to the jail, depot or other place where they will be appreciated and read.

"By the way, is THE BAPTIST going to your public library now? Suppose you inquire when you go over, or better still, ring up the librarian tonight, and ask about it. If it is not there, subscribe for your library at once. Send cash with order.

"You have heard that editors are sometimes hard-boiled and bite off door knobs. Well, no wonder. Listen to these bits from recent correspondence from a subscriber in—(guess better not give place.) Subscriber: 'Please send immediately a year's subscription for THE BAPTIST to my uncle Jake, my sister Hattie and one to me. Will remit after the fall elections are over.' Editor: 'Can't enter subscriptions until you've paid for the last list you sent in.' Subscriber: 'Cancel the order. Can't wait that long.'

"THE BAPTIST is a welcome caller at this home and I hope to be able to send in many new subscriptions very soon,' writes Pastor J. O. White of Huron, S. D. You can't send too many, Brother White. We appreciate this and the hundreds of other complimentary messages received every year. NEW subscriptions are always welcome. But RENEWALS are just as valuable. A subscriber retained is a subscription won.

"I love the sweet and well-tempered spirit of your journal. Long may it live," writes William E. Wood of Nashua, N. Y. "I belong to the church at Arlington where I have been a member for fifty-five years and a deacon for thirty-five years." We appreciate an increasing number of these fine testimonials from our readers in New England. Eventually it spells an increased subscription list and an enlarged and permanent ministry there.

"The office boy sings a new song to the tune of the well-known hymn, 'Was that somebody you?'

'Somebody did a golden deed, Took THE BAPTIST in his need;
Somebody paid up year by year, Brightening the world with Christian cheer
Was that somebody you?

'Somebody handed cheerfully on, Money for gift subscriptions won;
Somebody kept his promise to pay, Writing his check on schedule day;
Was that somebody you?

'Somebody let the years slip by, Heedless of notices piling high;
Somebody got mad when the collector came, Failing angrily to play the game;
Was that somebody you?

'Somebody's sub was only a scrap, Paper having no value mayhap;
Somebody's soul grew shriveled and small, Failing he grieved the Lord of all.
Was that somebody you?

"WCOY now signs off. If THE BAPTIST pleases you, tell others; if not, tell us. Goodnight."

gan and the building committee by Mr. E. C. Barton. The building is a credit to the Baptist cause in South Dakota.

A LETTER FROM DR. WM. P. PEARCE, pastor of the First church, Bay City, Mich., states that the Baptist Temple News of Grand Rapids, Mich., printed an article in the issue of June 12 under the caption of "Persecution in Michigan" in which Dr. John Smith, superintendent, is assailed for a "lock out" of certain members of the little South church, Bay City. This article begins with "word comes to us." Dr. Pearce states that whoever inspired that article was absolutely false in the statement. Dr. John Smith has not been on the field, and the members state not a word has come from his lip or pen to incite any one to do this. Dr. Pearce maintains that it is a matter of honor to whom honor is due that inspires this defense.

REV. W. B. RILEY and the First church,

Minneapolis, of which he is pastor, sponsored the first religious service at the Reserve Officers' Training camp of the Seventh Corps Area at Fort Snelling, Minn., June 13. Something over 1200 students and officers are in attendance at this camp. They come from thirty institutions of higher learning and from seven states. Chaplain Frank C. Rideout, official army chaplain at the Fort Snelling garrison, has arranged with several churches of various denominations in the twin cities to sponsor services every Sunday morning during the training camps. Over 5000 young men of the northwest will be at this station during the months of June, July and August. Doctor Riley brought a chorus choir of nearly sixty voices for this first service. The military authorities at Fort Snelling were so favorably impressed with this first service that they have made it an official ruling that hereafter all men and officers remaining in camp over Sundays shall attend divine worship. Services are likewise provided for Catholic and Jewish groups.

DIFFICULTIES ARE BUT a challenge to the Greene avenue church of Brooklyn, Rev. Charles F. McKoy, pastor. Although the character of the population in the midst of which the church is located has completely changed in recent years, the church has steadily increased in numbers and influence. Baptismal services are held nearly every Sunday. The church budget for current expenses and missions the past year has exceeded $30,000. A junior congregation of 100 boys and girls meets in connection with the Sunday morning service. Doctor McKoy and his co-workers have endeavored to make the church life so attractive that people come long distances to the services. The Sunday congregations are drawn from nearly every section of New York City and near-by towns.

"IS THERE ANY REASON why our spiritual nature should be neglected just because it is summer? Enjoy God's wonderful out-of-doors but don't forget that you need an hour in the house of God in worship also," is the good word from the bulletin of First church, Waterloo, Iowa, R. E. Williamson, pastor.

THE SCHOOL OF SACRED music, Homer Rodeheaver, president, will hold its summer session at Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 9-29. Daniel Protheroe, Dan Beddoe, Charles Gilbert Spross and sixteen other teachers will be there.

ADVICE PAR EXCELLENCE from the First church, Keene, N. H. bulletin, C. Raymond Chappell, pastor: "If we are going to sit together in heavenly places we had better begin to stand together in the earthly ones."

REV. H. W. VIRGIN, pastor of the North Shore church, Chicago, gave an address at the First church, Pekin, Ill., June 14, on the occasion of the dedication of the church's new building.

THE CHURCH AT FARMINGTON, Mich., will celebrate its centennial this coming fall. Since the coming of Rev. E. W. Palmer as pastor sixteen new members have been received. Reports at the annual meeting were encouraging. All bills paid and a balance in the treasury. The church has voluntarily doubled its missionary goal for this year, making it $200.

REV. WILLIAM H. HUNT, pastor of the Baptist tabernacle at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has returned from a six weeks' visit in England. The work of the church continues to prosper. A new lot has been purchased for a proposed extension of the building erected three years ago. Because of the overcrowded condition this should be proceeded with at once but an indebtedness of $10,000 forbids the project at present. The church has recently been the recipient of an eight-piece oak pulpit set, the gift of Mrs. J. H. Kellor of Atlantic City, N. J., and given in memory of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Morris.

REV. E. A. FRIDELL, pastor of the First church, Fresno, Calif., sailed June 21 from New York for Europe with the American seminary under direction of Sherwood Eddy. The itinerary includes Europe, the Holy Land and Egypt. Pastor Fridell will return on Sept. 15.

DR. CORTLAND MYERS supplied the pulpit of the First church, Pasadena, Calif., during the vacation of the pastor, John Marvin Chan.

DR. E. Y. MULLINS, twenty-seven years president of the Southern Baptist seminary at Louisville has been granted a brief leave of absence. Two months of the vacation will be spent holding conferences with groups of Baptists in Europe.

REV. ROBERT LINCOLN KELLEY of the Board of Missionary Cooperation will spend the summer and autumn months in West Virginia.

THE FIRST PRIZE of $25 in the recent denominational stewardship essay contest for juniors was won by Gavin Pitt of the Central church, Norwich, Conn.

REV. F. E. DARK and Rev. Hugh P. Andrews, pastors at Raymond and South Bend, Wash., respectively, held a ten-day campaign on stewardship in the South Bend church which resulted in fifty-nine individual pledges to systematic and proportionate giving.

REV. JOHN DAVIES became pastor of the Central church of Norwich, Conn., in 1872. His widow, Mrs. Emily T. Davies, has just passed away.

REV. GORDON H. BAKER of the Washington Heights church, New York City, welcomed twenty-five new members during April and May. This church unites with the Hamilton Grange Reformed church for the summer morning services. Evangelist George Rittenhouse of Brooklyn will be the speaker when the services are held in the Baptist meeting-house.

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"
squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.
Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN,
1912 "G" Street, Northwest

NEED MONEY?

A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 352, Minneapolis.

PASTOR FREDERICK W. GRACEY of Cork, Ireland, spoke on June 13 in the Central church of Norwich, Conn.

DR. H. O. ROWLANDS has been called as acting pastor by the Central church of Quincy, Ill., following the resignation of Dr. Robert Van Meigs who has taken up his work with the Immanuel church of Chicago.

SECY. H. Q. MORTON of Nebraska has moved his family from Phoenix, Ariz., to Grand Island, Neb.

THE CHURCH at Pleasant Valley, Ariz., was burned a year ago. Members and friends went to the mountains, cut logs, hauled them many miles to a mill and a new chapel, 20x40 feet, of unsurfaced lumber was dedicated on May 9. Revs. V. A. Vanderhoof and R. M. Garrett assisted in the services.

DR. J. WHITCOMB BROUGHER will supply the pulpit of the First church of Tacoma, Wash., on Aug. 22. His son, James W. Brougner, Jr., will speak in the same church morning and evening on July 11.

THE CITY COUNCIL of Tacoma, Wash., attended the evening service of the First church on June 13 to hear Mr. James Mosolf and Pastor C. O. Johnson report the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington, D. C.

REV. U. S. CLUTTON, pastor of the Tuxedo Park church of Indianapolis, Ind., has entered his nineteenth year of service there. On the anniversary Sunday members were present who were baptized by the pastor in every year of his service there save one. There were also members present received by letter in every year of this pastorate save two.

CAPTAIN K. W. BROWN, eighty-four years old, died at Ames, Iowa, on Apr. 30. He was a charter member of the church and had three outstanding loyalties: to his home, to the church and to temperance. He served four full years in the Civil war and was mustered out as captain in Company "K," 186th New York Volunteer Infantry.

DR. J. H. RUSHBROOKE has been elected president of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland. He gave his first presidential address at Leeds on May 3.

DR. R. L. WEBB of the First church, Dorchester, Mass., gave the hand of fellowship to twenty-four on June 6, twenty-two having been baptized. The church has a successful men's club and the King's Daughters and Sons, led by Mrs. Webb, is reported as the largest in existence.

THE BIBLE CONFERENCE at Cedar Falls, Iowa, on Aug. 1-8, includes among its speakers: H. Tydeman Chilvers, London; Wm. R. Lane, Africa; John Marvin Dean, California; C. H. Woolston, Philadelphia; Chas. L. Goodell, New York, and Walter Hutton of Des Moines. Homer Rodeheaver leads the singing.

AUGUST SUPPLIES for the First church of Battle Creek, Mich., are as follows: Dr. Geo. E. Fifield, Dr. J. W. Hoyt of Chicago and Dr. George H. Young of Kalamazoo. Rev. Stewart B. Crandall is the pastor.

REV. JOHN C. F. KYGER, a member of the Woodlawn church, Chicago, lives at 6248 Stony Island avenue and is available for supply work. He is a graduate of Baylor university and has had experience as a pastor and evangelist.

MISS PEARL MCCOY has completed a course of study at Newton seminary and has been licensed to preach by the First church of Bridgewater, Mass. Miss McCoy is the first woman to be given a license by this body.

THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL meeting of the Pacific Coast Theological Conference will be held in the Fairview Baptist church of Vancouver, B. C., July 6-8.

MRS. ROBERT L. SCOTT entertained the women and girls of the First church, Evanston, Ill., at a garden party at her beautiful home on June 15. Dr. Chas. T. Holman supplied the pulpit of the church on June 13 while Dr. James M. Stifter, the pastor, was attending the thirtieth annual reunion of his class at the University of Pennsylvania.

REV. HENRY JACOBS and Rev. C. E. Burdette supplied for the Rio Grande church in Salt Lake City, Utah, during the pastor's absence at Washington in May.

MISS MARY AILSA DEBLOIS, daughter of Dr. Austen K. DeBlois, president of the Eastern seminary and associate editor of the Watchman-Examiner, was married on June 25 to Mr. Alvan Wilbur Dawson of Pittsburgh. Mr. Dawson is a Harvard man, class of '22.

REV. LESTER T. RANDOLPH has closed his work as director of promotion and of young people's work in Utah after three years of successful leadership.

REV. C. F. BROWN goes from the church at Shell Rock, Iowa, to the rural church at Roseglen (postoffice, Ryder), N. D. This church is twenty-two miles from the railroad and that distance from the nearest brother pastor. The parish covers 800 square miles.

THE TABERNACLE CHURCH of Harrisburg, Pa., Rev. M. R. Palmer minister, held a four days' reunion, June 24-27. Three young men were announced as candidates for ordination in a unique service. They

Van Duzen Bells
formerly Van Duzen & Telfer

Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

The Hall Organ Company

West Haven, Conn.

High Grade Pipe Organs

Churches Masonic Halls Residences

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL and TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAINED

are Wm. Schlessman, R. D. Taylor and Albert Sheckels. Ordination sermon, Rev. M. O. Pierce, charge to candidates, Rev. R. W. Wicks, charge to church, Rev. John A. Rodgers, ordination prayer, Rev. Mr. Green, presentation of ordination certificates by Rev. Mr. Hunt. All these ministers are former pastors of this church.

FIVE OUT OF TWELVE churches in Utah remitted one-twelfth of their annual quota for missions during May: Burlington, Magna, Murray, Rio Grande and Taylor. Four of them exceeded one-twelfth.

DR. W. Q. ROSELLE of Malden, Mass., and family will spend July and August at Round Pond, a quiet village on a bay on the Maine coast. Mr. Edwin Phelps, general secretary of the B. Y. P. U. A. will fill the pulpit on Aug. 22.

REV. W. L. WILSON of Roundup, Mont., has resigned after two and one-half years' service. He will close his work on Sept. 1.

THE FIFTY-FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING of the Swedish Baptist churches was held

June 3-6, at Gothenburg, Neb. E. E. Eklof was chosen moderator and Carl V. Anderson, clerk. The organization voted to change its name by striking out the word "Swedish." The conference will raise its quota of the fund of $350,000 being sought by the Swedish General Conference in its Jubilee drive. The church at Verona, Neb., was abandoned and the property ordered sold.

DAN CRAWFORD died June 3. "Thinking Black" was the title of the book he wrote when in 1913 he emerged from the long grass country of the Belgian Congo where, at Luanza, he had lived for thirty years without coming out. Dan Crawford was a Scotchman and was heard by many when he toured this country on his one and only furlough. His rugged faith and unusual consecration to the natives made a profound impression on all who met him.

ON JULY 1, Dr. W. L. Steeves began his pastorate with the Walnut St. church at Waterloo, Iowa, after five years with the First church of Lima, Ohio.

DWIGHT L. MILLER, son of Rev. and Mrs. U. G. Miller died at the Baptist parsonage at Fort Madison, Iowa, on June 2.

REV. H. R. MCKEE preached his farewell sermon at Keokuk, Iowa, on June 13. He goes to Everett, Wash.

REV. JUDSON CONKLIN, for forty-one years the pastor of the Clinton Avenue church of Trenton, N. J., tendered his resignation on June 6 to become effective Sept. 1. During these four decades the church has developed a splendid property and has grown from a membership of seventy-five to about 800.

THE CHURCH at Chelsea, N. J., Rev. Thos. Cross, minister, has received as a gift a set of chimes with keyboard attachment at the organ. Mr. and Mrs. John Stinson were the donors making the gift in memory of their parents.

DR. W. W. PHELAN, for fourteen years a member of the faculty of the Oklahoma Baptist university at Shawnee, has been elected president of the school to succeed Dr. J. B. Lawrence who will give all his time to the church located at this place.

THE HUNGARIAN BAPTIST fellowship in the United States has forty-four congregations with 1615 members. They reported 145 baptisms last year. M. Majorsak of Philadelphia is president of the body.

THE LOGAN CHURCH, Philadelphia, Pa., has unanimously adopted a resolution protesting against the opening of the Sesqui-Centennial on Sunday.

THE OCEAN PARK SCHOOL of methods will be held Aug. 16-28, Ocean Park, Me. Registration fee is $3.50 for all delegates. F. F. Peterson is dean.

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for July 25

THE PASSOVER
Lesson Text, Exod. 12:1-2, 21-28.
Golden Text, 1. Cor 5:7

Moses on being called of God to his great ministry went from Midian, Egypt, and there in cooperation with Aaron he began his approach to Pharaoh. Pharaoh with high disdain mocked the idea of letting the Israelites go with swelling pride laughed at the name of Jehovah. Then followed the startling plagues which sobered Pharaoh. But soon as each plague passed away Pharaoh was just as hard of heart as ever. The Passover gets its name from the passing over of the angel of judgment when the blood of the slain lamb was seen upon the doorframe of a house. This event marked a great epoch in the history of Israel. The emigration of Abraham of Chaldea and his settlement in Canaan marks the individual origin of the Hebrews as a people, but the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt marks the beginning of the Hebrews as a nation. To this day the feast of the Passover is observed by Jews everywhere in the world as the outstanding memorial of the birth of their nationality. Great spiritual principles are expressed in the Passover. It is true that under a certain system of interpretation, the Passover in common with many other Old Testament incidents has been mishandled and made to teach things which it never was designed to teach. But if due allowance is made for crass interpretations there still remains in the story of the Passover the dramatization of principles which underlie the whole social fabric of human life and form the bedrock of Christian theology.

Sacrifice

It was through the sacrifices of the lambs slain on the night of the Passover that Israel was protected from the judgment that fell with such a terrible blow upon the homes of the Egyptians. The blood shed and applied according to directions gave immunity to every family that obeyed instructions. And the flesh of the lambs cooked and eaten gave strength to the departing pilgrims who were about to flee from slavery. All this has a theological application. Christ our Passover, was sacrificed for us. In some way, not wholly explainable, his sacrifice on the cross when accepted by a sincere faith, saves men from the judgment due to sin, and his spirit assimilates and strengthens men for the tasks of the Christian life.

Judgment

Of course there were homes in Egypt wholly innocent of any part in the crime of Pharaoh in oppressing the Hebrews, but the first born was not spared in these homes. Why? Because there is an eternal social law of retribution ever at work upon communities as a whole and by the inevitable operation of that law the innocent suffer with the guilty. Thus the Passover when properly interpreted dramatizes the two great social laws which must be observed if society is to be saved—the law of vicarious sacrifice and the law of social retribution.

Church Furniture
Pews • Pulpits • Chancel Furniture •
Sunday School Seating •
American Seating Company
Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1069 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS
Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study, Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write
President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D.
1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
Tuition and room-rent free. Scholarships available to approved students.
Seminary within 13 miles of Philadelphia. Seminary's relations to University of Pennsylvania warrant offer of the following courses:
1. REGULAR COURSES FOR PREACHERS AND PASTORS. Seminary Degree of B. D. or Diplomas.
2. TRAINING FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE. Seminary and University. Degrees of B. D. and A. M.
3. TRAINING FOR ADVANCED SCHOLARSHIP. Seminary and University. Degree of Th. M. at Seminary, and Ph. D. at University.
For information address REV. MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., President, Chester, Pa.

New Books

The Playtime Guide Book, by Frederic K. Brown. Philadelphia: Judson Press. $1.50.

Teachers, workers, and mothers too, we have found it at last—a real playtime guide book. It is not all theory but is filled with games which will fit and bring out the attitudes and characteristics desired for every age from beginners through primary, junior, intermediate, senior, and adult. This book would be especially beneficial to church vacation school workers. It is a convenient, practical, graded course in play such as will help church workers to forestall the evils of wrong methods of recreation and capture the play spirit for God.

—GLADYS KILLAM.

Summer Program for the Church, by Dr. Miles H. Krumbine, Chicago: University of Chicago Press. $1.50.

Attractively written, intensely practical and very complete is this new book from the Chicago University Press treating one of the newest and most important phases of our church program, viz., the summer church school.

Doctor Krumbine, the author, who is pastor of one of the leading churches of Dayton, Ohio, has assembled a world of material which he has used successfully in his own summer programs.

The work of the executive and the directors of the various departments of the summer school are all carefully outlined in the opening chapters. This is followed by a daily program for the different grades covering Bible study, mission study, dramatization, prayer and service. Especially helpful and suggestive are the selections and plans for the period of worship which is one of the leading features of the summer church school.

This book should prove most helpful to leaders as a guide and reference work and would make a fine text book for discussion groups in a church training program.

—C. R. OSBORN.

(Continued from page 743)

specialist in the subject of the report. This is unfortunate, for one may come upon some bit of insight into conditions and a wise interpretation of events. Reports are generally connected with columns of statistics which are difficult to understand and therefore make dry reading. Yet a good report, put into readable form, may illuminate a subject in such a way as to be as fascinating as a novel. And it certainly keeps close to reality. "Copy" can be had from the romantic speeches of optimists, or, for that matter, from the pessimists, but it can also be gleaned from a well-written report. Anyhow, one does not waste time in going over the reports of either the American Bible Society or its sister organization, the British and Foreign Bible Society. These two organizations are interdenominational and world-wide in their work and influence. It is well worth a couple of hours to go through the annual report of either of these societies.

Just now, the older organization—the British—has put out its report for 1925. Personally, I am interested in that section which deals with China. It is taken for granted that the agents of the society in China are in close touch with the life of the country and are imbued with a deep interest in the welfare of the people. With this in mind, one can understand the following extract from the report:

"The squandering of the country's resources; the commandeering of its manhood and means of transport; the despoiling of the people's homes, and the wasting of their lands have not ceased. Worst of all there seems to be no popular indignation at these things. Chinese patriotism asserts itself strongly against wrongs inflicted from without, but seems strangely indifferent to all the suffering caused by the enmity and strife among its own rulers. National rights, if infringed by foreigners, are defended with determination, but national wrongs, the wrecking of their country's constitution by political intrigue, the ruin brought on millions of their people by the ambition of military rulers, the prevalence of brigandage unchecked throughout the land—these things go on from year to year and are borne not with contentment but with a resignation which is wonderful and wearying to behold."

It is not easy to write like this about

China at this time, but it is the truth. Those who wrote these lines know of what they write. The curse of China is militarism. This cannot be said or written too often, for it takes such a long time to convince people out of China that it is so. The spotlight thrown by western journalism on China's foreign relations has blinded the average American reader to the fact that the worst evils of this land are those within its own borders. Perhaps one should expect this, for wars and brigandage have become so common that they no longer make front-page copy for American newspapers. But this report is not written by pessimists. No one has a right to be optimistic if an agent of a Bible Society cannot be. He bases his confidence on the power of the printed scriptures, and he is safe in doing so. I do not want to weary any of my readers with columns of figures, for my record at college in mathematics is such that it would be in the nature of a joke for me to attempt to quote numbers. But I am going to venture just one quotation in numerals: no less than 4,261,455 copies of the scriptures were placed in the hands of the people of this land during the year 1925. Just think what that means, with robber-infested roads, with soldiers roaming in every part of the land, travel unsafe, money scarce and danger lurking at every turn of the road! Still this one society through its agents and colporters distributed four and a quarter millions of copies of the Word of God among the people of China. To one acquainted with conditions in the interior it sounds like a fairy story, yet it is the plain unadulterated truth. And many more millions will read those books—or listen to the reading of them. One is tempted to launch out into a plea for more Christian literature for China, but that can wait for another letter. I want to give another quotation from the report. It deals with the future, for it deals with young China.

"Young China has not yet come to her own. The nation's mind has all the characteristics of youth. It is eager to learn; responsive to new ideas; sensitive to praise; readily impressed by sympathy; easily repelled by harshness; generally more swayed by impulse and emotion than by reason; buoyantly hopeful; sometimes overconfident; sometimes obstinate—which of these is not a common quality of youth? But youth is a time of peculiar perils. It is liable to suffer much from flattery and soft compliments as from severe reproof. Restrained and sympathetic comradeship is its need, and something analogous to that is the need of young China. Are the Western nations able to supply that need? The future of this mighty youth-

Want Ads

SCHOOL OF SACRED MUSIC, Homer Rodcheaver, President. Summer session, Winona Lake, Indiana, August 9-29, 1926. Intensive, sympathetic, practical. Daniel Protheroe, Dan Beddoe, Charles Gilbert Spross, and sixteen other teachers. Write Secretary for leaflet "A".

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benevolent Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request. "Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

ful nation depends in some measure upon them, and in some measure on China's response to what they offer her."

All of which means that we of the West need to apply ourselves more assiduously to an attempt to understand this people. And one way in which this can be done is the introduction of courses of study in Chinese history and literature into American colleges and universities. While there are a few universities in the United States that are offering such courses, they are altogether too few. America and China must live together. The day of isolation for either people has gone. Our grandchildren will be coming over to Peking for week-ends, while Chinese college students will be flying to America to witness college football games.

John Bechet Murphy

An Appreciation

By O. C. WRIGHT

JOHN Bechet Murphy, son of Rev. J. M. Murphy, was born in London, England, and educated in Cliff and Harley colleges. He was blessed in winning souls during his student career. He was ordained in the Baptist church at Barnstaple, N. Devon, in 1885, where his father was pastor; and was later designated for work on the Congo, S. W. Africa, by Doctor Murdock of the A. B. M. U. who was in England at that time. He left for the Congo January 1886 and was associated with Mr. Joseph Clark (now in America) for some time. With his brother-in-law he opened a new station at Bolengi, the most advanced station on the upper river, among a cannibal people. Here he labored for ten years. On one occasion he tramped through dismal swamps for three days to reach an unreached tribe, and was surrounded by frightened natives, too frightened to shoot their poisoned arrows, for, having never seen a white man, they thought he must be a spirit. After days of earnest preaching, one conscious-stricken man replied: "Ah! Ah! Neundelle, you have lied, for what has become of our forefathers, and did not your forefathers know, and why did they not come sooner to tell us this good news?" At another time he traveled with natives in a canoe and narrowly escaped with his life when he saved a boy from being buried alive with his chief (a custom among this people). The boy has since been a great worker for God among his people.

In 1895 he made grave charges against the Belgian government under King Leopold for crimes among the natives, and, as a result, a deputation was sent to investigate and bring to justice the offenders. Both English and American papers published the details.

While at Bolengi a church was formed and many baptized in the river; at the present time thousands of souls are rejoicing in sins forgiven. He unwillingly relinquished his work on the Congo, but his wife's health made it impossible to stay and when an opening for work in Jamaica was presented, he availed himself of the opportunity and for twelve years labored on this island, having charge of five churches covering a large area. Since no roads nor bridges had been built in this part of the island, all travel had to be done on horseback; fifteen miles in one direction, ten in another to reach the churches, together with forty class houses and four government schools to supervise, made the work strenuous, but his delight was among the people for he loved them and was beloved by them. Great crowds gathered at the river when he baptized and many were the souls he won for the Master.

On coming to America he was pastor of the Baptist church at Passadumkeag, Me., for two years and then came West, and for the last sixteen years had served in different parts of Oregon as pastor of country churches, Dayton, Junction City, Clatskanie and Delena, at the latter place walking many miles to reach the lumber camps and in every sphere opening up new work in the outlying districts. He never spared himself, he loved everybody and always had some kind word to say to all.

He leaves a widow and one daughter, his son-in-law, Mr. Chas. Ingalls and a little grandson, brothers Rev. E. C. Murphy of E. Orange, New Jersey, Harold Murphy of Ontario, Canada, and three brothers and two sisters in England.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONARY COOPERATION OF THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

CONTRIBUTIONS TO UNIFIED BUDGET—MAY, 1926

Rank	States	1. Quotas	2. Amount due May 31	3. Amount paid May 31	4. Amount unpaid May 31
1.	Idaho	$ 18,000.00	$ 1,500.00	$ 1,435.29	$ 64.71
2.	Delaware	9,500.00	791.67	658.96	132.71
3.	Calif. South	330,756.00	27,563.00	18,456.10	9,106.90
4.	Missouri	35,136.00	2,928.00	1,915.14	1,012.86
5.	Washington, West	55,000.00	4,583.33	2,971.14	1,612.19
6.	New York State	609,000.00	50,750.00	29,769.60	20,980.40
7.	Pennsylvania	527,000.00	43,916.67	23,518.43	20,398.24
8.	Rhode Island	115,000.00	9,583.33	4,882.41	4,700.92
9.	Michigan	200,000.00	16,666.67	8,480.11	8,186.56
10.	New Jersey	330,500.00	27,541.67	13,811.63	13,730.04
11.	Arizona	19,500.00	1,625.00	782.74	842.26
12.	Nebraska	80,500.00	6,708.33	2,993.26	3,715.07
13.	Illinois	320,500.00	26,708.33	11,682.64	15,025.69
14.	New Hampshire	45,000.00	3,750.00	1,636.81	2,113.19
15.	Nevada	3,800.00	316.67	137.97	178.70
16.	Massachusetts	480,500.00	40,041.67	17,001.14	23,040.53
17.	Wisconsin	77,000.00	6,416.66	2,623.14	3,793.52
18.	Connecticut	161,000.00	13,416.67	5,150.94	8,265.73
19.	Vermont	43,000.00	3,750.00	1,298.31	2,451.69
20.	New York Metro.	290,744.00	24,228.67	7,913.82	16,314.85
21.	Maine	110,000.00	9,166.66	2,906.82	6,259.84
22.	West Virginia	140,000.00	11,666.66	3,659.25	8,007.41
23.	Montana	15,500.00	1,291.67	400.43	891.24
24.	Colorado	95,000.00	7,916.67	2,346.88	5,569.79
25.	North Dakota	21,500.00	1,791.67	527.72	1,263.95
26.	Kansas	175,000.00	14,583.33	4,055.87	10,527.46
27.	Iowa	130,000.00	10,833.33	2,905.29	7,928.04
28.	Indiana	165,000.00	13,750.00	1,252.71	12,497.29
29.	Minnesota	125,000.00	10,416.67	321.41	10,095.26
30.	Calif. North	121,000.00	10,083.33	*	10,083.33
31.	Dist. of Col.	30,000.00	3,000.00	*	2,500.00
32.	Ohio	355,500.00	29,625.00	*	29,625.00
33.	Oregon	52,000.00	4,333.33	*	4,333.33
34.	South Dakota	31,500.00	2,625.00	*	2,625.00
35.	Utah	5,000.00	416.67	*	416.67
36.	Washington, East	34,000.00	2,833.33	*	2,833.33
37.	Wyoming	8,700.00	725.00	*	725.00
38.	Miscellaneous			508.87	508.87†
Total		$5,368,136.00	$447,344.66	$176,004.83	$271,339.83

† Paid in excess of amount due.

* Collections to date not reported.

 June collections not reported.

 Column 4 shows the amount due and unpaid (Column 2 less Column 3) and represents the approximate amount on which the denominations is paying interest because it has not been paid month by month as needed. The order in which the states are listed is determined by the percentage relation of amounts paid (Column 3) to amount due (Column 2).

541

Volume VII

July 24, 1926

No. 25

The Baptist

III
Urban
Univ. of Ill.
Library

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

JUL 22 1926

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

"Earth with her thousand voices praises God"

Folks, Facts and Opinion

One hundred and thirty registered delegates attended the Bible assembly at Maymyo, Burma, in April. Among many good things that were accomplished at the meetings was the formation of a life-service fellowship with over seventy young people as members.

For many months past a serious attempt has been made to discover what the attitude of youth is on various important points. It is due to the initiative of the Young Men's Christian Association that its leaders in fifty-two countries have undertaken to get at the youth problem by letting the boys and young men state it for themselves, and freely express their opinions. This is a stupendous task. The results will be made known at the world's conference on boys' work to be held at Helsingfors, Finland, in August.

Fine lines are drawn on the race question in Detroit. According to the Record-Searchlight, Mr. and Mrs. Starks, negro, erected a dwelling adjoining an apartment building occupied by whites. The whites offered to buy the property but objected to the price set by the Starks. Then the Lakewood boulevard civic association appealed to Judge Leland W. Carr who decided that if the Starks will not sell their house for a reasonable price they shall not be permitted to live in it—thus vindicating the sacred right of private property for white men.

Just preceding the Bible conference at Winona, there will be held a great missionary conference Aug. 3-11 (interdenominational) under the supervision of Dr. R. H. Glover, one of the foremost missionary authorities and teachers of the world. He is a world traveler. He will be assisted by Drs. G. S. McCune and W. H. Hockman, men of broad scholarship, thrilling speakers, travelers, missionaries, one a college president and the other founder of the J. Hudson Taylor school at Luchow. Each will speak daily. Field study will be presented and the lectures will be spiritual, and educational.

There are indications that the committee investigating the Pennsylvania primaries is going to "strike pay dirt." It has included the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U., and now the papers report that it will cover the whole subject of the employment of congressmen as paid lecturers for special interests of all kinds from the Ku Klux to organizations opposed to prohibition. Even so, a perfectly safe guess is that it will stop before it reaches the fundamental fact that the government, national, state and local, is bought and sold in the market as private property—and particularly, why it is so.

The public debt of the United States amounted at the latest report to $19,803,924,000. It is being extinguished at the rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 a year.

Dr. F. W. Norwood of the City Temple, London, has been released for six months beginning with October, to take part in a campaign throughout Great Britain in the interest of international peace. This campaign will follow a tour of three months for the same purpose in Canada and the United States. In it he will have the support alike of the League of Nations Union, the archbishop of Canterbury and the nonconformist churches.

An unusual case of liberal interpretation comes from the Orphans' Court of Philadelphia. The $6,000,000 endowment of Ellis college for the education of fatherless girls has long provided an income in excess of the needs of the institution provided for in the will of Charles E. Ellis of Philadelphia, who died in 1909. On June 17, 1926, the Orphans' Court, following its investigation of several months, decreed that the surplus not needed for the operation of Ellis college may be used to support fatherless girls in their own homes.

Directors of athletics in ten of the leading western universities in conference in Chicago Dec. 5, 1925, having under consideration the subject of physical training in the military training camps, by unanimous vote declared that they "do wholeheartedly endorse the work of the United States army in establishing, maintaining and perfecting an intelligent and efficient course of physical training in the citizens' military training camps and do pledge ourselves to the moral and physical support of the same." They do not appear to have made any pronouncement on the efforts to create a "war psychology" and to teach the manual of arms and the combat drill either in the training camps or in the R. O. T. C.

Few people realize the greatness of the life insurance business. At a meeting of life insurance presidents, Mr. William A. Law, said that there are 54,000,000 policy-holders in the United States, and that they carry $72,000,000,000 in life insurance. The total invested assets of the companies amount to $11,400,000,000. The average insurance carried by each policy-holder is $1,333, and the payments this year totaled $1,500,000,000, which is nearly ten times what was paid in 1900. It is proposed by Mr. Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan life insurance company, to insure workers against unemployment. Thus through business experience society is gradually finding a way for all to bear the misfortunes of each. Social insurance is in its infancy.

B. A. M. Schapiro, managing director of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society, has written a booklet entitled "Gethsemane in Our Lives," which ought to be read by millions of Christians who for lack of acquaintance with Hebrew Christians, have the impression that "all Jews are queer." It is in fine spirit, revealing and it costs nothing but postage enough to cover mailing. Address 405 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

On the heels of the eucharistic congress, we stumble upon the following paragraph in the Michigan Christian Advocate: "Probably the most astounding revelation which Doctor Athearn makes is that the Catholic church—which we all had supposed was doing fairly well in its way, in the religious instruction of its young people—reaches with its schools only one out of four of its young people under twenty-five years of age—less proportion than the Protestants, who reach one out of every three, while the Jews reach only one out of twenty! It is alarming indeed. Is it any wonder that crime multiplies, and that the young are supplying the criminals of America?"

Anna Louise Strong describes in the Congregationalist the present relation of church and state in the U. S. S. R. thus: "In matters of religion, however, the Soviet government grants equal tolerance to all creeds. The various Protestant sects and heretical sects generally have told me they have much more freedom than under the czardom; but no churches are allowed to maintain schools of any kind, and this weighs heavily upon sects to whom control of education is an important tenet. The government also touches the church at one important point: that of property. All church buildings belong to the municipality and are obtained from the municipality rent free by the group of believers who have been accustomed to use them. The immediate effect of this is not noticeable as the same group of worshipers continue to use the church; but they use it at the good will of the city council instead of the good will of some central ecclesiastical body to which it formerly belonged. The result of this is a kind of unconscious congregationalism. If an priest gets new ideas, reforms the liturgy, or introduces sermons, and if his congregation likes the innovation, there is no central hierarchy which has the power to put him out as unorthodox. The building belongs to the town, and through the town to the congregation. The effects of this will be much more widespread in the future than at present appears. At present the great mass of the church is still extremely conservative."

Who would not be a snake? It has been discovered that chiggers infest the skins of snakes and that the latter have means of getting rid of the pest except by shedding their skins. Nature provides even such relief to human beings.

It is becoming evident that the people of the United States do not want a censorship of moving pictures, and equally evident that they are going to do something about the kind of pictures given to the public. They may even be driven, however unwillingly, to resort to a censorship if they become convinced that there is no other way to control the screen. They did not and do not want prohibition, but they were driven to it by the unscrupulous liquor business. Picture producers and exhibitors would do well to take notice.

At the Grand Island college commencement dinner, gifts for the year were announced as follows: From the Northern Baptist Convention, $14,593, from the Nebraska Baptist Convention, $6,968.76, gifts received for the auditorium-gymnasium, $19,179.24. In addition there were a number of special gifts received, the largest one coming from Dr. and Mrs. George Sutherland, who gave to the college thirty-seven lots and three houses. These are valued at $17,000 and in the past, Doctor Sutherland indicated his desire that when this property should be turned into money, the proceeds should be used to erect a new library, or, in case someone else gave more for this purpose, that it should be added to the endowment fund and the income used for the president's salary. This gift was made on the annuity basis. Another annuity gift was from Mary Speer and amounted to $4000. At her death the income of this is to be used for the library. Mrs. W. W. Carpenter and her son, Isaac Carpenter, presented to the college a note for $1000 which was due the Isaac Carpenter estate from the educational commission of the Nebraska Baptist Convention. Two gifts of $500 each were given for current expenses, one from a man whose name was not given and the other from Mr. William Ross. Mr. F. J. Bates of Grand Island gave $100 to be used toward teachers' salaries; a gift of $50 from Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Boston for the same purpose. Mr. Jeff Patton gave $50 which was used for library books. Dr. J. W. F. Heuman presented the college with $50 which was used in the biological department. Mr. J. J. Wolbach gave $70 for a scholarship. A. Harold Prince $25 for prizes in debate. Mr. C. C. Tingley gave $25, and Miss Jennie Hall $10 for current expenses. Mr. Winifred Benjamin and Miss Esther Hile have each taken out a $100 life insurance policy with the college as beneficiary. At the close of these announcements, Miss Blanche Rousek came to the table where President Wells was seated, and in behalf of the Stripedettes, presented him with $35 in gold to be used for athletics. In expressing his thanks, President Wells spoke of the splendid spirit of loyalty and cooperation which the Stripedettes had expressed during the entire year.

A note of the extent to which the Roman Catholic church is coming to the front as an agency of social betterment is found in the fact that in the national conference on social work held in Cleveland at the beginning of June, Mr. John Lapp, a leader in the social action division of that church, was elected president of the conference for the coming year.

It is said that a survey of public dance halls in New York city shows them to be "markets for young girls," in some cases as bad as the worst of New York in the past. A daily paper moralizes that "any public dance hall is a dangerous place for a young girl without a chaperon." Why is not such a place a poor place for any girl, with or without a chaperon?

Hillsdale college, Hillsdale, Mich., announces the gift of $50,000 from the Ball brothers of Muncie, Ind., for the erection of a memorial residence hall for women to be known as the Frances Ball Mauck dormitory. Work will begin at once upon the new hall which will cost $200,000 when completed. The late Mrs. Mauck was the wife of Jos. W. Mauck, for many years president of Hillsdale college. Previous gifts to Hillsdale college from the Ball brothers total more than $100,000.

The Midway hospital, St. Paul, Minn., was dedicated with fitting ceremonies on Sunday, July 11. Erected at a cost of more than $1,500,000 the Midway hospital is the latest thing in hospital building and equipment. Dr. Robert Earl, president of the Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association, spared neither time nor energy in gathering together all the latest information of the best in architecture and equipment. Every known feature that makes for economy and efficiency has been incorporated in the building. Baptists everywhere may well be proud of this latest addition to the philanthropic forces which serve the kingdom of God and carry out the full program of Jesus.

Index

	Page
FOIKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	750
REPORT OF THE B. Y. P. U. A. CONVENTION, BY FRANCIS STIFLER	752
EDITORIAL	753
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	755
ARISE, SIR KNIGHT, BY JAMES ALLAN FRANCIS	756
IS THE CHURCH NECESSARY FOR RELIGIOUS EDUCATION? (CONCLUDED) BY THEODORE GERALD SOARES	757
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—THE LAW OF INCREASE, BY GEORGE H. MORRISON	759
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	760
CHURCHES AT WORK	761
AMONG OURSELVES	762
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON ..	770
NEW BOOKS	771

"We do not go forth to overturn all that we find and wreck the customs of the centuries. We would not build a New England meeting house in the Indian jungle, or ask to have our converts adopt our ugly and sometimes indecent garb. Let them keep their customs, their dress, their governments, if they prefer them. But the spiritual gift, the dynamic of Jesus—this alone can enable stagnant peoples to emerge from old abuses, to cleanse their lives of superstition and caste and idolatry and cruelty, and establish the kingdom of Christ in the lands that gave him birth."

—Pres. W. H. P. Faunce.

It Depends on You

VOLUNTARY service, cheerfully rendered

IN thorough subscription canvasses

CAN only achieve one result:

TO greatly increase circulation

OF THE BAPTIST,

RESULTING in kingdom advance.

YOU can increase this victory.

—o—

"This is the victory that overcometh — even your faith."

"Have faith in God."—Jesus.

"The disciples said, Lord increase our faith."

—o—

Single subscriptions $2.50 per year; in 10% clubs, $2.00 per year; with Missions, $3.00.

—o—

Trial Subscriptions, Six Months, $1.00

—o—

THE BAPTIST

2320 South Michigan Avenue

Chicago, Illinois

Report of the B. Y. P. U. A. Convention

Held at Los Angeles, California, July 7-11

BY FRANCIS C. STIFLER

IF THE work of our denomination is to be measured this year by the interest in attendance at conventions, then we may expect much. The record-breaking Washington attendance of the Northern Baptist Convention was matched by an attendance of more than 5600 at the 35th Anniversary Convention of the B. Y. P. U. of A. in session at Los Angeles, July 7-11.

It was a gay sight as the delegations filed into the great auditorium of the First Methodist church for the opening session Wednesday evening. There were fifty-seven varieties of head-dress and as many songs and yells. The atmosphere was so electric with the presence of youth that a man both blind and deaf could have felt it.

There was no disrespect, however, either of God's house or of the program. Frank W. Cummings played the great organ for half an hour. Then a knight in all his bright regalia carrying a bugle three feet long stepped to the front of the choir loft. To every quarter of the house he gave his clarion call bringing the throng of young people to silence. Then the presiding officer impressively declared: "In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." Thus does our great assembly open by the waters of the mighty sea. From far and near we come. Our King has called us. Hear ye now the greetings of our hosts. They welcome us to their temples, the magistrate to his city. E'en more than this, those who shall guide us through these days, they shall greet us and ere curfew toll we shall feel 'The Thrill of Adventure with Christ.'" It was something new in conventions.

The Song Service

The service of song under Prof. Robert E. Clark was magnificent. It may be that only young people challenged to "Adventure for Christ" can sing as they did. Surely it is seldom that gospel singing so stirs the hearts of listeners. The mayor, George E. Cryer, Dr. Homer Vosburgh and E. Morton Rose brought the welcome of the city, the churches and the young people of Los Angeles. The vice-president, Rev. Theodore F. Adams, himself a youth, responded. The faculty was then introduced, and the "Thrill of Adventure," the theme of the evening, was presented by C. O. Johnson of Tacoma. His presentation was a living reality of that theme. He knows that thrill of adventure; his church in the northwest led the denomination in baptisms the past year; his young people are evangelists; his Sunday school is a soul-winning army. No man could bring from his experience a greater message than Doctor Johnson.

The work of the convention began at 8:30 Thursday morning. The young people's convention is not a vacation dotted with inspirational addresses; it is a university of intensive study for four full days. Eleven methods conferences with two consecutive periods broken by a brief recess are held each morning from 8:30 till 10:15. There were conferences in senior methods, intermediate methods, junior methods, city, state and associational methods, evangelism, social service, stewardship, study class methods, bible dramatics, publicity and recreational activities.

At 10:30 the knight with his bugle appeared again, the solemn call to order was repeated and the general program of the morning was begun. There was enthusiastic singing, particularly of the convention hymn, "Lead On, O King Eternal." The youthful president of the convention, John F. Singleton, then spoke. To hear him is to love him. He is a young business man holding a responsible position with Armour and Company of Chicago. He has tithed his time for two years. His address closed with a fitting season of prayer in which the song leader cooperated with a stanza, while at Mr. Singleton's request, Mr. Phelps and Miss Umstot, the secretaries of the movement, stood beside the president.

W. H. Bowler then spoke. He loves the young people. He let his imagination go out a few years to the time when Singleton would be president of the N. B. C. and the other leaders members of our great boards.

The "Declaration of Invitation"

The Pennsylvania delegates, dressed like Quakers, came forward. How solemn they looked, but how noisy they were! They invited the convention to Philadelphia next year, then called Mr. Phelps forward and read to him their "Declaration of Invitation," backing this with a "chest of gold" containing a check for $700, half the required guarantee fund from an entertaining city. The convention will go to Philadelphia in 1927.

The report of the board of managers, a document of achievement, was received. The quiet half-hour which followed was given by Dr. E. A. Hanley of Berkeley. He read the story of the rich young man whom Jesus loved, then spoke on Christ in this generation. Would this generation have Christ? Would Christ have the youth of this generation? After this stirring challenge the meeting adjourned.

The forums held on Thursday and Friday afternoons were new and striking features of the convention program. Although an hour and a half in length, they were generally popular. The subjects discussed in these forums included peace and international relationships, led by Walter W. Van Kirk; industrial relations, Dr. E. P. Dermott, editor of the California Christian Advocate; race relations, E. R. Brown, affectionately known in Baptist circles on the coast as "Mexican Brown," and law obedience and enforcement (which was attended by 300 people) by Judge Robert H. Scott of the municipal court board of Los Angeles. There was no more stirring moment in the whole program than the hour on Saturday morning when the watchman from the tower reported the forums to the entire convention.

The partial report of the special committee on young people's attitudes is a great contribution to the world-wide discussion of the youth problem of nations. Its findings will be reported in religious papers elsewhere. It is hoped that the report will be completed in another year.

Doctor Abernethy of Washington has a wide open door into the hearts of young people everywhere. On Thursday evening the church was filled to capacity and an overflow was served by means of loud speakers when he spoke on "The Modern Knight Errant," giving at the opening of the session a challenge to a life wholly consecrated to the service of Christ. Decision cards were distributed at the close of this meeting but were not turned in until the end of the convention Sunday evening.

Life Service Discussed

Life service was discussed in personal interviews on Friday and Saturday at hundreds of the cards were signed. The life service league pledge appearing on the cards hung before the convention throughout its entire session: "I will live my life under God for others rather than for myself, for the advancement of the kingdom rather than for my personal success. I will not drift into my life work but I will do my utmost by prayer, investigation, meditation and service to discover that form and place of life work in which I can become the largest use to the kingdom of God. As I find it I will prepare for it and follow it under the leadership of Jesus Christ wherever it takes me, cost what it may."

Following the morning session on Friday came the address by Dr. H. H. Binham of Calgary, Alberta, who dedicated himself to Christian service at the third annual B. Y. P. U. A. convention. He spoke on "The Crusade of the Conventions." In the evening Dr. Lincoln McConnell of Oklahoma City discussed "The Conquest of Prejudice."

Saturday morning was the heart of the program. Following his address on Thursday evening and the many personal interviews which had resulted from it Doctor Abernethy brought still closer to the young people their life responsibility in his address, "The Knight Equipped." More than 400 discussed the problem of their life work in sectional conferences lasting an hour. There were group conferences on foreign missions, home missions, the ministry, religious education, business and professional life, and on fulfilling the life service pledge in the home.

(Continued on page 772)

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

A Neighborly Reply to a Neighborly Criticism

IN the issue of June 12, THE BAPTIST attempted a brief editorial interpretation of the last meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention. It is gratifying to note that the correctness of that interpretation is conceded by Baptist papers generally. By way of exception, however, the Word and Way honors us with more than two columns of friendly criticism under four definite heads. These will be considered in the order in which the Word and Way states them.

First, THE BAPTIST said: "So far as votes can settle anything among Baptists it is settled that the Northern Baptist Convention will not accept and put its imprimatur upon any official creed, nor prescribe either the membership or the practice of any local church, nor admit to membership as a delegate in the convention any person who is not a baptized believer, nor impose upon workers supported by it any test of orthodoxy except a genuine personal loyalty to Jesus Christ."

Concerning this statement the Word and Way observes: "This declaration is set down with a firmness and finality that make it highly, even intensely interesting. It is of the nature of an ex cathedra statement. It shuts the convention up to an irreversible position." But does the Word and Way understand that the effect of a vote in a Baptist body is to shut that body up to an irreversible position? We hold a different idea of Baptist procedure. We hold it proper rather to understand that when a Baptist body has voted on any question it is to be taken to mean what it says until it says something else. And in the editorial under criticism, to avoid any possibility of presumptuous or ex cathedra opinion, we went on to say: "Probably the position thus attained is not precisely that which any group would have projected as its own full ideal. But it is that which has resulted from honest and patient attempts to arrive at such understandings as will facilitate cooperation in the promotion of common and fundamental Christian aims. And the hopeful fact is that this position, having been so attained, seems to be that in which the thought of the denomination tends to a stable equilibrium."

How the Word and Way with those words before it could understand THE BAPTIST as speaking with an air of irreversible finality, constitutes a study in psychology.

On the second point our words as quoted above concerning the attitude of the convention were that it will not "prescribe either the membership or the practice of any local church." The Word and Way understands this statement to mean that "the convention will have nothing to say or do about the character and standing of cooperating churches." We would rather disavow our words than have them so understood. But the Word and Way relieves us of the alternative by using twenty-six lines to show from our editorial that the convention does have something to say about the character and standing of cooperating churches. It shows that the convention excludes any church that recognizes or practices for scriptural baptism anything except the immersion of believers and admits only baptized believers to its membership. That the Word and Way is not satisfied with the attitude of the convention is obvious, but that is not relative to this particular discussion.

For the third point of criticism, the Word and Way says, "It is, according to our Chicago neighbor, to be the fixed policy not to 'impose upon workers supported by it any test of orthodoxy except a genuine personal loyalty to Jesus Christ.'" We wish our neighbor had defined for its readers 'personal loyalty to Jesus Christ.' Just what and how much does this mean? Who is to decide whether or not an officer of the convention, or a missionary appointed by a mission board is personally loyal to Jesus Christ?"

We understand the Word and Way to be actually seeking information and not merely inventing occasions for fault-finding. Our reply must, of course, be brief.

Loyalty to Christ is shown by honest endeavor to live true to his spirit and his known teaching in all things. We go farther, however, than our neighbor in selecting a standard of such loyalty. The Word and Way stands for "personal loyalty to Christ as understood and defined by real and loyal Baptists." THE BAPTIST stands for personal loyalty to Christ as understood and defined by the writers of the New Testament. The limits of space do not permit a comparison at length between these two standards.

Whether an appointee for denominational service is loyal to Christ is to be decided by those who appoint and support him. This would seem to be elementary and obvious. There does not seem to be any other tribunal to which the question can be referred. Certainly THE BAPTIST does not assume to itself any such function beyond the field of its direct responsibility.

The fourth and final criticism directed at THE BAPTIST by the Word and Way relates to the inclusive policy of the Foreign Mission Society, which it understands us to accept as settled. We see no reason why we should not so accept that policy. It has been long in force. No proposal, so far as we are aware, has been made in any public and parliamentary way to change it. We have no information that any such action is contemplated in any quarter.

What is that policy? We quote from the official statement of the Foreign Mission Society in a careful reply to this very question: "Liberty must . . . always be exercised in our denominational sphere within the bounds of the Christian and Baptist faith. . . . We have demanded that all our officers and missionaries be loyal to the gospel. We will appoint only suitable evangelical men and women. . . . And by the gospel we mean the good news of the free forgiveness of sin and eternal life (beginning now and going on forever) through a vital union with the crucified and risen Christ, which brings men into union and fellowship with God. This salvation is graciously offered on the sole condition of repentance and faith in Christ and has in it the divine power of regeneration and sanctification through the Spirit. The only reason we have for accepting this gospel is our belief in the deity of Christ in whom we see the Father, a faith founded on the trustworthiness of the scriptures and the fact that we have experienced this salvation in our own hearts."

That statement did not originate in the office of THE BAPTIST, but we know no reason to doubt the good faith of the society in setting it forth, we rejoice in the increasing fruitfulness of the work on the foreign fields under that policy in leading men to Christ (last year surpassing all former years in the thousands of conversions), and in contemplation thereof we feel a prompting not so much to meticulous criticism as to great thanksgiving. We are persuaded that when Baptists generally come to understand clearly what that policy is and what is being accomplished under it they not only will not wish to reverse it but will rally to it with unprecedented enthusiasm and with ample moral and financial support. They will sustain a missionary policy of liberty "within the bounds of Christian and Baptist faith."

In every desire to preserve the integrity and purity of the Baptist faith and the Baptist movement on the original basis of personal and collective loyalty to the spirit, teaching and authority of Jesus Christ alone, we heartily share. We stand, and invite all other organs of Baptist expression to stand with us, in resisting every tendency towards perversion or schism. And we pray for the day when none of us will be more zealous in discovering occasions for misunderstanding and dispute than we are in finding ways to a good understanding and to a true fellowship of faith and service.

Abstract Ethics and Facts

OF COURSE, in order to have good society we must have good men and women. Of course, if the church attempts to deal with concrete social problems it runs the risk of making mistakes. Of course, the business of the church is to preach the gospel. Of course, the purpose of the gospel is to make good men and women. Of course, personal goodness is fundamentally a matter of motive. But goodness has both motive and method. Good character involves good conduct. Duty lies where concrete things are to be done. Certainly then, the church has not completed its task until it has called its hearers to all of the duty that lies within its field of vision. And it is bound to be a seer in this field. No matter how complex may be the relations of society, the church is bound to survey them intelligently and to assist those who look to it for leadership in finding where in those relations the path of duty lies.

Research with Promise of Results

IN view of the existence of a strike on the Western Maryland railroad, ministers' associations of Cumberland, Hagerstown and Washington county in Maryland invited the Federal Council of Churches through its research department "to make a study of the conditions surrounding the strike and its effect upon the life of the community." The invitation was accepted. The study proposes to cover "the aspects of the controversy between the Western Maryland railroad and its employees which have significance for the Christian church in the determination of its duty toward such problems and of the contribution which it can make to their solution . . . to discover and make known the facts that lie behind the present conflict, its effect upon the moral and religious life of the community, and the possibilities of constructive action to prevent similar disruptions of industrial goodwill in the future. There is no intention of putting the Federal Council or its research department in the position of arbitrating the conflict, or of siding with one of the disputants as against the other." If the investigation of the steel strike may be taken as an index, one may expect some valuable results.

The Cultural Wage

FOR a good many years reform in industry has hovered about the question of a living wage for workers. But there was an algebraic x hidden in the problem. What is a living wage? Is it one that will merely support life, or one that will enable the worker and his family to live well? But Mr. Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric Company, envisages the coming of a "cultural wage," which will enable workers to "take advantage of all the great opportunities which are offered to the citizens of the United States." He goes on to announce two great related principles. He says: "When that time comes, then all men will be free and equal. The great objective of a free government and of a high industrial order is to establish equality of opportunity for all men." That is, first, equality of economic opportunity is a necessary condition of freedom; secondly, the legitimacy of both government and business must be tested by their effectiveness in securing such equality. This is the modern version of Jeffersonian democracy.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

There Is an Economist Fighting Economic Laws

Observers whose only scientific qualification was common sense have long known and pointed out that "economic law" was a bogey trotted out at seasonable times to scare people away from economic justice. Mr. George F. Hinman has the credit of being about the first confirmatory witness from the inside of the bogey factory. But he overdoes it. He says that "in the broad sense in which it is usually talked and written about there isn't any such thing." He instances the law of supply and demand and others of the same family used as scare-crows. But, after all, given economic conditions will produce predictable economic consequences. Hence the plea for a change in economic conditions may sometimes be a true warning of a storm.

Sentimental Radicals May Let Mr. Ford Have the Floor

"No harm would come to the world with the repudiation of war debts; on the contrary much good might be expected. The nations least inclined to face their war debts are the more warlike nations anyway, and if they lose their credit it will simply mean that their power of creating mischief will be curtailed. The war is paid for anyway. All the debts are paid. Maybe all the profits are not yet paid, and it is just as well that they should not be. No depth of degenerate savagery was ever so low as the practice of making profit out of war. Profits trace back to persons. And if these persons are traced, the sources of war are found." So speaks Mr. Henry Ford editorially in a recent number of the Dearborn Independent. What comment can make the subject more ominous? The trouble is to find enough people who can read it—and get the point. If "the war is paid for anyway," what follows?

There Is Our Hand, Lass the Word Along

Some months ago the suggestion was made in these columns that the method of the Inquiry has value for the Baptist denomination in dealing with questions concerning which the denomination is in the process of making up its mind. That is, we proposed an occasional non-controversial assessment of the various shades of opinion current among Baptists upon important subjects, with a view to enabling those who bear denominational responsibilities to adjust administration intelligently to the thought of the constituency. It is gratifying to observe in the last number of the Watchman-Examiner an approval of the principle of a referendum. If it shall appear that the Baptists generally desire such method of denominational expression, more detailed consideration of both its method and effect will be opportune.

This Thing Passes for American Statesmanship

The Christian Statesman says that American liberty is based on three principles: "First, every man should enjoy his natural, inalienable rights and not abuse them. Second, these rights cease when they clash with those of every other man. Third, government must so control the individual as to promote the greatest good for the greatest number." Such foggy conceptions account largely for the difficulty experienced by the National Reform Association in securing a following. For first, rights cannot be abused; where abuse begins right ceases. Secondly, one man's rights do not clash with another's; men's claims of right clash; when they do so, rights do not cease but claims require adjustment. Thirdly, government exists to promote not the greatest good of the greatest number but the greatest common good of all; minorities do not lose their right to participate in the benefits of government. The Christian Statesman is orthodox in its theory, from the point of view of traditional patriotism, but the tradition is defective in analysis.

Steadily, Events Are Driving Towards a World Community

Dr. R. A. Lehfeldt of Johannesburg, South Africa, an expert in finance, proposed something interesting to the banking and currency committee of the United States house of representatives June 10. His proposal is nothing less than a syndicate of world powers, governmental and not private, to buy, hold and regulate the gold supply of the whole world according to the world's needs. Economically and politically his program is scientific and statesmanlike. It points the goal towards which humanity is moving, with reference not only to gold but to all of the great commodities. It visualizes the world as a true economic, political and cultural community. It has as much prospect of present realization as a snowstorm in Campeachy.

Array the Moving Picture In the War to End War

Some time ago reference was made in these columns to the announcement of a new cineograph entitled, "Hell and the Way Out." The scenario was composed by Dr. James K. Shields for the purpose of promoting in America an intelligent and earnest cooperation with other nations in organized efforts to eliminate war from international relations. The League of Nations Non-partisan Association is now showing it through the country. It tells the story in a manner at once temperate and striking, and is admirably adapted for use in churches. Arrangements can be made for showing it in churches either free or at nominal expense. A fine contribution to the cause of peace might be made by showing it at Baptist associations and state conventions. The suggestion is seriously made. Try it.

It Is Becoming so Familiar That It Hardly Needs Telling

Sir Philip Gibbs ventured at the close of the war to tell some of the ugly truth about it. Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes has just published a notable and critical historical study in which he tells a great deal more, and here is Dr. Jerome Davis in Current History, blurting out the whole big fact that the origin of the war and in fact modern war in general lies in economic imperialism in which the United States is one of the chief sinners. For a sample he prints this advertisement that appeared in a New York paper: "Fortune in Sugar—The price of labor in Haiti is lower than in any other cane sugar-growing country. Haiti now is under United States control. There are large profits in the sugar business. We recommend the purchase of stock in the Haitian-American Corporation." The bolus is a nasty one to swallow today (this is written on the sesqui-centennial of American independence.) War makers already know the secret, and they tend to become furious whenever anybody lets it out to the people. When the people generally come to understand, there will be some interesting performances. And the people are learning.

Arise, Sir Knight!

Address delivered Sunday, July 11, before the B. Y. P. U. A. Convention at Los Angeles

BY JAMES ALLAN FRANCIS

IF YOU will go out on a clear night and look up, you will see flung across the sky something that looks like a great river of stars. We call it the "Milky Way." They are not planets like this little ball on which we live. They are mighty suns shining by their own light. Many of them are a million times as big as this world and there are more than a thousand million of them. They look from this distance as if they were close together. As a matter of fact they are so far apart that if two of them had been approaching each other at the beginning of human history at the rate of four hundred million miles a year, they would not have advanced far enough by the present time that their position in relation to each other would seem materially altered. The human mind breaks down when it tries to think of the vastness of it all. But there is one thing far more wonderful than the universe and that is the one who is behind it, the everlasting God.

An inspired writer once said, "When I behold the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?" The answer to this query is furnished in history, furnished by the greatest fact we know, the greatest thing that any mortal ever believed. It makes the reverent heart stand still with awe. It is this: the everlasting God who has created and who upholds the universe, chose to become one of our human race. To believe this is the most daring adventure of faith ever taken and is beyond question the greatest thing ever believed by man.

Let us turn now to the story. A child is born in an obscure village of obscure parents. He is brought up in another obscure village. He works in a carpenter shop until he is thirty and then for three brief years is an itinerant preacher, proclaiming a message and living a life. He never writes a book. He never holds an office. He never raises an army. He never has a family. He never owns a home. He never goes to college. He never travels 200 miles from the place where he was born. He gathers a little group of friends about him and teaches them his way of life. While still a young man the tide of popular feeling turns against him. The band of followers forsakes him. One denies him; another betrays him. He is turned over to his enemies. He goes through the mockery of a trial; he is nailed on a cross between two thieves and when dead is laid in a borrowed grave by the kindness of a friend. Such are the facts of his human life.

He rises from the dead. Today we look back across 1900 years and ask, what kind of a trail has he left across the centuries? When we try to sum up his influence, all the armies that ever marched, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned are picayune in their influence on mankind compared with the influence of this one solitary life. He has changed the moral climate of the world, is changing it now and will continue to do so until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ. I ask you to pause a moment and think of this thing which Christians believe. We are talking about great adventures. I remind you that there must be a great adventure in faith before there can be a great adventure in action. No man has ever done a great thing until he has first believed a great thing.

I come now to the call that he has issued to his followers in this world. After he had lived his life, after he had wrought his miracles, after he had calmly and gloriously passed through the grave and stood on heaven's side of an empty tomb, he called his disciples together and gave them their marching orders. If any greater words have ever been uttered on this earth, we have not heard them. He said, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

I ask you to notice three things in this tremendous statement which we call the Great Commission. The first is the place and authority which he assumes for himself. The second is the command which he gives to his followers. The third is the infinitely precious and age-long promise that accompanies this command.

Look first at the place and authority that he claims for himself. We have a word in our modern speech that is all right in its place. We talk about "boosting" men. Jesus Christ was not a booster and he does not ask that men boost him. The night before he died, in an upper room, he did something that left its impression upon the world for all time. He girded himself with a towel and deliberately washed the feet of his disciples, and when one of them objected, he said, "You call me Master and Lord; and you say well, for so I am. If I, then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." That man, who girded himself with a towel in the fashion of a servant, stooped down and washed the feet of his disciples, is the same man who stands up and says calmly and deliberately, as if he were uttering a commonplace that every one ought to know, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth."

We need not try to make any comparison between the authority of Jesus Christ and that of any one else. His is an authority without peer. It is an authority that is not bounded by time or place. It is the authority of eternity. It is the authority of God. It is the authority of infinite righteousness. It is the one authority above all others and what we need is not to boost Jesus Christ but to discover him, not to boost him but to give him the place that rightly belongs to him and take our stand under his authority. A moment ago I asked you to look at the vastness of the universe. When you adventure into Christian service under the Lord Jesus, you not only have the backing of the universe but you have the backing of the one who is back of the universe. We are working according to the ground plan of God. He who framed the world invites us to work by this plan. He will yet succeed in accomplishing all that he has planned.

I ask you to look at the command, "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." I beg you to notice this is world-wide in its scope and age-long in its duration. It naturally divides itself into two phases. In discipling the nations there is first the winning of individual souls to Christ. You who have taken the name of Jesus, who call yourselves his followers, are any of you going to be satisfied to live your life and leave the world without winning some one individual yourself to allegiance to Christ? Are you willing to think of leaving this world and its opportunity for Christian service with an absolutely starless crown? . . .

But there is another side to this great command beside winning individuals. India, after a century and a quarter of missionary work, has over four millions of Christians and three hundred and twenty-five millions who are not Christians, but the thinking, feeling and ideals of those three hundred and twenty-five millions have been radically altered by the presence of Christ in India and by the preaching of his gospel during this century and a quarter. Unspeakable things which were commonplaces in social life of that land 100 years ago, will never be tolerated in India again. They have been banished by the spirit of Christ. The kingdom of God grows not alone by the winning of one and one and one, but by permeation and diffusion. It is like the coming of spring. It is like the influence that a mighty magnet exerts on all around it. It is the breath of God in human life, bringing the kingdom in its completeness nearer and nearer. Christ permeates and interpenetrates the thinking of the masses of this world until it is changed into the very kingdom of God. Two children are born on the same day in two separate homes. So far as any one can see they are equal in heritage, in ability, in respect. One of them is born into a home where love reigns, where father and mother respect and love each other, where God is revered, where service for others, both in the home and outside, is life's main business. The other is born into a home where instead of love there is a quarrel, there is selfishness, there is impurity, there is strife, there is everything that ought not to be. One of these children is damned in his cradle by his surroundings; the other has a thousand chances to one for a splendid, developing, righteous life. Why? The difference is in the atmosphere into which they are born. It is just as much your business and mine to complete what Jesus began in changing the moral climate of the world, as it is to win individuals to Christ.

I beg you to remember that the only way you can do either one of those things is by having the great Christ enshrined and reincarnated in your own life. Christ rides to this world, not alone through a printed page, not through statutes, or organizations, but supremely through personality. If God could not get as close to human life as he wanted except by taking the form of man, then you cannot reach people except through your personality. You cannot expect that your influence is going to be any better than you are. You must be an incarnation of the thing you say or the thing you are will thunder so loudly people cannot hear what you say. Don't let the thing you are contradict the thing you say. As we deal with people, they watch the things we do much more closely than the things we say. This is our tremendous adventure, to obey Christ. We don't have to invent anything. We take that which the Master has laid before us and say, "Lord Jesus, I will go forward with thee and by thy grace I will consecrate myself and all I can be to carrying out this program."

I beg you to notice that the Master also said, "Baptize them." I am here tonight as a Baptist and make no apology for it. You and I are speaking as Baptists. The more I observe the ordinance of baptism, the more I am filled with delight at the wisdom of Jesus Christ in appointing that ordinance, so simple and so splendid. Words have to be translated from language to language, and sometimes the translation is awkward, but an act translates itself. When you yield yourself to be buried beneath the water and rise again according to the command of the Lord Jesus Christ, you are saying a glorious and significant thing. You are saying, "Master, I believe that thou didst die for me and that thou didst rise again, and here and now I yield myself to thee. I believe that I am so bound up in the bundle of life with the Lord that I reckon myself dead to the old life and arisen to a new world, and in this new world thou, Christ, art all in all."

Then he goes on to say, "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." There are some things about the life of Christ, about his coming into this world, that are beyond our understanding. We are dealing with the mighty mystery of the eternal. . . .

Let us come to the promise that goes with this tremendous command, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The Master here assumes that he is alive from the dead and is speaking to us from beyond the grave. Here again we are confronted by mystery. Some one raises all kinds of questions about the resurrection. I do not know anything about the nature of the resurrection. I know that they nailed him to a cross. I know they took him down a dead man and laid him in Joseph's tomb. I know that on the morning of the third day they found the grave empty except for the grave clothes, and I know that he made himself known to them, I mean to their human senses as being alive, now to one, now to two, now to seven, then to 120 and finally to 500. At least eleven separate manifestations of himself were given during forty days. What does this mean? It means that the living Christ is as near to you as he was to the generation that walked on earth when he was here. "I am with you all the days."

You are going out into this great adventure. It is the thing that will dignify life. It is the thing that will enable you to leave your mark on the ages. There comes from the unseen a voice of infinite authority and infinite tenderness and it says to you and to me everything that we need, "Lo, I am with you." As you go to your homes, it is your privilege to have him as your companion and under all the stress and trial of life, it is your privilege to hear him say, "Lo, I am with you." This is the real knighthood. Let us highly resolve, "Lord Jesus, I will not disappoint thee. I have taken thy name and now I give thee my heart and my hand for all time."

Is the Church Necessary for Religious Education*

BY THEODORE GERALD SOARES

(Continued from last week)

WHAT college boy ought not to have been left to grope at twenty years of age for the simple fundamentals of religion. In some way the church had failed in its responsibility with him. He was really hungry for just what the church had to offer. Through some ineptness of minister or teacher he had been left cold and untouched. But it was the church that did the thing for him after all. At last a minister read Corinthians so that he understood it. What does that mean but the responsibility of the church to interpret its great spiritual tradition? The thing that the boy wanted was in the Bible. It was there, expressed in the exquisite lyric beauty of Paul's burst of religious devotion. He found the interpretation of life that he needed in the Bible. And when that vitalizing experience of Abraham Lincoln came to him and he was seeking to go beyond it to the fuller meaning of life, it was the gospels that gave him what he wanted. The Bible again had for him the supremely satisfying religious knowledge; and, without that knowledge, he would have groped in vain for a content for his mystic longing. The mystic experience is never in vacuo. The mystic may think that his revelation has come to him direct, but it is always conditioned by the content of his knowledge.

Used by special permission of the Journal of Religion.

The church ought to have acquainted that boy more fully and effectively with the Jesus of the New Testament. The church had that glorious knowledge in its keeping and was responsible for making it vital in the lives of its youth. I cannot here enter into the interesting problems of curriculum and pedagogy that are thus suggested. I am not, of course, returning to the intellectualism from which we are just beginning to escape, that the church has a body of knowledge which is to be imparted to its children in the confidence that the knowledge will in some mysterious fashion become transformed into social and religious attitudes. But our religion has come down to us enshrined in a beautiful literature, in story, sermon, song and vision. These are nothing in themselves but everything when vitalized, emotionalized in experience. It is the responsibility of the church to help its children to share the experiences that have been so generally connected with this rich heritage.

Opportunity for Practice of Love

If I may go on using my Harvard student as a text, let me point out that the church itself ought to have so companioned him in its life that he would have known that religion is love. The church is not an institution apart from society, segregating religion. The church is a society. It is a fellowship of people. It is an opportunity for the practice of love. The religious community carries on a considerable enterprise. Little children meet together for Sunday and week-day activities; boys and girls have classes and clubs; the young people have a great range of interests; men and women erect a building, engage in worship, and have many forms of social expression. All of these groups have definite relations to philanthropic enterprises, to various community and civic undertakings. Constant consideration is given to the moral significance of the world life about them and beyond them. This fellowship with its many interests and its many points of social contact is itself an opportunity for the practice of the best kind of living, and by no means an insignificant opportunity. The church has a responsibility that it has seldom realized of practicing its people in the good life. It has sometimes thrown away the opportunity. It has used unworthy means to gain its ends and thereby has missed the real ends. It has resorted to cheap and tawdry methods. It has sold tickets to stupid entertainments, bribed its children to solicit subscriptions, blackmailed tradesmen into furnishing goods and purchasing worthless advertising. It has spoiled its own fellowship with envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness. When it has done this it has lost its supreme opportunity. The life of love can be lived and very significantly lived in the actual fellowship and enterprise of the church, and there is far more opportunity of planning a program of progressive socialization within the fellowship than most churches have ever dreamed. If from the beginning, little children enter into its cooperations, share the labors and burdens and sacrifices so far as their ability and experience permit, and so on through all the development of youth and maturity, there can be a reaffirmation of the ancient declaration, "How these Christians love one another."

So I am going to be bold enough to state that the responsibility of the church in religious education is to make churchmen. I mean that we really want to bring our children into the best kind of church religion. We want them to feel their relationship to the great spiritual order, "that they may know with all the saints what is the length, and breadth and height and depth of the love of God that passeth knowledge." We want them to have the sanctities and the reverences that have made life holy. We want them to be at home in the ritual and symbolisms of our religion. Other people have other symbolisms and other rituals as they have other flags and other heroes; but we have ours, and we want our children to feel the beauty and appeal that these have for the churchman. This is not a matter of cold teaching, catechising, disciplining. Indeed it will never come that way. The kind of shared life that I am trying to describe can only come through the warmth of religious fellowship, so that our children get the tone and color of the church life that we all live together.

But there is something more. The Christian church does not live for itself. It is a fellowship for its own members, but it is a fellowship of faith in humanity. It is faith with an ethical passion. Its prayer, which is the heart of its aspiration and hope, is that reverence may fill the hearts of all men, that goodwill may be universal, that the forgiving spirit may overcome all evil and that the great divine righteousness may prevail. Its worship centers in that. Its propaganda, when it is at its best, is not a self-seeking effort for enlargement, but an endeavor to share its joy and its hope with every human soul.

What Is the Life of Love?

There is just criticism of the church that it has often expressed its love and spirit of service rather in binding up the wounds of those who have been hurt in the fierce struggle of life than in seeking to change the conditions of the struggle. It has been more interested in philanthropy than in social justice. It has accepted the social order as divinely ordained and has endeavored to teach contentment, shutting its eyes to iniquities, tyrannies and even cruelty. That being the case, the development of a churchman might mean simply that this powerful institution was working on the side of a rigid conservatism and against human progress. But the responsibility of the church in religious education is to rediscover its mission. The life of love is not merely the life of benevolence. Love is aggressive. Love is passionately intolerant of injustice, oppression, and cruelty. Love is a consuming fire. Love declares that it were good that a millstone were hanged about the neck of those who make life hard for the weak and that they were drowned in the depths of the sea. Love is not satisfied while one baby is born into the world without health and care and beauty; while any child grows up, without play and joy and the richness of living; while any woman loses the glory of free and radiant womanhood; while any man is prevented from being and doing his best. Love is profoundly dissatisfied with the world in which we live and is urgent to make it better. The church is the teacher of that kind of love. Its prayers, its songs, its sacraments, its faith all look to the blessedness of all the children of the eternal Father. The responsibility of the church in religious education is to bring up its children in this longing and effort for a better human society. It tells them the story of the liberations of the past. It teaches them its songs of universal peace and brotherhood. It practices them in enterprises of social righteousness. It turns them to a study of the conditions of the world, that they may know the facts of the hard and bitter struggle in which so many live. It enlists them in activities of goodwill and of brotherhood. It inspires them to join in crusades of righteousness. In this sense then the responsibility of the church for religious education is to develop churchmen.

The Devotional Life

The Law of Increase

"Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."—Prov. 14:4.

By GEORGE H. MORRISON

ONE has to remember that in eastern countries it was oxen which were employed in farmwork. To this day, in the changeless Orient, oxen are the common beasts of burden. It was oxen that drew the cart on which the Philistines had set the ark of God. It was against the ox-goad that Saul was kicking in his angry and persecuting years. There was something familiar and homely, then, to the original readers of the Proverbs in the charming little figure of our text. A clean stall was a pretty sight. It was attractive in its perfect order. But if the oxen lay in it last night one could scarcely expect it to be spotless. And the point is that without the oxen farm work was impossible, nor could there ever be any ploughing of the fields. The clean stall was the empty stall. It was spotless, but entirely useless. If the labors of the farm were to go forward one must reckon on a little soiling there. That was what seized the writer's imagination, so that he took his tablets and wrote down: "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

Black Smoke for Bluebells

One might illustrate that homely figure in a variety of ways. There is, for instance, the beauty of the country. Many of my readers will remember places that once were quiet and beautiful retreats. The grass was green in them, and there was wealth of wild flowers and the restful shadowing of ancient trees. And now, after the lapse of years, the immemorial quietness has gone, and the place altered beyond recognition. The great city has come, creeping up with its grimy and insistent hands. Where once the bluebells grew are houses now, and the plying of an unceasing traffic. Pits have been sunk and factories erected, and great chimneys are belching out their smoke, where long ago there was a pleasant solitude. I never see blast furnaces without recalling the picture of our text. I never pass through what is called the Black Country without remembering its message. For now the old clean quietness has gone, and all the peace and beauty have departed, in the increase of the activities of man. The point is that it had to go. There is something lost in everything we gain. We have to part with the quiet of the countryside if there is to be increase of livelihood for millions. All this is hinted at in this inspired word, with its homely and familiar figure, "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

A Genius for Disorder

Again, in kindlier and gentler ways the message of our text applies to the home. It has been so applied, in a brief poem, by one of our choicest Scottish preachers. How neat and tidy many a home is when there are no little children in its shelter. There is not a shadow of disorder there, and everything is in its place. But when the children come and learn to walk and inherit the freedom of the home, then things are singularly different. There is still in the home a place for everything, but everything is seldom in its place. There dwells a perfect genius for disorder in the hearts of these little citizens of heaven. And yet, for all the disarray of it, is it not that way that the increase comes into the life of father and of mother? Wherever there are little children, does there not come an expansion of the heart, an increased tenderness and patience, and often a new sense that God is near? One of our Scotch preachers tells us in his diary that when he saw his child playing on the hearthrug he heard God whispering, "Thou art forgiven." Yes, the former tidiness is gone now. Playthings lurk in unsuspected places. Eager little hands and busy feet sometimes make sorry havoc of the spotlessness. And it is then that the wise but wearied mother will smile and recall the words of Solomon: "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

Wrecking Regularities

Again, in every revival of religion this strange law of increase is at work. There are a hundred witnesses to that. In dead times there is a spiritual decency that is the counterpart of the clean crib. Worship is a respectable performance, nor would men offend the proprieties for worlds. Everything is orderly and flawless, and sermons are interesting essays, and service is elaborately organized. Then comes, like an ox-team, the Holy Ghost—and the crib is not spotless any more. The old regularities are gone. There is disorder and excitement and enthusiasm. Men do things they would never dream of doing, and say things they would never dream of saying in their unemotional and chilly days. The strange thing is that seasons such as that are the great seasons of spiritual increase. It was so at Pentecost and at the Reformation, and right through the stirring times of Wesley. Hearts were changed, characters transformed, society was affected to its depths, multitudes were added to the church. What matters a little disorder in the crib if the work of the husbandman is being done? If the harvest-fields are being reaped, why worry about a little soiling? There is a great deal of heavenly wisdom concealed in the homely figure of our text: "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for Aug. 15

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The set of books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

You will be interested and inspired when you read the last chapter of Smyth's "How We Got Our Bible," beginning on page 133. This will help you to realize how the later translations of the Bible have been made.

Perhaps for this lesson it might be well for you to have on hand a "Harmony of the Gospels." Beforehand choose several scripture passages or stories which appear in more than one gospel. In meeting read each of these passages or stories, pointing out clearly that while all are telling the one story, each has worded it differently.

Have on hand, also, a copy of the King James version, the American revised, Moffat's translation, Goodspeed's translation, and Montgomery's translation. In each instance, read the passages from these books, showing that while all contain the same thoughts, they are merely worded differently. Show, also, that the later translations of the gospels make it easier to understand the earlier translations, since the later ones give us the stories in our common language. Perhaps the conclusion of this lesson might be that these modern translations may help us to understand otherwise unclear passages of scripture, and should, therefore, be used as a source of help for understanding and studying our Bible.

Living Facts

The many people were hushed as the young man stepped forward on the platform and said, "Three score and eighteen months ago, our leaders brought into existence in this city a new federation of young people, conceived in enthusiasm and dedicated to the proposition that 'previous preparation pays.' Now this federation is engaged in a work of such scope and effectiveness as to prove that a federation so conceived and so dedicated must endure." Can't you catch the spirit of Lincoln's Gettysburg address? There was more to that prologue delivered before Baptists at the Thursday afternoon session of the Northern Baptist Convention in Washington, D. C. The young people had charge and they gave those older Baptists a glimpse of what they were doing.

No sooner had the prologue been given than an eleven-year-old boy stepped forward and told clearly and calmly of the work of the juniors of the federation. As he spoke, six juniors, at shortly spaced intervals, came marching on the platform, each bearing a junior shield on which one of the letters of the word "Junior" was printed. As the speaker stepped back, the line swung obliquely backward to the right of the platform.

A boy of about fourteen quickly came forward and told of the intermediate work of the federation. As he spoke, a girl holding a scroll came on the platform. Another girl took hold of the other end of the scroll and as the speaker told of the work, the scroll was slowly unrolled. Each accomplishment mentioned caused an intermediate shield bearing the information to show on the scroll. A girl stepped forward each time, held her hand at the top of the shield, and slowly moved along as the scroll unfolded. When the speaker finished, this line of girls, holding the scroll, swung obliquely backward to the left of the platform.

A large magnet was brought in and placed at the rear of the platform. Then through the magnet came several bowlers, several basketball players, and several tennis players, in appropriate costume, who grouped themselves at either side of the magnet. Each person carried an emblem representative of the sport he or she played; the bowlers carried "pins," the tennis players racquets, and the basketball players carried balls. A young man told of these organized play activities and what they meant to the federation. Two statements were peculiarly significant. "When we play tennis, we play with Baptists; when we bowl, we bowl with Baptists; when we play basketball, we play with Baptists." What is more, these young people have played with Baptists from outside the federation—with West Virginia and Pennsylvania Baptists. The other statement was, "We can trace directly to these play activities, the addition of fifty active members to the unions of the federation."

When this part was finished, through the magnet came a line of girls wearing white Grecian dresses with gold sashes, and carrying a B. Y. P. U. shield. The first spoke briefly about the giving of money to missions. Her shield bore the words, "96 per cent giving to missions," which meant that that per cent of young people in the federation gave to missions through the local church. Next came a girl carrying a gold box, and she told of the "Love Offering" which the young people of Columbia federation gave over and above the regular giving. Others in the line told of the attendance, of participation in meeting, of daily Bible reading, of study classes, all of which resulted from the Efficiency contest which was promoted by the federation. These girls formed a line at the front of the platform and when all had finished, they stepped in back of the juniors and intermediates.

Very briefly, then, a pastor of the federation and the director of promotion told of what this young people's work meant to the association and to Baptists generally.

Can't you picture that: a row of juniors holding shields; a row of intermediates holding a scroll; a row of young people carrying shields telling of what was done; and at the back of the platform, a large magnet about which is grouped a picturesque collection of players and workers? Isn't that a vivid picturization of the activities of the federation? Don't you wish you might have seen it?

You have all heard that "facts are dry." But if they are made to live and talk they are fascinating. So these young people gave life to the facts of their accomplishments, holding enthralled the Baptists of the Northern Baptist Convention by their ingeniousness. And if these young people of Columbia federation were able to do that, why couldn't your young people—local, association, or state—do the same thing? Have your young people done an especially commendable piece of work this past year? It is worth "telling the world," isn't it? A little sketch, a graphic tableau, or a striking pageant would help you to visualize for the older people what the young people have done. Not only will they enjoy the presentation, but they will remember what has been done; they will keep the young people in mind because imprinted indelibly on their memories will be the pictures of the accomplishments. They will back up the individuals, "whose development has convinced us that the church OF the young people, FOR the young people, and BY the young people is the church that shall stand until the end."

REV. CLARANCE BLEAKNEY of Roseville church, Newark, N. J., who is to spend the summer with his brothers in Europe and England, will preach on Aug. 15 at the Ealing Congregational church, London, and on Aug. 2 at the Auleyn Congregational church, London.

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

ENLISTS FOR MONTHLY PLAN

The First church of Gloversville, N. Y., has adopted a $13,000 missionary quota for 1926-27, and the pastor, Rev. John Freeman Mills, writes that it will try to earn in one-twelfth every month. This church has conducted a well prepared every-member canvass every year for both missions and current expenses.

FOUR PRACTICAL POINTS

In a circular letter sent out to delegates to the Washington Convention, Doctor Bowler suggests four practical things which they can do this year to advance the denominational program. Here are the suggestions:

"We can repeat the stirring, thrilling things we heard.

We can urge our own church and the churches in our vicinity to adopt immediately an adequate missionary quota.

We can urge that a well prepared every-member plan be put on to ensure securing individual pledges to meet the adequate quota.

We can see to it that one-twelfth of the quota is forwarded each month."

Mrs. Joseph S. Wilds, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Woman's Speakers' Bureau, who was a delegate to the Washington Convention, writes to Doctor Bowler saying that she is going to have these four points printed on slips of paper and give them to all the speakers with whom she is in touch. In this way, they will be sure to stress these four points when they speak before organizations of Baptist women.

PASSING ON THE CONVENTION INSPIRATION

Rev. Linden R. Wilson, pastor of the Baptist church of Norwalk, Ohio, writes Doctor Bowler that he has been trying to pass along the inspiration and information of the Washington sessions to his own congregation and to one of the neighboring churches in the association. "We have had two such meetings in our own church," he writes, "one on Sunday morning and the other at an evening service.

"As I had to leave early on Saturday morning," he continues, "the last vivid impression made on me was by that remark of Doctor Robbins to the outgoing missionaries, 'I wish that I could promise you that the denomination would support you in carrying out your life purpose, but I cannot.' I have passed that along to others who seem as much impressed with it as I was myself."

Of his own church the pastor writes,

"Last year we raised about $76 over the amount of the previous year. This year we have set a goal $160 in advance of that of last year. For some years we had been on a decline in missionary contributions, and now feel that the tide has turned. May it rise rapidly!"

REMARKABLE GROWTH

The Northwestern church of Detroit, Mich., has a record for growth. Three years ago its entire budget was $7700. Today it is $30,000. The benevolence budget is $8000, which is sent to the state office in twelve monthly payments. According to the pastor, Rev. Robert White, the church has added an extra $1000 to its missionary quota on its own initiative.

THE ORIENTAL COMES TO US

On the Pacific coast in Seattle, San Francisco, Fresno, San Pedro and Locke, the Woman's Home Mission Society has organized work to help the Oriental women and children. A new stereopticon lecture entitled "Christian Contacts with Orientals" is now ready at the depositories in New York, Indianapolis, Hartford, Buffalo and Denver to help churches to know what we are doing. It is a concrete statement well illustrated of one phase of work.

THE LOCAL CHURCH

in cooperation with
The Northern Baptist Convention
A REASONABLE STANDARD

1. Systematic-Church-Wide-Missionary Education and Publicity.
2. A Definite Financial Objective as the church's just and reasonable share in the United Budget of the Convention.
3. An Annual Every-Member Enlistment for full participation in the world service program of the Convention.
4. Regular Monthly Remittances of Missionary Funds to their proper destination.

The churches practicing the above four-square cooperative relationship with the Northern Baptist Convention are the churches that have measured up to their expectations. It is a winning standard. Let every church make it its own during the current year 1926-27.—
(Reprinted from the New York Metropolitan Baptist Bulletin.)

TEN YEARS OF PROGRESS

In the ten years from 1916 to 1926, the missionary giving of the church of Wilmette, Ill., has grown from $402 to $5343.

The pastor, Rev. Francis Stifler, writes that the benevolence treasurer of the church is one of the finest types of broadminded laymen with a missionary passion, and will do everything in his power to make the payments on the monthly one-twelfth basis. "I should not be at all surprised to see our missionary giving this year reach $6000," the pastor adds.

PUTTING IT UP TO THE PASTORS

At a recent meeting of the Pittsburgh Baptist Association, a layman stated that the securing of the local church quotas was largely in the hands of the pastors. He said that he believed the churches would follow any reasonable request made of them, and if the pastors earnestly asked their churches to raise the quotas, it would, to a large extent, be done. One of the pastors replied that this was a challenge to the pastors and moved that it be accepted. It was then heartily and unanimously carried that the pastors get behind the financial program of the denomination.

The Bellevue church of Pittsburgh, of which the layman mentioned is a member, has followed the every-member plan for many years. It has adopted the 1926-27 missionary quota suggested by the state office and has recently taken pledges for the new year, securing more than ever before. The church remitted regularly every month last year, but the plan this year is to send the full one-twelfth of the quota every month, even though the entire amount has not been received to date by the church.

GOOD START IN PENNSYLVANIA

Last year, 1925-26, 198 Pennsylvania churches reached or exceeded their quotas. The receipts to June 15 this year were nearly $2000 in excess of receipts to like date last year. Prior to June 15, 217 churches had sent contributions, thus indicating their purpose to remit monthly.

THE LARGEST SHARE

FOR OTHERS

In 1925-26, the North Orange church contributed $45,595.31 for benevolences and $23,337.60 for current expenses—nearly twice as much for others as for themselves. The church reported a self-denial Easter offering of $5,839.08.

Among Ourselves

Baptist World Alliance Sunday

THE Baptist World Alliance is asking the churches throughout the world to regard the first Sunday of February in each year as Baptist World Alliance Sunday, that is, as a day when in thanksgiving and prayer the entire work of the denomination shall be remembered at the services of the sanctuary.

Assuredly Baptists have abundant reason to give thanks to God. To take but two or three points:

(1) It is wonderful that, whereas less than a hundred years ago there were in Europe outside the British Isles no churches of our faith and order, there is today scarcely any country in which we are not represented. God has opened to the denomination an unrivalled opportunity of leadership in the evangelization of Europe.

(2) Our people have been divinely led to initiate Protestant missionary effort on behalf of the peoples of Asia and Africa. We recall such heroes as Carey of India, Judson of Burma, Grenfell of the Congo—pioneers in whose steps have followed vast armies of believers.

(3) In two directions we have been graciously privileged to render special service: in our emphasis upon the evangelical simplicities of the New Testament, and in our emphasis upon the worth of civil and religious liberty. Not to name living men, we think of Spurgeon and Maclaren, and of the two great presidents of the Baptist World Alliance who have passed to their eternal reward—John Clifford and R. S. MacArthur. Names such as these set in relief the characteristic qualities and message of Baptists, and explain how it has come to pass that the denomination now represents the largest Protestant body in the world.

(4) We are profoundly thankful to find ourselves members of a great world-wide brotherhood. The foundation and work of the Baptist World Alliance, which is the symbol and expression of our unity, is itself a subject for thankful praise. And outside the borders of our organized unions are millions who also hold many of our distinctive views.

Such considerations must needs awaken our gratitude and joy, but boasting is excluded. We recognize how great things God has wrought for us, in us, and through us; but is there not abundant call for confession and prayer? Have we not too often been absorbed in personal or local concerns, and forgotten the brotherhood?

This preliminary notice is published at the request of the executive committee of the alliance. In all probability the president will circularize the constituent bodies of the alliance with reference to the observance of Alliance Sunday in 1927, but this intimation is given now so that this date may be in mind when preparing plans for the coming year.

—Robert A. Ashworth,

World Alliance correspondent for the Northern Baptist Convention.

Baptist Burma Conference

BY MRS. E. T. FLETCHER

A JOLLY crowd of missionaries boarded the train at Mandalay, and we had a right to be jolly, for we were going to the annual conference of all the Baptist missionaries of Burma. Old friendships were renewed and new ones made as the train climbed the steep mountain to Maymyo. Our missionaries' rest house is at Maymyo, and some were already there, so that in all there were about seventy of us at the conference. We were gathered from all over Burma, some having traveled as many days as it takes to cross the United States in order to get there.

The first day was Sunday, May 9, "a 'retreat' or day of quiet prayer and devotion to invoke God's blessing and to enlarge our spiritual lives." After the inspirational services of the day we were ready to begin the conference work on Monday, under the chairmanship of Doctor St. John of Judson college. We took as the basis of our discussions the report of the New York conference. Committees were assigned to bring in summaries of the various phases of the report and to lead in the discussion of them as applied to the particular field in Burma. We found that in most lines our work measured favorably with the policies suggested by the New York conference.

It has always been the policy of the field to foster self-support and self-propagation among the native churches, and this has been attained in numerous instances. However, the matter of allowing nationals to cooperate in the administration of the field work as a whole with a view to ultimately transferring all responsibility to them is a very difficult problem because of the many races. Not all of the races are in the same stage of development, and racial feeling runs strong. We favor the principle, but the situation is so complicated that we have referred it to a committee to formulate some plan. The general discussion seemed to indicate that our situation is not one of unrest, as in China and some other countries. The nationals as a whole are not demanding a share in the administration. Administration by nationals is more feasible in Rangoon than in other sections, but as yet this has not become an acute problem in the Burman field.

However, it was voted that each station should have a committee of nationals, the missionary being an ex-officio member to carry on the evangelistic work and administer all funds in connection with it. This method is already being used at several stations and is proving satisfactory.

In administering the funds from America, it has been the policy of the mission in Burma to spend twice as much on evangelistic work as on educational work, and, with few exceptions, we have adhered to this policy. It was the feeling of the conference that we should stress evangelistic work still further. We need more Bible women, and more volunteer work on the part of the church members. Burma is still heathen. There are pagodas everywhere. At first I liked them for their grace and beauty. But now they hurt me, because they are ever present indication of the millions of people around us who have not received our glorious Saviour as their Saviour. We have done a great work here in Burma, but it is only the fringe of the people that have been reached. Please pray earnestly for the conversion of the Buddhists and other heathen here.

The conference discussed the matter of economy at some length. We all felt that the missionaries should set an example for good, yet economical living, and that the idea of economy should be held up before the pupils in our schools. As a rule these people are like other people in desiring to live well, but to maintain that this can be done without living extravagantly.

During the conference we received cable from Doctor Robbins telling of the serious financial condition of both boards and their inability to send some much needed workers for whom we had been asking. We regret deeply that there is such a crisis, and, in order that we may share in making the little money go as far as possible, we voted not to take our furloughs at the regular time, but to stay a year longer on the field if necessary. Oh, if the people at home could see the needs here on the field, I think that they would give so heartily that we should not always be hampered for funds as at present.

There is more that I might write about the conference, for it was truly fine. The devotionals played a large part and brought harmony and peace and a sense of God's guiding presence through it all. I think we new missionaries enjoy those services especially, for we get tired of going to services that we cannot understand, and a service in English is a real treat. But all the missionaries, new and old, agreed that this was a conference the inspiration of which will last through the coming year.

Nebraska Letter

By R. R. COON

FIVE state associations meet in May and June, the others in August and September. The Grand Island association met in Chapman, June 22-24. Some of the pastors held a meeting the first afternoon with Rev. A. C. Hull conducting a conference. At 8 p.m. the association officially opened. Moderator D. Q. Coon presided and Rev. C. H. Skinner Polk preached the annual sermon. He took for his text Mark 10:17, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Letters from the churches showed that the number of Baptisms, 250, was twice that of any recent year, and the total membership, 2000, an increase of several hundred. Some of the churches have rebuilt their church buildings. Many are heavily burdened with debt partially accounted for by the fact that some reported no beneficence. The report of the executive committee showed that five of six churches are virtually inactive. Three of these, St. Libory, Shelton and Huff Center, were dropped from the list of churches. The usual recommendations were made to the others. The state secretary, H. Q. Morton, spoke on the work of the association and made an earnest appeal for greater efficiency in the Master's kingdom.

"Brief Doctrinal Studies" were planned by the moderator. The apostolic church, its perpetuity, democracy and lordship were topics considered. Miss Isabelle Crawford gave a sketch of her work among the Indians. Later the women heard reports, and the men discussed the relations of men to boys.

Wednesday evening Miss Crawford gave another address. Professor Knox of Grand Island college gave an address on the value of the Christian school.

Association business was discussed for an hour on Thursday morning. Among the resolutions passed was one urging increase of subscriptions to the state messenger, THE BAPTIST, Missions and the Watchman Examiner. Rev. Ezra Dunbar, director of religious education, gave an address full of practical suggestions. Discussions of Sunday-school problems and young people's work filled the afternoon session.

Doctor Morton addressed the young people at the banquet in the evening on the subject, "Finding Yourself." The Guild of Grand Island presented a pageant. Rev. F. W. Ainslie closed the association with his "Evangelistic Message and Appeal." Music was furnished by several choirs who joined with the Chapman choir. Officers were reelected and the association voted to meet next year with the Horace church.

Church Notes

Rev. J. F. Taylor, formerly pastor at Group City, has become pastor at Maxwell.—The Fairburg church has called Rev. William Park of Lynn, Mass., to the pastorate.—Rev. A. S. Cross has resigned at Hastings to accept a call in St. Paul, Minn.—Rev. F. K. Allen has left the Wayne church and has moved South.—Rev. Ernest Hasselblad becomes pastor at Peru.—The church of Liberty (Minden) has called Rev. J. F. Krumtum as pastor.—Rev. E. V. Garcia gave ten days' laboring with the Mexicans in Scottsbluff. He will continue his service there. German Baptists of that place have called Rev. P. F. Schilling as pastor.—Rev. Rayburn Dunbar of Carmel, Ill., is pastor of Chapman and Prairie Creek.—Rev. Roy M. Lewis moves from Broken Bow to Columbus.—The church at Arthur, Rev. W. T. Dodd pastor, began the year with seven members and closed it with forty-seven, twenty-two by baptism.—Rev. Clifton H. Walcott of Winchester, Mass., has become the pastor of the First church, Lincoln. Improvements costing $9500 have been made.—Rev. T. S. Kesterson, now in his fourth year as pastor at Glenvil, is having success. Sixteen have been baptized during the year.—Rev. Herbert M. Richmond has become pastor at Ansley.—Rev. James A. Whitman has been doing good work at Horace and Elyria. Horace is strictly a Baptist field and now bids fair to remain so.—Rev. C. M. Strong has resigned at Cairo after seven years of service and will move to Kilgore, the scene of his former labors.

Indianapolis Newsletter

By FREDERIC ARTHUR HAYWARD

Back From the Capitol City

THIRTY-SEVEN Indianapolis Baptists attended the convention at Washington and were pleased with the spirit and the promise of a "new turn of events." Everywhere the delegates are discussing the opportunities which a real and well developed plan of evangelism would bring to the churches. The letters to our state paper indicate that the desire to discontinue controversy is evident in Indiana.

Garfield Park Church Dedicated

Overlooking the most beautiful park in the city is the newly built and dedicated Garfield Park church, Rev. C. P. Greenfield, pastor. Probably no location could have been secured that would give more prominence and opportunity for this growing southside church than this spot. For about thirteen years the church under the name of the Southern Avenue church labored in an inadequate building on a one-way street and in the midst of a group of small homes. If someone had chosen the place for the purpose of securely hiding it from the community, he could not have done better. With the building of homes and the adjustment of the community, it was "out of touch with the job," yet it has grown. It has had good leadership and people with prayerful and anxious hearts.

With the coming of the present pastor, the work of a new location and a new building was attempted. $1000 in cash on Easter Sunday was one of the unexpected achievements. A crowd taxing the little church was another. The unanimity of action in choosing a new location was the greatest and most unexpected of all. The building with its pipe organ will cost $35,000. On the day of dedication, June 13, nearly $7000 was raised for the building and windows. Dr. F. E. Taylor of the First church preached the dedicatory sermon. Pastors of other churches brought greetings.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools

Most of the daily vacation Bible schools closed July 3. The attendance was reduced to make better and more effective programs and the year has been a success. Most of the churches plan for this as an annual event in the church program and programs are printed and released for this year as in other years for the schools, by the city office.

The City Grows

Steadily and without boom Indianapolis moves out toward the open spaces. The report for the month closing is that the sale of lots and subdivisions during the month of June has been active. Churches in these outer zones have made progress and have men of fine leadership and spiritual vision at the head of things. We wish we could line them up so our friends could know, Spangler, Julian, Scheick, Shouse, Hartsock, Crafton, Gibbons, McBee, Buckner and Riser.

Linfield College

By LEONARD W. RILEY

THE sixty-ninth year of Linfield college closed June 6. The faculty, the enrollment of students and the graduating class were the largest in the history of the institution. Perfect harmony existed during the whole year between faculty and students. The treasurer's report showed that all bills had been paid and that the balance was on the right side of the account. The endowment assets had been increased by over $11,000 and over $100,000 secured in pledges for new buildings.

The commencement exercises opened with the farewell prayer meeting on Thursday night. This was held in the large gymnasium and over 400 were present. The meeting was led by Pastor W. E. Henry and was a service which those present will not soon forget. Many visitors came especially to be present at this particular service which is the unique feature of Linfield college commencement week.

The board of trustees met on June 4. Twenty-one of the thirty-four members were present. From this time on the board operates under the new method of selecting trustees. The number is now reduced from thirty-four to twenty-eight. According to this method, nine only were elected: Rev. Mahlon H. Day, Portland; Walter P. Dyke, Forest Grove; W. T. Jenks, Salem; Rev. Jacob Kratt, D.D., Portland; F. G. Leary, Portland; Mrs. F. E. R. Linfield, Spokane, Washington; Irl S. McSherry, McMinnville; Rev. A. F. Colver, Boise, Idaho; and Rev. J. F. Watson, D.D., Seattle, Washington. Dr. Olof Larsell was elected to the class of 1928.

Resignation of Professor Gardiner

The board accepted the resignations of Prof. Eugene Stark Gardiner, Miss Margaret L. Mann and Mr. Maurice E. Pettit. For the past sixteen years Professor Gardiner has served as head of the department of English. He now feels that he has reached the time of life when he must be relieved of the responsibilities of this department. He has, however, been retained to conduct his class in Shakespeare as heretofore. Professor Gardiner was formerly pastor of the First church, Franklin, Ind., later professor of English in Franklin college, and later still in California college. When the latter institution closed its doors he came to Linfield and has made a large place for himself in the life of the college and the community.

Margaret L. Mann is a graduate of Linfield college who has served six years as instructor in stenography, typewriting and English. Stenography and typewriting have now been dropped from our curriculum.

Maurice E. Pettit has for the past five years been our first full-time physical instructor. He is the son of Rev. J. A. Pettit, now of Iowa, and a graduate of Des Moines college. As his successor, the trustees elected Mr. Lawrence W. Wolfe, a graduate of Colorado college, Colo., who has had thorough training in physical education and coaching.

Several members of the faculty will pursue studies in post-graduate institutions during the summer months. For this purpose also the board granted a leave of absence for next year to Prof. H. E. Hewitt, who will study in the University of Oregon for an advanced degree. The work in physics during his absence will be carried by Prof. William C. Gregory who, during the past year, has substituted for Prof. Kenneth W. Ray, who returns to our chemistry department next September with the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Miss Emily Bergen, a member of the Highland church of Portland, was elected as student assistant to the physical director.

Miss Mildred Pratt, who has been a student assistant in the piano department, was elected as full time assistant in that department for next year, and Miss Jane O'Reilly of Portland will continue as teacher of violin.

Two very strong messages were presented on Sunday. In the morning the message was delivered by Rev. C. M. Hill, D.D., president of the Berkeley Baptist Divinity school of Berkeley, Calif. In the evening the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by Rev. Frank B. Matthews, pastor of the University church, of Seattle, Wash. This message followed two orations by members of the graduating class. Following the sermon diplomas were delivered to forty-four graduates, thirty-six receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, six the degree of Bachelor of Science and two diplomas in music.

Honorary Degrees Granted.

Two honorary degrees were conferred at this session, that of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Frank B. Matthews and Doctor of Laws upon Pres. C. M. Hill. Doctor Matthews was formerly a student of Linfield college, and later graduated from the University of Oregon, and in 1898 completed the course at Rochester Theological seminary. He has since held pastorates at North Tonawanda, New York, for one year; at Emanuel church, Newton, Mass., for ten years; at the First church, Redlands, Calif., for ten years and he has now been with the University church of Seattle since January, 1919. Doctor Hill was also a student in Linfield college who later graduated from the University of Oregon and from the Rochester Theological seminary. He was ordained at Eugene, Ore., where he was pastor for six years. He was then general missionary of Oregon for three years and later pastor of the Tenth Avenue church, Oakland, Calif., from 1893 to 1904. Since October 1904, he has been president of Berkeley Baptist Divinity school, which institution he was largely instrumental in founding. In 1899 Linfield college conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Having now completed twenty years of work in a most difficult and trying position and having brought the institution he represents up to a basis where its future is assured, the trustees of Linfield college deemed it fitting that Linfield college should again express its appreciation of this man and the great service which he has rendered during his long life on the Pacific coast.

Commencement at Colby

BY E. C. WHITTEMORE

ONE hundred and five years of increasing service to the cause of education, world service, and Christian faith, 105 graduates trained to carry forward the same great service—these were significant figures at the Colby commencement. Progress and accomplishment in every department of education and finance mark the year under the leadership of Pres. Arthur J. Roberts, now the dean of New England college presidents.

For six years Miss Nettie M. Runnals has been dean of the woman's division. On account of the ill health of her parents, Miss Runnals offered her resignation which was regretfully accepted by the trustees.

The baccalaureate sermon this year was delivered by Dr. Woodman Bradbury, '87, of Newton Theological institution, and the missionary sermon by Dr. E. C. Herrick, '98.

There was a hush over the commencement exercises, when in the afternoon the Colby family gathered in the chapel for a memorial service to the late chief justice, Leslie Colby Cornish, '75, who was for many years the chairman of the board of trustees. A prayer of thanksgiving and memorial was given by Dr. E. C. Whittemore. A portrait of the chief justice presented by his nephews, Justice Norman L. Bassett of Augusta, George K. Bassett, of Winslow, and J. Colby Bassett of Boston, was then unveiled, presented by Mr. J. Colby Bassett and received by President Roberts in an address of appreciation and feeling.

The exercises on the campus by the junior and senior classes were of a high order, the former having as their guest, Mr. Richard A. Metcalf, '86, of Richmond, Va., the latter, Dr. Clarence E. Meleny, '76, veteran superintendent of schools in the city of New York. The college play, under the direction of Miss E. Flood, is a commencement feature.

The trustees elected as a successor to Justice Cornish, Mr. Herbert Elijah Wadsworth, '92, of Winthrop Center, Me., a man of the highest character and ideals and of similar devotion to the college. The Phi Beta Kappa oration was by Robert Lincoln O'Brian, many years editor of the Boston Herald, and fully sustained the traditions of that occasion.

On commencement day the student speakers were Abbott Smith, son of William A. Smith, '91, Miss Agnes E. Osgood, and Donald C. Freeman. The commencement address was delivered by Rev. Arthur Wordsworth Cleaves, pastor of the First church, Providence, and member of the Colby class of 1898. The following honorary degrees were conferred: LL.D., Justice Charles Putnam Barnes, Justice Norman Leslie Bassett; Litt. D., Robert Lincoln O'Brian; M.A., Charles Loring Andrews, Walter Llewellyn Gray, Eleanor Bailey Woodman; D.D., Rev. George Merriam; L.H.D., Drew Thompson Harthorn.

The older members among the graduates could not escape the feeling of sadness at the long list given in the Necrology. One professor of the college, Dr. B. E. Carter, of the department of mathematics, after long suffering has died during the year; Dr. Dana W. Hall, of Chicago, steadfast friend of the college, and Dr. Albion W. Small, of the University of Chicago, one of the most eminent educators which Colby ever has sent forth, appear in that list. But the commencement gave evidence of the progress of Colby under the leadership of Doctor Roberts, the increasing recognition it is winning in the world, and the increasing loyalty of its alumni. It is going forward steadily and surely.

International Baptist Seminary Commencement

BY JOSEPH C. HAZEN

THE commencement exercises of the International Baptist seminary of East Orange, N. J., were held May 23-June 1.

The annual baccalaureate sermon was preached Sunday morning, May 23, in the North Orange church by Rev. Frank L. Anderson, D.D., president of the seminary. Rev. J. Sherman Wallace, D.D., of the publication society preached the annual missionary sermon in the First church of East Orange. The Bible declamatory contest for the J. Ackerman Coles' prizes was held May 24 in Walton hall. Athletic contests between the various classes were held on the campus May 26.

The annual seminary banquet given by the woman's auxiliary occurred on the evening of May 27. About 125 students and their friends, faculty members, and former students had a most enjoyable evening together. The banquet was served by members of the World Wide guilds of the four Baptist churches in the Oranges. The woman's declamatory contest for the J. Ackerman Coles' prizes was held May 28.

The graduation exercises took place June 1 in the Peddie Memorial church of Newark. Rev. Wilbour E. Saunders, pastor of the First church of Rahway, I. J., delivered the address, his subject being "A Minister's Attitude Towards Life." The following graduates received diplomas: Michael Daniel Hiben, Alexander Boda, Charles Cherwinski, John Zajkowski, Anthony J. Lipinski, Andrew Borisuk and Hermogenes Mikhachuk.

There are fourteen members of the faculty and the school has an enrollment of fifty-two. There are five separate departments, not including the woman's department. The budget for the year is little over $35,000. A new three story building is being erected on the campus at a cost of $85,000, which will accommodate sixty students. This building is made possible largely through the sale of a part of the original piece of property which netted the Home Mission society a very handsome profit.

Pres. and Mrs. Frank L. Anderson sailed for Europe June 5. They will visit Switzerland, Germany, Roumania, Poland and Sweden.

Commencement at Acadia

By A. C. CHUTE

WITH the end of May came the eighty-eighth convocation of Acadia university, Wolfville, Nova Scotia. It now lacks but two years of a full century since the work in higher education began among the Baptists of the maritime provinces of Canada. The college year just ended has been quite worthy of its long line of predecessors both in respect to attendance and the character of the service performed. The closing exercises passed off with customary enthusiasm in spite of unfavorable weather.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached by the president, Dr. F. W. Patterson. His was all the more fitting because of the fact that during his incumbency he has been so largely occupied with the financial side of the undertaking. His message, in fullest accord with our traditions, forcibly dealt with the centrality of love to God and men in every proper life. The largest graduating class in the history of the college, fifty-eight in number, then received the most wholesome and quickening counsel at their entrance upon life's responsibilities.

The classes from the boys' academy and the girls' school were with equal brightness addressed by former principals. Dr. W. L. Archibald, who a year ago was made registrar of the college, spoke to academy graduates; and Dr. H. T. De Wolfe, who resigned after more than twenty years as head of the seminary to devote himself entirely to professorial work in the college, spoke to the seminary graduates.

Two speakers were present from abroad: Dr. O. C. S. Wallace from Litaw Place Baptist church, Baltimore, Md., who spoke for the college Y.M.C.A. on Sunday evening; and Rev. E. LeRoy Harkin from Brooklyn Baptist temple, New York, who gave an address, "Abiding Tasks" before the Acadia alumni association. Doctor Wallace received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters and Mr. Dakin the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Rev. W. Inglis Morse, an Episcopal minister of Lynn, Mass., was granted the same degree as Doctor Wallace. The superintendent of Baptist home missions in the maritime provinces, Rev. E. S. Mason, was also made a Doctor of Divinity. All thus honored are Acadia graduates. Miss Mabel Parsons of Richmond, Va., a seminary graduate, long an efficient teacher at Spelman seminary, received the Master of Arts degree.

The college teaching staff will be enlarged before another scholastic year, while some readjustments and changes will be made in the boys' academy and women's seminary. An addition is being built to the college women's residence and a central dining hall, suitable for the accommodation of all students of the three institutions, is being erected. In the financial campaign for the raising of $1,500,000, Doctor Patterson maintains his zeal and optimism and imparts the same to our Baptist constituency. Our history well illustrates that the reward of good work done is the imposition of yet heavier and more honorable tasks.

The memorial tablet in University hall was unveiled by Dr. J. W. Manning, chairman of the board of governors, a vigorous octogenarian of the class of 1867. It was erected "To the glory of God and to the memory of the revered and honored founders of Acadia university." Ten names appear on the tablet, names which are household words among maritime Baptists. These ten were the leaders in the founding of Horton academy in 1828 and of Acadia university, 1838. Perhaps these fathers did not dream that their doings would arrive to such dimensions. The years have fled, the work has expanded, "Till at last it has come to be, For length and breadth, the bigness which you see."

Thomas G. Field

By CHARLES E. STANTON

A RARELY beautiful spirit passed to its reward when Rev. Thomas G. Field set out on life's last great adventure. Doctor Field passed his eighty-third birthday only a few days before his departure.

As a young man he served in the civil war, both as a volunteer in the field and as a clerk in the war department under Secy. Edwin M. Stanton. After completing his service as a soldier Doctor Field resumed his educational work, graduating from Brown university and later from Newton Theological institute. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Denison university for his distinguished service as a minister.

Doctor Field was pastor at Alton, Ill., and Minneapolis, Minn., but was best known because of his twenty-five years as the district secretary, first of the Foreign Mission Society and later of both the Foreign and Home Mission Societies. Many pastors in the state received a great blessing from his presence in their homes as they talked over with him problems of church work and listened to his discussions of spiritual things.

After retiring from active service Doctor Field continued to reside in Granville. In his early ministry he married Miss Martha Stevens of Providence, R. I., and enjoyed fifty-three years of happy married life with her. Mrs. Field always nobly seconded and helped him in all his activities. Their home in Granville was a center for all the missionaries visiting there, and their friends are scattered over the whole world.

The gracious presence of Doctor Field was felt as he walked the streets of Granville, as he conversed with his friends, as he participated so helpfully in the prayer meetings and the other services of his church. His was a beautiful nature indeed and a revelation of Christ-likeness. His courtesy and catholicity of spirit were recognized by all who came into contact with him. A man with an international mind, Doctor Field engaged in a wide range of reading, and was a diligent student of world and kingdom affairs. Mystical in his nature and deeply spiritual he made a marked impression on men for good.

Mrs. Field and two children survive him, a son, Mr. William Field, and a daughter, Mrs. Jay A. Brown of Elyria, with whom Dr. and Mrs. Field have made their home the past year. The funeral services, held in the Granville church, were conducted by Rev. Charles E. Stanton, assisted by Rev. S. W. Hamblen. A large company of friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect and honor to one who was universally loved. The interment was in the family lot in the Maple Grove cemetery there.

John H. Chapman

A Personal Tribute

By J. W. WEDDELL

THAT clear, ringing voice of John Chapman, now still for a season—how it used to thrill us in the early nineties when he and Frank Wilkins and others led out in the initial days of B. Y. P. U.! How true it has sounded to the gospel in these later days always! We shall miss it, for John Chapman stood for every good word and work and with his loyal wife was ever present to help.

I saw him last at Seattle where he kept open house for his friends during the convention. He was at Milwaukee too, where some of us tried to call him to the platform (he ought oftener to have been there) as a pioneer of the faith. Doubtless he would have been at Washington were not God calling him higher.

Where a great cause was being pushed, there was he to assist. I knew him first in the old Highland Park days when, a rising young business man, he was making himself known as an aggressive Sunday-school leader, opening up new fields of endeavor in new quarters of the city. He was built on the lines of Dwight L. Moody and B. F. Jacobs and he sought for new conquests in evangelism, and he found them, as any alert soul with spirit and talent such as his can find them. He was the helper of Christopher Pewen, Millian Lawrence, Clissold and Geistweit in the early tabernacle days, and was loyal to this church to the last.

He was one of the favored company—some of us treasure the name—"Aunt Lizzie Aiken's boys." Those were great days. But other great days are upon us and other greater days ahead when we shall meet and speak of these happy times of grace and growth upon earth. And John Chapman will be there with the Christ he served so faithfully and loyally.

Mrs. Nancy Baker

OF special interest to the older generation of Baptists on the Pacific coast is the news of the death of Mrs. Nancy Baker on June 30. Mrs. Baker was the widow of Rev. J. C. Baker, for many years one of the pioneer ministers among Baptists in the Pacific northwest. After he passed away in 1912, Mrs. Baker made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Corwin S. Shank of Seattle.

Mr. Baker came with his family to San Francisco in 1894 under appointment of the Publication Society to open a branch office in that city. From that time to his death he was closely identified with Baptist work on the coast, serving as superintendent of missions for the entire coast for a number of years. In all his labors he was ably seconded by Mrs. Baker who visited with him the churches in Oregon, Washington and British Columbia at a time when woman's place was less secure than it is today, and organized them into mission societies under the national woman's board. She too had the true pioneer spirit.

Last year Mrs. Baker was able to participate in the garden party given by Mr. and Mrs. Shank during the Baptist convention in Seattle and a few weeks later she was present at a reunion when twenty-six of the children and grandchildren were present. Had all been there, eighty-six would have been present. Besides her daughter, Mrs. Shank, Mrs. Baker is survived by four daughters: Mrs. S. W. Beaven, Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. H. B. Anderson, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Maude Watkins, Glenwood Landing, N. Y.; Mrs. E. Wilson, Hilo, Hawaii and by three sons, C. F. Baker, Burlingame, Calif.; Albert Baker, Pasadena, Calif., and Arthur Baker, Seattle, Wash.

The New Midway Hospital

ON Sunday afternoon, July 11, when Baptists from seven northwest states gathered in St. Paul and when Rev. E. H. Rasmussen, executive secretary of the Minnesota Baptist Convention, offered dedicatory prayer, one of the finest hospital buildings of the northwest began its work of Christian service.

The history of this new Baptist institution is unusual, for it had its beginning more than twenty years ago with the Mounds Park sanitarium, its sister institution, when the Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association was begun. From that time on its growth has been directed toward this unit, until it was finally made possible through the gifts of Baptists of seven northwestern states and the business men in the Midway district of St. Paul, in which the hospital is located.

On Saturday afternoon and evening from three until nine conducted showings through the edifice were made. On Saturday afternoon also the business men of the Midway district in St. Paul prepared a brief service of recognition when the president of the Midway club presented to the hospital association a beautiful silk flag for use on the building. Mayor L. C. Hodgson of St. Paul was present and spoke on this occasion. The ceremony was attended by members of the business association of the Midway district.

On Sunday afternoon following the dedicatory service, the second showing of the building took place, when guides, alumnae from the Mounds-Midway School of Nursing, directed the visitors into all parts of the building and explained its medical equipment.

Dr. George Earl, president of the association, presided at community day on Saturday, while to Dr. Robert Earl, who, perhaps, has given more time and thought than any other individual in the planning and erection of the new building, was reserved the privilege of presiding at the dedicatory service. Scriptural reading and prayer were offered by Rev. C. F. Stoeckmann, of the First German church of St. Paul. He has been associated with the hospital project for more than ten years. Dr. G. Arvid Hagstrom, president of Bethel institute and secretary and treasurer of the Northwestern Baptist Hospital Association, gave a brief address, while Rev. E. H. Rasmussen offered the dedicatory prayer.

Photographs of the interior and exterior of the building will be made and a complete descriptive article of this new Baptist institution will appear in this publication.

California Letter

BY GEO. E. BURLINGAME
The Capital City

SHORTLY after Osgood C. Wheeler arrived at San Francisco in the spring of 1849 to begin work as a missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, he began his career as a founder of California churches. His first enterprise was San Francisco First church, July 6, 1849. Sacramento followed within a few months, and had his personal oversight during his later years while he held a civil office at the capital. Seventy-five years of effort yield a present total membership of less than 1200, the First church having 678 members. For twenty years or more one of the perennial problems of state mission work has been the need of a new edifice for the First church of Sacramento. Under the pastoral leadership of Bryant Wilson the problem approaches a satisfactory solution in a beautiful and spacious church building to cost $100,000 complete. The capital city of California and metropolis of the great central valley region has 70,000 people and ranks with Long Beach not only in size but in rapidity of growth. The building achievement will mark a notable advance in Baptist work in the state; for the entire Sacramento valley, reaching to the foot of Mount Shasta on the northern boundary, is susceptible to the influence which proceeds from the capital city, strategic in its location and unique in its political character. In all the vast region referred to, Baptists number a total of hardly more than 3000, and of the churches in this territory, thirteen have less than 100 members each. The state convention is cooperating in the building enterprise, vindicating afresh the principle of united, organized and continuous fellowship in church extension.

For Christ and the Church

The thirty-ninth annual convention of the California Christian Endeavor Union was held at Stockton, June 25-30, in the beautiful new city memorial auditorium, costing $600,000 and seating 5000 people. Stockton ranks with San Jose, Fresno and Pasadena in population, all cities striving for the 50,000 mark. It was founded in the same year with California's oldest Baptist church (First San Francisco, 1849) and was famous as a trading post and a rendezvous for miners. Baptists have never been strong here, and have but one white church, with less than 400 members, and a small negro church. Rev. F. Carl Truex, after a distinguished success at Selma, has recently become pastor of the First church.

The Christian endeavors of California have long been a spiritual power, and have included in their fellowship the young people's societies of some of the leading Baptist churches. Harry C. Allan of the First church of San Francisco has been for several years the efficient and popular field secretary, giving his entire time to the state-wide work. He is now on his way to the World's Christian Endeavor Convention at London, which meets in July. Some of the foremost Baptist laymen of the state are on the roster of past presidents of California Endeavor Union.

For the past six years the annual registration of the California convention has exceeded 3000, the Stockton total being 3344, of which 900 were of intermediate age. The feature of the program was the closing address given by Dr. J. Whitcomb Brouger of Oakland on "Fidelity in Service." After thirty-eight years of noble service the society of the First church of San Francisco has disbanded and left the field clear for a B. Y. P. U. society recently organized in the same church. The seven societies of the Temple church of Los Angeles have been converted to B. Y. P. U. after more than twenty years of Christian Endeavor affiliation.

Blind Leaders

A Los Angeles pastor whose church is one of the greatest and most influential in the Presbyterian General Assembly announced a Sunday evening sermon on "Political Leaders at the General Assembly." For good measure the minister included in his advertised topics, "Can Doctor Brouger Unite the Baptist Church?" The preacher, who was a distinguished member of the assembly, but who was not at Washington and relied on the daily papers for his information

(Continued on page 770)

Here, There and Everywhere

REV. A. P. HOWELLS transfers his address from Berkeley, to Los Angeles, Calif. On June 27 he preached at Fairview Heights church and on July 11 he preached at Hoover Street church.

AFTER SIXTEEN YEARS of constructive service as pastor of the Ashland Avenue church, Toledo, Ohio, Rev. Harry W. Vincent has resigned to accept a call to the alvary church, Minneapolis.

THE NEW BAPTIST CHURCH of Boulder, Colo., presents a spectacle of rare beauty combined with usefulness. The building, located in the heart of the city, is constructed of red brick laid in white mortar and trimmed in buff stone. The approximate cost of building and equipment is $150,000. The three manual pipe organ was presented to the church by Mrs. Foreman Sloan in memory of her

NEW CHURCH BUILDING AT BOULDER, COLORADO

REV. AND MRS. P. A. MCDIARMID, missionaries of the Lake Avenue church, Rochester, N. Y., have arrived in the United States from Sona Bata, Congo belge, South Africa, on furlough.

THERE WERE SIX baptisms at the June 20 evening service of the Temple church, Chicago, Rev. J. H. Hughes, pastor.

The Baptist

Chicago, July 24, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 26

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Prices: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church subscriptions equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $1.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Subscriptions: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add change.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send renewal promptly—or, if paper is not desired, send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Manuscripts returned unless accompanied by return postage.

Want Ads

Bibles rebound at reasonable prices. Wilmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

husband. It is the largest and most modern church organ in Colorado. In addition to the spacious auditorium, chapel, assembly rooms, class rooms, banquet room, kitchen, parlors and offices, the building is equipped with a washed air ventilation system different from anything in the west. The dedication program lasted a week and was a great event in the city and Colorado. Dr. J. H. Franklin was at his best and moved the community in each of his three great addresses. The church numbers 730 members. Pastor J. H. Skeen preached his first sermon in the new church Sunday morning, June 13, which was also his sixth anniversary as pastor. He was pastor of the Rogers Park church of Chicago and led in the erection of the building there previous to his coming to Boulder.

J. H. SKEEN

JULY 20-31 ARE THE DATES of the Iowa Baptist summer assembly at Iowa Falls. Training school for Baptist workers with plenty of play. Costs nothing except your own entertainment and this is provided at reasonable rates.

THE WESTERN WASHINGTON summer assembly, to meet at Burton, Wash., Aug. 3-13, sends word that the advantage in coming to Burton lies in an ideal vacation spot, rates that are not duplicated anywhere, the fellowship of hundreds of other Baptists and the opportunity of hearing the best faculty it is able to secure.

REV. E. G. MINTZ, pastor of Grace church, Milwaukee, Wis., with his wife and son, leaves Milwaukee, July 25, to motor to Wilmington, N. C., where he will preach for three Sundays in the First church, of which Rev. J. M. Kester is pastor. Rev. Fred Braker, superintendent of Milwaukee Rescue Mission will supply Grace church pulpit, Aug. 1; the following three Sundays, Pres. George W. Taft of the Northern Theological seminary will occupy the pulpit; Aug. 29, Doctor Mitchell, superintendent of evangelism for Wisconsin.

FIRST CHURCH, Marion, Ind., reports one of the most successful daily vacation Bible schools in the history of the church. Eighty-six boys and girls attended the school and a dozen efficient and loyal teachers volunteered their services. The school lasted three weeks with thirty hours of religious instruction, double the number of hours of religious education given in the Bible school during the year. At the last communion service the pastor gave the hand of Christian fellowship to two new members. There are now three others awaiting the hand of fellowship. Spirit and attendance is fine.

DR. JOHN J. WICKER sailed on June 14 on the S.S. "Braga" in charge of a large Christian cruise to Palestine, Egypt and Europe. The Wicker Tours have secured the S.S. "Sinaia" for their next summer's cruise, which will sail about June 20, 1927; for anyone contemplating a visit to the Holy Land under the best auspices this should be welcome news.

ON THE OCCASION of the first anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. A. C. Wickenden, the First church of Mason City, Iowa, held a recognition service for the 107 new members received during the year. Other features of the year's work include the institution of Amer-

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"

2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN,
1912 "G" Street, Northwest

BAPTIST OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Maywood, Ill. Rev. L. T. Foreman, Ex. Sec.

Nearly a score of years of blessed service. Fifteen thousand days of kindly ministry to worthy aged people every year. Seventy-five requests yearly for rooms. Require new building for 150 people at once. Gifts gladly welcomed for our $250,000 goal.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Ill.

"I am so hungry for THE BAPTIST that I cannot stand it any longer so I am enclosing a check for $2.50 for one year's subscription." Thus does Mr. U. E. Burroughs of Jefferson, Iowa, provide satisfaction for his hungry soul. His wisdom is praiseworthy.

"I have been most highly edified in reading THE BAPTIST of June 5," writes a satisfied subscriber from New England, "I have read it from cover to cover, and wish to express my gratification." The special note that appealed to this brother was the irenic tone of its articles, reports of the Northern Baptist Convention and its editorials. He found the note of certainty and loyalty to Christ without the elements of controversy stressed.

"A gentleman who advertised for a chauffeur when questioning a negro applicant, said: 'How about you Sam, are you married?' The man looked relieved and answered, 'Naw sir, boss, naw sir. Ah makes mah own livin'.' But he'll get tired eventually. They all do. Which reminds us that it is about the same with the folk who try to get along without THE BAPTIST. Eventually all the folk will want the denominational paper. Why not help them to get lined up now?"

"Doctor Brouger in his famous lecture, 'Play Ball,' tells of a hunter whose dog was pursuing a rabbit so closely that he could not shoot at the rabbit for fear of hitting the dog. Then the rabbit ran up a tree and escaped. 'But,' said the farmer who was listening to the hunter's story, 'rabbits do not climb trees.' 'I know they don't usually,' said the hunter, 'but this was an unusual occasion. He just had to do it.' We do not know just how this story fits THE BAPTIST but we think the SIX MONTHS for ONE DOLLAR rate offers such an unusual opportunity to get people started reading the paper that many pastors and workers will 'just have to do it.' Hurry.

"Hundreds of church bulletins, pastoral letters, weekly papers and other publicity agencies carry something akin to this sentiment about the Washington meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention which appeared in the bulletin of the First church of Bloomington, Ill., Dr. Charles Durden, minister: 'Washington was a beautiful setting for a wonderful convention. With fellowships renewed and divisions cemented, the outlook for this coming year is a bright one.' The outlook is indeed bright. And nothing will keep it bright better than systematic circulation of THE BAPTIST. Help the people learn the truth.

"There is no Baptist church nearer to us than Billings, Mont., forty miles away," writes a subscriber from Fromberg. "I am a member of Doctor Boynton's church, Woodlawn, Chicago. I am an old lady in poor health. I am a descendant of Roger Williams through an unbroken line of Baptist ministers, the daughter marrying the minister always so of course I had to marry a minister also—Rev. A. M. Duboc, now gone from me. Mr. Duboc used to write often for The Standard, and now THE BAPTIST. No wonder I love our denominational papers that I've read all my life in the home of my father, Rev. J. W. Denison. I have always had them in my own home and could not do without them, I am sure. I enclose my check to renew another year. May God bless THE BAPTIST."

"The office boy says that in his opinion while one swallow will not make a summer, one subscription to THE BAPTIST secured by you is better than none at all. He says if the pastor and deacons and those already taking the paper in your church do not enlist others to subscribe, who will? But since everybody's business is nobody's business, dear radio fan, perhaps after all, to use a devout exclamation: 'IT'S UP TO YOU.'"

"WCOY now signs off. Don't be a wet blanket. Goodnight."

icanization work among the foreigners, the organization of gospel teams and an outstanding record in the reading contest.

REV. C. RAYMOND CHAPPELL closed a seven years' pastorate at Central church, Middleboro, Mass., on May 30. On that day he gave the hand of fellowship to six new members, five of whom were baptized the previous Sunday. This makes a total of 156 new members received during his pastorate and brings the total membership of the church up to 496. He began his new work at Keene, N. H., June 6.

REV. DAVID HAGLUND, formerly pastor of the First church, Corning, N. Y., has taken up his duties as pastor of the South Avenue church, Rochester, N. Y.

TOURISTS to the Yellowstone national park over the Yellowstone highway are invited to attend the Baptist assembly on the banks of the Platte river at Douglas, Wyo., Aug. 3-15.

REV. EARLE D. SIMS, church invigorator of the American Baptist Home Mission Society—concluded a two weeks' evangelistic campaign at Bryant, S. D., on June 30. The meeting revived interest in the church; $300 is now in the bank and operations have begun to rejuvenate the church building. The church hopes to call a pastor soon. Bryant has a population of 700. Mr. Sims went from Bryant to conduct a campaign in Detroit, Mich.

AT A SERVICE conducted by a group of gospel car workers from the First church, Anoka, Minn., L. E. Brough, pastor, at the St. Cloud reformatory, eleven men came forward upon invitation. This church held during the month of June a week of cottage prayer meetings, a week of Bible conference with Doctors Riley, Brown, Marsh and Rimmer as speakers and two weeks of evangelistic services. About 100 additions have been made. The pastor begins his third year.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Lawrence, Kan., John F. Watts, minister, celebrated its seventy-first anniversary, June 25. Raymond A. Schwegler, moderator, presided. The church has received 114 new members during the year just closed.

REV. E. A. ROBERTS, pastor of the Sunny side mission of the First church, Wichita, Kan., was ordained June 25 by a council called by the First church and composed of pastors of the Walnut Valley Association and two other pastors, school mates of the candidate. The moderator was Rev. J. W. Bayles, West Side church, Wichita; clerk, A. W. Lee; sermon by W. H. Rogers, Wichita First; other parts by C. T. Ilsley, E. Pennington, Guy T. Wimmer, W. E. Tanner and Rev. Hull.

ON JUNE 30 the members of the Emmanuel church, Chicago, Ill., held a reception for R. V. Meigs and family. Doctor Myers is resting at his summer home in Whitehall, Mich.

MISS VERA M. RICE and Rev. Leopold H. R. Hass both of Waterville, Me., were married by Dr. Leroy Dakin in New York, June 10. Mr. Hass has been conducting a fruitful ministry at the Waterville church while Mrs. Hass has been acting as director of religious education in Coburn institute.

BIRKETT MEMORIAL CHURCH, Detroit, Mich., had $6000 pledged toward the church debt at a recent prayer meeting. The church has an indebtedness of $15,000 on the church property worth $90,000 and it is the present plan to reduce this materially during the next twelve months. The Sunday school pledge was $1000. The church held its annual lake ride and picnic at Bob-L June 25.

CARMEL CHURCH, Detroit, Mich., which has been without a pastor since June when the resignation of Rev. Edgar Watson took effect, has been holding services as usual. The pulpit has been filled nearly every Sunday by Mr. Fred Keller, a member of the church.

MRS. KEMPTON, widow of the late L. S. B. Kempton of Dartmouth, N. S., died at the home of her son, Dr. A. T. Kempton, pastor of the Broadway church, Cambridge, Mass., June 24. A memorial service was held in the Broadway church conducted by Revs. J. E. Loja, W. M. Nair, W. D. Goble and J. H. Jenne. Interment was made in Nova Scotia.

DEAN AND MRS. RAYMOND N. CARR have resigned as members of the music faculty of the Des Moines university. Dean Ca-as been the head of the school of fine arts at Des Moines for five years, coming to the university from the State Teachers' college, Kirksville, Mo. During this time the enrolment in his department has increased from 267 lessons a week to 873, and the faculty has increased from three to thirteen members.

MORE THAN 200 registered at the annual home-coming of the Sugar Creek church, South Solon, Ohio. Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, as chairman read a letter from the former pastor, Harold C. Phillips of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. The sermon was delivered by Dr. T. F. Chambers, executive secretary, and Rev. Charles Sutzbauh of the M. E. church of Tremont City reached.

REV. LORIMER W. CRIPPEN, a student in the Rochester Baptist Theological seminary, was ordained to the ministry June 4 at the First church, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after an examination by the Hudson River Central Baptist Association and the First church. Sermon was given by Dr. J. F. Vichert of the Rochester seminary; other parts were by Revs. E. J. Platner, W. Barlow, E. A. Snyder, district secretary, S. B. Smith, James Kristow and Prof. E. E. Aubrey of Vassar college. Dr. C. H. Frank acted as moderator and Rev. William Barlow, clerk.

REV. JAMES FISHER of the First church, Wellington, Kan., chose the New Hampshire Confession of Faith as the topic for a series of morning sermons. He preached sermons on Old Testament characters at evening services. On the evening of Children's day four of the junior department of the Bible school were baptized. The church made its quota during the past missionary year and has accepted its quota for the ensuing year voting to remit monthly to the state office. Mrs. Phoebe Jackson, ninety-one, oldest member of the church, died June 25. She had been a member of the church for forty-four years.

THE DELAWARE STREET CHURCH, Syracuse, N. Y., overcame the summer slump by observing special days on the four Sundays in June. June 6, marking the close of the pastor's first year, was anniversary Sunday; June 13 was children's day; June 20, father's day and June 27, automobile Sunday. The attendance was more than double that of June last year. In December, Mrs. Earnest D'Agnosti, who lived near the church was taken ill, and the members of the congregation ministered to her. The first Sunday in June her two children were baptized and the father and mother have made application to join.

"PLANS AND PURPOSES" is the title of the booklet issued by the First church, Dayton, Ohio, W. H. Geistweit, pastor. This includes the church program from September to June 1926-27. Each month has a special theme which will be brought out in the sermons and music. Doctor Geistweit has been elected trustee of Denison university. This makes three trustees in his family. Rev. Harold Geistweit is trustee of Des Moines university and Dr. W. H. Geistweit, Jr., of Redlands university.

DR. WAYLAND F. VAUGHN, a member of the church at Newton Center, Mass., and teacher in its Sunday school for three years since his graduation from Yale, was married to Miss Clara Colton on June 24. He received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard the same day. Both Dr. and Mrs. Vaughn are members of Phi Beta Kappa and received M. A. degrees from Harvard in 1925. Doctor Vaughn has accepted a position as instructor in psychology and philosophy in Boston university.

THE MEN AND BOYS of the Twin Cities Swedish Baptist churches plan to have an outing at the St. Croix Falls boys' camp, on St. Croix river, Saturday, July 31. Recreation, Christian fellowship and wholesome inspiration, is the purpose of the outing. Arrangements are sponsored by the Twin Cities Swedish Baptist brotherhood.

S. E. PRICE, FORMERLY president of Ottawa university, Kansas, writes that he and Mrs. Price have settled down in Pasadena, Calif., after twenty-two months spent abroad. While abroad they visited a son in London, England, and a daughter in Mandalay, Burma. Both Dr. and Mrs. Price are well and anticipate much happiness in their new home in sunny California.

ABOUT FIFTY MEMBERS and friends of the New England district board of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society met in Tremont temple, Boston, June 14, to celebrate the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Mary Reynolds. She was remembered with tributes from the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, the Massachusetts Woman's Baptist Mission Society, the four Boston associations, the New England district of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society and the New England district of the Home Mission Society.

JUNE 19, THE members of the First church, Denver, Colo., celebrated the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. A. H. C. Morse. Doctor Morse has been pastor of the church for nearly fourteen years during which time he has received 3300 new members, 300 during the present year.

REV. JOHN A. ROSKAM was ordained to the ministry on recommendation of a council composed of fifteen ministers and twenty-one laymen of the Des Moines Western Association at the South Beaver church, Rippey, Iowa, June 9. The sermon was preached by Rev. Harm Rust; charge to the candidate by Rev. N. H. Throckmorton; charge to the church, Rev. L. E. Viets; ordination prayer, Rev. H. F. McDonald; other parts by Revs. Frank L. Reper, D. D. Flanagan and Abner Williams. Dr. A. W. Caul was chairman of the council and Rev. Chas. C. Boyd, clerk.

A TRAGEDY OCCURRED when the children of the Hudelson Baptist home, Irvington, Ill., had an outing at the Burlington reservoir on June 17. Frankie Wolfe, 12 years old, was drowned when she and two other little girls wandered into the water. All three children would probably been drowned had it not been for the quick action of the superintendent of the home. Dr. N. T. Hafer, who, tying a rope around his waist, made three trips into the reservoir to save the children. He rescued the first two, but when the third child was finally found she had been in the water about an hour and efforts to revive her were useless. The little girl was the daughter of Mrs. Dora Wolfe, a helper in the home, and had lived there for nearly seven years.

REV. DOUGLAS G. HARING, recently resigned his position as instructor in Waseda university, Japan. He is now in America taking a special course in the summer session of Columbia university. For the present his home is at 2627 Arlington Avenue, Spuyten Duyvil, New York City. Churches in New York City or vicinity needing a pulpit supply will find in Mr. Haring a man with a prophetic message.

REV. ALBERT R. BUTTON who for nearly half a century has labored in the cause of Christian education especially with the pioneer colleges of the middle west and northwest was very fittingly honored by Sioux Falls college at the June commencement with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. At the same time nine young people were graduated from the college of liberal arts with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and nineteen received the normal certificate which represents two years of college work.

"KEEP YOUR SUNDAYS for the great things of the soul," suggests the bulletin of North church, Camden, N. J., James Dalton Morrison, pastor.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing outlets for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinnners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs

21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices.

A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
215 Englewood Ave. Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO. HILLSBORO, OHIO

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Dept. 12, Cincinnati, O.

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

California Letter

(Continued from page 766)

read the "Brougner Resolution" to his congregation; and his comment left the impression that the Northern Baptist Convention had voted to abandon immersion as a requirement for church membership. He startled his Baptist auditors when he said with emphasis, "We are glad that at last the Baptists are willing to admit that we may be Christians without being immersed." This shocking misstatement of Baptist principles was accounted for by the preacher's admission later in a personal interview, that he was not familiar with Baptist confessions of faith.

The motive which prompts the recital of this episode is inspired by a conviction that a renaissance of constructive and irenic preaching of "Baptist doctrine" is in order, as a measure of defense against misunderstanding and as a means of persuading men not only to be reconciled to God but to give evidence of that reconciliation by their prompt and full obedience to their Redeemer in the baptismal confession and in loyal church fellowship after his divine ordinance. If in any given community, whether first-class city or prairie town, the Baptist position and the Baptist conditions of membership are not understood, the responsibility must surely lie with the local Baptist church, whose function and high privilege it is "to make all men see" the truth as the Testament reveals and records it. If by inadvertence or malevolence or honest misunderstanding, other Christians in pulpit and press and gossip err in their interpretation of our recent denominational utterances, surely ours is both the obligation and the opportunity to correct the error and refute the misstatement, by courteous and cumulative and cogent reaffirmation of the Baptist principles by which and for which our churches live.

Tabloid News

The First Methodist Episcopal church of Los Angeles, whose splendid hospitality was a notable feature of the B. Y. P. U. convention held in its beautiful building, is the largest Methodist church of white membership in the world with a total of 3663 members.

Twenty years ago the writer came to the Golden Gate to begin a ministry with the First church, San Francisco, lasting for more than ten years. Next month he goes again to the Bay Cities, this time as assistant pastor of the First church, Oakland, in association with Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougner, its eminent minister-in-chief.

California is slated to go through the stress and fury of a battle over the issue of law enforcement this fall. The friends of liquor have forced a referendum on the repeal of the state law (a replica of the federal Volstead act), putting the advocates of the eighteenth amendment on the defensive. The state anti-saloon league is well organized and promises a vigorous campaign to retain the statute.

After two years devoted to a diligent search and attended with several disappointments, the Los Angeles Bible institute has secured a superintendent to take the vacancy created by the death of Dr. T. C. Horton, one of the founders of the institute. Rev. Charles E. Hurlburt, who for thirty years was director of the African inland mission, is the new executive.

The First church of Los Angeles has completed a thirty day campaign for its

(Continued on page 772)

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for Aug. 1

THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA
Lesson Text: Exod. 13:17-22; 14:10-16.
Golden Text: Exod. 15:2

The calamity which fell upon Egypt in the judgment signalized by the Passover wrested from Pharaoh a tardy consent to let the Israelites go. The lesson is the story of their first great deliverance from the pursuit of the army of Egypt.

Detour

The direct road to Canaan, the terminus of the departing Israelites, was about 200 miles long and lay along the sea coast in a northeasterly direction from Egypt. But this short road was not taken by Moses and his people. On the contrary they traveled southeast toward Suez and the Red sea. The reason for this detour lay in the fact that long discipline was necessary to weld the people into unity and fitness for nationhood before they could enter Canaan. It was fortunate that Moses had been over the road before and that he knew the whole country into which he was leading his people. The first crisis in the discipline of this undisciplined mass came at the Red sea, and the first real test of Moses' generalship. The miraculous deliverance of Israel by crossing the sea on dry land and the equally miraculous destruction of the army of Pharaoh by the sudden return of the tides have gone down in history as the dramatic birth of a nation which figures more largely than any other nation of the world in its influence upon civilization and religion. The miracle may be explained on natural grounds as the Bible account seems to point out when it is written that Jehovah caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all the night and made the sea dry land. But the greater miracle of the recognition of Jehovah as the real leader of his people through all their journeyings and in all their experiences can not be explained apart from faith in divine providence.

Deliverance

Though not in the Bible in these exact words, the principle of it runs all through the scriptures, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." It is through extremities that men and nations learn their most valuable lessons. Thus early in the career of the departing Israelites it became necessary to give them an introductory lesson in obedience to leadership, and in the recognition of the unlimited resources of Jehovah whose arm is never shortened that it cannot save nor his ear heavy that it cannot hear. The attitude of Israel in extremity is human. They were sure nothing could save them from impending disaster. They criticized their leader. They called selfishly upon Jehovah. But despite their craven and cowardly attitude Moses stood firm and patient proving himself to be a real leader, and providence came to their rescue. "There's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea."

REV. EARL CLIFFORD has resigned at Tekonsha, Mich.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request. "Where your heart is, there should your treasure be."

Obituary

Rev. John Edwards Sanders died on June 20, 1926, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. N. Ballentine, 715 S. Louise St., Glendale, Calif. Death came as the result of a stroke sustained on Apr. 26.

Mr. Sanders was born in Carroll county, Ohio, Mar. 27, 1840. He was married to Miss Jennie E. Johnson at Cherokee, Iowa, Nov. 26, 1872. In 1883 he moved his family by covered wagon from Iowa to Douglas county, S. D. He was the means of organizing a Baptist church at Armour, S. D. In 1890 he moved to Tacoma, Wash., and held a pastorate at Ferndale, Wash., preaching also at Custer and Sumas, Wash. In 1896 he moved to East Oakland, Calif., and preached for a time at Sonora and Auburn.

Funeral services were held at the First church, Glendale, Calif., and were conducted by Rev. E. E. Ford, Dr. W. F. Harper, Rev. S. Fraser Langford and Rev. E. A. Main. Interment was in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Glendale, Calif.

Besides his daughter, Mrs. Ballentine, Mr. Sanders is survived by two sons, George E., Armour, S. D., and Homer, Lankershim, Calif., and six grandchildren. Mrs. Sanders died Aug. 10, 1920. The following verse was composed by Mr. Sanders:

"I shall see the Saviour I adore
In the glory land, in the glory land.
I shall find the loved ones gone before
In the glory land, the glory land.
In the glory, glory, glory,
In the glory land."

New Books

Literary Lanes and Other Byways, by Robert Cortes Holliday. New York: Doran. $2.

This new volume of essays by the author of "Walking-Stick Papers" is fine medicine for the minister's living-room table. We read "shop" so much that all-written essays on such casual themes as Rudolph Valentino's love letters, an outline of the "vamp" in literature, advertising, nightgowns, or book illustration, are delightfully stimulating. Mr. Holliday's "Sermon on Reading" is worth the price of the book—but it is not a preachment.

—FRED E. DEAN.

The Truth and the Life, and other sermons, by Joseph Fort Newton, D.D., New York: Doran. $2.

Doctor Newton's books are always good. "The Truth and the Life" is made up of short sermons. Each prefaced with prayer. As one goes through the volume he feels that the author is showing him a panorama of the geniuses of literature through quotation after quotation from these mountainpeaks of writing. His own brilliancy and power in preaching is revealed as well. In one place Doctor Newton says, "Let us give thanks that we are in the dawn of a day when no theology will wear the name of christian save that taught by Jesus and agnate with his spirit." In another sermon the prophet speaks: "Much of the religion of today is self-centered egotism; nothing else. How refreshing it is to escape from this clamor of self-assertive vanity into the sweet humility of the psalms, with their clear vision of the error of sin in the holiness of God."

Doctor Newton is not concerned about justifying any form of theology or formulating any new. Sermon after sermon rings with the music of the poet, and charms with the writers' keen insight into the longings of the human heart.

—G. W. LAWRENCE.

The Worship of Nature, by Sir James George Frazer, O. M., F. R. S., F. B. A. New York: Macmillan. $4.00.

A notable book, packed with information, wisely and widely gathered and carefully and intelligently interpreted. He forms and social effects of the worship of sky, earth and sun are studied among the Aryan speaking peoples of antiquity—the Vedic Indians, old Persians, Greeks and Romans; then among the ancient Babylonians, Assyrians and Egyptians; next among Chinese and Indo-Chinese; and finally among the backward peoples in India, Africa and America. This world-wide survey of nature worship was given as the Gifford lectures before the University of Edinburgh in 1924-'25.

The treatment of the subject properly belongs to the department of natural theology and indirectly shows that man's constitution is religious. In this presentation one finds the strongest proof of the proposition that "mankind in general tacitly assumes that behind the phenomena of sense is a real world of a more substantial and abiding nature." The spiritualistic interpretation of nature has always and everywhere prevailed among men when they have tried to express the highest and best of which they are capable. Men worship as naturally as they think. The most highly developed peoples, the Greeks and Romans, as well as those lowest in the scale of intellectual development, alike believe in a non-materialistic world and in non-physical beings who are more or less fit to receive human worship.

"The Worship of Nature" is a great work in the extent and fulness and reliability of the study of the religious rites and customs of mankind and in the rare skill with which the vast amount of material is handled. There is no other book available to the English speaking world that compares with it in any respect.

—H. L. STETSON.

The Early Days of Christianity: Teachers' Manual, by Frederick C. Grant. New York: Abingdon Press. $1.25 plus postage.

The books on religious education are many. Here is a teachers' manual to aid in teaching the book of the Acts and the early days of Christianity. Suggestions are given for each lesson under the following points: The aim the teacher should have definitely in mind for each; the centers of stress, method of procedure; the application and activity. Many references are given and the teacher is pointed to much of the rich material which will aid in preparing a most interesting lesson. The author insists that the first object is the cultivation and enriching of the pupil's spiritual life. The book will be found helpful.

—J. W. CLEVENGER.

Do Fundamentalists Play Fair? by William Mentzel Forrest. New York: Macmillan. $1.

The question suggests of course the answer the author is going to develop. The book is a polemic, almost a philippic against methods of reasoning sometimes used by people whom he calls fundamentalists. In cases of controversy it is not hard to convict either side of unfairness. Modernists have been pilloried also for the same fault. Either side may profitably venture to see itself as others see it. In this case the fundamentalists would do well to consider that the author is a preacher and teacher of long experience, that he has the ear of college youth, and that he has written for their perusal. Many young people will read the book, with what consequences will appear by and by.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

Whelp of the Winds, by Rufus King. New York: Doran. $2.

A story of the Mexican border, in which is found the usual things of such a story: bad women, bad men, guns, murder, lynching, swearing, even the dog is made to swear. The hero has been a guard in a prison and resigns to make an attempt to recover for a prisoner some hidden money and return it to the bank for him. All the events gather about this attempt. After several murders, attempted holdups and suicide he is successful and he finds the girl, and he and his dog live happily ever after. It is a surface story, stirring no depths of noble action or thought.

—J. W. CLEVENGER.

Crowds of Souls, by Clinton Wunder. New York: Fleming H. Revell. $1.50.

Mr. Wunder, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Rochester, N. Y., having crowded his house with people, crowded the people with work and crowded the time with busy activities, can tell others how to do it. And that is what he does in this book. If it contained nothing except the diagram of the organization of a church on page 43, it would be worth its price to many a minister merely for the suggestion there presented of a practical way to sketch out an orderly view of the distribution of functions of the church. But that is only one hint among a thousand. Mr. Wunder is a young fellow with a thorough training, wide and varied experience, and oozing all over with fresh ideas; and when one's own ideas seem to run dry it is a great advantage to have some other person come along oozing and breathing fresh ones. You cannot do everything the book says, but it says a lot of things you can do.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

Church Work With Intermediates, by Elizabeth M. Finn. Philadelphia: Judson Press. $1.25.

In the ever-growing and changing work of religious education, the Baptist denomination has held an outstanding place. We have here another of the Judson manuals by a special field worker of the department of religious education who has had experience as a teacher in the public schools. The author discusses intermediates, a program of instruction, self-expression, organized play, worship plans and program, adult leadership, and the intermediate department of the church. The book contains enrolment card, record sheet, report card and class record of attendance, a list of books for leaders, mothers and intermediates, and suggestive names for organized intermediate classes. This attractive volume of 200 pages is crowded full of helpful material for all workers with intermediates in the church school.

—O. P. LOVIK.

The B. Y. P. U. A. Convention

(Continued from page 752)

The officers elected during the Saturday session include: President, John F. Singleton; vice-president, Clifford Dick, Manitoba; vice-president, Earl C. Whitsett, Missouri; vice-president, J. Milton Johnson, Southern California; recording secretary, Ford Potter, Indiana; treasurer, Orlo O. Montague, Illinois. The executive committee includes: Mark Sanborn, Michigan; Richard Harland, Minnesota; Edith Browning, Illinois; Ralph Jackson, Michigan; Francis Stifter, Illinois; Gladys Riddle, Indiana; Clyde Ferguson, West Virginia; Laura Kinderman, Illinois; James Morrice, Northern California; W. F. Reynolds, Ontario; J. W. McCrossen, Pennsylvania, and Cora Fleming, Colorado.

Saturday afternoon was the spectacular diversion of the convention. Two thousand delegates attended La Fiesta de la Barbecue under the direction of "Gussie" Eclineide, leader of the social and recreational conference. Some of the traffic police of Los Angeles were angered, some confused and some amused at the official parade, piloted by a motor police squad, that marched through the heart of the city to board the train for Santa Monica "where the mountains meet the sea." Many remarked that they had never seen so many people handled so perfectly under difficult circumstances. Divided into squads of several hundred each, the delegates climbed over the hills and down to the ravines where they were led to supplies of oranges—the "hunt for gold." Then they were filed past the huge sizzling grate where the hot beef barbecue was served. Many took their first dip in the mighty Pacific.

"The Cost of Knighthood" was presented to the great Saturday evening session by Dr. F. A. Agar, who is again and again in demand for return appearances at the convention.

Sunday was the great day of the feast. In the morning the delegates from the various states were the guests of the Los Angeles churches where the younger preachers attending the convention, in many cases, spoke. Russell Brougher, for instance, occupied his father's former pulpit in the Temple church.

The Sunday afternoon and evening sessions were held in the great Shrine auditorium, seating over 5000 people. At 3:30, following the organ recital given by one of the younger sons of Dr. Selden W. Cummings, of Pasadena, Doctor Abernethy spoke on "Entering the Lists," and at the life problems conference following, the bulk of the life service pledge cards were collected.

The evening session was a time that hosts of young people will never forget. For a half hour, under the direction of Secy. Edwin Phelps, convention impressions were heard. If left to run uncontrolled the meeting might have lasted until midnight. Most of the impressions, however, were unspoken but will be broadcast to the local societies in twenty-seven states and four foreign countries.

Dr. James A. Francis' mighty address, "Arise, Sir Knight," is indescribable in its gripping force and beauty of expression. Calculated to send out 5600 Baptist young people on a crusade for righteousness against the mighty mammon of unrighteousness that holds our younger life in America today, it will long be remembered as one of the great deliverances to the generation that tomorrow shall make our churches strong.

(Continued from page 770)

building fund, and from 500 of its 900 supporting members has secured pledges totaling $110,000. Previously by private solicitation a "pioneer fund" of $100,000 had been raised from large givers. The balance of about $200,000 will be sought in a further effort later in the year. The membership has increased by 600 members since 1920 and now numbers 182. During Doctor Francis' vacation Dr. Will S. Abernethy of Calvary church, Washington, D. C., will preach.

The Church Federation of Los Angeles is canvassing its constituency on a proposal to secure Gypsy Smith for an evangelistic campaign under the auspices of the Federation. The San Francisco churches have declined to undertake a similar enterprise, although a mission held by the Gypsy about fifteen years ago was a splendid success. The chronic weakness of Protestantism in San Francisco is attested by the recent release of the employed executive secretary of the church federation and the closing of its offices after a brief period of operation on account of inadequate financial support.

THREE CENTURIES OF ORGAN BUILDING

Skilled artisans, not machines, give added artistic merit to The Kilgen. Hand carved wood-work gives the proper setting for the fine mechanical precision. You'd expect this of a Kilgen.

EACH Kilgen Organ is an individual work of art. Whether large or small, the same fine standards throughout are followed—developed through three centuries of learning how.

Since 1640, Kilgen has been building pipe organs that provide the beauty of stately religious melody. Churches of every denomination attest to the faithfulness of Kilgen organ tone.

Kilgen organ architects await the opportunity to confer with your architects. Without obligation on your part, you may draw from their wealth of experience in pipe organ designing.

Geo. Kilgen & Son, Inc.

Builders
Pipe Organs
ST. LOUIS

RAP

Volume VII

July 31, 1926

No. 26

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the National Baptist Convention

Univ. of Ill. Library
JUL 30 1926

THE LIBRARY OF THE
JUL 30 1926
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
CHICAGO

FIELD OF THE SHEPHERDS NEAR BETHLEHEM

Folks, Facts and Opinion

A striking example of the possibilities of lay evangelism is supplied by the Gideons. Within the last year they have placed more than 100,000 Bibles in rooms of American hotels. The new Stevens hotel in Chicago, not yet completed, will take 3000 Bibles, which the Gideons undertake to supply.

In the great development program of the University of Chicago, inaugurated by Pres. E. D. Burton just before his death, and being completed by the present president, Max Mason, the alumni undertook to raise $2,000,000 for endowment. With gift of $80,000 by Robert Law, '97, the alumni fund is completed. Mr. Law also gave $200,000 for a "distinguished service professorship."

The "Brounger Resolution" was the subject considered at a special meeting of the Los Angeles Baptist Ministers' Conference July 13, called to consider a proposal of Dr. John M. Dean to denounce the action of the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington on the subject. The attendance was large. There was a general discussion of the Washington action, with Doctor Dean and Dr. James Whitcomb Brounger leading on opposite sides, and with a number of the leading Baptist ministers present speaking briefly on various aspects of the question. No formal or final action was taken on the question, but a resolution of local application was unanimously adopted declaring that the conference "most heartily approves of the policy of the Southern California Baptist Convention and the Los Angeles City Mission Society in organizing regular Baptist churches only—churches composed solely of baptized (immersed) believers; and that we endorse the present policy of the associations of Southern California of receiving only such churches into our Baptist fellowship."

Dr. J. Staley Durkee of Washington, D. C., has accepted a call to the pastorate of Plymouth Congregational church, Brooklyn. This is Henry Ward Beecher's old church, its last pastor having been Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis.

Winners in the stewardship essay contest for 1925-26 have been announced by the Board of Missionary Cooperation. Prizes in group A went to Gilbert B. Brink, Claremont, Calif.; Jeannette Freund, Woodside, L. I., N. Y.; Beatrice Ewart, Granville, Ohio; and honorable mention to Violet D. Oberg, Duluth, Minn. In group B winners were Evelyn A. Huse, New London, N. H.; Marjorie Hill, Holyoke, Mass.; Florence Elizabeth Moffitt, Hartford, Conn. For group C, prizes went to Hazel Harris, Crawfordsville, Ind.; Dorothy E. O'Dell, Crawfordsville, Ind.; Grace A. Hart, Cairo, Ill. Honorable mention in this group was accorded to David Hawk, Davenport, Iowa; Myrtle Mae Franke, Blossburg, Pa., and Ruth Cooper, Junction City, Kan. Prize winners in group D were Gavin A. Pitt, Norwich, Conn.; Paul Kinney, Blackfoot, Ida., and Ruth Esther Sarver, Crawfordsville, Ind. Essayists receiving honorable mention in group D were Helen Louise Sarver, Crawfordsville, Ind.; Miriam Ruth Merrill, Blossburg, Pa., and Ruth Clark, Black River, N. Y. Details of the contest for 1926-27, which begins Nov. 15, have already been announced. All Northern Baptist young people between the ages of nine and twenty-five are urged to send for the leaflet describing the contest and to start at once their preparations for entering this year's contest. Send to the Stewardship Committee, Room 931, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, for the leaflet giving the rules of the contest.

The National Education Association at its last meeting launched another attack on the precious liberties for which some people seem to think our fathers died. It proposed that such obscene literature, pictures and tokens as are now excluded from the mails shall be also excluded from interstate commerce.

In August the first University of Chicago preacher will be Rev. Josiah Sibley, Presbyterian, Pasadena, Calif., who will be followed by Dr. Preston Bradley, of the People's church, Chicago, Prof. Daniel Evans, of Harvard university, and Prof. Gerald Birney Smith, of the University of Chicago Divinity school. The convocation preacher on Aug. 29 will be Pres. Ozora Stearns Davis, of the Chicago Theological seminary.

Joseph H. Roblee of St. Louis, and a valued member of the Delmar church, died at Jamestown, N. Y., July 8. He left an estate estimated to be worth something like $3,000,000. One-fourth of his estate less a few bequests amounting perhaps to $100,000 will ultimately come into the possession of the Northern Baptist Convention to establish the Robert A. Roblee memorial fund. The trustee of this fund, pending its termination, is to be Mrs. Roblee, her son-in-law Eugene Ross McCarthy, and the St. Louis Union Trust Company. "It is my preference," Roblee stated in his will relative to this charitable bequest, "that the fund be used in the foreign field for hospital or educational work. If the fund is to be used for current work then only the income shall be appropriated. If permanent buildings are needed then the principal fund may be used." The executors of the will are the widow, her son-in-law, McCarthy, and the St. Louis Union Trust Company.

First Prize Winners, Stewardship Essay Contest: Left to right—Gilbert B. Brink, Group A; Hazel Harris, Group C; Evelyn A. Huse, Group B; Gavin A. Pitt, Group D.

In the Philippine Islands evangelistic results have been very encouraging. All over the field the people are responsive to the gospel. Last year over 1900 baptisms were reported in the work of that comparatively small Baptist mission.

Attention is called again to the program for the conference to be held at Yvet college, Michigan, Aug. 2-28, under the auspices of the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order. The dates and topics are: economic and industrial relations, Aug. 2-8; international relations, Aug. 9-15; race relations, Aug. 16-22; family relations, Aug. 23-28. The speakers include Bruce Bliven, Powers Hapgood, Harry Laidler, Reinhold Niebuhr, Norman Thomas, Samuel McCrea Carter, and other notables. Rates for board and room are reasonable.

When Judson and Rice sailed from America there were comparatively few in this country who appeared to question the divine right of human slavery. Most people seemed to believe that the Eternal God created the black man to be a hewer of wood and drawer of water for the white race. Moreover, at that time, and even later, there was little protest of procedure based on the principle that it was the white man's God-given right to possess the lands of the colored races. Apparently people were still under the spell of the conviction which long ago was responsible for such commissions as that given to the explorer, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in which he and his heirs and assigns were officially authorized to discover, occupy, and possess such remote heathen lands not actually possessed of any Christian prince or people as should seem good to him or them."

Pursuant to the spiritual challenge of the Northern Baptist Convention in focusing the effort of the denomination for the coming year on evangelism, Philadelphia pastors and laymen are already organized for the work with a definite program in prospect for the early autumn. Dr. A. Ray Petty, pastor of Grace Temple, took the initiative in this important matter and sponsored a special conference at his church looking at organization and procedure in the matter. The organization meeting was held in the First church on June 25 with large attendance committing itself with eagerness to the task. Doctor Petty was named chairman and Rev. Ivan Murray, of the First church, secretary, and an executive committee of twenty was named to carry out the early features of the program. All the churches will observe Sunday, Oct. 3, as Declaration Day, when evangelism as the dominating feature of the year will be stressed in the pulpits. On Enlistment day, Oct. 1, each pastor will seek to rally in his church his corps of evangelistic workers for the year. There will be an interchange of pastors for the mid-week service of Wednesday, Oct. 13, and an all-day retreat for evangelistic workers and pastors in the First church, Oct. 28. It is hoped that every church will be definitely engaged in evangelistic work throughout the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

STOP! LOOK!! LISTEN!!!

THE BAPTIST

Three Months Free!!

Your renewal accompanied by one NEW subscription at any annual rate will advance your credit fifteen months: twelve months for your renewal and THREE MONTHS FREE for the new subscription.

Your renewal accompanied by two NEW annual subscriptions at any annual rate will advance your credit eighteen months: twelve for your own renewal and SIX MONTHS FREE for the two new subscriptions.

We will give you THREE MONTHS FREE credit for every NEW subscription sent in regardless of number. No commissions allowed under this offer. Cash must accompany all orders.

Single subscription, $2.50 per year.

In 10% clubs, $2.00 per year.

THE BAPTIST and Missions, $3.00.

Trial Subscriptions, Six Months for One Dollar

THE BAPTIST
2320 South Michigan Avenue
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Among church utterances on the subject, that of the Congregational Union of Great Britain, is among the most unequivocal. It calls for "the abolition of war in this generation." It urges "the adoption by the British government of the essential principles of the Geneva protocol unanimously commended to the world by the assembly of the League of Nations in 1924, and already adopted by Great Britain in the Locarno treaty—the principles, namely, of obligatory arbitration and guaranteed security, with a view to the all-round reduction and limitation of armaments provided for in article eight of the covenant of the League of Nations." And it appeals to the churches to consider, pray and act.

Not to be outdone by the Papal church the American Episcopal church has organized a Catholic congress. Its second meeting will be held in Milwaukee, October 12-14. Officially interpreted, "The Catholic congress stands for the Nicene faith in its fullness, as against every denial on the part of Protestantism and rationalism. Its purpose is to propagate and defend the religion of the incarnation of God the Son, as that religion is made available for men through the seven Christ-ordained sacraments of the Holy Catholic church. And as we believe that every phase and form of human life and activity are, through these sacraments, to be redeemed and consecrated to the service of God, the interests of the congress are as wide as humanity itself."

The war brought to an end the work of German Baptist missionaries in the Cameroons. Since the conclusion of peace, efforts have been made to obtain permission for their return to the centers of their former labor, and for the past three years Doctor Rushbrooke and the British Baptist Missionary Society have interested themselves in placing before the British Colonial office the claims of the German Baptists to resume their interrupted work. At the meeting of the executive committee of the Baptist World Alliance held in Leeds, England, on Friday, May 7, a resolution was adopted expressing the sincere hope that the immediate return of the German Baptists to their former field might be secured. Doctor Rushbrooke has received from the Colonial office a reply dated May 22, 1926, that the governor of Nigeria is agreeable to the recognition of the German Baptist Missionary Society for work in that sphere. The society has, therefore, been placed on the list of missionary societies recognized for work in the British Cameroons.

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	774
EDITORIAL	777
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	779
YOUTH—THE GREATEST GOING CONCERN, BY DANIEL A. POLING	780
AMERICA'S EMANCIPATION, BY EVANGELINE BOOTH	781
A MORE EXCELLENT WAY, BY JAMES H. BUSWELL	782
THOU SHALT LOVE, BY ERNEST H. SHANKS	782
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—WHAT DOES THE BIBLE MEAN TO ME? BY BURT ABELL	783
THE CHIMNEY CORNER	784
BOYS AND GIRLS	785
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	786
CHURCHES AT WORK	787
AMONG OURSELVES	788
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	794
NEW BOOKS	795

Swedish Baptists will celebrate their Diamond Jubilee in Chicago, Ill., in Aug., 1927. It is then hoped to have as a memorial worthy of such an occasion, a Jubilee fund of $350,000 raised for denominational work as follows: $200,000 for an endowment fund for the school, Bethel institute; $50,000 as an endowment for the missionary work of the denomination; $100,000 for a building fund for the school; this sum, however, to be raised from gifts designated for this purpose by the donors.

Rev. Willard R. Jewell, who has been doing highly effective work as director of religious education for the Baptists of Chicago, has accepted a repeated call to become director of religious education and associate pastor with Dr. John Snape at Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland, Ohio. His acceptance is due partly to a long friendship existing between Messrs. Snape and Jewell, and partly to the opportunity which Euclid Avenue church, with its new building will afford for an enterprise of unusual significance in the work of religious education.

The Ohio Baptist Assembly will hold its next session on the campus of Denison university at Granville, Ohio, Aug. 2-13. The program offers courses of lectures on Old Testament and the life of Christ, home and foreign missions, evangelism, Christian stewardship, B. Y. P. U. work, W. W. G. work, art in religious education, dramatization and pageantry, psychology, principles of teaching, church music, week-day religious education, women's work, pastors' problems. The list of instructors includes twenty specialists. The evening programs include lectures, concerts and pageants.

British free churches are expressing themselves vigorously on moral grounds against the proposed betting tax.

The following telegram reached the office of THE BAPTIST July 19: "Because of so many inquiries, officials of First Baptist church are giving out the statement that the killing of one D. E. Chipps Saturday afternoon by pastor of First Baptist church was a case of absolute self-defense and that unfortunate victim had made many threats against life of pastor and had phoned thirty minutes before coming to pastor's office, 'We are coming to kill you,' and used profane language. Many witnesses testified that aggressor said in their presence as he came to church what his intentions were against pastor. Chipps bolted into pastor's office without knocking and began to curse the pastor for sermon of previous Sunday which the pastor preached on 'Six Members of First Baptist Church Fired by L. B. Haughey, Roman Catholic Manager of Meacham Dry Goods Company.' The pastor had nothing left but to defend himself. Church as never before standing solidly behind pastor. Both church and pastor are deeply chastened and waiting on God in this dark hour. Pastor met all engagements Sunday and preached on text, Romans 8:28. J. J. Mickle."

Immanuel Church Launches Health Project

A HEALTH project is being conducted in connection with the summer vacation school at the Immanuel church, 2320 S. Michigan boulevard, where Dr. Johnston Myers has been pastor for more than thirty years.

Miss Peterson, a senior nurse from the city health department, has been detailed by Doctor Bundesen to this work for five weeks, and Dr. Roy Bernard is giving two hours a day to the clinic. In the clinic fifty-two children have been examined thus far and of that number fifteen cases of enlarged tonsils or adenoids have been discovered, eighteen cases of defective vision, ten of defective teeth, and six with curvature of spine. These defects will be reported to the parents and to the city health department and provision will be made where necessary, to care for these defects without charge.

In addition to the clinic the nurse, by the use of stories, charts, pictures, lantern slides and moving pictures, is leading the children in the building of health habits, emphasizing especially cleanliness, food values, sleep, rest, play and table habits. Each child is weighed each week, and an award is made to the one who shows the greatest physical improvement in the five weeks. In the manual training work the older children are making first aid kits, which contain first aid necessities, as well as tooth brush, tooth paste, and soap. The rules of health are formulated by the children themselves rather than handed down ready made.

Immanuel church is situated on one of the avenues of wealth but on neighboring streets where these children live are "homes," so-called, of the very poor. Here wealth and poverty lie side by side. Immanuel church is endeavoring to link them together by a ministry of mercy. It is trying to fulfill the mission of the Great Physician.

The picture of part of the Immanuel vacation school was taken in front of Immanuel building. The rear row from left to right are: Miss Peterson, R. N., Doctor Bernard, the next slightly forward is Miss Johnson, principal of the school, Frederick Meigs in charge of manual training, Rev. R. V. Meigs, Doctor Main who addressed the school, Mr. Jewell, Chicago, educational director, and Mr. Windish, superintendent of the mailing department of the American Baptist Publication Society, who captured the children with a gripping story and a fine application.

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

The Question of Open Membership

THREE conceptions of the nature of the Baptist movement, all valid and vitally related to one another, have been held among Baptists as bases to denominational fellowship, but with varying and sometimes disturbing emphasis. The first of these principles is that of a spiritual experience, expressed usually in terms of a regenerated church membership. The second is that of doctrinal correctness. The third is that of ecclesiastical regularity. Most of the controversies that have disturbed the fellowship of Baptists have grown out of questions that did not challenge the truth of any of these three principles. Such disputes have turned rather upon differences of judgment concerning the best way to preserve the integrity and balance of these principles and to disseminate them. In the field of the Northern Baptist Convention attention is now drawn to a question of ecclesiastical regularity, namely, the question of open membership.

From the beginning of Baptist history in North America there has been little variation from the practice of requiring immersion as a prerequisite to membership in the local church. So far as there has been any variation from such practice it has rested on the ground of exceptional circumstances. It does not appear even now that any church in the constituency of the Northern Baptist Convention proposes to administer baptism to any except believers, nor to accept any act but immersion as baptism, nor to discredit baptism as the ordinary and normal accompaniment of church membership. There is a deep and apparently universal belief among Baptists that the immersion of believers is one of Jesus' own appointed and changeable symbols of his gospel. There is a prevalent conviction among them that the value and meaning of that symbol are best preserved by requiring immersion as a condition of church membership. But there is also a fear somewhat widely, but by no means universally felt that open membership under any circumstances either indicates or tends to produce a departure from the regular practice of the denomination with regard to baptism.

Let us distinguish clearly between open membership and associate membership. As terms are used in current discussion of the subject, associate membership is the status in which unimmersed believers are admitted into the membership of the church with certain definite restrictions in regard to voting and holding office. Open membership admits them without any such restriction. The difference turns upon the power of control. If in any church the immersed and unimmersed members are equals in voting power and in eligibility to office, the case is one of open membership.

Associate membership is not in dispute. The most earnest opponents of open membership are careful to state that their opposition is directed not against associate membership nor against the fullest participation of unimmersed with immersed members in the spiritual and fraternal activities of the church, but against what they call "full membership," meaning equal participation in the functions of control.

Of course every local church must fix its own terms of membership. There is no higher ecclesiastical authority in the denomination that has jurisdiction in the case. But in those organizations for cooperation among the churches, such as associations and conventions, the question arises in another form, namely: How far shall a church that practices open membership be permitted to cooperate in associations or in conventions? According to the principle of autonomy in the Baptist denomination, every association and convention must settle the question for itself. One is competent to decide the matter in one way, while another may decide it in a very different way, and neither can call the decision of the other in question before a third tribunal.

Moreover, any proposed restriction of membership in an association or convention will be directed, as it is in the local church, towards the control of voting and holding office rather than towards spiritual fellowship. Essentially, such restriction will mean that representatives from any church practicing open membership shall be barred, to the extent prescribed in the restrictive act, from voting and holding office in the association or convention. Surely nobody proposes to bar the members of such a church from participating with the association or convention in praying, paying, conferring, cooperating and otherwise actively expressing the spirit of Christian fellowship.

The question whether an association, convention or other group organized for cooperation among churches shall impose any such restriction in any manner or degree is one of discretion. The Bible says nothing directly on the subject. Baptists of equal honesty, loyalty and intelligence differ widely in their conclusions. Baptist precedent as indicated by history and current usage is not uniform. Arguments based upon expediency are largely conjectural, and are subject to wide differences of opinion. To all appearance the only course left open is to try that experiment which the majority may prefer, with the understanding that at some future time a majority is equally free to try the experiment in some other way.

There is room for a considerable variety of expedients. The matter may be left entirely optional with the local church, as it is now in most cases. The association or convention may prescribe that only immersed members may be sent to represent a church, as the Northern Baptist Convention does under its new rule. Partial restriction may be placed upon the power of delegates from open membership churches in voting and in eligibility to office, such as churches having associate membership now impose upon their unimmersed members. Such restriction may be total, permitting such delegates neither to vote on any question nor to hold any office. Or finally, the privilege of sending delegates may be withdrawn from any church which has in its membership unimmersed persons. The body before which the question comes must elect its own option as to the particular course to be pursued.

The effect of any such action will depend largely upon the spirit in which it is taken and upon the method pursued in arriving at a decision. Any lack of Christian consideration and courtesy, any personal willfulness or party spirit, any mustering of factional forces to pack a meeting, any representation of the consideration of the question as a fight, any interpretation of the decision as a victory or a defeat, condemns the proceeding as a common, vulgar, worldly strife, unworthy of the Christian religion and devoid of moral value. Such an effort at a settlement may tear great gaps in Christian fellowship and paralyze Christian work.

But if any supposable course be taken in a Christian spirit, with moderation of purpose, courtesy of manner and a clear understanding, it will not have a harmful effect. In fact it will have little effect of any kind. Very few churches will be affected since there are few that do not require baptism as a prerequisite to full membership, and if the matter be discreetly handled neither they nor the denomination at large will be conscious of any serious interruption of fellowship. All of the churches will go on in their own free way, experience will throw increasing light upon the problem of open membership, and the denomination will continue to assemble its forces in full loyalty to its historic and fundamental principles for the performance of its growing task.

A Notable Book

WHEN one finds a missionary book that deals frankly and fearlessly with the present-day problems of foreign missions he is inclined to give it more than the usual notice given to books in our review columns. Such a book has recently come from the Judson Press, Philadelphia, from the pen of William B. Lippard, associate editor of Missions. The author of this highly interesting and valuable book made a trip to the Orient for the express purpose of gathering material at first hand. This journey to China, added to his long experience as a secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, gives the book authority and virility both assuring and refreshing. It is not often we read a missionary book through at one sitting, but in this case we swallowed the entire contents of the eight chapters without stopping to sip here and there as is our custom. The book is happily called "The Second Century of Baptist Foreign Missions" and deals specifically with the momentous period beginning with the world war and covers the years from 1914 to 1925.

With the hand of a true historian the author traces the catastrophe of the war which shook the foundations of civilization until the whole world tottered. In the storm of carnage that covered so wide an area foreign missions naturally suffered in every way. These sufferings are set forth graphically and somewhat in detail in order that the students of the book may be saved from mere glittering generalities. With due regard to the law of climax the author carries the interest of the reader with him in each succeeding chapter as he builds again the foundations that had been destroyed and faces with splendid courage the new situations which have arisen in foreign missions since the close of the war. The last chapter on "Problems of the Day" should be read by every Baptist in America and especially by the Baptists who cooperate in the work of the Northern Convention. We wonder how many of our people realize what tremendous changes are taking place in the regions where our foreign mission stations are located? Here are some of the problems with which foreign missions struggle: Christian principles in international relationships; the abolition of war; the removal of race prejudice; the application of Christianity to industrial relations; the protection of weaker peoples from the economic exploitation of unscrupulous stronger nations; missionary cooperation among the different denominations and a more united approach to the christianizing of the world; the development of an indigenous church in foreign lands; the ultimate and complete transfer of the conduct and control of missions to the natives; the thorough christianization of so-called Christian nations.

Each of these problems is treated succinctly with a refreshing candor in these days of soft-pedalling any note that might awaken more controversy and investigation. And yet the treatment is always fraternal and constructive. The author does not pose as an infallible interpreter. He offers no dogmatic solvent of all the problems. On the contrary he contributes his own suggestions in the light of his special knowledge and experience and leaves the student free to form his own conclusions after a wider study of all the facts he may gather. It is the hope of THE BAPTIST that this book which is designed as a textbook for use in Baptist mission study classes will find an ever widening circle of readers and students.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

Equity, Becoming Too Eager, Has Carelessly Caret Away Its Game

By every consideration of fundamental right, the property of the royal family in Germany belongs to the German people. They created it. The kaiser and princes enjoyed it. When the war came the kaiser and his partisans forced the people to fight. When the war was over the people were broken and impoverished, while he and his sons had saved their precious skins and all of their property and continued to squeeze princely incomes out of their suffering fellow-Germans. Some millions of Germans thought to right the wrong by confiscating the royal estates. But they went too fast and too far. In a popular referendum they failed to win enough votes for confiscation. The equity of the case remains, however, and the Germans will not forget it.

Family Choked to Death, Public Perfectly Calm

If it were a headline in the daily paper the reader would know what to expect. But here it is otherwise. The story is told by Christine Frederick in Success Magazine. It is a story of the way in which modern economic life is destroying the home. How can an average young man and woman on an average income from his labor live and maintain a home under average standards of living? Figure it out yourself as thousands of young people are trying to do, and you will come to the conclusion which they also reach each that it cannot be done. Of course the thing has been done in the past when the standard of living was lower. It can be done now by those exceptional couples who are blessed with exceptional incomes, such as bank presidents, railroad engineers, bricklayers and garage mechanics. But for increasing multitudes the alternative is to marry for money or to stay single. The results are fewer homes, poorer homes or childless homes. The family is dying of slow economic strangulation on the one hand or of social and economic surfeit on the other. What is to be done about the matter? Ask Mussolini, Trotsky or the man in the moon. Nobody in America seems to know.

Gustavus and the Pope Meet Again in Chicago

Nearly 300 years have rolled by since Protestantism with the great Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden at its head fought for its life at Lutzen and elsewhere against the armies of the Holy Roman Empire under Wallenstein and Tilly. But how curiously time works! The greatest eucharistic congress ever held by the Roman Catholic church closed June 25 in the city of Chicago. On the night of the twenty-fourth in the same city Gustavus Adolphus III, present crown prince of Sweden and direct descendant of the great Gustavus, was entertained at a banquet given in his honor by Swedes in America. At the congress and the banquet alike orators rolled forth eloquent periods in praise of liberty and democracy. What participant in the peace of Westphalia could have dreamed of such an outcome at such a time and place?

Cartoonist Discovers How to Pay off the Public Debt

In view of the avidity of the people for sensational details of criminal trials, John T. McCutcheon suggests by means of telling cartoons that such trials be held in the Chicago stadium with a regular admission fee. He thinks that the public would willingly pay a fee of $2 for each admission. He sees no reason why the plan should not be generally adopted as a means of raising public revenue, and he estimates that the receipts would soon pay off the public debt. Since it is a maxim of private business to "give the people what they want," since the people are willing to pay for such entertainment, and since sensation-mongering is one of the most highly remunerative enterprises, why should not the government capitalize nastiness for the public good? There may be moral scruples in some quarters, but what do they signify in "practical" business matters?

A Rhode Island Rumpus About Independence Day

Wets proposed to stage in Providence, R. I., on Independence day a demonstration against the Volstead law. Drys, notably Baptists, protested against such use of the occasion as being "unpatriotic, incongruous and a flagrant misuse of a great national holiday, the observance of which is obviously designed to strengthen and confirm, not to ridicule and weaken, every part of our national constitution and the federal law." Just what came of the protest is not known, but the principle deserves consideration. How far is it legitimate to use Independence day as an occasion for partisan propaganda? Such use is common and well-known. It seems about as congruous as a lecture at the Lord's Supper on the historicity of Jonah.

Modernism Gnaws at One End and Romanism at the Other

That is, so men are saying. Over against the complaint that modernism is eating away the faith of the Protestant denominations, set the statement of Arthur S. Maxwell, in Signs of the Times, supported by strong quotations, that "the most astounding of all the Rome-ward movements of the present day is that now proceeding within the nonconformist churches." He says: "This 'Free' Catholicism is spreading like leaven among Congregationalists, Methodists and even Baptists." He cites many features of Roman Catholic observance introduced into Protestant churches and among the "many astounding features" the secret ordination of Protestant ministers by "a Roman Catholic bishop." On the other hand we are assured by equally respectable testimony that modernism is already in possession of the schools and organization of the leading Protestant denominations. Two things would seem to follow: first, that Protestantism is moribund; secondly, that the modernist controversy is getting back to its starting point as a revolt against the Roman Catholic church. That is, in the near future we shall all be either modernists or Romanists. How gloriously gloomy!

A Good Riddance of Extra-Territoriality

One of the most encouraging items of news from China is the report that an agreement has been reached by the diplomats of foreign occupation in China whereby the offensive jurisdiction of the foreign courts in that country is to cease. Henceforth crimes in China will be tried by Chinese courts under Chinese law. The text of the agreement is not at hand, but if the report is correct, and the negotiation is concluded in good faith, one of the most serious of the factors in the Chinese problem will have been eliminated.

Youth—The Greatest Going Concern

From an address delivered at the World's Christian Endeavor Convention at the Crystal Palace, London.

By DANIEL A. POLING

THERE are three injunctions the church must heed to-day if youth is to be captured and sent forth under the Great Commission.

First: We must give youth our confidence. We must believe in youth. We must refuse to take counsel of superficial, pessimistic observers. We must face the facts. Never has there been a time when young men and young women were more intrinsically fine than they are today. In my experience with juvenile delinquency, the greater fault lies at the door of adult life. Give young men and young women leadership and example and they will repay their debt to the utmost, with the attributes of sound character and with clean and sacrificial deeds. Again and again I have seen them rise above sad home environments to build better than their fathers and seldom have I known them to fail in any real moral test.

You have heard much on this side of the Atlantic about the failure of prohibition and perhaps you have had repeated here the slanderous statement that this law has demoralized our young people. As one who knows the North American continent across all its distances and who has been personally and intimately acquainted with its young people for more than a generation, I say to you that the charge is utterly false. Prohibition is not a failure and America's youth are not demoralized.

Boys and girls go astray in America. I face again and again in my own New York parish sad and terrible juvenile situations, but we do not indict all bankers when one banker defaults; we do not indict all representatives of governments when one or several politicians betray; we do not indict clergymen generally when certain ambassadors of the church of Jesus Christ prove unfaithful in their ordination vows.

In a recent poll I made hurriedly before appearing before the judiciary committee of the United States senate in connection with the prohibition hearings, letters were addressed to the presidents of state, district, county and large city Christian Endeavor Unions everywhere in the United States. The 538 replies received were divided as follows: 531 voted against the legalizing of light wines and beers; seven voted for such legalization; 532 voted against the repeal of prohibition; six voted for such repeal; 529 voted that prohibition had bettered conditions financially, socially and morally.

A copy of the letter addressed to these young people was sent to the managers and owners of 695 general merchandising stores located in forty-seven of our forty-eight states. These manager-owners reside in their communities and are representatives of the best business life of my country. Within ten days replies were received from 585 of these gentlemen, a remarkably high percentage: 546 voted against the legalizing of light wines and beers; thirty-nine voted for such legalization; 577 voted against the repeal of prohibition; eight voted for such repeal; 563 voted that prohibition had bettered conditions financially, socially and morally.

You will have observed that the replies of the young people and of these business men are almost identical. That these young presidents are representatives of America's youth will not be disputed when I tell you that they are the elected leaders of a movement which enrolls more than two million young Americans. We must give youth our confidence. Stop slandering youth!

In the second place, we must listen to youth. An old world listened to Columbus and a new earth arose from beyond a far ocean. And in each generation youth has much to say which unheard or ignored means tragic loss to society.

"My people doth not consider" was the ancient voice of divine wisdom. Often in these complicated social and intellectual times youth is justified in repeating and applying these words to parents and public leaders. We consider their deeds and their mistakes. We consider their real and their fancied delinquencies. We consider their inconsideration of their elders and their blindness to or usurpation of authority, but do we really consider them and their crises? To do this, we must first of all give them our time. We have time for golf and time for bridge, time for business and time for politics, but we have, as a rule, little time for our children.

Youth waits and wants to be understood. At least this is what youth thinks. Now, we may know that it is as impossible for youth to be understood by age today as it was when we were youthful, but we can at least make the effort to understand and it is the effort that counts and wins. When young people feel our sympathy and find us listening, they think we understand, they know we try to understand, and that is what chiefly matters.

Finally, we must give youth a worthy task. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" was the high command of Jesus Christ. With that trumpet ringing in their ears, the young men who had followed in his train across Judean hills and by Galilean lakes, through Gethsemane valleys and to the summit of Calvary, went out to the ends of the earth and on to the last spiritual frontiers. The trouble with us has been, in dealing with young people, not that we have asked too much, but that we have asked too little. Burning crosses and red running arenas and inquisitorial tortures and Boxer uprisings have raised up militant armies while soft and flabby pronouncements have brought us always to spiritual and moral debacles.

What, then, is the task for this generation of young people? It is a twofold task and its great words are, evangelize and humanize. The trumpet is still, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The new earth of which Tennyson sang can be realized only as men and women who have been made new by the mystery of the cross and the alchemy of its redemption are thrust forth into every department of organized society, into every problem of human life.

"Evangelize and humanize?" We face the imperative of the words spoken by Mary long ago, "Whatsoever He saith unto thee, do it!" It is not enough to repeat the words, to say in easy sentences the ancient creeds. We must practice our faith. We must Christianize our social order.

We must take Jesus Christ in deadly earnest for he is our only hope, our only sufficient Saviour. We have tried every other leader and way and still we stand hard by catastrophes that have almost wrecked man. Wherever we have adventured our belief in the principles of the Sermon on the Mount, wherever we have practiced loving our neighbor as we love ourselves, wherever we have done good to those who have despitely used us, wherever we have lifted justice above selfish gain and adventured our faith instead of our fears, we have seen rising out of the mists of suspicion and selfishness the new heaven and the new earth.

America's Emancipation

BY EVANGELINE BOOTH

TO THE sub-committee of the committee on the judiciary of the senate of the United States.

Dear sirs:

Ill health prevents my presence before the committee considering the challenge of the utility of the prohibition law, so I am constrained to put in writing the definite testimony I would bear to the beneficence of this statute as witnessed in the prosecution of the religious and social operations of the organization which I represent.

The Salvation Army in the United States has a force of over 4500 officers, who spend their whole time in this work, having no other occupation in life than to devote themselves to the business of seeking the lost and aiding the neediest of our beloved country's population. As these officers include in their responsibility tens of thousands of local officers and soldiers, who are in intimate touch with the people who were formerly the victims of the drink traffic, their experience endows me with peculiar competence to witness to the salutary effect which the banishment of the saloon has had upon myriads throughout the land.

The field officers, who conduct meetings in the hall and the open street and who are charged with the responsibility of relieving the needy in their community, bear united testimony that the old degradation through drink has practically disappeared. Our open-air services are no longer disturbed by the noisy behavior and maudlin interjections of intoxicated loungers.

The type that once abounded is no more. An old-time "boozers day," when the derelict was gathered in and fed strong coffee preliminary to a direct attack upon his soul, is an impossibility because the class whose drinking proclivities entitled it to the appellation "boozers" is rapidly becoming extinct.

On Thanksgiving day a thousand such men would be gathered in one hall, brought thither by our searchers in busses and cars from the back ends of the saloon, the "dead houses," alleys and park benches and other dark corners of the underworld. Such testimony to the utterly degrading effect of drink could not be assembled today in any one of our halls anywhere. The field officers universally witness to the changed condition. They admit that there is widespread violation of the law, but they would no more argue that this law is bad because violated than they would suggest that the laws providing penalty for arson, theft and murder should be repealed because so often flagrantly broken.

Officers of our social service departments give similar testimony. It is the province of these officers to receive the homeless and workless men into the institution provided for their care. The specimen described in the "boozers' day" reference was formerly the common habitue of our industrial homes.

With our slogan, "A man may be down, but he is never out," we peopled our places with recruits from the bottom that was almost bottomless, and thousands came with their poor bodies covered with vermin and rags to be cleaned up and clothed and fed. Often these men were of the type that were literally cast out with the pitiful sweepings of the saloon and hosts of them were as centless as they were senseless—twin conditions attributable to an insatiable thirst for drink.

We were struggling with this product of drink while the source of the pollution was a legalized traffic. All that we could do was to apply the specific in which salvationists glory, and many were permanently reclaimed. Others temporarily rehabilitated went out in their own strength to fall again and the fall almost invariably was through the doorway of a saloon.

Should you visit our industrial homes today you would find the same type of man clothed and in his right mind, no longer the recurring problem that he once presented, and there are hundreds who formerly could not keep a quarter in their pockets who are now so thrifty that they have bank accounts placed in the army's care.

Hear also the evidence of our officers engaged in the women's social service, which has been one of our most successful agencies, showing as it does a percentage of eighty-five permanently satisfactory cases passed through our many rescue institutions and maternity hospitals.

Before prohibition our records show that 50 per cent of the cases that came to us were drink addicts, and in many instances alcoholism was the cause of the downfall.

Since prohibition only 1 per cent of the cases that come to us are traceable to that cause.

There has always been a marked affinity between drink and the degradation of womanhood. In the old days the house of shame and the saloon were often under one roof. The wine-room seduction, once so frequent, is now a thing of the past. Let us bless the law that has thrown this protection around the path of American womanhood, for higher than the probity and nobility of its womanhood our great nation can never rise.

What about the children—the wronged children, the crippled children, the abused children, the blind children, the imbecile children, the nameless children, the starved children, the deserted children, the beaten children, the dead children, whose feeble but ineffaceable writing upon the wall of the nation arraigns alcohol's brazen hand as the robber of their little bodies, minds and souls! How have these precious hostages profited by the legislation in question?

My executive officer for settlement work tells me that children in our day nurseries and kindergartens come to us noticeably better fed, better clothed, healthier, happier and more teachable. She tells me that applications for relief have been reduced 50 per cent, and that where in former times help was frequently appealed for by families whose babies had fallen from fire escapes or infants smothered on account of drunken parents, not one such case has come under our notice for years. Salvation army settlement workers in our great cities bear out the truth of federal returns as to the low pauperism ratio.

Conditions have changed and family life is now much more wholesome than in the former days. There is still poverty and hardship, but poverty is no longer caused by, nor cursed with, the drinking of parents. That home-destroying factor is gone.

These statements are not made as the result of hearsay. They grow out of the army's intimate knowledge of the life of the poor, which I think all will hesitate to gainsay. We know this thing which prohibition debars has sold more homes, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, dethroned more intellects, dishonored more womanhood and dug more graves than any other poisoned scourge which has ever swept the world. Let any refute this statement who dare. We know this to be the terrible fact. Let there be due hesitation before reinstating as a legalized traffic this ruthless despoiler of mankind.

A More Excellent Way

BY JAMES H. BUSWELL

NO LONGER is the daily newspaper considered the leading advertising medium for the individual church, although for cooperative effort it stands at the top. Some pastors still put the newspaper first as a promotion factor but "Direct Mail" leads.

Letters were sent to thirty of the most successful pastors in Michigan. Some of these do not advertise, but they were counted "live and successful" by the state leaders in their respective denominations. Twenty-three of them replied, many sending samples of their church messages. Of these, 30 per cent put newspaper advertising first (all of them recognizing the value of news stories regarding special events) while 57 per cent gave "Direct Mail" first place. The Saturday newspaper seemed to meet with general favor although one pastor referred to the church page as a "chamber of horrors." A Detroit pastor spoke of church services that "run from one ad to another." Nearly every pastor insisted that the advertising for the church as a body be dignified, but dignity seems difficult to achieve in small space, on newsprint paper, in one color and with no control of surrounding typography.

Where the newspaper does "pull" increased attendance (one pastor asserts that the peril of advertising is that it must have "pull") it comes largely as the result of a "catchy" type of advertising. But "this may excite the curious and secure only temporary results." One brother announced as his topic, "To Hell with the Church." Such a subject as this requires an unusual personality to overcome the apparent profanity and so to deal with the topic as to get good results and leave a favorable impression. One writer speaks of the "breathless competition" into which newspapers throw the churches.

Why is a weekly bulletin, mailed to members and constituents every Wednesday and Thursday so that they will know what is going on the next Sunday and the next week, the most productive single advertising unit being employed by the church today?

Such a bulletin creates what one pastor calls "enthusiastic folks" who bring in strangers by reason of their personal and collective enthusiasm. One pastor maintains attendance records. People like to see their name in print; only the highest percentages are printed in the weekly bulletin.

Most pastors apparently find their outstanding promotion problem is to "sell" the membership on their own church. That done, the church hums with activity. A news bulletin with stories and pictures about departmental activities seems to be an ideal messenger to draw the church closer together. With but one exception these bulletins are four pages ranging in size from 4 by 10 inches to 7 by 10. In reality they are miniature newspapers for the church. Since they contain only news of his own church, the pastor can control the "atmosphere," use better paper, print good pictures, and issue souvenir numbers for special occasions.

Mail matter is not being overworked. An average of less than three pieces of mail enters the home daily. People like to get mail. If the bulletin is interesting, it is read throughout by every one who receives it.

Of all the bulletins received, only two can be called really artistic and interesting and yet they are getting results. They could be made better by using better paper, two-color printing, more careful typography, a distinctive mailing envelope, more local pictures, live newsy contents, and by mailing them on a definite day.

From the letters received and from eighteen years' observation of and experience with church advertising, we come to the conclusion that if a pastor wants results and not just "general publicity" his best medium is some form of weekly church paper or bulletin mailed to the homes of church members and constituents, not just handed out at the Sunday services.

Thou Shalt Love

BY ERNEST H. SHANKS

THE greatest commandment of all is the commandment of Christ. Moses gave the ten commandments. God gave many commandments to the people of Israel covering a great many duties. Prophets sought to interpret these to the people. Priests and teachers added many rules in an effort to direct the proper observance of God's commandments to his chosen nation. Christ summed up the observance of all these in two great commandments. "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God . . . and thy neighbor as thyself." All the law and the prophets rested on these two great commandments. It was to his disciples that he gave the greatest commandment of all, saying: "This is my commandment that ye love one another, as I have loved you." The very basis of discipleship is love. It is fundamental. It is the supreme fundamental, more important than doctrine, creed, church policy, or uniformity. Jesus did not say, "This is my commandment, that ye all believe the same thing." He was concerned that they should believe him, and believing him all other matters of belief work out right. There may be unity without uniformity. A great variety of vision, many angles of approach, diversity of opinion may be possible so long as there is the basic principle of love at the center. Love binds. Love understands. Love lifts. Love is never critical, censorious, faultfinding, carping, dogmatic. Love is a tender plant. It dies in the cold. It withers in the heat. It droops in the dry, hot winds of scorn. With lovers, in the home, among the brethren it is the same. Jesus knew these disciples. He knew that the greatest thing of all was love. So he did not pray that they should be one in opinion, one in method of work, one in ideals; but one in love. We do well to heed our Lord's command to love. It is the highest, the supreme obligation. If we fail here we fail in everything. All our boasting is vain, a hollow mockery if we do not have love in our hearts. We may do a thousand other things and all to no account if the negative sign follows the equation—minus love. "Let love be without dissimulation."

Darius Green and his flying machine were only fifty years ahead of Henry Ford. One difference between them is that in the case of Darius he discovered by experience that "the 'ain't such a thunderin' sight o' fun in it when you come to light." The art of flying has made considerable advancement since his day. Nowadays the aviator can start his flight without jumping off the barn, and in most cases can reach the ground without spoiling his anatomy. Then, the distance between starting and landing was about fifty feet and the direction of flight almost perpendicular, with no curves. Now, they circle the earth. And Henry Ford's latest proposal is to double-deck the railroad yards about the passenger stations in the large cities, using the covering deck to make landing stations for flocks of air carriages. The world on wheels has outrun its brains; what will it do on wings?

The Devotional Life

What Does the Bible Mean to Me?

BY BURT ABELL

MY BIBLE is a library from which I may at will read history, poetry, music, law, magic, philosophy, psychology, literature, prophecy. All are treated in a masterly way and inspire and thrill as I read these wonderful pages written by authors who were masters in their subjects.

Again my Bible is to me a moving picture—a screen on which is pictured the heart throbs of humanity seeking, seeking, seeking something, they scarcely know what, but a something just out of reach, a something their inmost souls cry out for and must possess. They take pilgrimages, they raise altars, and burn incense, and shed the blood of bulls and goats; they make laws and break them and call it sin. They cry in their repentance and feel a forgiving Presence and rejoice. I see life—life in all its baseness, in all its nobility—ever learning, ever forgetting, and over it all and through it all, a light that never was on land or sea, a Presence “with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow as of turning.”

The Open Window

My Bible is to me a window beside which I sit and “consider thy heavens, oh God, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou has ordained,” and I, from my inmost soul cry, “What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?” And among the stars I see one moving and then standing above a manger in which is a Babe. As the clouds obscure my sight further on I see a cross and one upon it in agony, and my tears are like rain for sympathy. But see, there is an empty tomb, and one stands there and comforts a woman who is weeping. The wonder of it grows upon me till I see him rise and disappear and like Thomas of old I fall upon my knees and cry, “My Lord and my God.”

Again my Bible is to me a mirror. David cries, “Have mercy upon me O God, according to thy loving kindness, according to the multitude of thy tender mercies; blot out my transgressions; wash me from mine iniquities and cleanse me from my sin; create in me a clean heart O God, and renew a right spirit within me.” The voice is David’s but the bowed form with hands clasped high above the head is myself away up in a log house in Michigan as the terror of an offended God and my lost soul is upon me. I hear Peter say, “I know not the man” and the voice is Peter’s but the man standing there afraid of owning his Lord is I, as is also the one who goes out and weeps bitter tears over it.

I look again and I see the father of the healed boy crying, “Lord I believe, help thou mine unbelief,” but ‘tis mine own soul that is struggling and suffocating with the flesh, agonizing for another breath of the air of heaven.

I see a company gathered together and one is saying, “Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.” The throng fades away and it is to me alone, out in my own field, to whom he is talking and my heart is crying out, “What! Is it possible, you mean me Lord; all your life, death and resurrection for me?” And the memory of it goes with me through the years. Job cries, “Though he slay me yet will I trust him,” and he has but put into words that which I feel deep down in my own soul. So my Bible is to me a mirror, and no matter where I look in it I see my failures, my sins, my hopes, my joys reflected back to me.

By Bible is to me my radio set. I tune in on station GEN and hear, “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth” and I hear the crash of the elements and the music of the spheres broadcast from the parapets of eternity . . . I catch station ISA and a recitative comes over the aid: “But he was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our place was upon him and with his stripes we are healed.” . . .

A little movement and a sweet voice thrills me as I hear, “I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me,” but soon the voice takes on a new note and I hear, “Father, I have kept these whom thou hast given me; neither pray I for these alone, but for all those who shall believe on me through their word.” . . .

But here’s a sweet singer from station JOHN: “Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.”

A final turn to the left and a ringing and triumphant voice from station ROM fills the air: “Oh the depths of the riches, both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God; how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out. For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been his counsellor? Or who hath first given to him and it shall be recompensed to him again? For of him, and through him and to him are all things, to whom be glory for ever, Amen!”

Heavenly Music

And I realize that here is something, that, no matter how clumsily I fumble the dials, is in itself a perfect instrument for my reception of messages from my God, broadcasting through a medium more subtle, more quick than any ether known to man, and that instead of isolated programs here and there, could I but know how to use it, I could have my whole life and being filled with the songs and orchestrations of the ensemble of the hosts of heaven.

Finally, brethren, my Bible is a love-letter from my God, revealing his very heart to all mankind. How tenderly he deals with us, teaching us in types and symbols, suiting his words to our puny comprehensions, leading us to know the riches of his grace in Christ Jesus his son.

My Bible is to me the right hand of God, uniting with his left hand the Spirit, reaching down and lifting our feet out of the mire and clay of fleshly hopes and ambitions, and making us to sit together with him in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. “Thy word, Oh Lord, is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my pathway.”

The Chimney Corner

When All the Children Came Home Again

By G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ONE summer day in 1873 a covered wagon, hand-made, turned northward at Abilene, Kan., from the dusty transcontinental trail that led across the plains. That evening a young pioneer was staking out a homestead on the rolling prairies. That night he slept under the stars and dreamed of a young wife and a baby far away "back East." With the first streaks of morning light he began to create the simple units of a pioneer homestead: a shack, a stable, a cellar and a well. Wintry days followed the long smoky Indian summer and the settler awakened on many mornings to find the snow drifted over his bed ere shelter was completed and the well dug seventy-five feet deep to the sources of unfailing water.

Then came a wonderful day in springtime. The prairie chickens were drumming on the ridges and the first wildflowers were blooming on the southern slopes. The pioneer was waiting that evening by a railroad siding far from his homestead for a train which was bringing his wife and the baby eight months old which he had never seen. They came. The young pioneer from the bluegrass fields of old Kentucky welcomed his helpmeet from Ohio—North and South united in a new union. In the bonds of a deathless love and with their child between them they drove slowly homeward along the prairie trail.

During the next twenty years seven other children were born in this Kansas home, four sons and three daughters. Through all the vicissitudes of frontier life this family struggled for existence while droughts, insect scourges, hot winds and other afflictions toughened the fiber and developed traits of tireless perseverance and will-to-win amid the mutations of that western border.

In 1896 the first child left the old ranch and soon fared forth to South Africa. The next year another son went into the great West, into the Puget Sound country. Later two other sons went to live in the far northland on the upper reaches of Saskatchewan. The spirit of the pioneer and the hunger for adventure pushed them out until at last came a day when every child was married and gone, the last son to California and the youngest daughter to Oklahoma. And the old frontiersman with the wife of his youth was left alone again in the midst of a great solitude. But they kept every detail of the old home intact even to the household furniture and the pegs in a row where the five sons had once hung coats and hats. "Some day," said the parents, "maybe the children will all come home together again." And they did.

Fifty-two years had passed since the father, lithe and wiry, had waited at the siding with his hand-made wagon for wife and child. He had seen all the young men of pioneer days grow old. One after another of the neighbors of the seventies had moved away and long ago most of them had crossed the great divide on another pioneering adventure in quest of an abiding homestead in a heavenly country. For more than half a century he had felt the sting of winter's blizzards and had labored on undaunted in the grilling heat of summer. Again, well past eighty years of age, he waited at the close of a glorious June day at the same siding for the Pacific Express. His first-born child was coming home. And the same hands that drove the slow team through the April night so long ago now drove a motor car back to the homestead.

And on the morrow, a wonderful Sunday in midsummer, all the children came home. Not one was missing. Three of them are farmers, tillers of the soil, collaborating with God and his cosmic forces in giving men their daily bread. One operates a dairy. Among the other four there is a trained nurse, a physician, a merchant and a minister. And there were many grandchildren and great-grandchildren, even unto the fourth generation, who joined in the coronation services that day for the pioneer parents.

When all were seated at the great feast, mother and father at the head of the spacious board, and the children according to their age, the minister-son voiced the gratitude of the happy circle for all the tender mercies of the blessed years and concluded his grace with the petition that God who had always watched over them on land and sea might still keep the entire family until that other glorious day when they should come again from the East and from the West, from the North and from the South, to sit down together as an unbroken family in the Heavenly Father's house.

Reunion, delayed over twenty-nine years, might never come again in the old home on this earth. In the house and on the yard under the old trees where all had played as children, family friendships were deepened and old loyalties were renewed. During the afternoon the cameras kept clicking for twenty-three separate groupings.

The last hour of this wonderful day found the children grouped around the piano in the "front room," for an old-fashioned "sing." And what did they sing? There was a unanimous chorus: "Let us sing the old gospel hymns that mother used to sing." Books that for many years had been unused were opened to, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "Sweet Hour of Prayer," "I need Thee Every Hour," and to the father's lifelong favorite, "Nearer My God, to Thee." Two radiantly happy parents sat in their armchairs as the twilight deepened and heard again a chorus that for them had been stilled for long years.

A family reunion may be anything from a mere assemblage of persons to a holy fellowship of kindred life. It may be shot through with hate or aflame with affection. The objective may be gossip and gormandizing or it may be mutual edification in the finer things of life. Its interests may be superficial or they may spread over the decades of the past, and through the living youth project genuine values into generations yet unborn. The major note may be a reminiscent harking back to a dead past or it may be genuinely prophetic of values yet unrealized. Here was an ideal family reunion. And who can measure its meaning for good, this gathering of a large pioneer family in the old home where for more than half a century parental affection and fidelity have kept the altar-fires burning? For on the morrow when the last child had departed, each had received anew the parental kiss and benediction and with these the deepened consciousness that there is a spiritual and unseen inheritance more real and far dearer than silver and gold.

For memory was recalling the dear dead days of childhood when in this sacred place were learned the simple prayers of eventide at mother's knee. It was here that Christ was found as a personal Saviour and Lord and first halting confessions of discipleship made. Here forbearance and discipline were developed in the sharing of mutual woes and joys of youth. Here the strong helped the weak and each unconsciously bore the other's burdens, thus learning to fulfill the law of Christ. Here life's golden day had dawned, not in unreality or dream, but in the luminous atmosphere of the commonplace sanctified by sacrificial love about a common fireside and altar.

For the children that day of life was still at high noon. For the parents it was mellow eventide. For grandchild and great-grandchild the day was only faintly breaking. Yet each one from the youngest to the eldest gave something to this family atmosphere that for all the future years will make life sweeter and fuller and stronger for all. And each went away to his task leaving the pioneer parents alone again in the peace of the prairies. But in their dreaming as the swift seasons roll, there will be a fadeless picture of a glorious day in June when all the children came home again.

BOYS and Girls

Mi$$ B. Roo$ter's Million$

Mi$$ B. Roo$ter
Lived on a farm
And had
A very $imple life.
$o that when
Her Uncle $olomon
$aid: "Niece, what Would you do if you had
A million $?"
$he really could not
An$wer, off-hand,
The way
One could
If a$ked: "Do you
Like peppermint or wintergreen
Better?"
The poor girl looked Quite dazed,
And went out to $it
In the little green wood$
Near her farm.
The ant$ walked all over her,
The flie$ buzzed in her face,
The bee$ droned near by,
The cow$ moored,
The bird$ twittered,
Every one wondering
What in the world
Thi$ la$$ie would do
With a million $.

Finally $he got a Little picture in her
Mind$ eye: pile$ and pile$
Of $ilver $, and $he
Be$ide them, like Mi$$ Mida$.
Fir$ $he decided: "A home
In the city, with Car$ clattering cheerfully
By my door,
An auto of my very own,
A diamond ring,
A pound of chocolate candy
Every $ingle day!
A party once a week!
Movie$ often!
It will be lot$
Of fun. I'll Go to $ee one
Called 'Mi$$ Brew$ter's Million$, ' too."
$o far, $o good, but
A million wa$ not $ed up yet, of cour$e.
There would have to be
More thought, much
More. It wa$
Hard work, thinking . . .
Her head nodded
Thi$ way, that way—
The bee$ hummed, the flie$ buzzed,
The cow$ moored,
The bird$ twittered.
And $he, of cour$e,
Wa$ $ound a$leep.

In$ta$ntly a thou$and Children began

Plucking at her $leeve,
Frantically: "Li$ten to Me!" each one $aid.
And yet, how Could $he, with $o
Many all talking
At once? "Talk
One at a time," $he Ordered, and they began—
One explained that in
Her country there
Were no $chool$ for Girl$, and would Mi$$ B. Roo$ter plea$e
Build one: "For I
Live in a big city,
Yet not a $ingle
Girl ha$ ever gone
To $chool." "Of
Cour$e I will," $aid
The millionaire girl,
And found her money
Turning into $choolroom$,
$late$, textbook$, pen$,
Era$er$, ink bottle$,
Paper. It wa$
More fun, like a
Fairy waving a wand,
Making impo$$ible thing$
Po$$ible. And then to $ee
Two hundred Chine$e
Girl$ going to that $chool every day—oh,
Thrilling! Her girl$ in Her $chool! Marvelou$!

A brown-faced girl
From India wanted
A $chool, too, and a
Ho$pital, a Doctor, a
Nur$e, and pill$,
And a denti$t, an Orphan a$ylum for Child widow$, a $unday $chool—really
Her li$t wa$ $imply
Enormou$, but the new
Little millionaire began
Granting every little$t
Wi$h, a$ well a$ every Bigge$t one, until
That particular
Town in India
Wa$ a joy to $ee.
People traveled out of Their way to Look at the model town!
And every one loved
The generou$ giver $o
Much that
Mi$$ B. Roo$ter felt
All puffed up with Happy pride to Think $he could $o
Ea$ily do $uch lovely thing$.
And then all the Immigrant children in America had a need:

"Give u$ Chri$tian center$,"
They begged, "Swing$,
$hower-bath$, $ewing-machine$,
$tory-teller$, " etc., etc.
And $he did.
It wa$ marvelou$ what
A change
Came over tho$e
Neighborhood$. Even
The policemen noticed
It. $afe hone$t
Children make $afer $aner home$!

All thi$ time a Dozen other children
Were calling thi$,
Calling that, begging,
Pleading, urging.
And our little girl
Wa$ too di$gu$ted
For word$ to open
Her eye$ and find
Her uncle $olomon
$haking her: "Wake Up, you $leepy-head!"
He cried. "Here'$ the Ten dollar$ I
Always give you for your Birthday. What
Are you going to Do with it, anyhow?"
"I think I'll get $ome
New Shoe$, and a
Box of candy, and
Maybe a new hat
If there'$ any money
Left over." "Oh," $aid
He, "So you're ju$t
A Mi$$ Million Air$,
In$tead of a Mi$$
Millionaire. You're
Generou$ with a Vague thou$and
Dollar$, but $tingy
With the definite
Thou$and pennie$
Which equal$ ten $!"
You $hould have $een
That girl'$ face: "Oh me,
Oh my!" $he $aid, "what
A fake I am! I wa$
Ju$t putting on air$—
A million air$—wa$'n't
I? For if I can't $pend
Ten dollar$ un$elfi$hly
May be I $houldn't
$pend a million $
Any better!" "Exactly!"
Nodded her uncle,
Quoting Cor. 8:12, "For
If there be fir$
A willing mind, it is Accepted according to What a man hath,
And not according
To what he hath Not!"

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for Aug. 22

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

Beginning with "The Characteristics of American Christianity" on page 464 read on through to page 467 of "A Short History of the Christian Church," by Moncrief.

To know more about what Baptists are doing in the world today, send to the literature department of the Board of Missionary Cooperation (New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles) for a copy of "The Quiz Book" which is free. This gives briefly and interestingly something about the work of all Baptist societies.

In presenting this lesson, perhaps you could have a "Baptist World Alliance" with several of your group members as representatives of groups being reached by Baptists today. They might tell of the work being done in their section of the world, giving this as a sort of a report to a convention.

After all have told their stories, the president of the Baptist World Alliance (the leader) may sum this all up by telling that some of the principles which in former years Baptists alone stood for, are now a part of the principles of our nation; for example, the separation of church and state. This may show the young people that although what is now being done may seem trite and uninteresting, in future years it will be "adventure" to those who study. Baptists always stand for "adventure."

The "Baby" Assembly

By ALICE ANDERSON

The first Connecticut Baptist assembly was launched at the Connecticut Agricultural college in Storrs. Because it was the baby assembly of the country and every one is interested in helping a baby, the faculty was the finest procurable.

The classes were a source of inspiration and help to the delegates. Many are returning home with a broader vision of meeting the needs of the church at home and abroad.

The delegates, numbering between fifty and sixty, represented almost every section of the state. Due to the comparatively small number attending, acquaintances were made rapidly and a beautiful feeling of friendship between both faculty and students existed at the close of the assembly.

The group was divided into two sections, the Lopi's (meaning lots of pep inside) and the Sacagaweans (meaning health, love and work). There was considerable friendly rivalry between these two in sports and stunts.

Afternoons were spent in supervised recreation. A swimming pool and gymnasium equipment in the armory were a great source of pleasure. A baseball team, of both boys and girls, was formed and several games were played.

Many of the evenings were given over to stunts and games. A faculty take-off was greatly enjoyed by students and teachers. It revealed considerable talent on the part of some of the young people. An impromptu play by the faculty caused much merriment.

One afternoon one of the Connecticut Agricultural college men conducted a tour through the barns and many were ready to take a diploma in "cowology" at the close of the trip. It was also interesting to see the hens that are in the national egg-laying contest. The spry and nimble climbed a high tower which is a fire lookout. From there they could see the surrounding country of forest-clad hills for miles.

The vesper services held every evening on a hillside of beautiful pine trees, were some of the high spots of the assembly. The inspiration received through these services and chapel hour in the morning will mean much to the delegates for many years. One of the speakers at vespers inspired a delegate to write the following poem:

"A wall of pine trees and the quiet lake beyond,
A group of worshipers held in fellowship's bond,
A hymn of praise rising upward, and then,
Incense of prayer reaching to heav'n.

An earnest, searching voice revealing a full heart,
And when the time comes for the assembly to part,
There is a reluctance to leave, for there
Is truly a holy place of prayer."

Life work day was conducted by Doctor Pitt, president of the Connecticut State Convention. It was an impressive day and the presence of the Father was felt by every one. Four of the young people signed the cards for life service.

The success of the assembly is largely due to the untiring efforts of Rev. O. P.

Campbell, director of religious education for Connecticut. A wonderful spirit of cooperation among all the delegates was developed under his leadership.

With the momentum gained at this baby assembly, the coming ones will be bound to increase in both numbers and spiritual significance.

Bridgeport, Conn.

Young People's Night

The First church of Springfield, Mo., is not satisfied with giving its young people a day once a year or so. It goes still farther and gives the young people an evening once a month—the first Sunday of each month. The pastor preaches a special sermon for the young people. There is special music by the young people. After the evening service all the young people stay and have a "get acquainted" meeting when young people new to the community and church are welcomed and introduced to the others. Light refreshments make the evening a little more pleasant and all go away cheered.

Many pastors wonder why young people do not stay to church on Sunday evenings. Perhaps a "special night" for them every once in a while would create an interest on their part in the Sunday evening meetings and make them want to stay oftener. Besides, the "get acquainted" meeting after the church service is an ideal way to make the young people feel at home. At the services there are young people who might not be present at social occasions but who will stay after the services for a short social time. Too, instead of having the usual number of socials for the young people, there are just twelve more than usual, and each one strengthens the bond of unity and good will among them. It would probably pay all churches to do something like this. It has paid First church: it has six B. Y. P. U's.

The B. Y. P. U. A. at its last convention in Los Angeles, passed resolutions urging the closing on Sunday of the commercial concessions at the sesquicentennial exposition; for the strict enforcement of the prohibition law, and no modifications; called for the elimination from denominational papers of all jokes about law enforcement and race prejudice; for Near East Relief and the observance of Golden Rule Sunday; endorsing and subscribing to the five points of Doctor Brougher's keynote address at Washington; and expressing appreciation to many persons and agencies that had assisted in making a success of the Los Angeles meeting.

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

A NOVEL POSTER

The above chart, based on statistics furnished by the stewardship department, appeared in the annual report of the Board of Missionary Cooperation for 1925-26, and we have just heard of a church in Wyoming, Ohio, which is planning to adapt the idea in an interesting way.

This church is planning to cut from magazines and paste on the poster as many faces of men, women, and children as there are members of the Wyoming church (about 200), and also a number of faces to represent the people in the groups contributing to current expenses and missions. As new givers are added to each of these last two groups, they will paste additional faces on the poster until the second and third groups are equal in size to the first—every member contributing to both funds.

This church also uses a stairway poster which it made. The steps are covered with black gummed Dennison paper each month, showing the proportion of money turned in per month. The amount received is placed at the side, showing how the church is climbing.

MORE FOR OTHERS

—MORE FOR SELVES

"Seek ye first those things which are first and the rest shall be added unto you" is an admonition and a promise which is not always taken as seriously as it might be. Here is an instance which seems to bear it out.

A layman in Wheeling, W. Va., who is deeply interested in the work of his church, writes to Doctor Bowler, "Another year we expect to do more for missions than we did this last year. We have a very heavy debt, but personally we have found that the more we give to missions, the more we have for local work."

A THRIVING NEW CHURCH

The McCook church in Nebraska has just voted to come to self-support, thus pleasing to the Nebraska Baptist Convention the sum of $30 a month.

It has just taken its every-member canvass and finds that it can pledge about $600 to missions—a good sized benevolence budget for a church which is standing on its own feet for the first time. The pastor, Rev. C. M. Foreman, writes the state office, "The work is going nicely. We have recently received new members, and others are to be received soon."

"A TWELFTH ON TIME EVERY TIME"

The First church in Seattle, Wash., has adopted a missionary budget of $15,000 for the ensuing year, and the pastor, Rev. Ambrose M. Bailey, writes that it is paying this sum in monthly installments.

DURING THE SUMMER MONTHS

The treasurer of a local church told the field secretary for Massachusetts that he did not make a remittance for a certain month because he had only $25 to send. The field secretary comments in the state bulletin:

"If one multiplied $25 by one hundred churches or by a thousand, it does not take the wisdom of a Solomon, nor the mathematical insight of a public accountant to see how even small amounts held back by a large number of churches add up to large figures. This year we want Massachusetts to have a clean slate so far as our responsibility is concerned for money invested in interest charges.

"We deeply appreciate the hearty co-operation that an increasing number of churches are giving us in this matter of monthly payments. We are trying to encourage others to follow their good example. We also heartily commend to our Massachusetts churches the plan of an increasing number of churches in the Northern Baptist Convention of voting to send in one-twelfth of the missionary objective every month and of borrowing enough to make up that one-twelfth from the bank, if the full amount is not at hand during the summer months."

USING THE QUIZ BOOK

The Park Memorial church of Springfield, Mass., has about twenty questions on missionary subjects scattered throughout a recent issue of the church calendar. There is a note which says: "The questions appearing in this calendar are taken at random from a series of questions and answers published in the Quiz Book. Ask the missionary committee for a copy or consult your own copy of Missions for June."

PASTOR'S DRAMA

SHOWN AT CONVENTION

One of the interesting features of the Washington Convention was the presentation of a drama, "The High Calling," on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board. The author of the play is Rev. Clarence M. Gallup, pastor of the Central church in Providence, R. I.

The plot deals with the rise of Judson Carey to high position in the church and on the missionary field, his subsequent illness, return home, acceptance of a small country parish at a pittance and final rescue from poverty and despair by the timely aid of the M. and M. Board.

Doctor Gallup has served on the last-mentioned board for several years, and on the successful presentation of his pageant "Conscience-Freedom" last year at the Rhode Island centenary, he was asked to write a dramatic theme that would graphically depict the varying fortunes in the life of a minister, and the need of protection for clergymen and their families adequate to their renunciation.

WOMEN WILL PUSH MONTHLY PLAN

Miss Ruth Shipley, president of the east central district of the Woman's Foreign and Woman's Home Mission Society, writes to Doctor Bowler:

"The convention was so up-lifting in so many ways that I felt strongly the spirit of rededication to our denominational work. I have reported the convention locally several times and in our Miami association and expect to be able to 'hand out' ideas, gained there from time to time all through the year.

"As president of the east central district, may I say that I believe that the women will do their utmost this year to help cultivate the habit of forwarding the quota monthly. We are going to stress it continually."

Among Ourselves

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

Great Trio at Colby

A NOTABLE feature of the commencement at Colby college was that the chief parts on the program were taken by three of Colby's distinguished graduates, who are also graduates of Newton: Drs. Woodman Bradbury, '91, Everett C. Herrick, '01, and Arthur W. Cleaves, '01.

Doctor Bradbury gave the baccalaureate sermon from the text, "Unto a full grown man," Eph. 4:13. He said that the text announces a goal. It points to a process that brings self-realization, and consummates personality. It holds powerful instincts under control, and becomes a force for character. The college is for the disclosure of moral ideals for definite realization, while education is to build given material into the best manhood possible. The speaker raised the question—a most vital one—"Is the college the friend and aider of those who would live of the spirit, or is it procuress to the lords of hell?" For an answer to such a question we must look outside of the class-room, closely scan college sport, take in the whole college life, so that we may know how much the student is helped to a full grown manhood by his environment. Meanwhile his relation to money tests him, to learning, to God. Happy is he if he yields to the master attraction, the only full grown man—Christ Jesus!

Colby has a unique annual service in honor of the first graduate of the college, George Dana Boardman the missionary. Dr. Everett C. Herrick of Fall River was the orator, and brought a message close-fitted to the social and academic present. Evidently he had in mind the "Youth Movement," and some other dreaded radicalisms. He asked, "Is this a free country," and bluntly answered, "It is not!" When one defines liberty, he limits it, and when he limits it, he destroys it. The effort to define liberty, like that to define theology, has brought endless suffering to the race. Elijah P. Lovejoy, the centennial of whose graduation we observe this year, died a martyr for the freedom of the press. Did Lovejoy die in order to make possible William Randolph Hearst? The "Immortal Declaration" that we have been celebrating, might well have called liberty, like happiness, a pursuit. It is true of it as Jesus said of life, "He that loses it shall find it." A constitution limits the liberty of the individual. Ours always has done so; but thousands never realized it until they felt the pinch of the eighteenth amendment.

We have been taught that the noblest thing in the world is the struggle for liberty; but there is a nobler, the voluntary surrender of liberty for a greater and higher good. In our country, we are suffering from two things, the fear of liberty on the one hand, and the abuse of it on the other. We suffer from the abuse of it because we are afraid. We forget that it was the radicalism of the colonies that gave us our independence, and put our starry flag in the sky of the nations. The martyrs of human freedom did not set forever freedom's boundaries, but they summon us to its everlasting quest. In this, we surrender to some transcendent cause which brings to us the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

Dr. Arthur W. Cleaves of the First church, Providence, gave the commencement oration, on "The Challenging Spirit of the Fathers."

The choicest products of the college are the men who dare to think and are worthy to lead. Life is like a great river flowing through the centuries—the drops distinct, the river one, the tributaries streaming in from many sources. So all the past has to give flows through us. It behooves us carefully to look over our forbears, to know what manner of people they were, and what they left us. If college men really serve the republic, they will be bristling moderns, keeping their sanity and balance by having in full view the men and the institutions they inherit. Modesty and progressiveness go hand in hand.

For some time the Puritan has been coming back. He is full of sharp differences, but is ready to stake his life for his ideals. Mere dilettanteism can not follow him, only the men who know how to take all that is mighty in the past, and make the present glorious with it. The Puritan had self-respect, independence, freedom, and faith. He was a non-conformist in principle, and a democrat in practice. He stood upon his own feet, and did his own thinking—together too dangerous a business for timid men, but the strong soul who dares it becomes the people's benefactor. He knows no freedom but freedom under law, which saves him from an exaggerated "personal liberty," from the despotism of the crowd as in Russia, and the despotism of the individual as in Italy.

Youth and Freedom

Too familiar nowadays is our "Youth Movement" for freedom, with its wide open sex discussion, and its riot either of dress or its abbreviation. Yet signs already appear that youth itself suspects that unbridled conduct is not liberty, nor anarchism the free mind. The men who founded Colby college were in the direct line of a great tradition that was releasing mighty forces. True, their faith was more real than some of their dogma, but their consciences kept them awake and armed them to subdue a wilderness and lay the solid foundations of our institutions for us. Ours is the task of subduing our own riotous selves, and leading into a great new birth of freedom, as we "unite the richness of the past with the potencies of the present."

Had the three distinguished graduates planned their messages beforehand, they could not have united better in a plea for a sound and well conducted life. When you first build and direct a man, set him free by the truth, then connect him with "the voice behind him" as well as the opportunity before him, you have made a perfect plan of life for a graduate.

Doctorates from Maine

This year Colby had an approving kiss for one of her own sons—Rev. George Merriam, twenty-two years pastor at Skowhegan, Me., class 1879. He is younger brother of Dr. E. F. Merriam, the grand old man so well known to all our Baptist family. Pastor Merriam of Skowhegan has long been a sort of institution in the Pine Tree state, and his brethren rejoice. Two Colby doctors in a family are better than one when both are ministers.

Bates college has been doing a pleasant thing to Rev. Samuel Macauley Lindsay of Brookline. His D.D. is so well merited an honor, and he such a downright good fellow, that both cause general hilarity. Besides "Sammy" is also a sort of institution in greater Boston.

From a Baptist Scientist

Prof. Kirtley S. Mather of Harvard, said a thing in his anniversary address in Boston that helps us to soundness and coolness as controversy and summer weather tend to heat us. "To solve the problems of life we must summon all the resources at our command," he declared. "There is no need to choose between science and religion; we must have more of both, not less of either. We will never solve those problems until we abandon our reverence for the authority of words, and seek truth where alone it may be found—in facts and experience." How much did Jesus mean when he said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life?" Did he mean only as much, or vastly more, than we have been assuming?

Some Changes

The resignation of Dr. M. D. Wolfe from the North Avenue church, Cambridge, after seven years of effective service, brings to mind the best years of that noble church. That was during the many years of the familiar identity, "North Cambridge and Doctor Apsey!" In the marked changes that have swept ough the city, that section is now er-churched, and the competition for gregations too strenuous. Pastor olfe has had a sturdy and devoted eer, keeping the forces well in hand, wisely wielding them.

from First church, Chelsea, Pastor G. Dakin goes to Sanford, Me., where good church awaits and invites his endeavors. He has been but a year Chelsea, but for an average evangelical ministry that is a difficult field. The of alien populations is almost as astating as the flames of the great that destroyed dear old Doctor reman's church, and home, and ser-

Connecticut Letter

BY HORACE B. SLOAT
Commencement at Suffield

FIRTY boys and girls were given diplomas at the ninety-third anniversary of Suffield school, June 15. The commencement sermon was preached by James Gordon Gilkey, of Springfield, June 13. Mr. Howard F. Pease of field and Dr. David A. Pitt, of North, were elected to fill the vacancies the board of trustees. At the graduating exercises on Tuesday morning, Dr. Lawrence A. Barbour, president of Chester Theological seminary, spoke the importance of unconscious influence. Rev. H. B. Sloat, on behalf of board of trustees, presented the es and diplomas to the members of graduating class.

Summer Assembly

he first summer assembly for Connecticut was held at Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, July 7-18. This assembly is regarded as an auxiliary to Ocean Park School of Methods. The general officers were: Dr. David A. Pitt, president; Rev. O. P. Campbell, dean; Miss Bernice P. Peabody, registrar and Miss H. B. Sloat, girls' counselor.

he faculty included: Dr. Milton G. ns, president Crozer seminary, Chester, Pa.; Dr. George A. Huntley, missionary, Shanghai, China; Dr. Edward C. Kunkle, Metropolitan Board of Christian Cooperation, New York City; Miss Priscilla H. Fowle, Newton Theological institution, Newton Center, Mass.; Miss Jennie M. Reed, education director, First church, Waterbury; Dr. Mitchell Rank, editor periodicals, Rev. Seldon L. Perets, leadership training, Miss A. M. Meyers, editor periodicals, and Miss Elizabeth M. Finn, young people's specialist, of the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Rev. O. P. Campbell, religious education secretary at state convention; Rev. Howard B. person, Yale university, New Haven; Mr. Albert P. Briggs, music director, Cambridge, Mass., and Mrs. Elbert E. ns, pianist, of Hartford.

Special speakers were: Revs. Chas. H. nsath, First church, Bridgeport; Mr. W. Brush, First church, New Haven; Edwin E. Sundt, Federated churches, Willington; Prof. A. J. ndage, state club leader, Storrs; Rev. L. Carr, Board of Education, New York City, Revs. George R. ns, Groton Heights church, Groton;

D. P. Gaines, First church, Waterbury; Manford W. Schuh, Memorial church, Hartford; J. C. Hendrickson, First church, Stamford and Rev. Ellis Gilbert, First church, West Hartford.

News Notes

Rev. George W. Gilbert, a student at Yale, began his pastorate at Niantic, June 20. He and his family are occupying the parsonage.

First church, Meriden, has granted the pastor, Rev. B. N. Timbie, a year's leave of absence, with salary, beginning Sept. 1. Mr. and Mrs. Timbie are making plans for a tour of Europe, Egypt and the Holy Land. Mr. Timbie, who has been pastor in Meriden since 1912, is the president of the Connecticut Baptist education society and chairman of the committee on new Americans of the convention board of managers.

Central church, Norwich, has received a conditional gift of $25,000 for the purpose of purchasing a property adjoining the present church building to be used for the extension of the work of the church. This much needed addition will greatly enlarge the equipment of this church and facilitate the work which is strongly organized under the leadership of Dr. D. A. Pitt.

The Poquonoc Bridge church, under the leadership of Rev. H. B. Hutchins, has received twenty-five members the past year, fifteen by baptism and ten by letter. The outlook on this field is encouraging.

The annual meeting of the South Norwalk church was held June 3. This church, under the leadership of Rev. L. T. Mallery, has taken on new life. During the past year twenty-six have been received by baptism and twelve by letter and experience. The Bible school has made a gain in its membership of 25 per cent. The church building has been greatly improved by having the interior redecorated and a new lighting system installed and the approach to the church changed to a brick structure. The church showed appreciation of the pastor's services by increasing his salary $200.

The Central church, Hartford, has called to the assistant pastorate Rev. Arthur F. McKenney, who recently graduated from the Yale Divinity school. Mr. McKenney began his work July 1.

This is the time for vacation schools throughout the state and Baptist churches will set up during the season some thirty of these schools.

The sixth annual state rally and missionary house party of the Connecticut world-wide guild girls will be held at the Connecticut Agricultural college, at Storrs, Sept. 10-12.

The eighty-ninth annual session of the Asford Sunday-school Convention was held with the South Woodstock church June 30. Devotions were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. A. Calhoun and Rev. F. W. Tholen, Stafford. Addresses were delivered by Rev. H. E. Hodges, Putnam and Rev. W. D. Hetherington, East Killingly. Rev. O. P. Campbell, director of religious education, represented the state convention. The girls' rally was led by Rev. C. J. Armstrong, Danielson. The boys' rally was led by Rev. E. E. Sundt, Willington. Rev. D. W. Lovett, Willimantic, spoke at the afternoon session. Officers elected were, president, H. B. Buell, Eastford; vice-president, Rev. H. A. Calhoun; secretary-treasurer, Claude V. Moran, East Killingly.

E. M. Whidden, a Yale divinity student, was ordained in the Montowese church on July 1; moderator of council, Rev. G. H. Gardner, Plantsville; clerk, Rev. H. C. Speed, Middletown. Dr. H. P. Whidden, chancellor of McMaster university, Toronto, Canada, father of the candidate, preached the sermon. The ordaining prayer was by Rev. G. C. Laudenslager, Southington; welcome to the ministry, Rev. Harold Camp, New Haven; charge to the candidate, Rev. C. H. Heimsath, Bridgeport; charge to church, Rev. E. E. Gates, secretary of the state convention.

Montana News and Notes

ROBERT W. SHAW
The Assembly

THE major interest of Montana Baptists is the assembly to be held in the Absarokee mountains, south of Livingston. Those who have looked upon these grounds pronounce them among the finest in the whole country for assembly purposes. This year the Congregationalists are occupying the grounds, and perhaps in another year or so other groups will be housed there for their summer conferences.

This is the second year that the Baptists have used this spot, and so tense is the interest that it is anticipated that the attendance will exceed any other assembly in the history of Montana Baptists. The advance registrations indicate an unusual interest. Lewistown has fifteen advance registrations, the largest so far recorded. Bozeman will have eight and perhaps more.

The faculty will include Dr. W. E. Chalmers, of Philadelphia; Rev. E. Lagerstrom, of Minneapolis; Dr. A. M. Petty, of Oakland, Calif.; Miss Genevieve Chapin, of Fort Scott, Kan.; Rev. Lynn Hattersley, of Monrovia, Calif.; Robert W. Shaw, E. Clutterbuck and Roy E. Reece, and other pastors in Montana.

News Notes

Dr. Henry Van Engelen, pastor at Missoula, has been visiting some of the churches and telling the people of the Washington Convention.

Rev. Robert W. Shaw, of Bozeman, was the special speaker at the Memorial day services in his city. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war.

Dr. E. R. Curry, who took a brief vacation following the Northern Baptist Convention, and attended the commencement exercises at Dennison where his son Robert was graduated, has been busy since his return, getting pastors located in the mission churches. Most of the fields now have men.

Judge W. R. C. Stewart, of Bozeman, passed away July 5. His death was sudden, due to heart trouble. Not only was Judge Stewart actively interested in his church, where for many years he had served as a member of the board of trustees, but his legal services were freely given to the Montana convention, and his advice and counsel have helped in many a difficult situation. His funeral was conducted by Dr. E. R. Curry, of the convention, assisted by the pastor, Robert W. Shaw. Many out of town people attended what is said to have been one of the most largely attended funerals ever held in Bozeman.

The Bozeman B. Y. P. U. sent its president, Miss Helen Crozier, as a delegate to the convention at Los Angeles. This organization is planning some large things for its church and society this year.

Montana is thronged with visitors this summer. The fine summer climate, and the attractive parks, as well as the many mountains with their beautiful scenery, streams and canyons, make this state one of the most alluring for summer outings. Our Baptist people touring the state are invited and urged to make themselves known if they spend Sunday in a place where there is a Baptist church.

The Norwegian Baptist Conference

By A. M. MEHUS

THE Norwegian Baptist Conference of America convened for its biannual meeting, June 17-20, at the Baptist church of Park River, N. D., Rev. R. J. Jensen, pastor. Delegates and visitors from many of the northern states and Canada were in attendance. A fine fraternal spirit marked every session. As usual the evening sessions were devoted to evangelistic services, and there was rejoicing in the fact that a number of conversions occurred at these services.

Rev. Ole Larson of Minneapolis, Minn., who for nearly two years has served the conference as its president, preached the opening sermon. Missionary addresses by Miss Hattie V. Petheram of Burma, Rev. Coe Hayne of New York, Rev. L. J. Anderson of Rio, Wis., and others, revealed glimpses of kingdom progress and prospects on the harvest fields both at home and abroad. Reports submitted by the various committees as well as by the brethren who have served the conference in Canada and the states furnished proof of faithful labor with gratifying results.

On Saturday forenoon, June 19, a memorial service was held in honor of Dr. Henrik Gundersen, the late dean of the Norwegian department of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary. Rev. C. W. Finwall of Fargo, N. D., delivered the memorial address. On recommendation of the committee on education the conference voted to place a suitable mark on Doctor Gundersen's grave in Morgan Park, Chicago, the money for this purpose to be raised by general subscriptions from churches and individuals wishing to participate in this tribute to Doctor Gundersen's memory. Unanimous satisfaction was expressed when information came to the conference that Rev. P. Stiansen of Norway had accepted the call to become Doctor Gundersen's successor and would take up his new work at the opening of the school year next September.

The conference reelected Rev. Ole Larson as its president and Rev. T. Knudsen of La Crosse, Wis., as corresponding secretary and treasurer. Rev. P. Lorentzen of Chicago was elected vice-president and Miss Ida Knudsen of Brooklyn, N. Y., recording secretary. Rev. O. Breiding continues his service as general missionary.

Resolutions adopted by the conference expressed appreciation to the Park River church, its genial pastor and kind friends, for the splendid entertainment provided; voiced its grateful approval of the satisfactory cooperation obtaining with the Northern Baptist Convention and the Baptist Union of Western Canada; recognized with thankfulness to God the long and fruitful service of Doctor H. Gundersen in the training of young men to the gospel ministry; urged continued support of the theological school under its new dean as well as of the official conference paper the Missionary, and also recorded its disfavor of any weakening modification of the Volstead act.

Kalamazoo College Commencement

AT the ninetieth commencement of Kalamazoo college the Bachelor of Arts degree was conferred upon sixty graduates, two received the Master's degree, and honorary degrees were awarded to Rev. James B. Fox, '06, Los Angeles, D.D.; Rev. Daniel C. Holtom; '07, Tokio, Japan, D.D.; and Mr. John E. Walker, '07, Washington, D. C., LL.D.

The trustees at their annual meeting adopted this plan as submitted by President Hoben for the centennial objectives:

1. Library and liberal arts building costing $250,000; 2. improvement of campus and athletic field, for 1926, $10,000; 3. enlarged gymnasium, proposed for 1926, $15,000; 4. four faculty homes on campus, adopted for 1926, $50,000; 5. science hall, adopted for 1927, near entrance, $150,000; 6. college chapel, center of upper campus, for 1928, $100,000; 7. men's dormitory and commons, for 1929, $150,000; 8. addition to Mary Trowbridge house, for 1929, $50,000; 9. open air amphitheatre, near Monroe street, 1930, $15,000; 10. addition to student aid fund, 1930, $100,000; 11. addition to general endowment, for 1931, 1932, $500,000. Projected sums total, for seven years, $1,390,000.

Centennial year, 1933, will need to share honors with the city of Chicago. The charter granted to Kalamazoo college bears the governor's signature under date of Apr. 22, 1833. Since Kalamazoo college is the oldest institution for higher learning in Michigan the centennial will in a way also be a celebration for the state and for the cause of education in the middle west.

Ground is to be broken this summer for the four faculty houses. These houses are intended to form the nucleus of a group for promoting informal education. The trustees adopted the Robinson plan for the campus development prepared by Miss Florence B. Robinson former student and now a landscape architect of Detroit. For beautifying the campus the class of 1926 has presented to the college the sum of $170 for evergreens and shrubs, while the alumni voted the sum of $50 for evergreens around Mary Trowbridge house.

The membership of the board of trustees has been strengthened by the addition of four prominent business and professional men. Raymond H. Smith, of Detroit, class of 1923, succeeds his father the late Walter W. Smith who was a valued member of the board for four teen years. Other members appointed to the board are: Louis W. Sutherland Kalamazoo, president of the Sutherland Paper Company; Frank Wallace, Detroit added to the board and appointed to the finance committee; Rev. Alfred W. Wishart, pastor of the Fountain Street church, Grand Rapids, for the past twenty years.

The Praeger greenhouse has been completed and equipped with 120 varieties of plants through the generosity of the University of Michigan, and with specimens from Doctor Praeger's gardens.

The trustees recommended that plan be projected for a Kalamazoo college day in the Baptist churches of Michigan.

The enterprises of the trustees are ably supported by the women's council. This auxiliary organization held two sessions during commencement week. A program was adopted in support of the educational work for women, especially dealing with matters of health and physical education, proposing to support the Gaynor club and its trips, with the appointment of a committee to secure a student-aid fund for women, in line with the tenth centennial proposal.

The expansion of the faculty allows a fine variety of courses to be offered. More than seventy elective courses at present are scheduled. Thus the two up per years are enriched and more and more the college is appealing to upper class students. The class that was graduated this year was the largest senior class in the history of Kalamazoo college.

West China Letter

By JOE TAYLOR

THE most ghastly and vicious murder in the annals of Chengtu has rudely awakened the foreigners in this city to the fact that one is not altogether safe in the midst of certain surroundings. But Chengtu is a fine city and its citizens as a whole, are a fine set of people. What I am about to tell happened Monday, June 7, in broad daylight on a busy street in the capital of the province of Szechuan.

About 11 a. m. on Monday, Mrs. W. I. Sibley, wife of the Rev. W. E. Sibley, of the United Church of Canada mission who is stationed in Junghsien in the province, said to her hostess that she thought she would like to take a stroll before dinner and asked her to accompany her. Her hostess was detained because one of her children was unwilling take some medicine, so she told Mrs. Sibley not to wait but to go on ahead. She did this and took a street leading toward the center of the city. When she reached the junction of this street and another running at right angles to it, a man rushed out of an alley and slashed her with a headsman's knife. He struck her across the face and she screamed and fell to the ground. With another blow, he severed her head from her body, picked it up, carried it a short distance and threw it into a public urinal. The police ran after the fellow who started off at full speed brandishing his bloody weapon. The police were alarmed so did not attempt to grab him, but some soldiers fired, and wounded him. He lived until about 5 p. m., giving the chief of police an opportunity to question him.

That is a gruesome tale and is stripped of most of its gruesome details, but what follows is just as heart-sickening. While the police were chasing the murderer and before any foreigner could get to the headless body of Mrs. Sibley, some ghouls stole the shoes, rings and necklace from the corpse. This makes reading but is actually what took place.

At an inquiry held by the British consul-general, some facts were elicited to help to explain the case. Most people, Chinese and foreigners alike, when they first heard of the murder, died at once that it was the act of an insane person. We wanted to believe that and rather insisted on it as the best explanation of the deed. The chief of police who examined the murderer before he died said that the man told him that he lived at a city called Peng Shan, about two days' journey from Chengtu; that the city god of that place had commissioned him to kill people, so he came to Chengtu. Just where he got the headsman's sword is not clear, but inquiries are being made. This testimony helped us to believe the fellow insane, even while the inquiry was being held, word was brought to the room that another foreigner had been attacked. This startled the crowd and the room was soon deserted, leaving the consul-general and the vice-consul in charge. This is the story of the second attack:

Miss Grace Manly of the American Methodist Woman's Board had been to the hospital of the Canadian Woman's Board to visit a sick Chinese friend. She had come out of the hospital and had gotten into a ricksha when a man grabbed her by the throat and dragged her out of the vehicle. She got away from him and back into the ricksha only to be dragged out again. Her coolie who was accompanying her fought the man and was bitten on the leg. Miss Manly fought free and some one arrested the man and he was taken to the police station. He is reported to have said that it was unfortunate that he did not have a knife that day. Miss Manly was slashed about the neck and face and the upper part of her garments were torn.

This second attack only the day after the dastardly killing of Mrs. Sibley made us think fast. It did not seem possible that two madmen could be at large in the same part of the city; nor did the second assailant appear to be a country yokel like the first. After undergoing the "third degree" as it is administered in China, this man confessed that he is a member of the Hung Den Jiao—Red Lantern society. He told of a nest of fellow members at a village about seven miles distant from the east gate of Chengtu, and the report has come that twenty of them have been rounded up by the police or soldiers. This seems to point to a recrudescence of Boxerism. The murderer of Mrs. Sibley had some indications on his person of being a Boxer, and it is well known that from time to time, societies having some other name spring up which are in nearly all essentials the same as the Boxers. The mystery of where the murderer got that headsman's sword needs to be cleared up. I do not, therefore, venture to give all the rumors that have gathered about this sad case. One needs to withhold judgment until a clearer case is made out.

A revulsion of feeling towards the foreigners on the part of the best element in Chengtu has taken place. Merchants, students, gentry and officials are horrified at this deed. It is especially offensive to the Chinese because the murderer decapitated his victim. It is thought to be the depths of degradation for one to appear headless in the next world, and this is why strangling is considered more merciful than decapitation. The students especially are doing all they can to show friendliness.

Mr. and Mrs. Sibley came to China twenty years ago, and their one aim has been to help and to serve. The funeral was held at the little foreign burying ground south of the university campus. When the coffin had been lowered into the ground and the benediction pronounced, the senior students of the Canadian school for missionaries' children sang:

"Peace, perfect peace, death shadowing us and ours;

Jesus has conquered death and all its powers."

Chengtu, June 10.

Adrian Arthur Holmes

By J. MAURICE HUPP

The efficient and much loved pastor of the First church, Bismarck, N. D., Rev. Adrian Arthur Holmes, who died at Mounds Park sanatorium, St. Paul, Minn., May 29, 1926, was beloved by his brother ministers and the churches he served.

At the age of nineteen he was converted at Plainfield, Iowa, under the ministry of Rev. A. J. Sutton who was at that time pastor of the Plainfield church. His first pastorate was at Estherville, Iowa, where he was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Briggs. From Estherville he went to Corwith, Iowa, where he was ordained July 16, 1902.

From Corwith he went to Chicago, attending the Moody Bible institute, and later he became the superintendent of Beulah home and maternity hospital.

Following this he accepted the pastorate at Audubon, Iowa, and later held pastorates at Sumner and McCook, Neb.; Corning and Modesto, Calif., and Medford, Ore. He also served as state evangelist in California, Florida and South Dakota.

At the time of his death he was serving as pastor at Bismarck, N. D. During this brief pastorate of more than a year there were about seventy additions to the church. His converts numbered over 8000 during the years of his ministry. Three sisters and one brother survive him: W. K. Holmes of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Stella Fox, Kent, Wash.; Mrs. Veleada Walrath, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Mrs. Iva Sherwood, Nebraska City, Neb.

Funeral services were held at his birthplace, Plainfield, Iowa, June 2. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Carlson officiated, assisted by Rev. W. A. Simmons of the Waverly church, and Rev. Beldon of the Horton church.

Rev. Mr. Holmes had been chosen to deliver the annual sermon at the North Dakota Association held with the First church of Jamestown, N. D., June 29-30. Dr. F. E. Stockton, convention secretary and Rev. J. Maurice Hupp, pastor of the entertaining church, participated in a memorial service held during the association.

Obituary

After a long illness Mrs. William E. Braisted, wife of W. E. Braisted, of Red Bank, N. J., passed to her reward Thursday morning, July 1. Mrs. Braisted was born in Alba, Pa., a daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Porter. Her marriage to Doctor Braisted twenty-three years ago was blessed by four children, three of whom are living. Doctor and Mrs. Braisted came to Red Bank eight years ago from Oneida, N. Y.

Funeral services were held in the Red Bank church July 4, in charge of Rev. Charles E. Goodall, secretary of the New Jersey Baptist Convention, assisted by Rev. Marshall Sewell, pastor at Lakewood, and Rev. W. Rolland Raver, of the First Methodist church.

The many friends of Rev. Arthur P. Wedge were saddened by his sudden death from heart disease, at the home of his daughter in Jamaica Plain, Mass., May 24. He was born in Hintington, Conn., 1866. He was licensed to preach by the First church, Everett, Mass., and was ordained as a Baptist minister at Paris, Me., 1889. His first pastorate was here. He also served as pastor at Rockville, Conn., Carew Street church, Springfield, Mass., and Worthen Street, Lowell, Mass. In 1912 he was appointed field secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians and others of North America. In this missionary field he was singularly successful, and here he continued to work with the exception of one year when he served as pastor of the Trenton Street church, East Boston.

Mr. Wedge was a successful and sympathetic pastor. He built for the kingdom of God, and saved not himself in the service. The funeral was held in the First church of Jamaica Plain, in charge of Rev. F. B. Heath, pastor. Rev. Forrester Macdonald, a long-time friend of Mr. Wedge, brought a tribute of love in which he expressed the feelings of many other ministers who had known him. Dr. Charles E. Park, secretary of the S. P. G., contributed a testimony to the devotion, wisdom and growing success of Mr. Wedge's work among the Indians. He was greatly loved by them, and each year his influence widened and deepened.

A faithful Christian, a devoted pastor, a preacher of the word of life, a true missionary of the cross, a loving husband and father, a sincere friend, has heard the call to come up higher, and has entered upon the joy of his Lord.

Mr. Wedge leaves behind him his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Ruth W. Blaisdell, of Jamaica Plain, and a granddaughter, who cherish a rich memory of their loved one.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You) broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago.

"Good evening friends. Allow us to introduce the speaker of the evening, Dr. William T. Dorward, of Milwaukee, Wis., ad interim pastor of Calvary church, Minneapolis, Minn. Doctor Dorward speaking:

"Rain had fallen in Minneapolis nearly all day. The weather had its effect on the mind of the interim pastor several hundred miles from home. The flame from the open fireplace added some compensation. I was spending the evening alone in the church office. Bookcases? Yes, but all empty.

"An inspiration seized me. What about the bundle of old BAPTISTS on the junk heap downstairs? It was a happy thought. I carried the bundle to my seat by the open fire.

"And so the evening was spent in the library of THE BAPTIST for the entire year of 1925. If you wish an evening of pleasure, profit and "phun," search the attic and bring forth things "old," and you will be enriched as I have been.

"Now a dictionary definition of "reverie" may be twofold: first, an irregular train of thought; and second, an extravagant or fanciful product of the mind. My reverie was of the order first named. It is said that a daily newspaper is "old" the next day after issue. My evening's reverie has proven the opposite with this library of THE BAPTIST.

"Of course there were the reports of the Seattle convention. I could visualize men, women and things as I read again this record. Fancy yourself far away from home with the old BAPTISTS of 1925 and you, too, will have reveries of a past now become history.

"Let me give one concrete example of the up-to-dateness of the issue of July 11, 1925. It is from an address by Dr. Harry Freda of Cleveland on "If I Were a Layman." Ponder this quotation: "Under no consideration should I make it hard for God's messenger to give to people the holy revelation of his soul. Never should I find fault with my minister because his view of God was larger than mine." "Battles are not won by generals but by men in the ranks." Are these facts old?

"This old BAPTIST library gave me help and inspiration in a course of sermons I am delivering on prayer. Who will doubt the high value of old BAPTISTS? The sermonic help from "The Devotional Life" page is unquestioned. The article by Harold E. Brierly, on "Loneliness and Aloneness," June 13, is both sane and superb.

"Before I close my reverie I must tell of a happy find. A year ago I read an editorial in THE BAPTIST on "The Ad Interim Pastor." I wished to preserve it but it was lost. Well, judge my happy surprise to come across it as I browsed along through these old papers.

"Thus I spent a rich three hours with these old friends—an unusual evening of pleasure, profit and "phun." Of course the last named was in "The Saving Sense," column which will help keep the wrinkles and gray hairs away. For example: A nearsighted man accompanied by his wife was in a portrait gallery. "That is the ugliest portrait I ever saw," he exclaimed, striving vainly for a better view of the abomination. "Come away, you old silly," replied his wife, "That's a mirror."

"The trouble with an ad interim pastor is often this, as in my present case, he cannot take his wife along when he is looking into mirrors or old BAPTISTS."

"The office boy says in his opinion it is not the thunder and lightning but the gentle rain that soaks in that makes the crops grow. He says Doctor Dorward's rainstorm was a blessing in disguise; and if he thought others would be similarly helped, he would pray for a general downpour all over the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention.

"WCOY now signs off. Keep your old BAPTISTS for a rainy night."

Here, There and Everywhere

M. W. TWING, for thirty years pastor of the First church, Alton, Ill., has resigned, the resignation to take effect Sept. 1. The pastor took this step on his own initiative and with much reluctance because it meant the severing of a relationship exceptionally pleasant and intimate. After Sept. 1, Doctor and Mrs. Twing, with their daughter, will motor to New England for a vacation. On their return to Alton Doctor Twing will be free to engage in another pastorate or in any useful service in the interest of the kingdom.

THE SEVEN CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR societies of the Temple church, Los Angeles, Calif., have recently become seven Baptist Young Peoples' Unions. This transfer was made under the guidance of George E. Joy, educational director of the Temple church and with the enthusiastic and unanimous approval of its members.

ON JULY 17, Rev. H. C. Applegarth, Rochester, N. Y., passed away after an illness of ten months. Doctor Applegarth during his ministry was pastor of several important Baptist churches, the last church being the First church, Rochester, N. Y., from which he retired several years ago. His daughter, Margaret T. Applegarth, is well known through her books and her page in THE BAPTIST.

WE BEG THE PARDON of the Green Bay, Wis., church, Rev. Edwin Simpson, pastor, for intimating in a news item several weeks ago that in raising its annual budget nothing was done for mission. The pastor informs us that the whole budget was subscribed both for current expenses and missions and that the church has paid its full quota for missions each year for several years. Pastor and Mrs. Simpson are motoring to Prince Edward Island, their former home, which they will reach by east stages as Mr. Simpson is engaged to preach one Sunday in Lansing, one Sunday in Adrian, Mich., and two Sundays in Syracuse, N. Y., on the way east.

KANSAS ASSEMBLY holds its annual encampment this year at Ottawa university, Aug. 2-13. Dean W. P. Behan of the university will act as dean of the assembly. A growing feature of the assembly is the boys' camp. Last year sixty-five boys were registered. Rev. Ed Pennington of Salina will have charge of the camp. The annual convention of the B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school, and special conferences, will be held in connection with the assembly.

CECIL BINING was ordained at Woodlawn, Pa., June 18. Moderator, Rev. Lawrence B. Ford; clerk, Joseph Yule; sermon by Rev. Floyd Andrus; other parts by Rev. W. F. Bostick, A. J. R. Schumaker and Lawrence B. Ford.

REV. F. H. WILLKENS, director of religious education for the Buffalo Baptist Union, occupied the pulpit of Prospect Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y., June 20.

BROADWAY CHURCH, Denver, Colo., D. Frank Ernest Eden, pastor, has a life service group of about fifteen members. Of these, Donald Perkins Seldon, son of Dr. Edwin Seldon, a former Broadway pastor, received his Master's degree from Columbia where he spent the last school year. Mr. Seldon has accepted a position as English teacher in the Sofia Christian college at Samakov, Bulgaria, where he expects to

Want Ads

Bibles rebound at reasonable price Holmgren Book Bindery, Coloma, Mich.

Ordained pastor wants pastorate now. Writer, traveler, widely experienced. Motivated by a desire to do good, not merely to draw a salary. Small churches write. H. Wight, Prairie City, Illinois.

Pastors: For Revival Help write Evangelist J. J. Pease, Battle Creek, Mich.

pend the next three years. He sails for Europe the last of June and will spend the summer visiting the large student centers of the old world. J. Lester Raney has completed his pre-medic course at William Jewell and is in Denver for the summer and plans to enter the Colorado university school of medicine in the fall. Chester Hartrand expects to enter Rochester seminary next September. Marion Rix has returned from the Kansas City Theological seminary. Roy N. Anderson who graduates from Denver university this year has earned a fellowship at Columbia university and will take his Master's degree there next year.

THE "Valley Visitor" IS A MONTHLY sheet of news and inspiration of the Valley Baptist church, Marietta, Ohio. Its June 5 issue carries this notice: "The next number of the Valley Visitor will be issued on Sept. 15. We hope that you will miss that he will present to each new subscriber a year's subscription to the Ohio Baptist."

THE CONGREGATION AT PARSONS, Pa., Rev. Grover C. Walters, pastor, dedicated its new church building, erected at a cost of $50,000, to take the place of the one which was burned, Feb. 4, 1925, on June 27 following a week of special services. The new structure is 50x102 feet and is built principally on the old foundation with an extension in the front and rear. A pipe organ has been installed. Sums totaling between one-half and two-thirds of the debt incurred by the new building have been pledged. Fifty-two new members have been added since the pastor took up his duties Apr. 15, 1924.

THE ARIZONA BAPTIST summer assembly will be held at Pinal mountain, Summit, Ariz., Aug. 18-28, and will be conducted by the commission of Christian education of the Arizona Baptist Convention. Informawife conducted the school with eight assistants. On June 13, four persons were baptized at the third baptismal service in six months. By request of Dr. Victor N. Witter, state director of religious education in Iowa, Dr. and Mrs. MacMillan have charge of the church vacation school at the summer assembly at Iowa Falls, July 19-Aug. 1.

GROVER C. WALTERS

DR. J. F. WATTS, pastor of the First church, Lawrence, Kan., preached at the University of Kansas June 27 on "The Victories of the Gospel in Many Lands." This is the first of a series of sermons to be given at the university at regular intervals.

REV. FRANK M. TAYLOR was ordained to the gospel ministry June 23, at the First church of Englewood, Colo. Rev. J. C. Hoover was moderator and Rev. W. C. Garberson, clerk. The sermon was given by Rev. Joshua Gravet; charge to the candidate by Rev. J. C. Hoover; charge to the church by Rev. Farnum St. John; ordination prayer by Rev. W. C. Garberson, and right hand of fellowship by Rev. R. A. Decker. Rev. Mr. Taylor has taken up his duties at the First church, Almond, Wis.

BAPTIST CHURCH BUILDING AT PARSONS, PA.

this summer. If you do, why not fill its place by taking THE BAPTIST and Missions at the special price of $3 for the two? The pastor is so convinced of the value of these tion may be obtained from Miss Myrtle M. Love, 218 Home Builders Building, Phoenix, Ariz.

REV. E. B. TAFT, pastor of the First church of Fairport, N. Y., was surprised when, at the close of his weekly prayer meeting June 30, his congregation presented him and Mrs. Taft with a Ford sedan and accessories.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Akron, Iowa, closed a successful vacation Bible school, June 27. The pastor, Rev. A. L. MacMillan, and his

The Hall Organ Company
West Haven, Conn.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL and TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. O. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"
2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN,
1912 "G" Street, Northwest

TABERNACLE CHURCH, Utica, N. Y., Rev. Edward Bleakney, pastor, reports an increase in membership of 102, making a total of 475 new members during the present pastorate; 426 were present at the largest communion service of the year. For the first time the church was able to pay in full its pledge to the state board of missionary cooperation. The every-member canvass showed an increase in pledges of $2200 over last year. Improvements have been made in the church building and equipment.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Selma, Calif., reports the addition of twenty-one members since the new pastor, Claude L. Neal, took up his duties there. Attendance at the weekly prayer meetings numbers over seventy.

A THREE WEEKS' DAILY vacation Bible school was held this summer by the First church of Waterloo, Iowa. Rev. R. R. Williamson, the pastor, acted as principal and instructor. He was assisted by twenty-five teachers and helpers. This is the third year that the First church has conducted such a school.

REV. E. E. CLAYTON has resigned from the pastorate of the Roseville, Ill., church, resignation to take place after Aug. 15. About one-third of the present resident membership was received during his pastorate. There were twenty-one baptisms during the past year and thirty-two new members were received. The finances of the church have been placed on a business basis and the church debt of $900 has been paid. For three summers, vacation Bible schools, led by the pastor, have been held. The Sunday school has doubled in attendance.

THE Baptist Beacon, MINNEAPOLIS, combines with the Searchlight, Fort Worth, Tex., and becomes a weekly publication under the latter name. All the contents of both papers will be found in one and after a year the combined paper will be delivered to subscribers at the former price of one. Drs. Riley and Norris will act as editors. Headquarters will be in Chicago.

WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the successful termination of the $400,000 endowment drive, July 1, Shurtleff college, Illinois' oldest educational institution, enters upon a new century and a new era, declares Pres. George Milton Potter. The students and faculty pledged $10,000 toward this amount. If all the pledges are paid in by July 1, 1928, the total endowment of the college, including the $133,333 from the General Education Board, will be $725,000. The institution will be 100 years old, Jan. 1, 1927.

REV. C. RAYMOND CHAPPELL began his pastorate at the First church, Keene, N. H., June 6. On June 24, the church honored the pastor and his family by a public reception. This is Mr. Chappell's third pastorate since his graduation from Newton, 1909. His first was at Bath, Me., nine years; his second at Middleboro, Mass., for the past seven years.

DR. BERNARD C. CLAUSON of the First church, Syracuse, N. Y., will spend the summer traveling across the United States on a tour of investigation and study. He hopes "to get a bird's eye view of America." The results of his investigations will be printed in THE BAPTIST.

REV. J. S. UMBERGER has resigned as the pastor of the First church, York, Neb., that he may give full time to evangelism. His address until Sept. 1 will be York, Neb., after that time he may be reached at 3942 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

REV. GEORGE F. McELVEIN has resigned as pastor of the Knoxville, Pa., church to accept a call from the First church of Cohoes, N. Y. He will begin his new pastorate Sept. 1.

REV. C. M. FOGG of the Valley Falls church, R. I., gave the hand of fellowship to six new members, recently baptized, at the July communion service. The church has raised more money this year for current expenses and for benevolences than ever before. There has been a substantial gain in attendance at the church services.

FRANCES SHIMER SCHOOL has been promised $25,000 by the Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention on condition that the school secure a total of $250,000 for endowment and building.

FIRST CHURCH, Spokane, Wash., Dr. John Newton Garst, pastor, now has in its cash building fund over $20,000 of which more than $8000 has been added during the present pastorate, and a building committee of fifteen is working with architects on plans. In April and May the pastor's salary was raised, several other budget items increased and the new year budget provided for with sixty-four more pledges than the previous year.

FIFTY-EIGHT MEMBERS, twenty-four by baptism, have been added to the First church, Lancaster, Pa., Dr. A. H. Owens, pastor, during the past year.

MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has sent out a general call for

(Continued on page 796)

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for Aug. 8

THE GIVING OF THE MANNA
Lesson Text: Ex. 16:1-36. Golden Text: John 6:35

Deliverances by miraculous intervention are soon forgotten and the people quickly return to their habitual grouch. All the plagues of Egypt, the Passover and the crossing of the Red sea seem to have faded from the memory of the grumbling Israelites as they faced a desert which offered no food for their hungry stomachs.

The Density of Man

It seems almost impossible to pierce the thick unbelief of man with the knowledge that "earth's crammed with heaven and every common bush aflame with God." Possibly the very miraculous character of God's seeming intervention in the crises which met the Israelites may have helped to dull their sensitiveness to the constant immanence of God. Unless God was doing something for them frequently in a miraculous manner they could not believe that he cared what became of them. The flesh pots of Egypt were far more real to them than a God who appeared only at long intervals to work their deliverance from some threatening disaster. Hence they grumbled grievously when food became scarce and no provision was in sight. This, however, is true not only of the Israelites, but of men everywhere and in every age. When the disciples on one occasion were distressed because they had forgotten to take bread for the journey Jesus reminded them of the 4000 and the 5000 he had fed miraculously. In spite of all the miracles Jesus had performed, his own disciples seemed slow to believe that he was able to meet any emergency. Spiritual forces are not readily appreciated.

The Immanence of God

It is a long distance from the child-like credulity of the Israelites who looked upon Moses as a mighty magician and upon God as a tribal deity to the scientific knowledge of the twentieth century which reveals a universe of law and order. If the Israelites just out of Egypt were inclined to forget God because he did not constantly work miracles in their behalf, the people of this scientific age are apt to forget God because he does not work miracles at all. The manna of the wheat fields and rice fields of the world, that never-ceasing wonder by which the people are fed from year to year through unnumbered generations, does not seem to create and sustain faith in the immanence of God. If some Christian people are afraid of the theory of evolution it is because a materialistic evolution seems to reduce God to an impersonal force working automatically in a material universe. And yet God is in his world working unceasingly and superintending his universe personally. He is great enough to be incomprehensible and yet fatherly enough to take account of the fall of a sparrow. The manna and the quail are his and the wheat and cattle are his also. God is directly and personally in his world and over his world. Let us rejoice.

Church Furniture

Pews·Pulpits·Chancel Furniture
-Sunday School Seating

American Seating Company

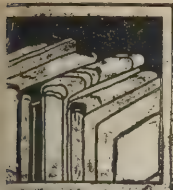

Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1069 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

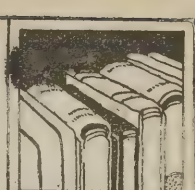

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukegan, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE

Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

New Books

The Tragedy of Waste, by Stuart Chase. New York: Macmillan. $2.50.

Any man who observes with any degree of intelligence the economic process of modern society knows that there is immense waste and that thousands are in desperate want of what other thousands waste. But the extent of such waste and the tragedy of it do not come home in their full reality until one has given careful study to the subject. Even when one attempts to gather statistics of waste he is baffled by the magnitude and intricacy of the task. Mr. Chase has rendered this service for the student and the general reader as far as it is at present possible to assemble the facts. It is easy to realize for instance that in the mining and consumption of coal half of it is wasted; that according to the official estimate of the secretary of the Treasury of the United States, $22,000,000 a year is spent for luxuries; that more than 20 per cent of the man-power of the country is continuously unemployed or underemployed; and many more such items. I study the statistics of quackery. Or I find that 380,000 gallons of cottonseed oil were shipped from Hoboken to Italy, refined, retinned, reshipped to this country and sold for pure Italian olive oil. A survey raises the question whether human beings are really capable of developing an economic community. The book is easy to read, clear in its argument and convincing in its conclusions.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

The First American and Other Sunday Evening Studies in Biography, by Charles J. Baldwin. Published by the First Baptist Church of Granville, Ohio, in recognition of twenty-five years of service by the author as pastor of the church.

A beautiful and worthy tribute to the men who gave to Granville the finest form of ministerial service! The characters considered are Lincoln, Washington, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, Benedict Arnold, Aaron Burr, Alexander Hamilton, U. S. Grant, Joan of Arc, Savororola, John Calvin, Luther, Erasmus, John Knox and Mary queen of Scots.

This is certainly a wide and varied range of personages, and some of them unusual people for a Baptist pulpit. But the treatment is well balanced: it never goes to the extreme. These studies show what a wise and temperate pastor can do in leading his people to appreciate the lives of those who have helped to make the world in which we are living.

—H. L. STETSON.

The Education in Our Colleges and Universities, by Emil O. Jorgensen. Chicago, 346 Altgeld St.: Manufacturers and Merchants Federal Tax League. $1.

Mr. Jorgensen is director of the bureau of information of the publishers. He sets out to show how "a gigantic, nationwide scheme, backed by special interests, engineered by Prof. Richard T. Ely and masquerading under the guise of 'research,' has been set on foot in our educational institutions to lead the people not towards the right solution of our economic problems, but away from it." And he enumerates thirty-two distinct economic fallacies to which he says Professor Ely commits his "institute." As a polemic, the book is live and interesting in both matter and style. But aside from its polemic value, it contains a mass of valuable information on economic subjects, and is particularly luminous in exposition of the theory of the single tax.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

The Modern Sunday School, Its Theory and Practice, by George Hamilton Archibald, principal Westhill Training college, Birmingham, England. New York: Century Co. $2.

The author is evidently attempting to produce a book along Sunday school lines that will be of practical value to superintendents. While he has not made any real contribution to the subject of the church school and religious education, for he takes up the same topics covered by most writers of these subjects, namely: the graded school, need for equipment, etc., nevertheless he does present his matter in such a clear, readable and concrete way that the average Sunday school superintendent can get valuable suggestions from the book.

"It is not enough to talk about sin and salvation in general," the writer says. "Make religion concrete and the abstract will take care of itself." This desire to be definite runs all through the volume where he discusses such topics as: atmosphere, learning by doing, which is especially good, play and expression, week day activities, prizes and rewards and giving. The book is also interesting because it gives one an idea of what the British Sunday schools are trying to do.

—G. W. LAWRENCE.

The First Age of Christianity, by Ernest F. Scott. New York: Macmillan Co. $1.50.

Those who are interested today in a careful study of the New Testament will find an almost inexhaustible amount of material has been written concerning it. This is the problem, so much has been written that it is difficult to appreciate the entire scope of the field. The author of this book endeavors to survey all the departments of New Testament study especially in their relation to each other and to present in a brief and readable form the main conclusions.

New Testament history and literature and theology are not subjects that can easily be separated but depend in a large way upon one another for their interpretation. Doctor Scott has made a real contribution in preparing this study for college students and others who know the worth of modern inquiry and who wish help in a fuller understanding of the life and problems of the early days of Christianity. The author brings to the field of study a fine spirit of devotion and a seeming desire to make plain the cost of Christian learning and institutions rather than to raise questions that are not pertinent to the main subject. We need more such books as this to help us appreciate the heritage that is ours today in Christian faith.

—C. R. OSBORN.

The Saving Sense

The Christian Leader quotes this society news item from the Kuigers Chanticleer: "While some came in Tuxedos others walked."

Mistress: "I've lost the key of my writing-desk, Marie. Go and look in the old trunk in the kitchen; you might find an old key that will fit."

Marie: "It's no use, madame. I tried them all long ago and none of them fit."—Le Matin.

The efforts of Nation's Business Magazine for saner business letters were rewarded by the following verse from Carolyn Wells: They beg to inquire and they beg to state, they beg to advise and they beg to relate; they beg to observe and they beg to mention, they beg to call your kind attention; they beg to remark and they beg to remind, they beg to inform and you'll herein find; they beg to announce and they beg to intrude, they beg to explain and they beg to include; they beg to acknowledge and they beg to reply, they beg, and they beg, and they beg, oh, why! they reluctantly beg for a moment of time, they beg to submit you an offer sublime; till I wish I could put the annoying array of beggars on horseback and send 'em away.

"I suppose since you are named George Washington you try to be exactly like him or as near like him as you can, don't you?" said the gracious old lady to a small colored boy.

"Course ise lak Gawg Washington," replied the boy. "Ah kaint help bein' lak Gawg Washington kase dats who I is."

Old-Timers

The preachers we had long ago

Were not so fine and grand;

They took "degreess" a-hauling logs

And clearing up the land;

But when one of them rose to preach,

I tell you we could smell

The fragrant flowers of heaven

And the stifling smoke of hell.

—Baptist and Reflector.

Here, There and Everywhere

(Continued from page 794)

prayer to the half million women of that organization. She urges them to pray for increased zeal in law enforcement and for the retention of the prohibition law.

DELEGATES TO THE NORTHERN Baptist Convention at Washington, D. C., were told that the Third church, St. Louis, Mo., Henry Alford Porter, pastor, has received more members during the last few years than any other Baptist church in the Northern Convention—over 1200 in three years.

SEVEN PERSONS WERE baptized into the fellowship of the First church, Norwich, N. Y., W. A. Ashmore, pastor, on Wednesday, June 16, totalling twenty-three since the beginning of the Easter season. These results are attributed to persistent personal work.

REV. AND MRS. E. P. COOK who were married at Plainfield, N. J., May 22, and left May 31 for London, are now in Egypt enroute to Jerusalem, Constantinople, and Athens, and expect to sail for home Aug. 18. They were entertained while in England by Mr. Thomas S. Penny, retiring president of the British Baptist Missionary Society. Mrs. Cook is the daughter of Dr. Charles L. White, executive secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Rev. Mr. Cook is a Methodist Episcopal minister of Missouri.

THE WOMAN'S MISSION SOCIETY of Illinois held its board meeting June 25. Mrs. Topping was elected chairman again of the state officers' conference. Miss Goldie Bailey, of Alum Bridge, W. Va., a graduate of the training school and formerly a worker in Alaska, has been appointed woman worker for Southern Illinois. She will begin her work Sept. 1 at West Frankfort. The Golden Anniversary fund reported $22,512.42. One hundred forty-four circles report 100 per cent pledged. The Illinois Children's World Crusade raised $1500 this year, second only to Michigan. Nine new circles have been added this year.

THE HORTON, KAN., Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches united in a successful evangelistic campaign May 23-June 23 with the Rayburn and McKee evangelistic party leading. Rev. Roy Noyes Hillyer has been pastor of the Horton church since Jan. 1, 1924. Sunday-school attendance has increased 200 per cent and church attendance, 50 per cent.

REV. B. M. OSGOOD, ten years pastor of the First church, Fort Dodge, Iowa, will take up his duties with the First church, Rockville, Md., Aug. 1. During his pastorate in Fort Dodge he received 576 new members and married 216 couples; many improvements were made in the church while both the church congregation and the Sunday school doubled in attendance. On July 2 he gave a reception for all the couples he had married during the last decade.

THREE HUNDRED ATTENDED the sixtieth annual session of the Omaha Association held in the church at Blair, Neb., in June, Arthur D. Smalley, minister. Officers elected for the coming year include, moderator, Rev. A. A. De Larme; vice-moderator, Rev. William M. Hull; clerk, Rev. B. H. Marshall, and treasurer, Mrs. O. H. Godsey. The association will meet next year the first week in June with the Immanuel church, Omaha.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Lindsay, Calif., John L. Bogue, pastor, held a two weeks' daily vacation Bible school with an average attendance of nearly eighty. Through a competitive program, the church plans to maintain an average attendance during the summer of over 200. The Sunday school has undertaken the partial support of a missionary from the church to Africa. The Golden Tree pageant given by the women of the church on June 20 brought in pledges of approximately $100. The local men's brotherhood has been reorganized.

REV. JAMES D. MORRISON commenced his sixth year as pastor of the North church, Camden, N. J., on June 8. The morning service began with baptism and closed with communion at which time he gave the hand of fellowship to eighteen new members, all of whom came by baptism. As a result of the Easter-time emphasis on personal evangelism, sixty-one new members have been received this spring, fifty by baptism. The annual contributions for local work, less than $8000 five years ago, totaled $16,000 last year. Benevolent subscriptions have been overpaid and total over $90,000.

ON JUNE 18, FIRST CHURCH, Brookings, S. D., ordained to the full gospel ministry Rev. Jos. M. Smith, a graduate of State college of Brookings, and of the Northwestern Bible Training school, Minneapolis. He has been preaching at Mound, Minn.; but he and Mrs. Smith have recently been appointed as missionaries to Burma, to go out early this fall. They are new members of the Brookings church, and so the council was called by that church. Dr. John L. Barton of Sioux Falls was elected moderator of the council and Mrs. R. W. Krueger, secretary. Ordination sermon was by Dr. E. V. Pierce of Minneapolis, charge to the candidate, by Dean A. W. Fauquet of Sioux Falls; charge to the church, Rev. J. O. White of Huron; ordaining prayer led by Rev. Frederick Donovan of Dell Rapids. Mr. Smith grew up in and near Sioux Falls, and is well known in eastern South Dakota. Mrs. Smith is from Desmet, S. D. She is also a graduate of State college, Brookings, S. D.

THE MEETINGS OF THE York Baptist Association, held with the Eden church, Stromsburg, Neb., were well attended. All the churches report gains. Good program. Speakers other than local people were: Miss Isabel Crawford, former missionary to the Kiowa Indians; Rev. Ezra Duncan, director of religious education for the Nebraska convention; and Rev. H. Q. Morton, secretary of the convention. One feature of these meetings different from the habit of recent years was that practically every preacher came for the first and stayed till the last.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request. "Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study, Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D., 1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Tuition and room-rent free. Scholarships available to approved students. Seminary within 13 miles of Philadelphia. Seminary's relations to University of Pennsylvania warrant offer of the following courses:

1. REGULAR COURSES FOR PREACHERS AND PASTORS. Seminary Degree of B. D. or Diploma.
2. TRAINING FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE. Seminary and University. Degrees of B. D. and A. M.
3. TRAINING FOR ADVANCED SCHOLARSHIP. Seminary and University. Degree of Th. M. at Seminary, and Ph. D. at University.

For information address REV. MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., President, Chester, Pa.

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

First Aid Quintet of the Hyde Park Baptist Boy Scout Troop, Chicago, winners of the city-wide First Aid Shield. They are, from left to right: Scoutmaster J. R. M. Morison, Robert Lee, Blair Plimpton, Gordon Ritenhouse, Robert Wilson, Harry Sulzer, and R. W. Adams, trainer.

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Sixteen years ago the Czecho-Slovak church at Berwyn, Ill., was organized in the home of Rev. V. Shuldes. He has served it as pastor ever since with marked success. Now he goes to New Prague, Minn. Rev. C. H. Brazda, formerly at New Prague, takes up the work at Berwyn. The new pastorates both began Aug. 1.

The Inquiry, 129 East 52nd St., New York City, has added another to its growing list of valuable studies in social problems. This one is a study outline on woman's part in race relations, is distributed by the Woman's Press, 600 Lexington Ave., New York, and bears the title, "All Colors." It is specially prepared for use in study and discussion groups, but it is also a valuable and interesting handbook for personal reading. In a reasonable and thorough-going way it "opens" the race question.

The organization of the Church and Drama Association was completed at the Plaza hotel, New York City, June 10. Officers' names do not appear in the leaflet containing the announcement. "The purpose of the new association is to develop the potentialities for good in the drama by creating and enlisting public support for the worthy things in the stage and screen and to educate the public to the appreciation for the best that the drama has to offer." It is further said that "all denominations—Protestants, Catholics, and Hebrews—are joined with the stage and the motion picture in the newly formed association." Just how the Baptist denomination came to be "joined" is not stated, but would be an interesting story.

Tentative proposals for a motion picture of Baptist history to be used for exhibition at the next meeting of the Baptist World Alliance and elsewhere as opportunity is found, are not meeting with the approval hoped by some of the projectors. While some of our people are accustomed to the use of the motion picture and other forms of dramatic and pictorial art for the purpose of religious teaching and inspiration, and believe this method to be highly valuable, others view it as of doubtful value if not religiously and morally dangerous. The state of mind is a good deal like that which has existed at the introduction of almost every important innovation in Baptist practice in America. When the organization of associations was proposed, or the organization of missionary societies, or the opening of Sunday schools, or the introduction of musical instruments, or institutional church work, or social education and reform work, the same division of opinion appeared. These things all work themselves out in time.

Frank A. Smith, William H. Main, Herbert F. Stilwell, Samuel G. Neil, W. E. Chalmers, William Reid, George R. Baker, H. E. Dutton, Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall, Edwin Phelps, Earle V. Pierce, J. C. Massee, Frank M. Goodchild, John Herget, W. C. Coleman, and J. W. Baker, cooperative committee on evangelism, having organized with Frank A. Smith, chairman, 23 East 26th Street, N. Y., will proceed as fast as possible to arrange a series of fall conferences. They invite the greatest possible degree of local initiative on the part of both pastors and people.

Secretary U. M. McGuire of the social service committee of the Northern Baptist Convention calls for advice. He writes: "Chairman C. D. Gray, now in Europe, requests me to attend to certain matters while he is gone. Other denominations are taking up their social responsibility in a statesmanlike way. The Methodists have just closed a notable conference on the subject. Protestant bodies, Catholics and Jews are effectively organizing or organized for social service. Baptists have the principles, the polity, the numbers and the influence that ought to put us in a conspicuous place of leadership among the social forces of Christianity. Our committee has no money to pay the expenses of its members for a meeting. What ought we to do? Please release your thinking apparatus on this problem and write me the result at 2328 S. Michigan Boulevard, Chicago."

Fourteen of the wealthiest men of Francisco have formed a community foundation, somewhat like the Rockefeller and the Russell Sage foundations to receive, hold and disburse funds for the benefit of the community, particularly for charitable, scientific and educational purposes.

It is reported that the Mormon church has now 1701 local organizations, with 2500 missionaries in the field. During the last year ninety-three new church buildings were erected. In all temples the baptisms for the dead numbered during the year nearly a million. And yet, in the whole world, the gross by conversions amounted to no more than 6373.

Free church schools in the British Isles have naturally had a long and hard struggle, but their right to a place in the scheme of education seems to have been clearly vindicated. The Christian Worker says of them: "Our free church schools are today, in almost every case, at the high-water mark of prosperity and popularity. They have won the respect of the educational world by their increasing high standard of efficiency; but to maintain their historic testimony against that worship of mental efficiency which ignores the building of character and the fostering of noble ideals."

Dr. J. F. Love, in a circular letter to the Southern Baptists which was printed generally in their denominational paper makes this striking statement: "Ever from without have never defeated nor divided Baptists. So much cannot be said of those within the denomination without regard for the denomination's unity and work, stir up mischief. Every divisive movement that has ever wrought havoc in Baptist ranks has been led by a nominal Baptist. And this has not been done by a Baptist who has denied Baptist faith and become a liberal. The denomination has always known what to do with such. The effect of splitters of the denomination have been those who made loud claims of personal loyalty to the truth, professed superior orthodoxy and set themselves up as peculiar defenders of it. Strange as it may seem such men charging the denomination with heresy, as if heresy were rampant in it, have found sympathizers and led a revolt with themselves at the head of the procession waving the Baptist flag. Surely orthodoxy is an essential mark of a true Baptist, but when it comes to being orthodox some Baptists are a paradox. Those who have learned orthodoxy from Baptist turn on their teachers with charge of unorthodoxy, and the community faith is made an occasion of division."

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	798
EDITORIAL	801
HOW TO BE ANGRY, BY BERNARD C. CLAUSEN	804
YOUTH IN THE SADDLE AGAIN, BY A. T. ROBINSON.....	805
THE POPE'S INVITATION DECLINED, BY GEORGE W. MCDANIEL.....	806
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE — GOING SOMEWHERE	807
THE CHIMNEY CORNER	808
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	809
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	810
CHURCHES AT WORK	811
AMONG OURSELVES	812
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	818
NEW BOOKS	819

The Hebrew-Christian Alliance is noted as denouncing the famous "protocols of the Elders of Zion," widely believed to reveal a Jewish conspiracy to control the world. Their statement denounces the "protocols" as a "clumsy and vulgar anti-Semitic fiction without a shred of truth."

A conference of great importance to mission work in Africa is to be held in Zoute, Belgium, Sept. 14-21, 1926. It is for the first time envision the Protestant mission work throughout Africa in entirety. The frank interchange of experience and views between those who have been laboring separately in isolated parts of the great continent will lead to more constructive advance in the work as a whole. Many problems of an important nature have been waiting upon coordinated effort such as it is hoped will proceed from this conference.

Miss Yanagisawa, a Japanese school-teacher in California won the state prize in the American Legion's national essay contest, and this is her flag salute: "I pledge allegiance to you, flag of my adopted States, in word and deed. I believe that you will help me to be a loyal citizen in peace and war. I believe that you will lead the world not only in strength but in righteousness. I believe your stars are the shining symbol of the eternal brotherhood of man in the world. 'Old Glory,' as I stand and salute your heroic colors of red, white and blue, I promise to follow your ideals of liberty, justice and peace, not only in America, but for the world."

Rev. Melvin Gorve Kyle has a curious way of reasoning in an article reprinted in the Moody Bible Institute Monthly. He affirms that God in a "miraculous" way destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, and then proceeds to show how scientific investigation proves that the occurrence in all physical respects a natural phenomenon produced by the conditions existing in that locality. That is, he says that all the elements of explosive combustion were present, that the rain, fire and brimstone was a natural fire of a natural explosion, and that Mrs. Sodom was encrusted in a natural precipitation of salt. Thus he thinks science confirms the miracle. How natural geological effect from natural geological causes constitutes a miracle does not say.

For the first time in history a woman has been chosen moderator of a Welsh Baptist association. Mrs. T. F. Roberts, a member of Bethel church, Aberystwyth, has been elected to that position in Cardiganshire and Carmarthenshire association.

Dr. Samuel Z. Batten before his death expressed the fear that after his departure, the great cause of social righteousness to which he had given his life might suffer reverses for lack of an increasing religious support. Paul suffered the same fear. But see what has developed. Secy. J. W. Elliott, who has taken Doctor Batten's place, reports that courses in social service have been placed in nearly all of the Baptist assemblies this summer, and that there has been an unprecedented attendance and enthusiasm in the classes in these courses.

Already the opposition to compulsory military training has won a signal victory. The department of war announces as of June 23, that bayonet exercises and combat practice have been eliminated from the courses in military training given by army officers in schools and colleges. This is only a beginning. Whatever there may be in military training that tends to make for finer manhood without stimulating the war mentality is welcome to remain. Advocates of such training have the task of finding a program that can separate glory from gore.

Trouble has come to the M. E. church in the Philippines because Bishop Mitchell was understood to be opposing Philippine independence. On that subject the Northwestern Christian Advocate assures the world that "Our church has always been committed to the idea of independence for the Philippines. It will not retreat from that position, though here and there individual Methodists, who still think in terms of the white man's burden, may talk about the folly of 'giving up' a country which can produce enough rubber to keep Akron and Detroit forever out of the breadline." It is very well to be "committed to the idea," but what the Philippine people are concerned about is when and how they are going to get the actual independence. Is "our church" committed to anything on that subject?

Educational work in the Mong Lem field of the Burma mission is progressing well. There are 350 enrolled in the central school, with 163 more in four village schools. Much time is being given to Bible study. Besides the regular period during school hours, an hour and a half in the evening is devoted to it except on prayer meeting nights.

The inauguration by the government of training camps for women similar to those now afforded men was proposed to President Coolidge on May 15 by the executive committee of the National Rifle Association. The committee told Mr. Coolidge that in its opinion women should be afforded the same opportunities for physical development and training in rifle shooting as men. Summer camps on the same basis as the civilian military training camps were suggested. But with fine self-restraint the committee did not propose to make such training compulsory. Can it be possible that the women are to be deprived of the refining influence of bayonet practice and other arts of murderous encounter prescribed in the manuals?

Rev. Peder Stiansen of Tromso, Norway, has been elected as dean of the Norwegian Baptist Theological seminary, affiliated with the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, to take the place made vacant by the death of Dr. Henrik Gundersen. Mr. Stiansen was born and received his preparatory education in Norway and then entered the Norwegian Danish seminary at Morgan Park, from which he was graduated. He has had five pastorates: Brooklyn, N. Y.; Logan Square, Chicago; a second pastorate in Brooklyn, N. Y.; and two pastorates in Norway. He is in the latter forties, was one of the organizers of the Norwegian Baptist Conference of America, and is one of the best known and most trusted teachers of Norwegian Baptists. The late Doctor Gundersen felt that Mr. Stiansen was well fitted for the task of training future ministers. He will take up his new task this coming fall. Dr. Julius A. Jensen, dean of the Danish Theological seminary, who began his duties last February, will, in addition to instruction in the Danish department, have classes in Bible doctrine. Prof. Wm. F. Rice, late of Wheaton college, will offer instruction in education and college subjects. Professor Rice is an alumnus of Ottawa university and took post graduate studies at the University of Wisconsin. He is an active Baptist layman, moderator of and deacon in the First church of Wheaton, Ill. Rev. William F. Privett, from Union university, becomes instructor in Greek; Mrs. Erma R. Harman, instructor in English; Rev. W. E. Loucks, pastor of the Albany Park church of Chicago, professorial lecturer on pastoral theology, taking the place of Dr. Smith Thomas Ford who will take up his residence in central New York. Drs. Geo. W. Taft, J. Heinrichs, A. S. Carman, W. M. Fouts, J. N. Rodeheaver, and J. R. Mantey, and Profs. F. D. Whitesell, J. C. Dent, and E. A. Shulls continue in their several departments.

THE NEW AUDITORIUM-GYMNASIUM OF GRAND ISLAND COLLEGE, NEBRASKA, TO BE DEDICATED DURING THE ASSEMBLY, TO BE HELD AUG. 9-17.

Baptists of Kansas City, Mo., come to the front with the Baptist Savings and Loan Association, with offices at 218 East Tenth Street. It states as its purpose "to encourage thrift, by furnishing a safe place for small and large sums, and to provide ways and means whereby every member will live in his own home."

In a two months' tour in February, March and April, Dr. G. G. Crozier of Kangpokpi, Assam, with his helpers treated about 700 patients. He writes, "Most of the cases were simple; some were simple as well as serious. One woman who had not been able to walk for two months began walking about her work in the six days we were in that heathen village. The finger of the demon priest there was in a bad condition and had been giving him pain for about four months. It was cleared up in five days. In the next village two children were in a similar condition; one had been so for several months and the other for over a year. Their suffering was removed in four days. Numerous goitre cases were given treatment and advice. Many bad cases of malaria were put on the right road. Lepers were directed to hope."

Beautiful was the sunset glow for Dr. W. B. Hinson who shortly before his decease left to the world this message: "Whoso has kept the faith during the manifold experience of long drawn out years knows how much heroism the task required. To move along through the weary day and to never lose sight of the fresh blush of the morning, to retain the old enthusiasms amid the inrush of multiplied monotonous duties, to follow the gleam when it dips down where are the dark morasses, to stand by the gun when the faintest hope of success has fled—all this calls for the heroic in the heart. And how hard it sometimes is to keep the faith is evidenced by many a silvered head and furrowed brow and set, fixed look. When failure sounds its "Cease Firing," and is bravely disregarded by the soul; when comrades disappear in the mist or faultily behave so that one wishes the silence had homed them long before; when lover and friend alike fail; when grim duties multiply and haunting memories rack the spirit; when defalcation by those long loved and honored falls upon the heart like a biting blackening frost—not easy then is it to keep the faith. Aye, and when the great weariness lays hold of the soul and the sunset is longingly looked for, and when for rest the wearied powers of body, mind and spirit cry out—why then the faith is so often surrendered. And some of us have learned to thank God each twilight that throughout one more day the faith has been firmly grasped, so that we are not shamed by the shining of the solemn stars. Yes and some of us know how hard it oft-times is to see the dawn, and gird up the soul for another day's high daring. Ah well, tired one, hold ever the position assigned, for through the battle smoke and beyond the weltering waste of struggle, I saw last night the far red lights of home."

Prehistoric mounds of unknown antiquity are now being explored in Louisiana. They seem to differ from mounds found in other parts of America, and instead of clarifying the origin of man upon this continent they add to its mystery.

Self-determination takes a new turn in the Philippines. The Moros in those islands are Mohammedans. They are also a minority. They object to being ruled by the Christian Filipinos. There is friction. Consequently it is proposed to separate the regions chiefly occupied by them from the rest of the islands and place them again under direct American rule. Such a condition is the one justification of imperialism. The right to self-determination lives in the justice of its exercise.

For the next meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention, the general committee on arrangements in Chicago has been appointed, with Mr. J. L. Kraft, 1116 Columbia avenue, chairman. With him are associated as members of the committee C. J. Howell, Lewis Walker, Rev. Ralph Jensen, Rev. Johnston Myers, Rev. Herbert W. Virgin, Mrs. Samuel Jennings, Mrs. W. P. Topping, Mrs. M. V. Parks, Rev. Benjamin Otto, Rev. A. E. Peterson and Rev. M. C. Tunison.

Fountain Street church, Grand Rapids, has arranged for a lecture and concert course for the coming season, which the conference of lecture managers in its last session at Cleveland officially announced as "the finest course in America." Pastor Alfred W. Wishart is at present traveling in Europe. In the course of his tour he will spend some time attending sessions of the League of Nations assembly. A travel lecture by him will be one of the numbers in the season's lecture course.

The last report of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People affirms the principle that marriage is a matter of personal choice and that there ought to be no interference of state laws to prevent intermarriage among races.

It is generally recognized that the war settlements have placed France and Great Britain in a position of rivalry that exposes them to special danger of mutual friction that may lead to war. In this connection Henri Bourassa, a member of the Canadian parliament, speaking to the French Canadians, announces that in case of such conflict the British government will not receive their support.

Pres. George M. McDaniel protested against the issuance by an army officer to the men of his command of an invitation to attend a field mass. He argued his objection according to the United States Daily in the following terms: "Army officers have the right to worship God and their consciences prompt; but they have not the right officially to extend an invitation, and thereby indorse and command a field mass. It is wrong in principle and harmful in practice." To this Acting Secretary of War Hanford MacNider replied: "At Fort Sill there are on duty one Protestant chaplain and one Roman Catholic chaplain. The commandant of the field artillery school is of Protestant faith, a man of broad vision and thoroughly tolerant in his views. He supports with equal enthusiasm the service of both Protestant and Roman Catholic chaplains. In view of the above I regret that I cannot be in agreement with you in the thought that it is wrong in principle and harmful in practice for army officers to support such a religious service as was held at Fort Sill."

Keep Up With The Procession

This is a Century of Creative Activity.

Richer life, larger opportunity, together with better and happier ways of living are offered you.

Read THE BAPTIST regularly. It is a source of pleasure, wisdom and inspiration.

Enlist your neighbor to share the good things in it. It costs only 5 cents a week alone—4 cents when taken with Missions.

Single subscriptions, $2.50 per year. In 10 per cent clubs, $2.00. With Missions, $3.00. Trial subscriptions, Six Months for $1.00.

THE BAPTIST

2320 South Michigan Avenue

Chicago, Illinois

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Wanted: A College President

SEVERAL Northern Baptist college boards are looking about for a man qualified to take the helm and steer their institutions safely through the shallows of inadequate financial support, around the icebergs of denominational difference and past the danger of being swamped by the backwash of large state universities. One of these colleges has been seeking a president for more than two years but the search has yielded little to date. This indicates the difficulty of finding men to fill such a vacancy. For more than a generation organized education has grown with leaps and bounds. The mammoth department stores have had no more phenomenal development in the business world than have our colleges and universities in the field of education. The original colleges in America were simple schools for the training of preachers. The so-called liberal arts consisted of the languages, the literature and the history of ancient Greece and Rome. To these were added some philosophy and a modest measure of higher mathematics. Science was negligible and the thousand and one subjects which make up the curriculum of a modern college from dilettanteism to dysteleology were unknown. The college in these days is no more like the college of old than a modern first class medical clinic like the old-fashioned apothecary shop:

This tremendous development of education in all its grades and branches has made a colossal demand upon taxpayers and philanthropists for the funds with which to meet the growing need for the adequate endowment and equipment of our colleges. In line with the unprecedented extension of the curriculum has come the demand for specialists in the faculty, and specialists come high. If standardizing agencies have taken a hand in the general push forward and have decreed that only those colleges which possess a certain amount of productive endowment, register a prescribed number of doctors of philosophy in the roster of the faculty and otherwise meet the standards as to hours of teaching, salaries paid and the maximum number of students in a class, can qualify for academic credit. Lacking credit, a college is in a bad way because many of the high schools will not employ a teacher graduated from a school which is not accredited by an authoritative standardizing agency. State universities have met these demands by getting the legislature to vote increasingly larger appropriations and some independent colleges have been fortunate in having rich friends come to their assistance with handsome gifts for endowment and equipment. But some of the small colleges, no less worthy, have suffered and are suffering almost to the point of extinction because they have not been able to secure for their support the gifts necessary to meet the excessive demands.

It is this situation that makes the man worthy to head the average denominational college hesitate when he is approached by a committee of the trustees with an offer of the presidency. The very fact that he hesitates and exercises caution before accepting such a responsibility speaks eloquently of his fitness for the job. He knows full well that the president of the best of the colleges is in large part a business manager, a cost engineer, a sales manager and a financial agent combined, and that unless he can secure the funds necessary to pay the mounting expense of maintaining the college on a high level and at the same time popularize himself with the students and patrons, he might better discourage the committee that hopes to secure him as president. And if this is the situation in the best of the colleges, what is to be said of the colleges which live on the ragged edge of poverty and are always in financial distress?

So we return to the question with which we opened this editorial. Where shall we find the men to steer some of our weaker Baptist colleges over the shoals of inadequate budgets in the freezing atmosphere of denominational indifference, and past the danger from the backwash of large institutions of learning? In other words, if our small colleges are worth saving, and we strongly believe they are, who will become their saviors? Who shall arise and place upon a rich state in which a Baptist college has been planted the responsibility for raising that college above the danger line by securing for it endowment enough to warrant a recognized standardizing agency in accrediting it? There are many among us who believe that the Baptists of a state in which a college is located ought to provide for its needs, and if outsiders can be induced to give largely, that is so much more added to the enrichment of the school. But the permanency and efficiency of any college in a particular state should never be forced to depend upon the chance gifts of some philanthropist outside of the state.

Each of the colleges looking about for a head has its peculiar problems; but all of them in common want a president who can rub Aladdin's lamp, lift Cinderella to affluence, and, by some alchemy of which he alone is the master, turn baser metals into gold. He must be a savant who shall hold the respect and admiration of his faculty, a mixer winning and retaining popularity among the students, a disciplinarian governing with a steady purpose a body of unconventional freshmen, a hail-fellow-well-met among business men, a wizard of finance, a marvel of management, a prophet whose predictions about proposed improvement of the campus and expected erection of new buildings come true quickly, a hypnotizer of hard-boiled trustees, a credit man who knows how to jolly the bankers into extending notes that long since ought to have been paid, a teacher who can take his place in the class room with the best of his faculty; and on top of all this he must always be a Christian gentleman.

"A Mixture no Nation Can Stand"

WE QUOTE from an article by Allan L. Benson in the Dearborn Independent of July 10—with thanks. For summer refreshment his discussion is like a draught from the old oaken bucket. Here is the heart of it in his own words:

"For years we tolerated a mixture of politics and booze, but now we have to deal with a mixture of outlawed booze and crooked politics.

"There is not a wet leader in the country who does not know that the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution can never be repealed.

"Before booze can be made legal the wets will have to control a two-thirds majority in each house of congress and a majority in three-quarters of the state legislatures.

"Despite this fact it seems certain that the liquor question is destined to plague American politics probably for twenty years.

"So the fight must go on.

"There is no room for compromise. Both sides cannot be satisfied. The dries are not going to put up with a make-believe enforcement."

The Final Baptist Court

WHERE does the final authority lie for determining the standing of a Baptist church? The question ought to be clarified, and a few words may serve the purpose.

All seem to agree that no general convention can go farther than to state the terms on which a church shall be entitled to send representatives to the convention. Beyond that power it has no jurisdiction over any church. And the action of such a convention takes effect only within the convention itself. The Northern Baptist Convention, for instance, has no power to prescribe the conditions of membership in any state convention, association or missionary society in the world. If it should bar a church from representation in its own meetings, that church would still have all of the rights it ever had to representation in any other cooperative Baptist body willing to receive it.

The state convention has the same control over its own membership as the general convention, and no more. A church may be barred from representation in a state convention, and yet its right to representation in a general convention, in another state convention, in an association or in a missionary society be unimpaired.

The same principle holds for the association. It may decide for itself what churches may send delegates to its meetings, but it can go no farther. Any church debarred by an association still retains all of its rights and powers as a Baptist church, including the privilege of uniting with any association, convention or other body willing to receive it.

That is, any Baptist church is at liberty to send representatives to as many such organizations at the same time as may seem advisable both to it and to each organization involved. It may have no representation in any such organization and still be in all vital respects a valid Baptist church. The vote of any such organization debarring a church from representation cannot take away from the church either its character or its full power to function in its own field as a Baptist church.

Moreover, a church is at liberty to withdraw from cooperation with any other church, association or other organization, but in doing so its action affects only the organization immediately concerned. There is no tribunal that can call it to account for such action. The effect is simply to discontinue or reject a specific mode of voluntary cooperation.

Councils of recognition are similarly limited. No such council, however constituted, can constitute or validate a Baptist church. All it can do is to say whether in its judgment the particular church under consideration ought to be received into the cooperative fellowship of other Baptist churches. All other Baptists are free to follow the judgment of the council or not, according to their own judgment.

In short, all Baptist churches are fully and equally free, self-constituted, self-defined and self-governed. Each under the headship of Christ and under direct responsibility to him, has all the authority to act that he has given to any assembly in the world. Thus, a Baptist church is the living embodiment of spiritual freedom, mutuality and voluntariness in Christian fellowship. To depart from this principle is to set out on the road to Rome.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

If Eventual and Inevitable,
Why not Frankly Face It Now?

The Dearborn Independent, Henry Ford's paper, has not been conspicuous for international leanings. In fact it has seemed to lean backward the other way. But in the issue of July 3 it assumes the role of prophet and foretells the "United States of the World." Curiously and characteristically it discovers two factors of international understanding and fraternity that will do what ethics, sermons, conferences and treaties have failed to do in the way of bringing about world union. What are they? Can you not guess the Ford answer? They are the radio and the airplane. The formula is true but too simple. It ignores the hundreds of ways in which international co-operation is already carried on. But it is interesting for the faith it proclaims that "eventually there will be a United States of the world." In spite of the fact that the article containing this prophecy repeatedly disparages treaties and sermons as futilities, we may ask one question: Would there be any harm in preachers telling the people to begin to think in terms of world union?

A Brother, Seriously Disturbed, Wants to Know Some Things

In a note he says: "You have a great deal to say about prohibition, the social gospel, etc. Yet the divorce question is the biggest one before the United States today, and you never say a word about it. A former pastor said to me, 'There is not a Baptist church in the whole state that does not have divorces in it.' . . . Pastor — said to me, 'If you raise the subject of divorce, you will break up the Northern Baptist Convention.' The pastor of — said to me, 'If I preached on the subject I should lose my job.' What can you expect from a hypocritical, backslidden church which demands entertainment but never hears of sin and repentance?" Well, he must be living in a queer community and coming into contact with some queer preachers. Divorce has been discussed on this page. The assistant editor has never met a preacher who was not free to preach about divorce, and is not acquainted with any hypocritical, backslidden church that never hears of sin and repentance." This brother seems to be situated somewhat like Lot in Sodom. He deserves sympathy. THE BAPTIST will be glad to assist him in bearing Christian testimony among his neighbors.

all It Socialistic and thus Popularize Socialism

What a queer kink comes into some people's thinking! For instance, socialism is popularly supposed to be a plan for taking property from those who have it and giving it to those who have none. The opponents of socialism could hardly wish for people to think of it otherwise, for socialism, so conceived, has not a ghost of a chance of winning in America. The very idea kills it. But instead of letting it sell enough alone, they advertise almost every proposal for public welfare and for a more efficient community life as socialistic. Housing schemes, proposals for the municipal ownership of water works, industrial insurance, co-operative organizations of farmers, the child labor amendment, the peace movement and dozens of other suggestions for human betterment, are denounced as socialism. Thus the Chicago Journal of Commerce refers to the new housing law in New York as an "experiment in socialism." Such a law may properly be discussed on its merits. But when effort is made to forestall discussion by attaching to the measure the label of socialism, the argument works the other way. It leads people to understand that socialism is not dividing up wealth but that it is a program for the public welfare. Every time such an argument finds its way into the papers there is joy in every little socialist group in the land. Even this page, "The World in Transit," has been called socialistic. Does the critic really want the public to think so?

Preparing to Make the U. S.

Cotton Grower Look Like a Pygmy

About a year ago attention was called on this page of THE BAPTIST to the development of a promising cotton area in the Soudan, and the possibility of building up a rival to the southern part of the United States in the production of cotton. Now comes Joseph Leeming in the Review of Reviews with a story of the British Empire Cotton-Growing Association, in which he shows that plans are on foot to develop the industry in various parts of the empire on a scale that reduces the American cotton belt to insignificance. All of which raises the question which the people of the United States have steadily refused to face, namely: What are we going to do when the market of the world no longer consumes our commercial surplus? Find the answer to that question and you find a lot of interesting corollaries.

Beat Efficiency or

Do Not Bite Its Heels

In the United States there are said to be eighty-nine million Protestants and seventeen million Roman Catholics. Figures often appear showing the large proportion of Catholics in the public schools and other positions of public service or control. The precise figures are not material, but the fact of Catholic domination invites attention. Is it a sinister development threatening harm to American institutions? Those who care to discuss that phase of the subject may do so. But no matter how much danger there may be in the threat of Catholic domination, the political apathy and incompetency of Protestants is a greater one. The Catholic church has a definite social program; Protestants as a group have not. Catholics pull together; Protestants pull apart. Catholics are making an intelligent contribution, whatever one may think of its quality, to the creation of future America. What contribution are Protestants, as such and unitedly, making? Naturally, they are protesting; but nations are not built on resentment. Protestantism, defined in terms of a free faith, has made, of course, a priceless contribution to world welfare. Let Protestants of the present generation follow it up, unitedly and constructively.

Men Have Died for a Smaller Thing Than Buttons

It is matter of news that in a recent meeting of the Mennonites there was warm discussion over the question whether members should be permitted to adopt the modern innovation of using buttons rather than hooks and eyes on their garments. If so, why not? Anything, when it has a religious attachment, can become a vital principle. Gibbon relates, with a relish natural to an unbeliever of his temper, how the Greek Christians used to break one another's heads over the question whether homoousion or homoiousion expresses the true doctrine. Some refuse "on principle" to use an artificial pool in baptizing. Others, "on principle," object to a cross on the church steeple. If one fails to remove his hat and stand at "attention" when the flag passes, the "mode" for the militant patriot is to knock him down. Great is the god, Tabu.

How to Be Angry

BY BERNARD C. CLAUSEN

IT IS almost a lost art. So few people know how to do it well. Yet it is worth all the trouble it takes to master it.

Decades ago a young man sat in the kitchen of an English cottage watching a kettle boil.

He felt certain that this mystifying energy of hot water brought to a boiling point could be harnessed to do the work of mankind. And his clever fingers began to cooperate with his clear brain as he experimented.

Meanwhile, all of scientific England divided itself into three parts as the news of James Watt's ideas penetrated. One group knew only one thing about steam—that it would explode. Members of this group recounted the frightful stories of accidents incurred by those who played with it. They felt sure that the devil was in it. And they decided unanimously to shun it.

There were others who forgot all about its explosive power, under the spell of its power. Remembering only that steam had locked up in itself the secret of possible magic, they were foolishly careless in their plans, placed themselves in the path of any risk, and wrote a long record of holocausts as they demonstrated their own foolhardiness.

The Knowledgeable Group

Fortunately enough, there was a third group which knew two things about steam—that it would explode and that it would propel. Realizing both the peril and possibility of this intriguing element, they began to minimize the dangers by safety devices and control implements, while they developed a technique for utilizing its force. They soon learned that three things were necessary if any practical use were to be made of steam. It must be made steady in the application of its power. The vast waste in its futile explosions, when in a moment huge waves of energy are dispersed with a roar of ruin, must be spread over hours of consistent toil. This steady thrust must be self-contained within a mechanism that allows a minimum of wastage. Some scheme must be arranged whereby the steam is turned inward through pipes and valves, instead of being exhausted in the useless whistles or impressive clouds of white mist. Most important of all, the energy, controlled and directed, must be delivered to a point of service, where it can actually turn some wheels, revolve some gears, push some waiting piston, and help to do the work of mankind. No steam engine can be justified merely because it prevents explosions and pipes its pressure. Its whole reason for being depends upon its efficiency at the point where its neat design and sturdy strength result in power rendered up for men's purposes. Working steadily at these three ideals, with full realization of their danger, and sincere appreciation of their promise, the real scientists of England finally developed a technique for handling steam. And the whole structure of modern industrial civilization is built upon their pioneer efforts.

Anger is steam. It can explode and it can produce power.

Some people have only fear of its explosive caprices. They have watched it waste itself in fits of ruinous futility. They say that the devil is in it. They determine to shun it altogether. They are ashamed of the flush of ire. They believe that wrath is a fell sin. So they do their best to repress every wave of resentment and conscientiously cultivate the quiet virtue of meekness. Sooner or later they degenerate into weak, placid, colorless individuals who retain no power of protest or proposal. They have successfully tamed themselves, in the name of the gentle Jesus. Nietzsche, the great German philosopher, thought that this pitiable repression of anger was typical Christianity. He pilloried such spineless invalids, and raved against a faith that transformed men into deliberately powerless weakling souls, feeding upon the thin gruel of a slavish religion.

At the other extreme are the people who profess to have no fear of anger at all. They know that it is natural. They claim that it is biologically justified. Insufficiently aware of its threats, they take perilous risks, making a particular attempt to master it. So they go from fit to fit of shameless fury, expressing their rage in words and actions as unreasonable as the kicking and squalling of children.

Between these two extremes, are the people, comparatively few in number, who have recognized anger as the combination of peril and promise that it really is. They have sensed its dangers fully, and have proceeded carefully to control and minimize them. But they have sensed its power too, and they have striven with all their ingenuity to utilize it. Upon these students of the technique of anger, the hope of our involved civilization rests. And chief among them, as innovator and as teacher, is Jesus of Nazareth.

The Cleansing of the Temple

The classic example of his consummate skill is found in the story called the cleansing of the temple. It appears in the narrative of all four gospels—one of the few pieces of the mosaic to escape omission from at least one panel. At first glance, it seems to be a simple tale of sudden, explosive ire, wreaking its way in a storm of indignant rebuke. John and Matthew and Luke give us no clue to any distinctive feature of Christ's wrath. He seems to have blazed away at the money-changers just as we do when our tempers are at their worst. It is only when we read for a second time the naive gospel of Mark, that we discover how unique an example in the art of anger this episode presents. For Mark tells us that he came into Jerusalem on the afternoon of a day, and looked all about and entered the temple and observed what was going on there. Then he went back with his disciples to Bethany, spent the night there, with the shameful scenes of the vile desecration etched upon his mind. He "slept upon it," as we say. The next morning, when the explosive force of his wrath had been transformed into the steady determination of controlled anger, and the force had been turned inward upon himself, so that he was willing to choose a death which would almost certainly precipitate his death—only then did he make the connection between his resentment and his deeds, acting out in the drama of his choosing, the fiery convictions of his ire.

Of course, all this seems to be a flat contradiction of that Biblical injunction, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." These words, written to the Ephesian Christians, have been used often as scriptural justification of sudden outbursts of anger, on the theory that the sooner the explosion is over, the better for all concerned. Yet Jesus quite obviously did let the sun go down and rise again upon the anger which the temple scene had aroused and he kept that anger intact until he returned to the scene the next day. It looks like a case of clear conflict between a word of wisdom and an act of Jesus.

But read Paul's verse from beginning to end, and you will discover that verse and deed are in perfect accord.

The Ephesian injunction opens with the words "Be angry." And the verse itself is a translation of an ancient psalm, where the language is even more vivid. "Tremble with anger," says the original Hebrew. "Let anger sweep you like a storm, but get some real use out of it." "Be angry," translated Paul, "and sin not." Do not let your ire betray you into futile fury. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." But "wrath," used in the conclusion, is not the same word as "anger," used in the prelude. This wrath, which is not to be allowed to survive the night is resentment, which wastes itself on others and refuses to be turned in upon one's self. The ancient psalm version puts it clearly, "Think your anger over carefully in the stillness of the night upon your couch, rebuke your own heart with judgment, and the next morning get up and do something useful about it."

Strict obedience to this dictum was the key to Christ's action, when with rage boiling at the sight of beasts and apacious men in the temple precincts, he refused to explode at once, was not satisfied to blow the whistle of verbal protest, but sending the steam through the valves of his own life, used it at the last in a scene of dramatic power whose significance the world will never forget.

Do you care to see an example or two of how not to be angry? Watch Stan Harris in the recent World Series baseball games. One of the finest, brainiest men in the league, he had the misfortune to fall into a batting slump at the most crucial period in his career. He became angry, quite naturally. But the anger was not the steady anger which uses itself up in solemn determination, instead it was displayed in irascible outbursts of temper, disputing the decisions that resulted in his downfall. It did not lead him to blame himself, and lift himself to his own best standards, instead it betrayed him into futile resentment toward the pitchers, the umpires, the crowd, and the world in general. It was not led back through himself to a place where it bettered his batting, instead it culminated in nasty displays of meanness, and even led to the writing of a whining interview which the newspapers broadcast to his shame.

That is no way to be angry.

Watch the average good citizen "getting mad" about the enforcement of prohibition! Does he turn his rage into steady power for good? Does he register and vote and study more conscientiously toward cleaner practical politics? Does he ask "What ought I to do about it?" Nay rather, he condemns the government, inveighs against crooked politicians, wants to make somebody else be good, and then forgets it all before the next primary day when he might actually affect the situation. The typical reaction toward shameful conditions exposed to righteous men's indignation, is a comparatively complacent resolution, "Some day some body ought to pass a law to make those people behave themselves." That is no way to be angry.

Watch Father Damion, the young Catholic priest, bristling with rage as he hears the horrible tales of the leper colonies at Molokai. He buries those scenes in his mind. He rebukes himself for those worldly ambitions which make him long for a big church and an influential pulpit, and make him loathe the thought of life on that lonely barren of pain. Then he goes, months afterwards, himself to touch those rotting wounds, to minister in the intimacies of this misery, and at the last to die of the dread disease. That is the way to be angry!

Watch Abraham Lincoln, lank, swarthy back-woodsman, standing near a slaveblock in a Southern city. He sees for the first time in his life that hideous transaction which barter human flesh as if it were chattel property. He sees callous men pluck at soft brown skin and appraise sobbing women in terms of slave service. And he grows angry, with a terrible rage, that will not die. He says under his breath as he stands there, "If I ever get a chance to hit that thing, I will hit it hard."

Then he made the chances, month after month through that great adventure, which led him from his back-woods home, into the White House, into the lonely room where he prayed as the battle-tide ebbed and flowed, into the valley of death, when the shot rang out and hate crushed him. But before he died he had hit that thing, and hit it hard! That is the way to be angry!

Youth in the Saddle Again

BY A. T. ROBINSON

HAD the pleasure of occupying a back seat at the B. Y. P. U. A. Convention in Los Angeles. The sight was inspiring and reassuring. The central theme was happily chosen, and the speakers proved loyal to it. Neighborhood was in flower once more, and the ably conducted sessions ran through "with the smooth and rhythmic flow of goos grease," as Bill Nye might put it. The speakers were both able and direct and the blessings of God rested on their labors, for the response to the Life League's call was something not soon to be forgotten.

Two things about the convention particularly impressed me. One was the universal modesty in dress shown by the young ladies in spite of flapper jibes, and the other was the fact that it was what it claimed to be—a convention of young people.

When the B. Y. P. U. A. was born, it was born to meet a need. They said, "Young life doesn't get a chance in the mid-week service of the church. Young people feel inhibited in the presence of their elders, do not express themselves at all adequately, and therefore do not properly develop. Let us give them a meeting of their own."

This was admirably conceived, but alas, an ecclesiastical tragedy happened: The young people were allowed to meet on Sunday. The result was that Sunday became badly congested. Something had to go by the board. They felt they had to be loyal to their own meeting, and the thing to let up on was the evening service. A few experiments of that kind and it became easy. As life rolled on and marriage, babies and business rolled up, it became increasingly easy to skip the evening service. It came to be a good time to take the air or to discharge social obligations, and the man of God in the pulpit, just in the hour when above all others he needed them, found his hands weakened and his work getting a black eye by their conspicuous absence. Their absence encouraged others to stay away and so the one greatest evangelistic opportunity of church and pastor gradually shrivelled up for lack of its young blood, till now in many a town two or three congregations unite, in hope of getting half a crowd at the Sunday evening service—the great recruiting ground of the church—and Doctor Agar in the course of a powerful address can tell us that 52 per cent of the church members think they can get along very well without going near the church at all.

Over in Canada the young people were never allowed to meet on Sunday. The result is that the young people are on hand at the evening service. It is the big service of the day and Adolphus goes home with his "best girl" after church. Their union meets on a week night. That allows one hour for devotional and another hour for social and recreational activities. Incidentally, timid Romeos get two chances to see the girl during the week, and they learn to have their good times around the house of God where they ought to have them.

If we let the world, the flesh and the devil have our young people six nights out of seven, is it any wonder that the center of gravity of the life falls outside the church, and its strength is given to lodges, clubs and school fraternities instead of to Jesus Christ?

The striking thing about that convention was that it consisted of young people. Thirteen years ago, or thereabouts, I dropped into a great Christian Endeavor convention in that city. There were grey heads everywhere. I said, "Where are the young people?" Those folk had started young and grew old in the order without knowing it. Meanwhile a new generation that knew not Joseph was coming up. Now that the Grim Reaper and the burden of advancing years have done their work, it seems that youth is again to have a chance. Let them get an automatic ejector that operates at thirty-five for most national offices, and thirty for the local society, and they will keep it young forever. Youth is in the saddle, let it ride. All that is lost in wisdom will be more than gained in enthusiasm and loyal devotion.

The Pope's Invitation Is Declined

BY GEORGE W. McDANIEL, PRESIDENT OF THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

SINCE the papacy was rightly dispossessed of its temporal power the successive popes have been voluntary prisoners in the Vatican. They have affirmed that they will never leave the Vatican until that temporal power is restored. Let us hope that this will be never.

However, a pope was recently present in the United States for the first time in history, not in his own person, but in the person of his official representative, the papal prelate, John Cardinal Bonzano, who was invested with all the power of Pius XI.

The prelate read an invitation at Chicago requesting all Christians in the United States to "return to the mother church." That invitation included Baptists. Southern Baptists reply as follows: "Dear Mr. Bonzano: We have read your official, public invitation 'to return to the mother church' and courtesy demands that we reply. We respectfully but flatly decline your invitation. A decent respect for public opinion requires that we declare the reasons which prompt our declination.

"1. We decline because we do not recognize Rome as 'the mother church.' The mother church was democratic and congregational; your church is autocratic and hierarchical. The mother church observed two ordinances; your church observes seven. The mother church had but two classes of officers, pastors and deacons; your church has a numerous graduation of officers with rank and station foreign to the New Testament. The mother church was a spiritual group claiming no secular power; your church is a world organization asserting temporal power over all rulers and governments. The mother church was local; your church is territorial. The mother church was a divine democracy; your church is a tyrannical hierarchy. The mother church had one executor, the Holy Spirit; your church had a different executor, the pope. The head of the mother church is in heaven; the head of your church is in the Vatican. You must appreciate, therefore, our utter inability to find any marks which would identify your church with 'the mother church.'

"2. Furthermore, we must decline your invitation because we are citizens of the United States and owe supreme and sole political allegiance to this country. Our government was founded by Anglo-Saxons but among all the cardinals who landed with you not one was an Anglo-Saxon. We have been taught that our president serves by the will of the people; you believe that he should hold office by the grace of the pope. We hold that our duties to God and state are separate and do not conflict; you hold that they are one and are owed first to the pope. As loyal Americans, we cannot place ourselves in a position where our allegiance to the 'supreme pontiff' might conflict with our allegiance to our country. The coalition between Pius XI and Mussolini disinclines us all the more. The black-shirted followers of fascism and the Knights of Columbus are one and the same in some American cities. We know too much about them to want to be like them.

"3. Again, we decline your invitation because we are freemen and believe in freedom. Every man has the right to think for himself; you teach that the church must think for him. Our constitution guarantees against 'abridging the freedom of speech or of the press'; your church uses this liberty in the United States but abridges it wherever it has the power and can thereby subserve its ends. We hold that the conscience is free; you hold that the church has authority over the conscience. We hold that the individual has direct access to God through Christ and is free to petition directly for the forgiveness of his sins; you hold that forgiveness of sins is only through the priest and those whose sins are not so remitted are 'bound.' We hold that every man is competent and free to act for himself in religion; you deny this competency and bind the soul in priestcraft. Our views and convictions are so radically different from yours that you could not expect us to accept the invitation.

"In a sentence, Mr. Bonzano, because we are loyal to the Bible, because we are loyal to this government, because we are loyal to freedom, and because we are loyal to Christ, we decline your invitation.

"Though we cannot go with you, we invite you to come and go with us. Divest yourself of superstition, abandon idolatry, return to the clear teachings of the New Testament, 'know the truth and the truth shall make you free.' You will find an enlightenment and a freedom which will rejoice your soul."

THE need of our country is not to lift marble to the fortieth story of some new office building, but to lift the level of character; not to whiten the seas with the sails of our commerce, but to develop those simple fidelities and homely virtues which are the chief defense of nations. When Tennyson wrote "The Crossing of the Bar," he did more for civilization than if he had built an ocean-liner or man-of-war. Robert Stevenson did much for England when he built the lighthouses which send their radiance each night over the tossing waters of the channel. But we owe far more to his grandson, Robert Louis Stevenson, because he taught us how to kindle a light within, how to keep the soul serene and steadfast in the face of pain and death. The men who deepen the quality of our living, are the real benefactors and educators of the world.—W. H. P. Faunce.

The Devotional Life

Going Somewhere

"Keep true wisdom and reflection; then shalt thou go thy way securely and thy foot shall not stumble."—Prov. 3:21-23

THE only way to be satisfied with life is to be going somewhere. Not merely to be going on a vacation, or coming home, but on a journey with a chosen end. Sorrow and decay and sad disillusionment are for the stagnant souls; the singing hearts are always on the road. This thought and wish of going somewhere is that which gives its buoyancy to youth. The absence of it is what often seems to make old age dreary. The old man talks as if his whole career were ended. He consents to be a derelict, floating on the surface, washed by the waves and becomes the dull prey of winds and currents. What a vast difference when you meet a cheery, forward-looking, young in soul though old in years, believer! He is going somewhere and he expects to be met by his best friend upon the way.

A High Goal

We live, after the first dependent years, by our incentives and ambitions. Our eyes run down the time-table and stop upon the name of some station at which we plan to arrive. We have chosen an aim and we go toward it, stumbling at times and for the moment hindered or turned back; but never turning back in the purpose of our souls. If it is a little purpose we have chosen—some petty gain or pleasure—that only goes to prove that upon this side of our souls at least we are only little people. We are happiest when we have set our goal so high, so far beyond the bounds of our mortal life, that the misadventures and vexations of the moment are reduced at once to their relative unimportance in the scheme of things. If I am going to climb the mountain, why should I be bitterly distressed because there are rolling pebble-stones upon the path? If we are going somewhere we must accept with a good grace the trials of the way. We have set our hearts upon the goal, we must accept the dust and sweat of running.

In the case of Christians this does not, however, mean that they are to be so absorbed in ecstatic visions of the joy to be attained that they are forgetful of the joys and duties and opportunities along the road. Our present business is to occupy. Personally I have largely outgrown the static thought of the goal of Christian pilgrimage. I am not willing to exclude from my imagination the sense of movement and adventure in the heaven to be attained. Even in our weariest hours, when the thought of heaven as rest is sweet, are we not thinking of refreshment rather than of lassitude as our reward? But the life with Christ beyond what we call death can never be a lazy, as it must always be a restful life. There are times, no doubt, when we feel as if it would be paradise enough to fold our hands and never do a stroke of work or take a thought of responsibility forever. It is normal to be weary, but it is not normal to wish at night, when we lay our heads upon the pillow, that we may never wake.

Do not think, then, of the Christian's heaven as a stagnant and unchanging place. It is not, I believe, so much a place as an experience, and it is an experience which may begin today in the believing and obedient soul. It helps you, no doubt, to go to your place of common worship on Sunday morning and I hope you get some special visions of God's presence and communion there.

Preparing for the Journey

People who are going somewhere will be wise if they make preparation for the journey. In the ordinary journeys which they plan they are apt to speak about it more or less as they have opportunity. How often I have heard people talk about going abroad and the sights they wished to see and the pleasures they expected to enjoy! They are sometimes overflowing with their joyful anticipations. But it is not always so with Christians. There is my friend Droupington! I suppose he expects to go to heaven; but you would never guess it from anything he does or says. Perhaps the fear of dying hangs like a black curtain across the window of his faith to shut out all the light and joy of the sunrising. He reminds me of the story I heard long ago of the slave and valet of a rich man in the South who answered the hope of a friend that his dead master had gone to heaven by saying: "I's afraid he has not gone dar, fur I nebber heard him speak ob dat. When he go to de Norf', or to Virginny Springs, he allus be gettin' ready fur weeks. I never see him gittin' ready fur goin' to heben."

Companions on the Way

One comfort of our going somewhere is that it insures us congenial companionships along the way of life. There are, indeed, lonely souls, so far in advance of their generation that they must make their way in solitude. But for most of us it is a comfort that the choice of a journey's end is the assurance of like-minded companionship along the road. The true way of loneliness is to be going nowhere. If you want solitude you will find it in an unpurposed life. But if you are going somewhere—even if it be only to Pisa to see the leaning tower, you are sure to find companions of like purpose on the way. No one need fear walking in solitude, if only he goes on a definite journey. The solitary places are where the pleasure seekers gather to while away their hours or at the selfish bed and table to which you creep back weary of the aimless world and the vain search for joy.

More and more our search into the hidden places of the universe reveals that everything is in motion and that nothing stands still. Nothing, that is, except the aimless life of a man. A tempest of motion continually goes on in the least of the elements. A soul that is going nowhere is an unnatural exception to the general rule. "Come" and "Go" are the divine words and the human opportunities. We solve our problems as we go. We meet our joys or overtake them. We find our true companions, divine and human, in the adventure of the journey toward our chosen goal.—From Saturday Night Thoughts in Boston Transcript.

The Chimney Corner

Values

BY CANDACE RUSSELL

THE Blakes had led a happy life until financial prosperity came to the Condons, who lived below them in the bay-windowed, red-brick, two-flat building, cheap because not very modern and far enough from the railroad to avoid frequent showers of soot that rained down with the passing of every train. But the flats were pleasant inside, for Mrs. Condon had an eye for color and had studied interior decorating. Without spending much money she had transformed the rooms into an attractive, restful home.

And then tragedy in the form of a children's scourge stalked down the windy, sooty, treeless street, stopped at the red-brick flat and took away the two Condon children.

"If it had only been one of each of ours instead of both of yours," cried Nona Blake, her heart torn for her friend.

When melancholy brooded over Ethel Condon like a black cloud long after she should have become reconciled to the going of the children, the doctor was called and said she must do something to get out of herself.

"There's nothing to do since the children are gone," she replied.

"Ever work?" asked the plump little man, eyeing her with shrewd brown eyes behind horn-rimmed spectacles.

"I've studied interior decorating and worked at it a little before I was married."

"Work at it a little more," he said. "That's a prescription, mind you."

So Ethel Condon, after a few weeks in proving her ability, was receiving a salary of $4000 a year. Mr. Condon, proud of his wife's ability, boasted of it: "Isn't she a wonder to pull down a salary like that? Look at me, getting only $3000 after sitting on an accountant's stool for thirteen years."

Mr. Blake mumbled a reply, but was not keen enough to retort that perhaps if his friend had not sat on the accountant's stool for so long he might have done better. He himself was getting less than his friend. He set his $2800 against the Condon's $7000 and his blue eyes turned to green. He became irritable; he refused to give Nona money except for most urgent needs; and at last what was brewing in his mind effervesced.

"If Ethel Condon can earn extra money I should think you might, too," he said one evening.

"But you know why she took a position," said Nona.

"I know why she started. But I don't know that she's keeping on for that same reason."

Once he had expressed himself, Mr. Blake harped on the subject until Nona was forced to confide in Ethel Condon.

"Give me the children for a month," suggested Ethel. "I'm having my vacation and we're going to California. The kind of work you're doing right at home is the most in demand of any work I know of."

A few days later Mr. Blake came home to a dark, silent flat. In the dining-room he found the table set for one and a note beside his plate which explained: "Ethel has the children and they've gone to California. I'm working—for money. I'm housekeeper at the Arms hotel for $125 a month."

Laboriously, Mr. Blake prepared a supper that stuck in his throat. By the time he had finished the dishes it was nine o'clock. He usually read the paper from seven to nine. Tonight he had time only to glance at the headlines. It took him an hour to get breakfast—scorched bacon, burned toast and watery coffee—and he was half an hour late at the office.

It dawned on him that perhaps Nona had done something more than merely putter. And as the days passed and he tried to keep a clean house, get meals, send out laundry, do the marketing, sew on buttons and do the other dozen or more jobs that had seemed nothing at all under Nona's management, he began to feel abased because of his injustice toward her. During all of this time he did not see Nona.

He put $100 in the bank that month, but savored small satisfaction from it. He felt that he would gladly make it but twenty to have Nona and the children back and the old cheerful, noisy flat, fragrant with Nona's cooking and bright with the cleanliness brought by her skillful management.

Then, from a friend of the Condons who rode on the same train with him, Mr. Blake heard a piece of news that tore his heart.

"Say, d'you hear about the Condons?" asked Bennett. "They've adopted two children about the age of theirs that died, and Ethel's given up that job of hers. Think of turning down $4000 a year for a couple of kids that aren't your own! I don't know how they get that way!"

The knife turned in Mr. Blake's sore heart. He was only a humdrum clerk and wasn't sure but that a man's children could be adopted away from him without his consent.

That night he went to see Nona. She met him in a deserted back parlor of the hotel. To his utter surprise, as well as to Nona's, he bowed his gray head on the ugly, marble-topped center table and wept.

"Is Ethel trying to adopt our children?" he asked brokenly. "What'll you take to come back home, Nona? I'm going to do something to get a raise, and you can have every cent of it for your own spending money—"

"Dear heart," said Nona, tenderly, running her plump hand through the shock of rumpled hair, "I'm not asking for pay to come home. I only need to know that you want to take care of me—"

"Want to! Oh Nonie!"

"And I've just had a letter from Ethel. She and Mr. Condon and the children are coming back tomorrow. It's not our children she's adopting—but she said after having ours for a month she knew she could not live any longer without children. So she's taken two from out there for her own. And she's giving up her $4000-a-year job—"

"I know all about that," said Mr. Blake. "And I'll say she shows some sense. Money's all very well, but it shows up pretty small when you haven't anything to live for."

Knotting the Comfortable

"WHAT are you doing?" I asked the president of the ladies' aid, who was folding a newspaper into a four-inch square and then cutting off the corner writes D. Rolfe in the Country Gentleman.

"I am making the pattern for the comfortable we are to tie this afternoon. I take a large section of newspaper or a large piece of wrapping paper and fold it into a four-inch square—if we were planning to knot the comfortable every three inches I should fold the paper into a three-inch square. The size of the square depends on the spacing of the knots. Then cut off the corners and we have a guide or pattern that will very easily enable us to tie or knot the comfortable evenly."

"See," and she unfolded the paper and spread it out over the comfortable which was already in the frames. "Now, you can take a pencil, or better, this stilett and insert it into each one of the holes in the paper, twisting it sharply into the comfortable. Then when the paper is removed it will be ready for knotting."

"It is far easier than measuring each knot separately, or than using string and chalk. Of course, the larger the paper pattern the fewer times it will have to be moved to cover the entire comfortable."

"Where many comfortable are to be tied, it is often an advantage to take the time to make a full-sized pattern."

Caught by the Blue Pencil

"As soon as you decide please leave me know what you are going to do."

Substitute let for leave.

"Either of these three books will meet your need." The word either suggests the choice of two books. Substitute any one.

BOYS and GIRLS

Slant-Eyes and Pig-Tails

BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

EVERYTHING about her was so very different, that it was no wonder Betty looked at her in utter surprise. For she had—yes really, my dears!—she had three pig-tails hanging down her back, three! And each of them was finished off with some red cotton woven in with the hair at the ends to make those little braids seem even longer than they really were.

Betty looked and looked, and counted and counted. Yes, there certainly were three of them. Somewhere it must be stylish to have three! And that was the first surprising thing about this different new girl.

The next thing was just as strange, for she certainly was a little girl, yet she always wore trousers! Sometimes blue cotton trousers with a blue cotton jacket, and sometimes—on very special occasions—green silk trousers, with a red silk jacket, oh, very grogeous!

Moreover, this little girl's eyes slanted up at the corners. Then, as if this wasn't enough to surprise Betty, let me add that when Betty went up and asked her why in the world she had three pig-tails and rousers, this curious child very shyly said something that sounded exactly like S, t, u, v, w, x, y, z!"

"Is—is—that a sentence, or—or—just he-alphabet?" poor Betty stammered. Whereupon Slant-Eyes and Pig-Tails replied even more shyly: "L, m, n, o, p, q, r, s!" At least that's how it sounded, although it really made beautiful sense in her own language. But Betty discovered how hard it was to make friends with sentences that sounded like A B C's.

She dug her toes into the mud, and wondered what to do next, when the mud seemed to say to her: "Mud pies, of course!" For surely you can see what Betty at once discovered—that mud pies are the same good fun in any language. So they made them all morning in the alley: round mud pies, heart-shaped pies, square ones. It was lots of fun. Then Betty found two clothespins and easily turned them into dolls by twisting bits of paper around them for dresses, making eyes and noses and mouths on their little round heads with a pencil. Slant-Eyes and Pig-Tails giggled and giggled, saying a great many excited sentences about them, only every sentence sounded like Betty like: "F, g, h, i, j, k, l!"

Betty had never been so altogether surprised. What was this strange child talking about, anyway?

"I know what I'll have to do," she suddenly cried, "I'll just have to teach her to talk English. It will be like playing school. See this, Slant-Eyes, well it's mud. Now you say it—"mud," come on!" "Mud!" said Slant-Eyes, dimpling all over.

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

"And this is a stone. Now you say it—"stone!"

"Stone!" repeated Slant-Eyes, giggling. Such a funny game!

Then Betty pointed to herself: "I'm a girl," she said, and you're a girl, too. Say that."

"Girl!" laughed Slant-Eyes.

"That's fine," praised Teacher-Betty, then pointing to mud she said: "Now, what's that called?"

"Stone!" shouted the new pupil, loudly.

"No! no! Mud. Now what am I?"

"Mud!" sighed the poor little pupil, eager to please.

"Oh, dear," cried Betty to herself, "we aren't getting anywhere. I'll just begin all over again. . . ."

So they played English lessons all morning long. But because you have always talked English ever since you talked anything at all, you have no idea how hard it is to learn the strange, long words of somebody else's language. But Betty tried, and Slant-Eyes tried, until one wonderful day, a week later, when she ran over to greet Betty with the smiling welcome: "Goodbye, girl! Come again!"

"Oh me, oh my!" sighed Betty, "you're all upside down, for that's the thing to say when you're going home, not when you're just coming. But never mind, you meant all right, and it was a real sentence. Sometime soon you're going to talk and talk and talk. Let's play store today, Slant-Eyes. Now this is potato, this is rice, these are beans. I'll be the storekeeper. Good morning, madam, what can I sell you today?"

"Mud," cried Slant-Eyes, dimpling. For alas, mud was the first word she had learned, and she used it on every occasion.

This is the side of the story as far as Betty knew it; but of course there's another side, for every little girl has some sort of a home where she eats and sleeps, so suppose we tag along after Slant-Eyes like invisible shadows.

Oh, what dismal alleys she goes through, what broken fences, what horrid smells! Then when we get indoors, what rickety stairs, and what dark, dark halls. When we reach a certain door, we hurry in after Slant-Eyes, and there sits her mother, doing nothing, just holding her own hands, doing nothing. She does it all day, for she is lonesome. She does not know anybody in town. If she goes out on the street the strange unknown noises frighten her; she can not go into stores, because she can not speak English; she has no books or newspapers, because she does not know how to read a single word, even in her own language. She cooks the rice for the meals; then she sits and sits and sits. Homesick, homesick for faraway China where she used to live.

But one day her little daughter came rushing home, with smiles all over her dear yellow face.

"Kind mother," cried this dimpling girl, speaking in the Chinese language, of course (the one that sounded like "V, w, x, y, z" to poor Betty), "Kind mother, there is a celestial little American in the next alley and we play heavenly games with each other, and I learn this queer American speech most beautifully. Now listen while I tell you—for the wetness of dirt in the alley is known as mud. Now you say it—"mud."

"Mud," repeated the lonely mother.

Of course there is no time to tell you how every single word that Slant-Eyes learned, her mother finally learned, too. It took a great many playtimes, but little by little the new words became familiar and pleasant to say. Then one proud day some one knocked at the door, and the mother of Slant-Eyes called in perfect English: "Come in, thank you!"

She really should have said please instead of thank you, but that was a small mistake to our Miss Missionary, who had heard of these Chinese strangers and had come to call. She was delighted that they knew any English at all, and invited them to come to a place called a church the next afternoon. There would be other Chinese people there.

"I come with happy foots," cried the mother of Slant-Eyes, "but what are church? Me learn much fine American words—mud and girl and school and store and money but me no learn church."

But Slant-Eyes had just come in and said: "Kind mother, I play 'church' with Betty all this day. It is most beautiful, for church are a place where Americans sing this nice little sing, you listen with your honorable ears," and she tilted back her head and sang in English:

*"Jesus loves me, this I know
For the Bible tells me so;
Little ones to him belong,
They are weak, but he is strong."*

"Happy! Happy!" cried the lonesome Chinese mother, for she seemed to feel right away how the church would fill up the dreadful empty days. And of course it did. But you and I can easily see how Betty also helped by playing the spirit of America right into dear little Slant-Eyes.

REV. S. A. NELSON and wife are now serving at Valier, Montana.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for Aug. 29

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society. A few others may be added later.

Beginning with page 101 and continuing through 120 of "God's Dynamite" you will learn more about this topic.

In advance, pick out several stories in this chapter which will be most interesting and of most value to your group. Assign one each of these stories to several of your group members.

On the blackboard for the night of meeting, write at the top in succession "Stories of Balasore, India," "Wood," "Iron," "Human Lives." Draw vertical lines down the blackboard between each of these, with perhaps a double one between "Stories" and "Wood." Then as each story is told in meeting, write the names under "Stories" and have those present tell whether the prayer told about was in "Wood," "Iron," or "Human Lives." Whatever their decision is, put a check in that column. For example, the story on page 111 may cause a check to be placed in the last column.

It is essential that the first part of this meeting lead up to the lesson. Your introduction to the topic will necessarily have to create the right atmosphere. Perhaps before the stories are told the group may discuss the nature, province, and power of prayer, showing that "all work is worship."

This meeting should also end with a period of prayer, with the young people asking particular blessing upon our mission fields and workers.

Jewell

By BESSIE ANDREWS

On the heights of Jewell hill amid the glories of William Jewell college was held, for ten days, the Missouri assembly where friends became dearer and God became nearer.

One hundred and twenty-five young people popped out from under cover every morning at 6:15 with the ringing of an old school bell, to meet on the east steps of the dormitory for Morning Watch. Soon afterward the bell would say it was time for breakfast, and maybe there wasn't a grand rush for that! Around the tables were the young people who showed their enthusiasm and spirit. From the time "eats" were served until the last of the meal, songs and yells filled the air.

Four class periods took up the morning hours. Every class was attended with a great deal of interest. At the close of the assembly more awards were given than in any previous year.

Baseball, tennis, croquet, horseshoes, hikes, and parties were parts of the afternoon programs. While the sun was setting behind the trees, a faculty member would lead in the vesper services. It was at that time when the people received inspiration and vision to lead a higher and better Christian life and found what was their duty to their neighbors.

Three conferences were held during the assembly for people who could not be there for the entire period. These were the preachers', women's, and laymen's conferences, at which time an intensive program was presented.

The evening sessions closed with the coronation address by Dr. John L. Hill of Nashville, Tenn., on "Ready for the Will of God."

At the close of the assembly it was found that 479 registrations were recorded, more than in past years. With the backing of all the young people of northern Missouri, the Jewell assemblies will grow each year until they will become numbered among the greatest in America.

A Tither's Testimony

ELLA KINGSBURY WHITMORE

She was born in a log cabin, on an Iowa prairie. The parents of the four children of this home were from far-away New England. Meager the supplies were, through the troublous days of the Civil war; thrift and industry made much of little, and all was seasoned with the skill of a mother-love, surpassing that of any professional chef. Each day began with a chapter from the Bible, then all knelt, and the father asked God's blessing on the family. What courage and peace was with each one, after the simple petition, "Take us into thy kind care and keeping."

Those parents did not boast of their belief in every word of the Book, they lived it, in such fashion, that, as the time came for each child to choose which way he should go, the choice came thoughtfully and gladly, "I choose to follow the Good Shepherd, in the narrow way."

Isolated though they were, they kept in touch with world affairs through the weekly visits of The Christian Times, later The Standard, now THE BAPTIST.

Occasional visitors also were such faithful pioneers as Alva Bush, James Sunderland, A. W. Hilton and John E. Clough. These were spoken of as "Elder," as being a more scriptural term than Reverend, although all were young men.

When the girl I knew best was seventeen, now fifty years ago, she taught as best she could the neighborhood school. In her gratitude at earning the sum of $18 per month, for a term of four months, the natural wish of her heart was to lay aside one-tenth of this amount—$7.20 of the $72 received—for religious purposes. This gave her great joy, as did the opportunity two years later of uniting with the church of her parents' choice, now hers.

With added experience and ability, came increased wages and larger tithes. Some of her fellow teachers wondered at her benevolences, and thought she must have other income, but health and vigor increased, and ways of spending in which others indulged were no temptation to one who had tasted the joy of money well spent for higher purposes.

When she was persuaded to give up her loved occupation, to become the wife of a devoted layman of highest character, she was most happy to find that he had been a conscientious tither for many years. Together they continued the custom, thus being able for many happy years to accomplish more through the little village church than otherwise would have seemed possible.

If some pastor, longing for deeper spiritual life for his flock, might be persuaded to study the Bible on this subject, and preach and practice its teaching, God's promise is, "I will pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it." There would be increased gratitude and less grumbling, for "his mercy is great toward those that fear him."

How helpful it would be if many of our young people would adopt this plan. From how much that is foolish and deplorable they would be saved, if they systematically planned their spending, after rendering unto the Lord the part that is his.

To be sure, many of these directions and promises were given to the Jewish people, but should a Christian be meaner than a Jew? The Master commended tithing, while reproving the neglect of other duties. "These," said he, "ye ought to have done, and not have left the other undone."

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to give an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

OHIO CHURCHES

ARE RESPONDING

A statement by the department of missionary cooperation of the Ohio Baptist convention, published in the Ohio Baptist, says:

"We are encouraged in our work so far this year by three things in particular. The churches that have sent their contributions for May have almost invariably advanced over the remittances for the same period a year ago. 2. Many churches are seriously endeavoring to add at least one-twelfth every month. Some churches are setting objectives, and have pledges to warrant such objectives, that are much in advance of last year's total. For example, Calvary, Akron, sets a goal 37 per cent in advance and has sent for May within $2.20 of one-twelfth of its objective of $1700. Norwood has set an objective 30 per cent in advance and has sent $600 on an objective of $6500. These churches have made thorough canvasses and both make, as their supreme business, evangelism. It should be said that Calvary, Akron, contributes in addition over $250 for missionary work in Akron."

FAMILY NIGHT" AT

LANSING CHURCH

Pastor Ralph W. Hobbs, of the First Church of Lansing, Mich., makes the midweek service of such interest that attendance keeps up to a good record. Once each month is "family night" when the church is called for the several departments. A committee of three is appointed each month to arrange for some features of special interest for each meeting—special music, readings, or live missionary item. A surprising number of talented singing people have thus been discovered, from pastor reports.

THE "STEP-UP PLAN"

The First church of Camden, N. J., has a way of increasing the annual subscriptions for current expenses and missions what is called the "step-up plan."

Through this method, the work of the year-member plan committee and canvassers is made easier by each member automatically raising his pledge every year a small percentage of the amount he has contributed for the past year.

The giving of the Camden church members was analyzed and it was found that ninety-seven members gave between 40 and 50 cents a week. These were all asked to increase their pledges by 5 or 10 cents a week. The forty-two members asked to be contributing from 60 cents to $1.10 per week were asked for an increase of from 10 to 15 cents, and the thirty-two giving between $1.25 and $2.80 per week for an additional 25 cents per week. Thirteen who gave from $3 to $8 a week were asked for from 60 cents to $2 more.

It was pointed out in the church calendar that by getting each of the 200 or so members to increase his or her pledge by these small amounts the church budget would gain by over $2000—a substantial increase for a church of this size.

The "step-up plan" was adopted by the Camden church from the Flatbush Christian church of Brooklyn, N. Y., where its use brought in over $12,000 from 200-pledgers.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR

BUSINESS IN 1926

So predicts the committee on public relations of eastern railroads. "Car loadings in 1926 should exceed those of last year by 2 to 4 per cent"—etc. If that is so, missionary giving should keep pace with the increasing good times.—(Reprinted from the New Jersey Baptist Bulletin.)

$450 IN PRIZES

A new contest, which will surpass in interest the one which drew participation of so many young people last year, is announced by the Baptist Board of Missionary Cooperation. $450 in prizes is offered for the best essays on Christian stewardship. The contest, which starts in the early fall, is open to all Northern Baptist young people between the ages of nine and twenty-five. Last year's competition, whose prize winners THE BAPTIST announced recently, was by far the most successful that has been held since this contest was made an annual affair. The Stewardship Committee, Room 931, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, will gladly furnish further information.

Another item of interest is an oratorical contest which is to be held under the same auspices in the early months of 1927. Definite information regarding this contest will soon be available and all eligible young people should make the most of both of these competitions.

OUTDOOR SERVICES IN RENO

On a recent Sunday evening an experiment was tried by the four Protestant churches in Reno, Nev., which proved a great success. The churches united in an open air service in Wingfield Park, beside the river. The setting was beautiful; a large crowd listened attentively to the sermon and reverently took part in the prayer and praise portion of the service. Many people had to stand as not enough seats had been provided for the crowd which had gathered. These services will be continued during the summer Sunday evenings and it is hoped that they may reach many people who do not ordinarily come to the churches.

EAST NEW JERSEY

GOES ON RECORD

The East New Jersey Baptist Association, assembled in convention on June 8, passed, among others, the following resolutions which were approved by a standing vote:

"That our association pledges the prayerful and practical support of its members to our efficient staff at headquarters in Newark, and also to our leaders and workers in every department of service.

"That as an association we deplore the continuance of theological controversy in our midst, and that we repledge ourselves to our supreme task of making Jesus known as Saviour and Lord, and further that we will pray, plan, and work for the largest ingathering of souls into the kingdom and church of Christ which our association has ever known.

"That we urge our churches not only to more liberal giving to our great missionary work, but that we also request our churches to forward their offerings to the state office on or before the fifteenth of every month, and thus save a large amount of interest money on borrowed capital."

HELPING TO SAVE

THE INTEREST

The pastor of the Rio Grande church in Utah attended the Northern Baptist convention in Washington this year, and reported it at home as the greatest meeting in the history of the convention. He writes his state office: "We have accepted our missionary apportionment. We are going to pay this monthly, and thus help save the large amount of interest the denomination is compelled to pay every year."

Among Ourselves

District of Columbia

By HENRY W. O. MILLINGTON

WASHINGTON gives every indication that the vacation season is here. Probably no city in the country is quite so affected in that respect as the nation's capital. Official Washington is out of town. The departments function all summer but at a slower pace and with reduced forces. Most government clerks are allowed four weeks of what is called annual leave and the most of them take it. The vacation spirit and atmosphere have a marked influence upon our church life and there is almost an utter cessation of aggressive religious activity. Some of the churches function rather ambitiously in the matter of pulpit supplies. The First Congregational church, known for the time being as the president's church and now, worshipping in the auditorium, has brought to its pulpit Rev. Frederick W. Norwood, minister of the City Temple, London. This church is using a photo-play in connection with its Sunday night service. Our own Calvary church has called to its pulpit ministry Rev. E. W. Gibbons, of London, England, while the Immanuel church has invited such supplies as Dr. M. E. Dodd of Shreveport, La., and Dr. Carter Helm Jones of Atlanta, Ga. Judging by the large congregations waiting upon the ministry of such preachers it evidently pays to secure the best preaching talent at vacation time.

Changes

Changes of various sorts are constantly taking place in our Washington Baptist life. Rev. C. B. Austin of the West Washington church was married to Miss Hazel E. Wilcox of Waverly, Va. The church tendered the bride and groom a reception which was largely attended and presented to them a chest of silver.

At the Temple church, Rev. Thomas Jones is concluding a long period of service as pastoral supply. He has done splendid work in a difficult situation and has proved himself to be a man of fine Christian spirit and careful leadership. He may well feel proud of his record at Temple church.

Rev. Homer J. Councilor, the director of religious education at Calvary church, has for several years past conducted a Bible school conference at Hood college, Frederick, Md. This conference has come to be quite an event and though interdenominational in its make up, it is largely a Baptist affair. The conference, this year, was a distinct success.

The Fountain Memorial church, Rev. W. J. Hubbard, pastor, is making commendable progress in its work. There are frequent additions to the membership and the financial record is gaining all the time. In addition to better missionary giving the church is making extensive improvements on its property with every prospect that all bills will be met when the work is finished.

The Takoma Park church, under the leadership of its pastor, Rev. William E. LaRue, has added sixty-four persons to its membership during the past year. The church was organized seven years ago, on June 5, 1919, and now has a membership of 234. At a recent celebration of children's day 336 were present, which exceeds any record so far made by this church. Mrs. La Rue is the superintendent of the primary department and on this occasion she had eighty-four children on the platform, and it is interesting to note that not one of these was in the Sunday school four years ago.

The Sunday-school building of the First church, Alexandria, Va., was dedicated June 27 with a sermon by Rev. E. B. Jackson, a former pastor, and a prayer by Rev. Robert G. Boville of New York. The pastor, Rev. P. L. Vernon, is to be congratulated on this addition to his church equipment.

Arizona Activities

By F. W. STARRING

SEVERAL churches in Arizona including Phoenix First, Bisbee First, Scottsdale and Tucson First, held successful vacation Bible schools this summer. The Bisbee school had the largest attendance. Motion pictures were taken of the Phoenix First school and were exhibited July 14. The Phoenix Christian center, Mexican, also had a successful school.

Pastor William B. Percival of Mesa has been forced to take an extended leave of absence because of illness, and is at the home of his parents in Pasadena. He has acted as editor-in-chief of the state paper. Pastor T. M. Pyle of Tempe is acting as editor in Mr. Percival's absence.

Rev. Carey Tooms, pastor of Glendale Mexican church, is in old Mexico on two months' vacation, combining several vacations in one. Two of the Mexican churches have new pastors: Rev. Leonardo Mercardo came to Phoenix from Los Angeles and Rev. A. T. Ojeda came to Yuma from San Diego.

The Arizona summer assembly meets Aug. 18-28 at Pinal Mt. Summit, Ariz. The faculty includes Miss Myrtle Love, Miss Edna Umstot, Mrs. Norman F. Turner, Miss Myra Barden, Prof. L. W. Hattersley, Rev. Clark M. Bancroft, Rev. Frank Durham, Mrs. W. W. Watkins, Rev. T. M. Pyle and local helpers.

Rev. F. E. Hawes, who has been with the First church of Glendale a few months, has already had encouraging response. The attendance at prayer meetings frequently numbers seventy-five members.

Dr. Richard E. Day of the First church, Phoenix, is preaching to large audiences and leading the men of the church in the carrying out of an effective every-member plan, with prospects of an increased church attendance and membership.

The First church, Tucson, has one of the finest church plants in the southwest and is carrying on a growing work. The pastor, Richard S. Beal, who is president of the state convention, was sent to Washington by the convention, while Mrs. Beal was sent by the Tucson church. During their absence funds were raised for the purchase of new carpets for the church.

The auto chapel car, Brockway memorial, is now at Globe where Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Goodman, missionaries in charge, have for some weeks done heroic service in saving that church for the denomination. A critical situation had developed, resulting in a division and the forming of another organization, nominally "Southern." The First church of Globe is recovering and has larger attendance at services than before the break.

Rev. R. Marion Garrett has been stated supply for the church at Buckeye for several weeks. He was formerly pastor pastor at the Phoenix Christian center.

Rev. Ben Matthews resigned as pastor of the Immanuel church, Phoenix, and has accepted the call of the First church, Douglas.

Rev. Clyde Brengle resigned the pastorate at Salt River, retaining his work at West End, Phoenix.

Notes from the Adirondack Region

By FRANK M. LA BAR

THE Adirondack church at Lake Placid, after being closed for several years, has resumed services and has called Rev. M. E. Cheney, who was recently graduated from Rochester Theological seminary. Mr. Cheney left a successful pastorate at Holly, N. Y., to undertake this work and is settled in the Lake Placid parsonage, overlooking Mirror Lake upon whose opposite shore the lake Placid club is located. Lake Placid Baptists are happy in the opening of their work again and will be glad to welcome any who may be motoring to this growingly popular resort in the Adirondacks. An impressive recognition service was recently held for Mr. Cheney and was attended by delegations from a number of Adirondack churches. Dr. J. F. Vichert, of Rochester Theological seminary, preached the sermon.

Lester O. Hooks, of this year's graduating class in Rochester Theological seminary, was ordained at Morrisonville, N. Y., June 29. Rev. F. M. LaBar, district director, was moderator of the council and Rev. R. S. O'Dell of Keeseville, clerk. The sermon was preached by Rev. John F. Vichert, of Rochester. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hooks have been given a warm welcome to Morrisonville, his old church of the Lake Champlain valley at the northern foothills of the Adirondacks and are entering upon their work with enthusiasm.

Rev. Ivanhoe McCollom, formerly assistant pastor at the Prospect avenue church in Buffalo, has begun his pastorate of the church at Plattsburg, N. Y., succeeding Dr. L. T. Reed, now pastor of the second church in Troy, N. Y.

The recent death of Prof. G. W. Shalles, of Plattsburg, removes from northern New York one of its most devoted laymen. Professor Shalles had been for many years the head of the English department in the Plattsburg normal school and a leading worker in the Baptist church and in the Essex and Champlain Association, where he was chairman of the missionary committee.

Rev. F. E. Dean, pastor at Greece, N. Y., is summering near Westport, N. Y., on Lake Champlain, and rendering some assistance to Rev. Elbert Beebe, of the Champlain front line territory.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Lawton, home on tour from Japan, are staying at present with Mrs. Lawton's parents at Westport, N. Y., where Mr. Lawton was pastor before going to Japan.

Rev. H. F. Laflamme, field secretary of the Greater New York Federation of churches, is spending July at Hague, on Lake George, and supplying the pulpit of the Baptist church. The August supply will be Rev. C. F. Banning, pastor of the Delaware Street church of Syracuse, N. Y.

Rev. Gordon Kiersted, pastor of the Alexander Street church of New York city, is spending July at Long Lake, in the Adirondack forest.

Andrew P. Burton, of the graduating class of Rochester Theological seminary, student pastor of the Stony Creek church in the Adirondacks during the summer. Mr. Burton is a son of the late Prof. Henry Burton, long-time professor of Latin in the University of Rochester.

Miss Olive E. Jones, teacher in the girls' high school in Nellore, India, is spending the summer at her home in Saratoga, in the Adirondacks, after a winter's study in Columbia university. Her sister, Miss Alice Jones, who secured her master's degree from Columbia, becomes Americanization secretary under the New York Baptist City Mission Society, September.

A group of Baptists in the Adirondack section have secured an option on a sixty acre tract of land on the shores of Lake George, near the village of Hague and about four miles from the Silver bay conference grounds. Eastern New York has no recreational center on or near Lake George or Champlain which can be used by Baptists for summer programs along educational or recreational lines and it is felt by many that such a center which would be within easy reach of New York City, might contribute effectively to the advance programs of the denomination in years to come. Several conferences have already been held at Hague and the wisdom of securing this property where a colony of campers and cottagers could be established in connection with denominational activities, is making its appeal to an increasingly large group who have looked into the proposition and have seen the location. Baptists who may be motoring in the Adirondacks this summer are invited to look this property over and to call at the stone bungalow on the church lawn at Hague for information.

Wisconsin News Notes

By R. C. SPEER

Vacation Speakers

DURING the months of relaxation as pastors get away for a few days of rest various preachers are being heard in Milwaukee pulpits. Rev. S. F. Porter of Trinity church, Oklahoma City, is the summer preacher at Milwaukee, First church. Rev. E. H. Otto has taken the place of Rev. W. L. Harms of Oconomowoc who is recovering from an infected foot. Mr. Otto will preach at Tabernacle church three Sundays in August. Rev. C. C. Browne is also filling in at Oconomowoc and Tabernacle. Rev. W. R. Jewell will speak at Tabernacle Aug. 1. Rev. Eugene G. Mintz has been rendering service at Camp Minakani Y. M. C. A. boys' camp and Grace church has a series of supplies. Rev. R. C. Speer of Tabernacle will be the inspirational speaker at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Jugendbund at Sheboygan and camp pastor at Green Lake assembly.

Vacation Church Schools

The Milwaukee schools are now over. What a potentiality for good they are! Our Baptist schools take a leading place in the federated vacation schools of the city. Christian Center, Christ Polish, Grace, South, Immanuel, Tabernacle, North Avenue, Calvary, Woodlawn and Wauwatosa held schools. Revs. King, Soltys, Mintz, Davis, Hauser, Speer, Holzer, Williams, Hulburt and Fahringer are leaders of the whole movement. Every school had some outstanding good point to remember. Wauwatosa led this year in a community school which was a great success. Grace had a faculty which for educational capability could probably not be equalled in the city. Tabernacle presented a closing pageant "Forward with Christ" which had a powerful missionary and evangelistic appeal in it. Its missionary offering was a gift of a substantial purse to Miss Paula Beresch, one of its girls who has dedicated her life to missionary service and enters B. M. T. S. this fall.

Green Lake Assembly

This encampment of young Baptists of Wisconsin on the traditional spot where the Indian tribes used to gather for their religious powwows is the annual high water mark of religious devotion. From the advance registrations, this year promises to be one of the best. Rev. C. C. Browne is director of religious education.

The Summer Slump

This fiction, which becomes a deadly conviction in some churches, like Alexander the coppersmith of old, has done much harm. When a pastor and his congregation get it firmly in their minds that no one is in town and no one wants to go to church then no one will go to church (at least there). However, it is to be noticed that there are always people in any city on summer Sundays. What about them? A police matron recently faced a pastor with this statement and accusation: "With the first hot days our roll of juvenile delinquency mounts up as fast as the mercury, especially in the number of girls who come into trouble and hence to the detention home." Then turning to the pastor she said, "Why do you ministers and your churches fail us at this critical time? The schools are closed, if you close we who are here to gather up the wreckage, are left to work on alone." Come, brethren, what have you to say in reply?

German Baptist Young People

The annual meeting of the Wisconsin Jugendbund was held at the German church, Sheboygan, July 20-23.

Here an earnest group of young people representing fifteen churches met for a good time combined with study and inspiration. There were courses in Old Testament, church history, religious education, while there were inspirational evening sessions, with daily devotional hours. The faculty included Rev. Emil Mueller, Rev. Albert Brettschneider, Rev. Louis B. Holzer and Rev. R. C. Speer in addition to special evening speakers.

The entertaining church had completed improvements on its property for the occasion, notably a spacious dining hall. The women of the church served dinner and supper there.

Pastor F. W. Bartel with his family left Aug. 1 for Ingersoll, Okla., attended by the good wishes of Wisconsin people.

Lake Cities and Churches

The string of lake cities beginning at Chicago northward has a number of Baptist churches: North Shore, Evanston, Wilmette, Waukegan, Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, and Sheboygan.

The American church at Sheboygan is in the midst of a new building campaign. Under the leadership of Rev. A. O. Protsman it has sold its old downtown property and moved the building into a fine residence location overlooking Lake Michigan. The building is being enlarged, with an educational plant, made modern throughout and refinished. It will have Colonial architecture and a beautiful location. The corner stone was laid with appropriate ceremonies on Sunday, July 25, with Dr. A. Le Grand as speaker. When completed with its new organ, it will represent $45,000 investment.

A Fruitful Season at Iloilo

By R. C. THOMAS, M.D.

THE past year has been one of the richest in my experience in the Philippine islands. Never in the years that have passed since I came here, over twenty-one years ago, has my heart been so thrilled by the response to the compelling appeal that always lies in the preached word. In every branch of the service, hospital, dispensary, dormitory, student and field work we have aimed to have the evangelistic motive predominant. The various agencies have been made a means to an end and that end is the conversion of souls. We thank God that many have been won to him.

Our nurses' training school never was in a more flourishing condition than it is in now. With thirty-eight pupil and graduate nurses for each ward, we are better cared for than ever before. The class room work is carefully supervised and a number of outsiders help in the instruction. The last year's graduating class passed the government examinations without a failure, and the present class has some exceptionally good pupils.

Making Religion Vital

We are trying to make religion as vital a factor in the lives of the nurses as possible. Personal evangelism is taught in a weekly session to each of the three classes in the school, and reports are passed in which tell of bedside evangelism done during the week. Some of these reports are very encouraging. One says, "Given the Bible and was fairly interested. Wanted to know more about the Saviour." Another says, "Given Bible to read. Patient is quite interested to know more." Another, "Ready to join the church." Another, "I have talked to him over and over about the Bible and he says he is now ready to receive Christ. He would like to be baptized as soon as he is well." These are a few samples of the hundreds turned in.

Mr. Lagos, a graduate of Doane Evangelistic institute, is bookkeeper at the hospital. He is one of the most consecrated personal workers I have met and is doing a strong evangelistic work in the hospital, as well as caring for the La Paz church on Sundays. On returning from a visit home at Christmas, he told me that his old father and mother wished to be baptized. The father is over seventy and the mother is blind. His face fairly shone as he told me about them. Boy after boy from the hospital corps of assistants has been baptized and I think that this faithful clerk has been a large factor in it all. This sort of work cheers us. While we realize that evangelism in the hospital is still far from what it should be, we believe that it is improving.

Dunwoody dormitory has prospered in many ways. The number of residents has been over fifty a good part of the time, even running as high as fifty-five. The atmosphere on the whole has been more spiritual than in past years, due largely to the splendid nucleus of Doane Evangelistic institute students who make it their home.

Dispensary work has been maintained at Pototan, where Miss Sumbalun, our nurse, resides; at Santa Barbara, which has been cared for most of the year by Miss Sumbalun; at the student's dispensary beside Dunwoody dormitory, where Miss Pineda has charge; and part of the year at Bacolod, where bi-weekly visits have been made. The student's dispensary deserves special mention because of its strategic importance in helping to mould the leadership of the nation. It is a material factor as an agency in our student evangelism.

Like William Carey, I love to say, "Preaching is my business; I cobble to pay expenses;" but I phrase it, "Preaching is my vocation; medicine my avocation." As my first call was to the ministry and medicine was an adjunct, my objective from the outset has been clear. I have striven to secure the best medical training to be had and never to neglect my medical work, but unless it is clearly demonstrated to me that all my medical service wins more souls for Christ than full time spent in the ministry as a preacher, I shall not be true to him if I remain in it. A Christian physician has an unusual opportunity to reach the heart at the bedside of the sick, and if such a ministry is supplemented by preaching, it has greater possibilities in some ways than evangelism alone. Of late years student work has given me an opportunity along evangelistic lines.

In the recent religious awakening in our student body, hundreds declared their desire to unite with the Protestant church. Hundreds more came out for Christ in Iloilo city, where we worked in cooperation with the Presbyterians. The fact that 1000 took a stand does not necessarily mean that this number have been converted, nor will all of the 570 who declared their willingness to join the church now actually do so. But the record proves that these have at least consented to grant a hearing to the preached word. This in itself is a triumph. Again, we have a working list of nearly 1000 names for follow-up work. Many have been baptized since the meetings, most of them as a result of special evangelism. Many more will follow, and if they drift away from the church it will be because of insufficient watch-care. But as the motto this year is "The Intensive Development of Our Membership," we hope that many will become active workers. House visitation after evangelistic meetings takes the workers into Iloilo city, La Paz and elsewhere, and far more supervision should be given this work. For this supervision, both close at hand and farther away, I hope now to feel free.

Henry C. Applegarth

REV. HENRY C. APPLGARTH died July 17 at his home, No. 21 Arnold Park, Rochester, N. Y., at seventy-three years of age, after a serious illness lasting almost a year. Doctor Applegarth came to Rochester from the First church of Cambridge, Mass., in 1901 and served as minister of the Park Avenue church until 1903, when he retired from the active ministry to devote himself to other work.

After surrendering his ministry he spent a year as financial secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society in Boston and another year traveling in Europe. He then settled down in Rochester and supplied for fairly long periods such churches as the First Presbyterian, St. Peters, the First Baptist, and of Rochester, and the Euclid Avenue Baptist church of Cleveland, Ohio, the First Baptist church of Syracuse, N. Y. and others. He became well known for his Bible lectures before the Central club, D. A. R., Northfield league and many churches.

Doctor Applegarth was born in Baltimore, Md., where he attended school and college. He held pastorates at Brynmawr, Pa.; the First church, New Brunswick, N. J.; the First church, Pittsburgh, Pa.; the Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland, Ohio; and the First church, Cambridge, Mass.

Boards of trustees of numerous institutions sought the services of Doctor Applegarth. Among them were the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Crozer Theological seminary, Newton Theological seminary and Rochester Theological seminary. During the latter years of his life, he preferred to resign all such activities, including preaching.

Besides his daughter, Miss Margaret Applegarth, he leaves a brother, Walter Applegarth and a sister, Mrs. Warner Waring, both of Baltimore, Md.

South China Letter

By A. F. GROESBECK

(This is the first of a series of articles on South China to be written by Doctor Groesbeck.)

EARLY in April dispatches were sent out saying that our mission property at Kaying had been seized by a mob. The mere statement of the act is insufficient and requires some explanation.

The mission at Kaying includes three residences, a girls' school plant, a chapel, an upper primary school building, and an academy with two new buildings. The Chinese took possession of the two academy buildings. The girls' school, the church, and the upper primary school continued work without interruption. The academy classes moved over to the chapel and lost but one day of recitations, and a number of the students have since been baptized. Only the two academy buildings are involved in the seizure and at no time has the missionary's personal safety been endangered. A few students were beaten, but evidently not seriously.

The crowd has been variously described as a mob, a mob headed by the mayor, and the mayor accompanied by a mob. To understand the peculiar state of affairs, a bit of history is necessary.

Ten years ago an academy was established at Kaying by the missionaries located there, at the urgent request of the Chinese who were evidently impressed by the quality of the mission's primary educational work. From its inception, this academy has been a promising piece of work, and a number of our best general workers such as Daniel Lai are its products. As the quality of the primary school work created a demand for a secondary school, so the academy created a demand a still higher institution, the college. The trouble began here. The mission had no money with which to inaugurate advanced work, but it had plenty of good will. The Chinese proposed that money be raised for more land and buildings in connection with the academy which would permit the development of the college on the same grounds. They also suggested a method whereby funds for the running expenses might be raised, a method such as they use in getting funds for their own or government schools. Subscriptions were taken locally and among Kaying emigrants in Siam and Straits Settlements. The people back of the college project took steps to collect a tax on salt coming into Kaying. There seems to have been no objection by the residents of Kaying to this procedure, but the manager of the Salt Gabelle at Swatow objected to the scheme and the mission refused to countenance the measure and kept the funds. The Chinese, nevertheless, proceeded to collect the tax for "educational purposes," although, I believe, the college never participated in the funds collected.

With the money subscribed, land adjacent to the academy grounds was purchased, upon which one small building was erected for college purposes. The college administration was independent of the academy and the mission, and used its own grounds and the one small building that had been erected with its own money. Since the college equipment was meager, the academy gave the college the use of one or more of the rooms in the academy buildings near by.

The church member who had secured land for the academy and had headed the movement for a college proved to be a scoundrel, put the college and academy at loggerheads, and died without rendering a financial account of his stewardship. Some of the Chinese subscribers thought it is fair to presume, thought that their money had gone into the buildings erected for the academy, and therefore left the college scheme, as such, might justly claim an interest in the academy. In court the college authorities maintained that the buildings we used in an academy were college buildings, temporarily loaned to the academy. The college further deposed that the money given by "a benevolent American" was given for a college and not for an academy. Of course, their contention is borne out by the facts, but it forms an excuse upon which to base the action that they would have taken on some other grounds had not this particular phase of the question presented itself.

The case was in the local court for some time. No appeal was made to the court until all hope of other settlement was gone. On Apr. 8 the academy buildings passed into the possession of the college. The mayor claims in his reports that he is superior that the college took forcible possession of the buildings, that he was on the grounds at the time but powerless to prevent it. The college holds the mayor, who is also head of the police, was putting the college in possession of its own. The mission is not pressing the case at present, but is asking the consul to take such measures as will prevent the loss of the property by default, hoping that later a more friendly government coming into power may restore our rights.

The difficulties attending the case are many. The people will brook no interference from the American consul. Any action of his would probably be the signal for the Kaying students and others to take possession of the mission property there. The Canton government does not recognize the Peking government as having any jurisdiction over it, while the American government does not recognize the Canton government. There are over 100 Russians at Canton employed in the government and in a scheme of propaganda, so the Canton government is decidedly Bolshevik in its sentiments toward religion of any kind, and especially toward Christianity. Extra-territoriality does not enter into the question. Any appeal to the Canton government through our consul on that basis would put the whole case beyond any possibility of settlement while the Canton government remains in existence. That government is moving toward the absolute control of education, especially higher education, in all the provinces under its jurisdiction. Mission colleges and hospitals are anathema to it, for they "poison the hearts of the people," according to the Bolshevik idea of Christianity. People in China marvel at the spirit of the government toward the institutions that are doing most for the Chinese. Nothing but the predominating influence of Russian Bolshevism can explain it. A Russian advisor at Canton is reported to have said in a meeting at Canton Christian college that Russian Communism has done more for China in a year than Christianity has done in a century, and may be it has. I would add to the advisor's statement, "toward destroying the finest of ancient cultures and civilization."

This is what we face in South China. Extraterritoriality, stipulations, and "unequal treaties," are serious handicaps to mission work. An American consul without these would be in a position as a friendly country's representative to ask for justice toward the Americans and their interests. Under present circumstances to insist on rights merely flaunts a red flag before a bull already angered. The fact that Kwangtung has so large and influential a body of men enrolled under the Christian banner, is a restraining influence and makes the Canton government hesitate to stir up its animosity and opposition.

Chaoyanghsien, China.

Obituary

Mr. W. B. C. Stewart, of Bozeman, Mont., died suddenly at his home July 5. He had been sick but a brief time. Judge Stewart, as he was called by friends, had lived in Bozeman for more than thirty-five years; his death came as a great shock.

Mr. Stewart was born in Monroe County, Ohio, March 21, 1866. After living a short time in Kansas he came to Bozeman in 1892. Having studied law he was admitted to the bar in 1894. Mr. Stewart was chosen to fill out the unexpired term of a district judge who had been elevated to the Supreme Bench of the State. Because of his efficiency he was twice afterwards elected to fill the same position.

On May 17, 1894, Judge Stewart and Miss Ethel Armstrong, of Kansas City were married. Mrs. Stewart, with their two children, Hal W. and Mildred, Mrs. Harlan R. Sumner, of Manhattan, Kansas, and two grandchildren survive him. Hal W., following his father's profession, is attorney for the Ohio Oil Co. of Casper, Wyoming. Judge Stewart is also survived by his brother, former Governor S. V. Stewart, of Helena, and Hal M. Stewart of Bozeman, and his sister, Miss Salle Stewart, a teacher in the public schools of Anaconda, Mont.

Mr. Stewart was a member of the First Baptist church of Bozeman for a number of years. He rendered valuable service to the church by caring for the indebtedness on the new building until it was paid for. He likewise served the Montana Baptist Convention by giving valuable counsel when needed, and preparing papers in sale of property. The beautiful Stewart home on South Wilson Avenue has always been open to Baptist visitors, and many will remember its Christian hospitality.

The funeral service was held at the home on Wednesday afternoon, July 7. The service was conducted by the former pastor of the church, Dr. E. R. Curry, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. R. W. Shaw. It is said to have been the largest funeral ever held in the city. The large number of city, county and state citizens, together with prominent state officials, gave evidence of the high esteem in which Mr. Stewart was held by people in all walks of life.

Mrs. Minnie Thompson Show passed away at her home, Los Angeles, July 5. She was born at Norristown, Pa., 1861. In 1886 she was married to Mr. Arthur T. Show, at Weeping Water, Neb., and six years later they moved to California. Three daughters were born, all living in California.

Mrs. Show's father was a clergyman, while her grandfather, Mr. Richard Peggs, was, in 1851, made a life member of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

Mrs. Show was an ardent Christian worker. A host of friends will miss this loyal servant, faithful teacher and kind-hearted Christian friend.

Here, There and Everywhere

UPON THE RESIGNATION of Pres. John W. Million of Des Moines university, the faculty voted resolutions expressing regret at the necessity for such a step on the part of the president, at the same time assuring him of their sympathy in the tremendous load he had carried during the five years of his administration. Doctor Million will engage in a business enterprise in Kansas City, Mo., after Sept. 1, when his work closes at Des Moines.

THE PASTOR of the church at Gregory, Mich., Milton W. Dressel, is one of the many fans of D. V. B. S. His school closed after a three weeks' session in which an enrolment of seventy-three pupils and nineteen officers and teachers was reached. A voluntary offering for missions was taken daily, totaling $13.56. It was the united verdict of the community that the value of the school for the children was inestimable.

A CLASS of twenty-seven was graduated from Cook academy, Montour Falls, N. Y., June 21. Dr. R. E. Farrier, director of promotion for New York state, preached the baccalaureate sermon. The address to the class was delivered by Rev. G. A. Briggs of

"This is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago.

"Nice warm evening, friends of the air. Too warm to debate and argue over things. Better to sit up on the front porch with a pitcher of ice-cold lemonade and a palmleaf fan. As the old-timer used to say, 'What's the use of argufying and con-disputing when they ain't no accessity for it?'"

"THE BAPTIST is coming out regularly every week and getting better all the time. Poor Professor Coue who coined the phrase of 'Every day and in every way, I am getting better and better,' is dead now. But THE BAPTIST goes right on—every day and in every way getting better and better.

"The field editor was down in Kansas the other day visiting his parents. While there he received a powerful lesson in rapidity. When he took the train to leave there were by actual count over 175 jiggers entombed for their last sleep in his feverish cuticle. The jiggers mistook him for an enemy and 'dug in.' That's where the rub came in. Ever have a jigger on you? Well, it is little less than amazing how so small a creature can put zip, zest, pep, agility, energy and briskness into a fellow's scratch. If the agent for THE BAPTIST in your church needs a bit of vivacity on the job, I suggest that you send down to Kansas and get a dozen jiggers by mail. The results will be astounding.

"By the way, while we are talking tonight, isn't it funny how some people can't take a hint? We send out hundreds and thousands of subscription renewal notices every month, courteous, refined, polished little hints that a year's subscription is about due and that we should appreciate, you know, and wishing them a happy birthday and so on. We hate to mention so sinful a thing as money but necessity is the mother of subscription notices, for our printers have to buy eggs by the dozen and butter by the pound. The answers we get sometimes almost wring tears out of us.

"This reminds us of a Carolina negro who sent a wire to another, reading: 'Sam, I heard you is dead. If you is, telegram me. If you ain't, send me that $10 what you owes me.' Sam, just recovering from gunshot wounds, wired back: 'I is dead. Your ten will be applied to a coffin.' This may sound a little cemeterial but we could easily match this reply with the wonderful uses people have for the money they are supposed to send THE BAPTIST.

"Of course, troubles like this usually come singly. 'The stork has brought a little peach,' the nurse said with an air. 'How glad I am,' the father said, 'He didn't bring a pair.' So we are thankful that most of our people pay up promptly and many even take the trouble to write us little messages of appreciation. These messages are like the precious ointment that was on Aaron's beard that ran down even to the hem of his garment.

"Remember that September is only a month away. Then from Maine to California our churches will be opening again for the winter's program of service. THE BAPTIST will bear you glad tidings every week in news, reports, programs, letters, sermons, articles, humor, and best of all that sense of fellowship with the unseen multitudes around the world who are seeking to bring in the kingdom of our Lord and Master.

"We will now ask the office boy to give us a bit of helpful rhyme to stimulate us to service and victory these summer days. He will read a few lines from a poem by Dr. Robert Freeman, pastor of a Presbyterian church in Pasadena:

'We're going headlong in the way that is wrong,
Each man for himself and the devil for all;
We gallop along with a ribaldous song;
We're mad, so they say, and we ride for a fall.
Heigh-ho, maybe so; but that isn't my creed;
I hold there's a God who is bound to succeed.

'Long ages with him are but as a day,
A mountain a minute is hardly his plan,
If he takes time for trees, then I guess we may say,
He will doubtless take time in his making of man.
Heigh-ho, then let's go; let ours be the breed
That works with the God who is bound to succeed.'

"WCOY now signs off. Success be yours. Goodnight."

Buffalo, president of the board of trustees. At commencement were announced gifts to the school from the senior class, from Dr. R. E. Farrier and from Mrs. Philip A. Munro of Camillus, N. Y.

Mrs. A. P. STOCKWELL, the wife of Rev. A. P. Stockwell, a returned missionary from India, died recently at Lankershim, Calif.

She was a member of the First church of Hollywood.

FLETCHER MEMORIAL Sunday was celebrated at the Plainwell, Mich., church, Rev. Judson Mackintosh, pastor, on July 11, in memory of Rev. John Fletcher, who was pastor of the church for fifty years. Mrs. John Fletcher is always an honored guest on these occasions. Two years ago the cornerstone of Fletcher hall was laid at this time. This year Dr. Allan Hoben, president of Kalamazoo college, delivered the sermon on "Ideals." The program for the day included a baptismal service and missionary pageant in the morning, and in the evening a pageant, the reception of new members, and the celebration of the Lord's Supper.

REV. M. R. SHELTON, pastor of the Immanuel church, Erie, Pa., supplies First church, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, during August.

EVANGELIST E. S. STUCKER will supply the University church, Minneapolis, during August. Pastors who wish his help in evangelistic services after Sept. 1 may address him at Ottawa, Kan.

GEORGE E. BURLINGAME, private secretary to Dr. J. Whitcomb Brouger during his "Play Ball" campaign, was the preacher at the First church of Oakland, Calif., July 25. He begins work as assistant pastor and executive secretary of the church Aug. 15. Doctor Brouger will be on vacation at his summer home at Gearhart, Ore., during August and will supply at Seattle and Portland.

REV. WILLIAM C. DEER has completed his work with the First church of Cedar Falls, Iowa. He may later take up some phase of religious education work.

The Baptist

Chicago, August 7, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 27

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Rates: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Remittances: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add exchange.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send in renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No manuscripts returned unless accompanied by full return postage.

Want Ads

Baptists: Pastors, Evangelists, Singers, Chorists, Pastors' Assistants and Directors of Religious Education for Baptist Churches, Teachers for Baptist Educational Institutions. A BAPTIST MEDIUM FOR SPECIALISTS. Bible Conferences and Evangelistic Campaigns arranged and conducted. THE BAPTIST EVANGELISTIC BUREAU, South Solon, Ohio.

Stenographer: Young woman for permanent position. College office. Applicant must be well-trained, alert and keen for advancement. Experience not essential but candidate must have high mental and personal qualifications. College degree desirable but not essential. Address C, care of The Baptist.

Wanted: Position as Pastor's Assistant and Educational Director. Five years' experience. Secretary, Church Visitor and solo harpist. Address Margery Thompson, 721 West 5th St., Waterloo, Iowa.

Pastors: For Revival Help, write Evangelist J. J. Pease, Battle Creek, Michigan.

THE B. Y. P. U. of the First church of Rock Island, Ill., won the publicity contest of the B. Y. P. U. A. and was presented the loving cup at the Los Angeles convention. The young people took entire charge of two evening services when the pastor, Mr. G. A. Sheets, attended the Northern Baptist Convention and the Mt. Carroll summer assembly.

REV. HARRY A. SHEWHART, pastor of the first church, Villa Grove, Ill., closed a series of eight Sunday evening sermons on "The Unknown Bible" July 11 with an illustrated address on "The Bible and the Trade."

REV. E. EARL LEWIS was ordained July 8 on recommendation of a council called by the Fairmount church of Illinois. Charge to the church was given by Rev. F. Baldus; to the candidate by Rev. Henry L. Duff; ordaining prayer by Rev. John Carstens; and of fellowship by Rev. J. M. Lively. Mr. Lewis is acting pastor for the Calvary church, Chicago.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Mattoon, Ill., has added twenty-nine new members during the first half of the year. The Sunday school averaged 453 the first quarter and 417 the second. A three weeks' vacation Bible school, with an enrolment of 170, was held in cooperation with the Presbyterian church. Rev. James M. Lively, pastor of the First church, gave the commencement address for the Villa Grove high school, preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Mattoon high school; gave the memorial address at Atwood and the Fourth of July oration at Shumway. He has served at Mattoon for eleven years. Plans are under way for the state convention which will be held in Mattoon in October.

REV. AND MRS. L. JAMES KINDIG, evangelistic singers, are spending the summer at their home in Mattoon, Ill. They are making dates for the autumn and winter campaigns.

REV. H. FREDERICK HOOPS, for twenty-three years pastor of Evangel church, Newark, N. J., and later of Grace church, Racine, Wis., and the Mariners church, Staten Island, N. Y., has been called to the pulpit of the Second German church, New York City. This church achieved an influential position under the leadership of the late Walter Rauschenbusch but has suffered a decline in its membership and influence in recent years.

FOURTEEN of Rev. Eugene Neubauer's former parishioners motored over 100 miles from a suburb of Pittsburgh, Pa., where he served four years and surprised him as he opened a patriotic sesquicentennial series in his work at Fairmont, W. Va. The Temple, of which Mr. Neubauer is pastor, has reduced building debts, improved the main auditorium, gained in missionary giving and has won a place on the state's official honor list. The pastor has welcomed eighty-five new members.

JULY 1 MARKED the opening of the fifth year of the pastorate of Dr. A. Frank Houser of the First church of Olean, N. Y. During the past four years 583 new members have been received, 429 by baptism. The church has accepted an increase of $500 for benevolences and $350 on the state debt. This is the only church in the downtown district that maintains Sunday evening services and the congregation averages over 400 members every Sunday evening. The Charles Forbes Taylor evangelistic party will be with the church Oct. 10-Nov. 1.

REV. H. ROBINSON MCKEE began his pastorate at Everett, Wash., July 4. The church has accepted $3000 as its missionary budget for the year. Rev. Hector C. Leland who has been acting-pastor there for the past five months is ready for other service. His permanent address is 1242 Broadway, Hannibal, Mo.

GRACE CHURCH, Spokane, Wash., Owen T. Day, pastor, held a vacation Bible school with an enrolment of 170, the largest in the history of the church. Ralph De Long, who was president of the men's class, died July 10. He was superintendent of Grace chapel mission and president of the Spokane Gideons.

J. FRANKLIN DAY, Oakland, Calif., western secretary of the laymen's council, passed his sixty-third birthday July 13. He traveled thousands of miles last year setting up conferences for Doctor Brouger and meeting the laymen of the church. He and Mrs. Day expect to make their home in Chicago this winter.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Eureka, Calif., has called Rev. John Bentzien to its pastorate. A five-year program including a new parsonage and a new location for the church building has been planned by the church.

REV. E. G. HAMLEY, for many years pastor in Wisconsin, has become pastor of the Winterstreet church, Haverhill, Mass. This church has a membership of Chinese, Italians and Greeks. It contributed over $10,000 for all purposes last year.

THE BROTHERHOOD organizations of the Baptist churches of Muskegon and Kent counties, Mich., held their quarterly meeting July 16 at Lake Harbor. Brotherhoods from Grand Rapids, Rockford, Sparta, Casnovia, Kent City, Spring Lake, Hart, Penwater and Muskegon attended. A program of sports began at 6:30 and dinner was served in the Lake Harbor cafeteria.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN boys and girls were registered for the daily vacation Bible school held by the Judson church, Oak Park, Ill., Joseph C. Dent, pastor. During the pastor's vacation the following men will supply the pulpit: Aug. 8, Rev. John Hastie, Ottumwa, Iowa; Aug. 15, Rev. E. R. McKinney, Wheaton, Ill.; Aug. 22, Rev. W. H. Peebles, Harvey, Ill.; Aug. 29, Rev. Frederick Ingram, Chicago.

REV. D. L. WOODWARD, pastor of the First church, Marion, Ind., has tendered his resignation to take effect Aug. 3 when he goes to the University of Chicago where he has taken special training for the last three summers. From there

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (fe annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (fe wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

Insurance at Cost

SAVE 10% TO 30%

FIRE

LIGHTNING

TORNADO

WINDSTORM

AUTOMOBILE:

Fire and Theft

Public Liability

Property Damage

Collision

No assessments; easy payments. Same management (over 25 years) as the National Mutual Church Insurance Company. Address:

Mutual Insurance Corporation

Henry P. Magill, Manager.

Room 748—53 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN"

2 squares from new Washington auditorium. The facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private ones; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms near. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.

Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN, 1912 "G" Street, Northwest

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. C. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 352, Minneapolis.

he goes to Columbia university where he will take a year's work and to the Union Theological seminary where he will take post graduate work.

REV. L. L. KNEELAND goes from Pe Ell, Wash., to the pastorate at Tunwater, Wash. On July 6 a fire which swept Pe Ell, ravaging the business section, burned the church and the parsonage, destroying nearly all the pastor's possessions.

REV. L. A. GREDYS, editor of the Crestinul, published by the Roumanian Baptist Association of America, has begun his pastorate at the First Roumanian church, Highland Park, Mich. He continues as editor of the Crestinul whose editorial offices are in Highland Park.

THE JUNE ISSUE of the Tidings, Bengal-Orrisa, contains a number of interesting features: a story of how a tract fell into the hands of a young man who later endured persecution for the sake of Christ and whose son today preaches in two or three languages every Sunday in Khargpur, tales of the sorrows of Indian wives, and good news of staunch Christians in the Contai district. A limited number of copies may be obtained from Secy. W. B. Lippard, 276 Fifth avenue, New York City.

JAMES P. COX, editor of the General Baptist Messenger, is spending his vacation in the West. During his absence the Messenger printed an appreciation of his services in building up the paper and of his inspiring personality.

(Continued on page 820)

The Saving Sense

A nervous passenger on the first day of the voyage asked the captain what would be the result if the steamer should strike an iceberg while it was plunging through the fog. "The iceberg would move right along, madam," the captain replied courteously, "just as if nothing had happened." And the old lady was greatly relieved.—Tid Bits.

"Spell 'cloth,' Henry," said the teacher.

Henry shuffled his feet and said nothing.

"Spell 'cloth,' Henry," repeated the teacher. "You know what it means. What is your suit made of?"

"Of father's old pants," answered Henry.

Americans have been accused by Europeans of being dollar-chasers. "Well," says the San Francisco Chronicle, "can Europe suggest any other way of getting money enough to lend?"

"When I grow up I'm going to take singing lessons and take singing lessons and take singing lessons," said Marjorie, "until I can sing real gargly."

VACATIONIST'S SONG.

Hush, little bank roll, don't you cry.

You'll be chicken feed, by and by.

—Detroit Free Press.

One of our track supervisors received the following note from a foreman under his supervision: "Inclosed is the accident report concerning Pat Casey's hitting his foot with a spike maul. You will note that I left blank the space provided for remarks. I did not know if you wanted mine or Casey's."—Illinois Central Magazine.

John is a small boy, youngest of a minister's family. As a punishment for some misdemeanor at the table, it was decided that John must not eat with the family at the next meal. So his dinner was placed on a small table at the end of the dining room. When all were seated, the minister said: "Now, John, you should ask a blessing before you eat." This was a new duty for John, but he bowed his head and said reverently: "Our Father in heaven: Thou hast prepared a table for me in the presence of mine enemies. Thanks for the food. Amen."—Christian Register.

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for Aug. 15

JETHRO'S WISE COUNSEL

Lesson Text: Exod. 18:13-24. Golden Text: Mk. 13:34

It is a wonder that Moses, wise man as he was, did not think of the plan of Jethro before Jethro suggested it. Possibly it was because Moses wanted to hold everything in his own hands that he did not delegate some of the service to others. Some men are so constituted that they have to work alone in their own way because their temperament renders them incapable of teamwork.

Dictatorship

A dictator like Moses seems to be the need of several European nations today. Italy has one in the person of Mussolini, Belgium has recently made the king dictator, and France hesitates but will finally have to come to a dictatorship if finances in that unhappy situation are to be stabilized. Moses knew how little he could trust a mob of people just out of slavery with the management of even small community affairs. At least he thought it was incumbent on him to administer directly and personally all the affairs of the people over whom he had become dictator. But his father-in-law, an older man and more experienced, knew that only as Moses gradually succeeded in putting responsibility upon the best of his people by organizing the community on the group plan with a graded system of responsibilities, could he ever hope to lift the people above dependence upon an outstanding leader. Jethro stood for organized democracy under worthy and able leadership while Moses was working according to the plan of dictatorship which never would have developed self-reliance and initiative on the part of the people. It was well enough for a time for Moses to rule alone, because the mass of people he had led out of Egypt were safe only under military discipline. But the time had now come for a distribution of the load.

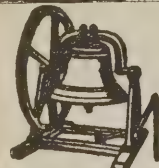

Democracy

Democracy is always dangerous. It is usually safer to focus authority in one person, especially if the person so clothed with authority is good and able. But history has demonstrated that one-man power is more dangerous than the rule of the people. Hence there has been a steady movement in nearly all lands toward some form of democratic government. The same is true of the church. While Protestantism is not uniform in its emphasis on democracy, the spirit of democracy finds in Protestantism an atmosphere congenial to its growth. Dictatorship is the genius of the Roman Catholic church. Democracy in various forms is the genius of all Protestant churches. Baptist churches are ideally pure democracies. The Baptist denomination, however, has found it somewhat difficult to function as a denomination with efficiency in dealing with purely independent local churches. Moses as a leader is still needed, but as a dictator he has no recognized place among self-governing churches.

Memories of a loved one are most fittingly symbolized in the sweetly musical tones of

Deagan Tower Chimes
Played by Organist from Electric Keyboard
The Memorial Sublime
Through no other means can you confer on your church and community a greater beneficence. Beautiful memorial booklet on request.
Standard Sets $6000 and up
J. C. DEAGAN, Inc.
163 Deagan Bldg.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Van Duzen Bells
formerly Van Duzen & Telf
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.
The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

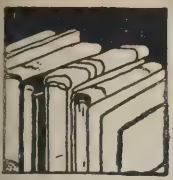

PIPE ORGANS
of any size or construction.
Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.
Electric Organ blowing suits for organs of any make.
Write, stating which catalog is desired.
Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 14
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

BLMYER BELL CO.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Dept. 12, Cincinnati, O.

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs
21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices.
A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
215 Englewood Ave., Chicago, Ill.

New Books

South Looks at the Church. New York: Abingdon Press.

The contents are a full stenographic report of the Interdenominational Student Conference at Evanston, Ill., held December 29. There is an introduction giving the origin of the movement, written by Stanley High. The report is self-interpretative. Thousands of people have been waiting for its appearance.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

Faggot of Torches, by F. W. Boreham. New York: The Abingdon Press. $1.75.

Biographical sketches they are, of Allen Gardiner, Augustus Toplady, Thomas Carlyle, Robert Fuller, Augustine, Josephine Butler, John Woolman, Yodora Dostoyevsky, John Hampden, John Keble, John Coleridge Patteson, John Stapleton, Richard Baxter, Tokichi Ishii, George Fox, Doctor Samuel Johnson, Blaise Pascal, Leo Tolstoy, William E. Gladstone, John Nelson and Harriet Beecher Stowe. Each story is built upon a text which is supposed to be the life-text of the subject. The selection of text is somewhat fanciful, but the author has an idea that words are flashlights of revelation, and has written several books in demonstration of this notion. Be that as it may, the stories are strikingly told and they make good reading for the easy chair, for Sunday afternoon or for times when the spirit is depressed.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

These Sayings of Mine: An Interpretation of the Teachings of Jesus, by Lloyd Douglas. New York: Scribner's Sons. $1.50.

Here is a strikingly original interpretation of the parables of Jesus in their bearing upon the problems of our day. The author is one of a growing number of religious thinkers who are feeling the urgent need of getting back to Christ as the only authoritative and satisfying source for meeting the unprecedented difficulties that are constantly arising out of our changing habits of living and thinking.

We need not the trappings, the furniture nor the holy implements of religion as much as we need the pure unadulterated Galilean gospel for too many of our ecclesiastical observances have served to put us off from a clear view of that message instead of opening up the way to it. The sayings of Jesus are classified and treated under ten great themes and would prove a valuable work for college students in their discussion groups as well as a ready handbook for the pastor and the Bible school teacher.

—C. R. OSBORN.

Why I Believe in Jesus—A Personal Experience—by Edward Leigh Pell. New York: Revell. $1.50.

It is to the advantage of Mr. Pell's book that we approach the Master from the viewpoint of experience and personal heart relation. The author does not write from an exuberant sentiment or from effervescing emotions. Literary merit is not wanting; a keen analysis of mental and spiritual forces manifested in the life and character of our Lord is presented; but in a spirit of personal loyalty that the reader like the disciples of old is "glad because he sees his Lord again." The intense reverence and devoutness of the book do not preclude or dim a natural presentation of the divine subject, but we are not allowed for a moment to forget that the book from cover to cover is written by a "warm personal friend and admirer of the Hero, and written also after a long association and converse with Him."

—H. O. ROWLANDS.

The Virgin Birth—A Study of the Argument for and Against, by F. P. Ramsay. New York: Revell. $1.25.

Following a protracted, but not uninteresting "Introductory" the fact of the Virgin Birth is alleged to be anticipated by Old Testament predictions. We agree with the author that many passages in the Old Testament are consistent with the assumption of the doctrine, but we cannot assent to the claims he makes that they are indubitable proofs. His explanations and exegeses of many references, notably Esa. 7, are not acceptable as such proofs by modern scholarship, though expressions in them may connote with the Great Averment. The argument from the New Testament, especially from the records of Matthew and Luke, is more cogent and conclusive. Granting the genuineness of those records, which we absolutely do, only one conclusion is possible—that He was born of a Virgin Mother. While we heartily agree with the author that the Virgin Birth is "woven into the whole New Testament history" we must again demur to much of his exegesis as being untenable and not strengthening his case. His arguments from "doctrinal significances" are good as related to some Christian doctrines, but not so pertinently related to others, for instance the physical resurrection of our Lord. Seldom have we read a more scriptural (literal) presentation of the subject.

—H. O. ROWLANDS.

The Appeal of the Bible Today, by Thielston Mark, D. L. T., B. Sc. Honorary lecturer in the University of Manchester. New York: Thos. Nelson and Sons.

The author takes various apparent contradictions in the Bible and attempts to show how these came about. In his explanations he is sympathetic and Waste to the amount of $22,000,000 a year for the whole United States does not appear to be very tragic. But that is what the book notice said last week of Stuart's book, "The Tragedy of Waste." (Macmillan.) The correct figures are $22,000,000,000.

reverent. His honesty is apt to shock one, for instance: "To describe the Eden story as a 'prophetic tale' is not to make it less as a contribution to religious truth; rather does it make it more." He believes that the Bible is God's message to his people. It is a progressive revelation. And while the early Hebrew law was influenced by the Babylonian and was strictly adhered to by the Jews yet Jesus annulled many parts of it. It is this progressiveness that makes the Bible appeal to this present day. The Bible is its own interpreter. "Poetry must be read as poetry, drama as drama, prophetic story as prophetic story," says the writer. Nor does he hesitate to say which is which. His method of proving this can be described by his treatment of Jonah. To his mind Jeremiah explains Jonah as symbolism. And he quotes: "Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon hath devoured me . . . he hath swallowed me up like a dragon."

—G. W. LAWRENCE.

What Laymen Want, by Edwin Tenney Brewster. Boston: Four Seas. $1.25.

A big little book by a layman for clergymen, telling us how laymen feel about religion. They are on strike for a religion free from fixed theology, the religion of all good men. Laymen want "a rational faith, without too much priestcraft and ecclesiastical machinery, that shall fit the everyday experience of common men." They want a liberal Christianity. And laymen, the author says, are going to get what they want.

—ELMER KIRKPATRICK.

British Preachers: The Men and Their Message, edited by Sir James Marchant. New York: Revell. $1.75.

Any good sermon should be so much a part of the life of the one who delivers it that without his personality and living presence it is bound to lose much of its forcefulness and power. This is as true with these British preachers as it is with those in our American pulpits. While they are scholarly in their breadth of vision and insight into spiritual truth and the needs of our day, they are lacking in that spiritual fervor that makes its way through convictions wrought out in personal experience. They instruct but few of them seem to move the reader to any greater endeavor in the spiritual life.

There is an absence of expository preaching which one regrets and also an absence of contending for doctrines which most readers today will appreciate. One cannot help but feel that in them there is a common effort to find the most vital places in our lives and to touch them with great spiritual truths. There is a prophetic note running through most of them and a common plea to let Christ have a greater part in all the activities of life.

—C. R. OSBORN.

Our Schools and Colleges

Denison University For Men and Women

Nearly a century ago far-sighted men of faith laid the foundations of Denison. The outstanding purpose then was to furnish a thorough college course under distinctively Christian auspices. That purpose marks the character of this Christian college today.

Leaders for Tomorrow

have all the advantages of preparatory work in Doane Academy, complete musical training in the conservatory and a comprehensive college curriculum. Well regulated student activities. Moderate expenses. Wholesome campus life.

For information address

Secretary Clarence M. Eddy
Granville, Ohio.

Carleton College

Donald John Cowling, D.D., President

OFFERS exceptional training in music, the sciences, forensics, pedagogics, physical education, and art.

Its faculty carries on the noble traditions of its founders.

Its student body lives the democracy of the Middle West.

Its alumni excel in the professions and in Christian service.

Address: Willard W. Bartlett, Assistant to the President, Carleton College,
Northfield, Minnesota

COLORADO WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Two years of Liberal Arts, Home Economics, Art, Expression, Piano, Organ, Violin, and Voice. For information write to

ROBERT H. LYNN,
Acting President

Capitol Hill Station Denver, Colorado

Frances Shimer School

For Girls and Young Women. 2 years College, 4 years Academy. Music, Art, Home Economics. Outdoor sports. 10 Buildings. New $40,000 library. Campus 25 acres. 74th year. Term opens September 8, 1926. For catalog address

WM. P. McKEE, A.M., B.D., President
Box 620, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

COOK ACADEMY

Fifty-third year. Prepares boys for college or business careers. Graduates are successful in leading colleges. In Finger Lake region with splendid health record. All body-building athletics. Christian influences and training. Music advantages. For catalog, address

The Principal, Box B, Montour Falls, N. Y.

Here, There and Everywhere

(Continued from page 818)

MR. AND MRS. J. W. HICKERSON, evangelists, closed a meeting at Mercedes, Texas, J. R. Hickerson, pastor, which had resulted in twenty-seven additions.

REV. R. F. BRESNAHAN will supply the pulpit at the Highstown church, N. J., Aug. 15 and at the Pearl Street church, Bridgeton, N. J., Aug. 22. Mr. Bresnahan was formerly pastor of the Hambury church, N. J.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Pontiac, Mich., conducted a successful daily vacation Bible school with an average attendance of 217 and a total enrolment of 327.

REV. C. ARTHUR NYBERG was ordained to the ministry at the Hayden Heights church, St. Paul, Minn., July 2. Rev. A. M. McDonald of the First church was moderator, and Rev. A. H. Nelson of the Cypress Street church, clerk. The sermon was given by Dr. J. Briggs; the prayer by Rev. A. M. McDonald; hand of fellowship and charge to the candidate, Dr. A. C. Hagstrom; charge to the church and prayer, Rev. A. H. Nelson.

A TRIPLE ORDINATION was held at the Hemlock church (N. Y.), June 8. At this time Revs. Kenneth Lorne Cober, Gordon Merrill Lenox and Roland Morris Wendell were ordained. Twenty-five delegates from Mt. Morris, Nunda, Hunt, Hemlock and Rochester served on the council. Dr. Henry Conrad Moehlman, Rochester, presented the charge to the candidates; Rev. A. L. Boynton, of Nunda, gave the charge to the church; Rev. J. C. Pearse, Mt. Morris, acted as moderator and Mr. Floyd Briggs, Lima, clerk. Dr. Leland Foster Wood, of the Rochester Theological seminary, preached the ordination sermon.

THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY of the reopening of the Pleasant Valley church (Ohio) was celebrated July 25 with a homecoming and basket dinner. A special program began at 9:30 a.m. with Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, of the Baptist Evangelistic Bureau as the speaker. The building had been closed for five years until Doctor Hofmeister led the community in a movement to reopen the church. Several thousand dollars was spent in repairs. The church now has a live Sunday school, church services and a choir.

Gordon

A Graduate School of Theology and Missions, of high scholarly standards and evangelical loyalty. Degree of B.D. Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of 4 years, college standards, broad curriculum. Degree of Th.B.

NATHAN R. WOOD, President
Gordon College of Theology and Missions, Boston, Mass.

Ottawa University

(Founded 1865)

Ottawa, Kansas

Member of Association of American Colleges. Member of North Central Association.

Colleges	Degrees
Arts	A.B.
Sciences	Sc.B.
Music	Mus.B.

Assets over $1,000,000.00.
Campaign now on for $800,000.00.

For catalogue, photo bulletin, and other information write

President Erdmann Smith, A.M., LL.D.,
Box BB, Ottawa, Kansas

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

Emory W. Hunt, D.D., LL.D., Pres.
THE COLLEGE

Awards the degrees of B. A., of B. S., in Biology, Education, Chemical, Civil, Electrical and Mechanical Engineering, after four years of work.

THE SCHOOL OF MUSIC

affords instruction in Piano, Pipe Organ, Violin, Voice Culture and Singing, Wind Instruments, History of Music, Public School Music, Harmony, Composition, Theory, Vergil Clavier.

Bucknell aims to develop men and women who will apply Christian ideals in every department of human endeavor.

For catalogue and information, address

H. Walter Holter, Registrar,
Lewisburg, Pa.

Keuka College, Keuka Park, N. Y.

Standard courses and degrees. Christian institution with a home atmosphere. Beautifully situated on Lake Keuka, four miles by trolley from Penn Yan. Small classes, personal attention to the complete development of the student. Board, room, and tuition $530 per year. New buildings, able faculty. Special attention given to training young women for Christian service. Keuka needs a million dollars for endowment.

A. H. NORTON, President

THE PEDDIE SCHOOL FOR BOYS

A contribution of Baptists to the cause of Christian Education.

Splendid equipment, strong faculty, democratic spirit, Christian atmosphere.

Emphasis on preparation for college and the development of a well-rounded manhood.

Catalog and booklets on request. Address R. W. Sweetland, Headmaster, Box B-E, Hightstown, N. J.

The Shortest Path to Leadership Lies Through the College

LINFIELD COLLEGE

The Baptist College of the Pacific Northwest
STANDARD COURSES AND DEGREES

For Catalog and Bulletins write to
PRESIDENT LEONARD W. RILEY,
McMINNVILLE, OREGON

In the Choice of a College Often Lies the Destiny of Life

Please mention "The Baptist" when writing to advertisers.

Please mention "The Baptist" when writing to advertisers.

Volume VII

August 14, 1926

No. 28

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

WELLS CATHEDRAL, ENGLAND

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Look for a new and luminous addition to the world's information about the native reaction to Christian missions. The following notice in the Chinese Recorder heralds its coming: "A special invitation has recently been sent to Christian nationals in India, Latin America, Japan, China, the Near East and Africa, urging them each to prepare a book dealing with their own country. In all, six such books are planned, which it is hoped will be ready for use in 1927. These books, it is anticipated, will set forth the present situation of Christianity in these various countries and indicate what should be its future development. All are to be written by nationals."

That the United States now leads the world in the military, political, economic and commercial fields, is the opinion of the Oeuvre, a leading French journal. It enumerates the following facts: The national income of the United States is two and a half times greater than the income of France, Germany, Britain and Japan all together. Forty-five per cent of all the gold in the world sleeps in New York cellars. American capital has secured control in some form or other of the economic organization of Italy, of the railroads of Poland, and of some industries in other nations. Norway is seriously considering the pledging of her telephone monopoly, and France of her tobacco monopoly to the United States. The paper continues: "The United States' seizure of the world is no longer a chimera."

Concerning the present perplexing situation in China, the annual report of the American Baptist Foreign Mission society says: "Missionaries of the society are by no means agreed as to what attitude should be assumed toward the demands of the Chinese, nor is the board inclined to question the freedom of these workers in isolated places of service to determine whether or not they will remain at their posts if the special privileges they now have are surrendered. The board takes the position, however, that a serious situation has arisen for Christian missions and for the future of civilization, and that no other course is open to those who propose to look with sympathy upon the present aspirations of the Chinese people for the free direction of their own national life than to trust themselves to the friendliness of those among whom they work. Any effort to meet the present situation by a display of force would be exceedingly deplorable." This statement ought to be deeply pondered item by item and as a whole, for in it are wrapped up tremendous future issues.

Training for foremanship is coming to be recognized as an important feature of the industrial organization of the nation. It is being undertaken by specialists and conferences for such training are conducted in various parts of the country.

It seems that in China is being repeated the dual reaction which in all ages Christians have exhibited in their contact with current social crises. The Chinese Recorder observes: "It appears to me that there are two reactions now taking place before our eyes. One class of Christians are simply drawing into themselves more than ever. Encouraged by the attitude of not a few missionaries they leave all questions of contact with society entirely out of consideration as having no place in the purview of a devoted Christian. The result of this attitude is even worse than it might otherwise be, at the present time, because, unless I am entirely mistaken, the enthusiasm of such Christians for the preaching of the gospel and the passion for souls is not finding as much expression as it did a decade ago. There is, however, another type, made up of the more active thinking men—largely students and younger Christians who have been deeply impressed with the utter necessity for a better understanding of society and a closer relation to it. The problem which confronts us is how to help these men train themselves and train others to get the message of Christ across to the society of today through the life and teaching of the Christian group. Here lies our hope."

The quarterly bulletin of Crozer Theological seminary announces the retirement of Dr. Henry C. Vedder after thirty-two years of service as professor of church history. President Milton G. Evans is the only remaining member of the faculty whose term extends back to 1894.

In order to realize how far the industrial organization of the world has moved in the direction of a humane community life, one needs only scan the twenty-ninth anniversary bulletin of the United States Steel Corporation, covering the department of safety, sanitation and welfare. There is not room here for even a sketch of its contents and significance. A copy may be obtained free of cost by addressing the office at 71 Broadway, New York.

The United States Daily announces that bones, dug up near Belgrade, Mont., have been identified by Dr. J. W. Gidley, of the United States National Museum, as belonging to a large camel which lived in the desert in that section from 1,500,000 to 2,500,000 years ago. This camel was larger than the modern Asiatic camel, but probably had similar long neck, long legs, and pads on his feet adapted to desert travel. It lived in the geological period known as the Miocene. Camels have been found in nearly all parts of America from Florida to north of the Arctic Circle in Alaska.

For a number of years the religious education department of the American Baptist Publication Society has been asked to recommend candidates to fill positions of religious education in local churches, and young people trained in this work have requested assistance in obtaining such positions. The following suggestive list of applicants may be of help both to churches and workers: Two young men, ordained, M. A. in religious education, would like positions as directors of religious education. Experienced in public school teaching and in church work. Five young women of college training, graduate work in religious education. Experience in teaching and church work. Religious education director, specialist in rural work; young man. Pastor of long experience; wife experienced as director of religious education. Young woman, public school teaching, playground director, bachelor of religious education. Young woman, graduate of theological seminary, another public-school teacher would like teaching in religious education or promotional work. If you desire to communicate with any of these, please write to the above department, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, for further information.

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	882
REPLY TO THE LAMBETH APPEAL.....	824
EDITORIAL	825
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	827
EFFICIENCY IN EVANGELISM, BY HENRY L. DUFF	828
CATHOLIC CONTRIBUTION TO RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN AMERICA, BY J. S. KIRKLEY.....	829
FRATERNITY, BY H. F. KENDALL.....	830
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—BEING OUR BEST, BY RALPH M. JONES.....	831
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	832
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	833
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	834
CHURCHES AT WORK	835
AMONG OURSELVES	836
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON.....	842
NEW BOOKS	843

The new note of service that is coming gradually into business is expressed in these words of Julien L. Eysmans of the Pennsylvania railroad company: "Transportation has its indispensable mechanical side, but it becomes a real service, in the true sense of that word, just the degree by which courtesy, thoughtfulness and friendliness bring it into the field of human relationships." This may not seem to see far, but it looks in the right direction.

Chinese in the United States must be careful not to degrade themselves by doing manual labor—at least it seems so from the experience of one of them in Montana. Wong Sun Fay entered the country as a merchant. He owned among other things a part interest in a laundry, and by the whole laundry came into his possession and he operated it by his own labor. He was indicted under the immigration law. The court decided that he was still a merchant. But it was a narrow escape.

Truth gradually wins in spite of us humans. For instance, there are those among us who for years have seen and said that if the profits be taken out of war there will be little war. For our sins the reward has been to call us pacifists and reds. But here comes Major Gen. John A. LeJeune, commandant U. S. marine corps, in a statement before the senate committee on military affairs, as follows: "If the sudden and the danger of war is to be borne by all and not by a few, and no one is to reap any special benefit, I believe it to be manifest that our people will be less apt to precipitate an unnecessary war, and that they will be more inclined to endeavor by peaceful means to secure the accomplishment of their desires."

Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the American Federated Council of Churches, says: "We are in danger of forgetting, in these days of concern over the problems of modern society, that we never shall have a better society without better men. The new world that we seek requires first of all new men—men with purified purposes and with creative moral power." Very true. How can the church secure such men? The answer of the New Testament is: "create in Christ Jesus unto good works:" "a new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness;" "if a man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new;" "for in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." If these statements are true, what is the quotation from Doctor Cavert so true, what, then, is the supreme duty of the church? Is it not to set forth in all possible clearness and power the condition which will produce the so long needed "new men?" Has there been a neglect of this Biblical command of "new men" in much of the religious teaching of recent days? Why not try Christ's way of making "new men?" Is there any other duty quite as important as that of showing the world how it ought to have?

The trustees of Newton Theological institution have called to the presidency of the institution to succeed Pres. George E. Horr, who retired two years ago, Rev. Everett Carleton Herrick, D. D., for the past twelve years pastor of the First church, Fall River, Mass. Doctor Herrick has accepted the call and will begin his active work with the seminary on Sept. 1. During the interim between the resignation of Doctor Horr and the election of Doctor Herrick the work of the seminary has been efficiently carried forward by Treasurer Everett A. Greene, as administrative head, and by Prof. W. N. Donovan as chairman of the faculty.

EVERETT CARLETON HERRICK

Russia is opening very slowly to missionary endeavor. Permission has been granted for the establishment of a Baptist theological seminary in Moscow. Many Baptists at home are doubtless wondering why the board has not undertaken a larger program in Russia. The answer is simple. The board is waiting to make sure that foundations are available on which it is safe to build a large superstructure even when financial resources are sufficient for such an undertaking. It is frankly admitted that investigations made in Russia by Commissioner J. H. Rushbrooke and by Special Representative W. O. Lewis have not made a special appeal for Russia seem advisable. Internal political and economic conditions and the apparent inability of the Baptist forces to establish a stable organization of their own have caused the board to proceed with great caution. In recent years little has been done in addition to relief work, except to help in a limited way in the support of theological training, the distribution of Bibles, New Testaments, scripture portions, and hymn-books, and in the support of several picked evangelists.

An interesting document is put out by the children's bureau of the United States department of labor. It enumerates a formal and impressive minimum list of children's rights and affirms as a principle that these rights are best secured in a normal home, but that if for any reason they do not so receive the care to which these rights entitle them, then the community must assume the responsibility of providing adequately for them. Such provision, it declares, is a matter not of charity but of undeniable right. Thus gradually the bill of political rights to which the people have become accustomed under that label, "Americanism," tends to broaden into the field of vital, industrial and cultural rights.

An example of highly superfluous persuasion which is current in these days is the following statement put out by the Illinois committee on public utility information: "Startling as this statement may sound, it is a matter of record that practically 90 per cent of the revenue of every public utility goes back into the community it serves—in the form of wages, the purchase of supplies, taxes and maintenance. Every dollar invested by the utility company finds immediate reflection in increased general business and in increased general prosperity." But why should such a statement be startling? Who denies it? Such a result is what constitutes a public utility, which could not otherwise exist. Why should not even 100 per cent of the revenues go to the account of "general prosperity"? What becomes of the other ten per cent?

Ten living religions will take part in the Universal Religious Peace Conference, to be held at Geneva, Switzerland, in 1930, under the auspices of the Church Peace Union. The conference will center upon the topic of international friendship and prevention of war through the churches. The religions which will participate in the organization of an executive committee of sixty-nine members, will be represented as follows: Catholics 10, Protestants 10, Eastern Orthodox 5, Buddhists 4, Moslems 4, Jews 4, Hindoos 4, Zoroastrians 2, Confucians 2, Shintoists 2, Jains 1, Sikhs 1, Taoists 1. In addition there will be ten delegates at large, and also nine delegates who will be the original committee, representing Protestants, Catholics and Jews, appointed by the Church Peace Union at its last annual meeting. This original committee consists of Dean Shailer Mathews, chairman; Dr. Peter Ainslie, Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, Prof. William I. Hull, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Mr. Marcus M. Marks, Dr. John R. Mott, Dr. James J. Walsh. The purpose of the conference is to bring together adherents of the world's living religions to discuss questions relating to international justice and goodwill and, if possible, secure agreement on the emphasis on human brotherhood as essential to all religions; the recognition of universal brotherhood as essential to peace; the religions of the world to cooperate by each working in its own sphere for the attainment of these ideals; the adoption of general plans looking toward this end.

Reply to the Lambeth Appeal

(Reply of the churches in membership with the Baptist Union to the "Appeal to all Christian People" issued by the Lambeth Conference of 1920. Adopted by the Assembly of the Baptist Union at Leeds on Tuesday, May 4, 1926.)

WE, the representatives of churches in membership with the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland, gathered in annual assembly, greet in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ all Christian people, and at this time especially those within the Anglican church.

The "Appeal to all Christian People," issued by the Lambeth Conference of 1920, and transmitted to us by the Archbishop of Canterbury, has stirred deeply our minds and hearts. We received it with the respect and sympathy due to a message from brethren in Christ representing a great historic communion and moved by a spirit of brotherly love toward their fellow-Christians; and we have sought to give it the prayerful consideration which it manifestly deserves.

Our reply has been postponed in order that the Federal Council of the Free Churches of England might report upon conversations held with representative Anglican bishops for the purpose of elucidating the appeal and the resolutions that, in the report of the Lambeth Conference, accompanied it. These conversations having been suspended, and certain documents having been issued by the joint conference of bishops and members of the Federal Council, we are now able to present our reply.

We recognize fully and gladly the courtesy and lofty purpose of those who made the appeal. These qualities are manifest not only in the document itself but also in the attitude of their representatives throughout the discussion of the high matters which they brought before us. We associate ourselves with our Anglican brethren in longing and prayer for a larger unity among all who follow and serve our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. While we cannot recall without thankfulness and pride the loyalty to truth which constrained our spiritual ancestors to form the churches of our faith and order, we sorrow sincerely for whatever has been unworthy in the relations of Christian communities to one another; and we express our repentance for any bitter or unjust word or deed through which we may have obscured the testimony of the gospel or hindered the advance of the kingdom of God.

We believe in the Catholic church as the holy society of believers in our Lord Jesus Christ, which he founded, of which he is the only head, and in which he dwells by his spirit, so that though made up of many communions, organized in various modes, and scattered throughout the world, it is yet one in him.

We believe that this holy society is truly to be found wherever companies of believers unite as churches on the ground of a confession of personal faith. Every local community thus constituted is regarded by us as both enabled and responsible for self-government through his indwelling Spirit who supplies wisdom, love, and power, and who, as we believe, leads these communities to associate freely in wider organizations for fellowship and the propagation of the gospel.

We reverence and obey the Lord Jesus Christ, our God and Saviour, as the sole and absolute authority in all matters pertaining to faith and practice, as revealed in the scriptures, and we hold that each church has liberty to interpret and administer his laws. We do not judge the conscience of those who take another view, but we believe that this principle of the freedom of the individual church under Christ has the sanction of scripture and the justification of history, and therefore we cannot abandon it without being false to our trust. Moreover, it is plain to us that the headship and sole authority of our Lord in his church excludes any such relations with the state as may impair its liberty.

This view of the church determines our attitude towards the special issues raised by the Lambeth appeal.

The scriptures, in and through which the Spirit of God speaks, possess for us supreme and unique authority. While we recognize the historic value of ancient creeds, we cannot give them a place of authority comparable with that of the scriptures.

Christian baptism and the communion of the Lord's Supper are duly received by us not only as rites instituted and hallowed by our Lord himself but as means of grace to all who receive them in faith.

Because we hold the church to be a community of Christian believers, the ordinance of baptism is administered among us to those only who make a personal confession of repentance and faith. We baptize by immersion in water in accordance with the mode of baptism received by our Lord and practiced by his earliest followers as recorded in the New Testament, and because this symbolic representation guards the thought of that inner baptism of the Holy Spirit which is central in Christian experience. In our judgment the baptism of infants incapable of offering a personal confession of faith subverts the conception of the church as the fellowship of believers. We recognize that those concerning whom Jesus said "Of such is the kingdom of heaven" belong to God, and believe that no rite is needed to bring them into relation with him. But many of our churches hold services at which infants are presented, the duties, privileges, and responsibilities of parents emphasized, and the prayers of the church offered for children and parents.

The Lord's Supper is observed regularly and devoutly by our church. Its value for us depends upon both the presence of our Lord and the faith with which we receive the bread and wine that show forth his redemptive sacrifice; but not upon the official position of a celebrant or upon any change in the elements due to words of consecration. It seems to us contrary to the simplicity that is in Christ that the full effect of the Lord's Supper as a means of grace should be held to depend on episcopal ordination.

In general, the place given to sacraments by the Lambeth appeal would, it appears, exclude from the universal church of our Lord bodies of devoted Christians with whom we enjoy fellowship, and to this exclusion we cannot assent.

Our doctrine of the church determines our conception of the ministry. We hold firmly the priesthood of all believers, and therefore have no separated order of priests. The ministry is for us a gift of the Spirit to the church, and is an office involving both the inward call of God and the commission of the church. We can discover no ground for believing that such commission can be given only through an episcopate, and we hold that the individual church is competent to confer it. For us there is no more exalted office than a ministry charged with preaching the word of God and with the care of souls. Those called to devote their whole lives to such tasks are held in special honor. Yet any full description of the ministerial functions exercised among us must also take account of other believers who, at the call of the church, may preside at the observance of the Lord's Supper or fulfil any other duties which the church assigns to them.

Our ministry is one of those which our brethren of the Anglican church cordially recognize in their appeal as having been "manifestly blessed and owned by the Holy Spirit as effective means of grace." Since God has used it in building up Baptist churches throughout the world which now comprise more than eleven million communicants, we cannot in any way deny its validity and sufficiency.

The deepening sense of friendship and unity between the various parts of the one church of Christ gladdens us. We thank God that many ancient misunderstandings are passing away, that in our own country hostility and bitterness are giving place to charity and cooperation, and that the Lambeth appeal by its language and spirit has drawn the churches nearer to one another.

It will be gathered from this reply that union of such a kind as the bishops have contemplated is not possible for us. We would say this not only with that frankness which we believe is the highest courtesy among Christian brethren, but with the assurance of our regret that the way in which they would have us go with them is not open.

Further progress in the direction of Christian unity can be secured, we are convinced, only by unreserved mutual recognition. We gladly acknowledge the reality of the ministry of our Anglican

(Continued on page 839)

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Accepted as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Let Us Try to Face Our Task

EVANGELISM is now the working word in Baptist circles. Many considerations operate to intensify emphasis. Some hope that it may soften the hostility between conservatism and liberalism in the churches. Others would like to try it for purposes of irrigation to increase growth of benevolent and missionary giving. Still others long for a revival to arrest a general tendency to inactivity. Business men plead for a new ethical purpose in business life, statesmen for a new respect for law for the responsibilities of citizenship, diplomatists for a new spirit of peace to facilitate the adjustment of international problems. There are others and still others. All of them are turning to the churches and urging evangelism. And there seems to be general consent that all of these calls are valid. In fact, it has come to be a common saying nowadays that in order to set the world right we must first set the individual right.

It ought to be obvious, then, that the evangelist is taking on a large contract. If his effort is to produce all of the various kinds of fruit in ethical living that the popular program calls for, it must clearly be directed with intelligent comprehension to that end. For it is a matter of common observation that there is a type of Christian piety, apparently genuine of its kind, that fails to materialize when brought to the test of ethical and social practice. And the world wants results. It wants a Christian population that can be mobilized for specific righteousness and for tasks that require collective cooperation.

In a particular direction, for instance, Reinhold Niebuhr in the Atlantic Monthly writes: "We need a religion and ethics which know how to deal with greed as well as with dishonesty, and which have effectual restraints upon the paganism of power and pride as well as upon the licentiousness of pleasure."

Suppose that we take this need as seriously in our evangelism as we take gambling, prize fighting, the saloon, the enforcement of the liquor law, bootlegging, Sabbath observance, sins of sex. Are we prepared to take up the battle against the tendencies of greed, power and pride courageously and intelligently with our banker, with the directors of the big power companies, the railroads, the stock exchanges, the big power companies, the railroads, the stock exchanges in a thousand corporations, the capitalists who have investments in Mexico, Haiti and China—or with the wives and daughters of any of these? Not to press the question of courage, do we know enough of what the gospel really means for such problems to undertake the task intelligently, so that we can make Babbitt understand what we are talking about?

This subject opens directly into that of stewardship. Whatever "a moratorium of money raising" may mean, it cannot possibly mean that we are to evangelize the people with the doctrine that a Christian life has nothing to do with the use of wealth. It is high time for our gospel message to get away from decimal conceptions to Jesus and his consecration of all, self, means and powers, to be all equally devoted to God and to the purposes of his grace. It is time for us to learn the meaning for stewardship of the whole course of Jesus' ministry, to learn the interpretation and uses of the eighth and ninth chapters of Second Corinthians. The preacher who has learned the sweet secret of stewardship from these sources will never have reason to hesitate about preaching it. The people are hungry for the sheer riches of such a message. They welcome and respond to it as gladly as they do to any other part of the gospel. "God's financial plan" is nothing less than the spirit of Jesus, or Pentecost, or Paul operating throughout the economic power of the Christian life.

A full enumeration of particulars need not be attempted. The range of the gospel throughout all human life and all human relations is involved. The childish alternatives between the individual and the social gospels may be dismissed. The full evangelistic message covers both without impairment or disparagement. They are interdependent and inseparable. If special emphasis is placed upon either at any time, it must be understood as the emphasis not of special or comparative importance, but of a specially apparent need. The Christian is the germ of Christendom. The regenerate soul is born to fellowship; it seeks to clothe itself with a perfect society. The gospel of personal escape is the gospel of the kingdom; to omit either is to mar the other. The mass effects of Christianity are impossible except through effective personality such as Christ only can produce; but the gospel promises and the world is now pleading for mass effects.

In the light of these facts our evangelism must frankly raise the question of its own adequacy. If a man or woman has no evangelistic equipment beyond the love of Christ and the ability to say, "Come to Jesus," set every such messenger to work with God's blessing. Would that the world were full of such evangelists! But when God would evangelize an empire he released Paul. Unless our evangelism can command the enlistment of men and women who have the highest power of leadership in thought and action, teachers, social scientists, presidents of colleges, directors of great corporations, politicians, leaders of women's federations and labor organizations, we must content ourselves with mediocre achievement. Not many great, rich and noble may be called, but if so, the fault does not lie in Jesus. He calls for them and has use for them. He is lowlier than the lowest and higher than the highest. Proclaim him at both extremes and all the way between them. Save the wastrel who is barely worth saving, for he is infinitely worth saving. But halt nowhere until all of the areas of human life yield to the rule of God in freedom, equity, brotherhood and peace. Is our evangelism in its personnel and its plans adequate to conceive, interpret, proclaim and urge such a gospel with such ends in view this very year?

We shall be setting up evangelistic conferences soon in many cities. It will be glorious if those who set them up and those who participate in them sense their opportunity. But conferences of the routine and official sort manipulated from the headquarters of societies and committees will not serve the occasion. The right kind of a revival must originate not in headquarters but in heaven. What is needed is a rising of the people of Christ, moved by his love, filled with the power of his Spirit and under his leadership, to save souls indeed but also to save everything on earth that is human, savable and needing salvation.

Methodists Have Set a Fast Pace

ATTENTION was called some weeks ago in the editorial columns of this paper to the necessity of reckoning with social ethics in any adequate evangelistic program. Since that time a notable conference of Methodist leaders was held at Evanston, Ill., to consider precisely that aspect of the gospel. This conference considered the subject under three general lines of inquiry with many subdivisions. The general lines were stated as follows: 1. "The Nature of the Acquisitive Society, Do We Reject It?" 2. "The Christian Message Concerning Property, Profit, Income." 3. "The Economic Order in Relation to Evangelism, Doctrine, Worship."

About one hundred leaders of the M. E. church from all parts of the country spent three days in the consideration of these subjects. For freshness, bravery, prophetic vision, economic and political insight and a union of intellectual hardihood and reserve, this conference was one of the most significant of any held under religious auspices in recent times. It would be profoundly helpful if a similar conference of Baptists could be held previous to the launching of the fall evangelistic campaign of the Northern Baptist Convention.

An idea of the range of discussion and its relation to evangelism can be gathered from the schedule of inquiry on the topic, "The Economic Order in Relation to Evangelism, Doctrine, Worship."

The schedule of questions follows: "What limits does economic determinism set to our evangelistic effort? Is the economic order an object of evangelism? Is it possible to produce repentance in economic relations? Is it necessary to develop faith in order to change the economic order? What kind? How can we produce fruits meet for repentance in the economic field? In what way can our Methodist doctrines be related to the economic order—e.g., scriptural holiness, free grace? How can our worship be related to the realities of the economic week-day world? What possibilities are there in the sacraments, liturgy and prayers, singing, use of poetry and drama?"

For an idea of the manner of approach to the whole line of inquiry take these opening words of the conference leader under this particular topic, Rev. Roy E. Burt of Rock Springs, Wyo.: "The church has no right to call men and women to the Jesus program of life and then send them out into the present economic order without attempting to change it. Men have a right to ask the church to point the way. Why teach a man brotherhood and then send him out into a system that denies that very principle? We put such a would-be follower of Jesus into a well-nigh impossible situation. If Jesus were here, he would have something to say about this contradiction. He would challenge the whole system and ask whether it gives men and women a chance to develop personality."

The conference moved straight on to the logic of its questions. Something of the character of its findings may be gathered from the following clipping from a syndicated editorial that appeared in the several Advocates: "While we call the system to judgment we must also remember that we are part of the system. Because of this we are under primary obligation to set the example of redeeming the system at those points where we have contact with it. This means that the church must scrutinize carefully the source of its gifts lest it become a slave to a selfish order. It must also face the problem of financial management and consider the ever-increasing burden which is being placed upon the shoulders of unborn generations of labor in order to produce the income from our mounting endowments. While other concerns are experimenting in the democratic control and ownership of industry the church has not yet accepted the enlightened ethical standards of secular industry in her relations as an employer of labor. Our eyes are too liable to be too much fixed upon the profits. When we approach the question of relations among ministers we confront a real problem in fellowship. Here it would seem that we must voluntarily devise a system of remuneration that shall express the spirit of sharing and cooperation, thereby eliminating our grade system. Who shall take the initiative, if not the minister? Verily, no new order can come until ministers are willing to face the question of property values versus spiritual values within their own fellowship."

The merit of the conference is that it dared to look the vital problems of Christianity for the present juncture squarely in the face and to ask, without any hedging, the ethical questions that must now be asked along the whole frontier of the evangelical and missionary enterprise. At a single stroke they have taken the primacy in social pioneering from the hands of the Roman Catholic church which has held it hitherto, and placed it in Protestant hands. It remains to be seen whether Protestants will rally to the banner which the Methodists have thus lifted.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

Who Hides Behind His Wife May Be a Hero in Comparison

To its many crusades in the cause of righteousness, or scalability as the case may be, the Chicago Tribune adds another. It takes up the cause of the imperiled missionaries in China, and assumes that the churches at home are weakly indifferent to their fate. It calls for gunboats and the mailed fist to intervene in their behalf. The plea is morally as hollow as a drum. Missionaries have not created the disturbance in China. American gunboats now on Chinese rivers were not sent in the interest of missions. The chief interest that calls for forcible intervention is that of investors. Big profits are at stake. American imperialism is trying to hide itself behind the missionary. The worst friend the missionary can have is he who at this juncture invites him to make common cause and seek common protection with the exploiter of China. Nothing can more certainly insure the expulsion or death of missionaries. Let man be deceived. The situation in China is already bad enough for our missionaries. Every such cry from such a source for their protection adds to their peril.

the War Was Paid for Why Keep on Paying for It?

This is a simple problem in economics raised by the statements of such eminent business men as Evans Woollen and Henry Ford that the whole cost of the war in both labor and material had been paid when the war ended. The fact is obvious but it puzzles some people. Analyze the problem. To carry on the war the government required labor (including military service) and materials. To procure them it must either conscript them or buy them. It chose to buy them. To buy them it must have money. To obtain money the government must either make it, tax it or borrow it. The choice was to borrow a large part of it. To borrow, the government must go to those who had money to lend and must promise them both a respectable interest and security. Whoever else might be hurt by the war, the lender must be protected against loss and assured a satisfactory profit. To protect him the only method apparently available was to pledge the government's stake from the people collectively after the war in the form of taxes enough money to pay back to the lender both principal and interest of his loan. The whole program is based on the accepted American principle that the government, at whatever cost to the people, must give specific protection to the amount of both principal and interest to the lender, and must promote the economic welfare of those who control the credit resources of the nation. How far the principle is itself economically and ethically sound is another and a more far-reaching question.

at Guaranty of International Power

Slowly, through repeated and revised expression of thought, we approach an understanding about war and peace. A personal friend who is a Baptist and a retired army officer, noting the statement in these columns that the way to get rid of militarism is to form an international government having power to protect all of its members and pledged to do so, inquires, "How can there be international power except by organization involving at least a degree of conscription and compulsory military training?" The answer is found in 137 years of United States history. What state of this union has conscription and compulsory military training in order to protect itself against another state? And yet does any state lack protection against attack from any other state? What has ended state militarism in this country? A federal government under a constitution that prohibits any state from making war on another, enforced by the power of the federal government. And what conscription or compulsory military training does the federal government employ to protect the states from one another? These notes are written in the faith that the principles of our government are valid and safe. They will work anywhere in the world and all over the world when the people make up their minds to put them into practice. We are trying to awaken in the American people faith in their own system of government. We believe in the feasibility and necessity of an international federation to preserve freedom, establish justice and outlaw war.

Turn the Light Upon the Dry and Reform Organizations

There is much blowing of trumpets over current investigation and proposals to investigate the Anti-Saloon League and other reform organizations. There are even suggestions of a threat to do so, as if there might be terror for somebody in the prospect. One might as well threaten that if you are not careful he will inquire about the health of the family. Go ahead and inquire. Investigations, partial and invidious as they have been hitherto, have served merely to show that the Anti-Saloon League has collected funds from those who were willing to give, for purposes of public welfare agreed upon by the givers, and has spent those funds according to agreement, without graft or bribery, and that there has been no lawless business in the background making millions out of its activities. That the wets shall be investigated with equal zeal and thoroughness is neither expected nor required. For their ample record, go to the criminal courts. Meanwhile, investigate the whole range of reform organizations. If their bitterest foes can find anything short of perfection about them, we who support them want to know what that thing is so that we can mend it and make them even more effective.

Other Folks May Also Be Dreaming This Dream

Mr. Carl D. Thompson, general secretary of the National Public Ownership League, has a way of dreaming big dreams, and bringing them to fulfillment. He dreams at present of electric super-power. His vocabulary is crammed with Niagara, Muscle Shoals, Boulder Canyon, Skagit and Hetch-Hetchy. At a recent public ownership banquet he sketched the coming age of electricity already far along the way to development, in which not only the cities but also the farms throughout the nation will be supplied with electric light, heat and power at cost. The idea is to develop and tie together the great sources of power into a continental system, publicly owned and administered with a view not to private profit but to the best service at the lowest cost for all of the people. The estimated value of such a system is $35,000,000,000. Private power companies are not asleep to its possibilities. One of the great political issues of the near future promises to be formed upon the question who shall own that tremendous power and get its benefits.

Efficiency in Evangelism

BY HENRY L. DUFF

THE work of evangelism is commonly considered to be the holding of special meetings—a revival. This is too narrow a view. Evangelism might be defined as the proclaiming of the gospel in such a way as to induce the acceptance of Christ as Saviour and Lord. It should therefore embrace all methods commonly used for that purpose. The evangelist of the New Testament with other officers of the church was not the only one qualified to do such work. He specialized in it, but it was a common task and every one might at times act as an evangelist. Timothy the bishop-presbyter was exhorted by Paul to do the work of an evangelist. Philip the deacon was also called an evangelist. Later the term came to be applied more exclusively to the itinerant preacher.

There are three main divisions of activity: The educational process, personal persuasion, and the work of the preaching evangelist.

First, evangelism must be an educational process. If we think of evangelism as an appeal for the acceptance of the Christian way of life, we imply that the one to whom we appeal has a knowledge of that way. Unfortunately a large part of humanity has no such knowledge. Before we can expect any approach to God on the part of those whom we wish to influence, they must be taught to "believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." In evangelizing the world we are faced first with this tremendous task of educating it—educating it to a knowledge of God and his Christ. This implies not only information but such convincing knowledge as will lead to the acceptance of the truth as it is in Jesus. The apostles and early evangelists saw this necessity and their efforts were mainly reasoned appeals to convince of the truth of the hope that was in them. The world's ignorance of the common decencies of civilized life, not to speak of the abysmal lack of the higher ideals of Christianity, is appalling to contemplate. This is true not only in the wider reaches of the world but in our own local situation. There also we shall find that our task presents itself as first one of education.

The Task of Religious Education

This task ought to be done efficiently, for the quality of our educational process will largely determine the quality of the Christian produced. Not that you cannot have a fine type of Christian without the culture of the schools, but you cannot produce the highest and best Christian character without the knowledge of the grace of God in its wide sweep and its mellowing and ennobling ideals. Too often we have found a narrow bigoted Christian the direct result of a narrow bigoted process of training. The task of religious education is the most essential and difficult work before the church today. Its objective is not educational merely, but to produce such religious conviction as will lead to the acceptance of the Christian life. This should be the normal evangelistic method.

Second, evangelism must be carried on through personal appeal. This method used in the early days of Christianity with such happy results is now almost neglected, but its value is great. Consider how many decisions we have made because of personal influence. Maybe the whole trend of our lives has been shaped by such contact. We have often been told that the wayward boy was such because of the influence of a companion. Why not use this power in evangelism? Here again is the need for efficiency lest by our blundering we do more harm than good. Two qualities are necessary for this service: tact and consistency of life. It will require all the art we possess to do this delicate task—that of entering into discussion with another concerning his inmost life. Rules of procedure are not to be depended upon. Every occasion must make its own rules. It is more a matter of the spirit. Our own lives must measure up to the ideals we are presenting, for it would be an embarrassing situation, if, when we ask another to put his life on a high Christian plane we be rebuked by being told to put our own lives on such a plane. That which appeals to me as the most helpful suggestion is that we approach each individual on the common ground of humanity and its need of the grace of God. Never employ a tone of superior virtue. As we seek to use the evangelistic method we ourselves will be quickened to more worthy Christian life.

A Potent Factor for Evangelism

The third and most commonly accredited method of evangelism is the special or revival meeting. This work though sometimes badly done, is one of the most potent factors in evangelism. Its usefulness is in the stress it lays on immediate decision. A definite personal decision is the pivotal base of Christianity. All else fails if we do not gain the consent of the will. "To be or not to be, that is the question." There are many who know to do, but not will to do. For these our special meetings are held. Our drives are made. What are the elements in an efficient evangelism of this type? To begin with, it must free itself from the bad features of modern evangelism, such as the taint of a mercenary motive; spectacular methods and unduly emotional appeals; uncalled for attacks on harmless amusements of the people; the over-emphasis on a so-called simple gospel, which is usually a narrow gospel. For effectiveness there must be preliminary work done, such as toning up all the forces of the church; enlisting every helpful influence in the community; the listing of every possible prospect; preparation of the best musical program; the prayerful creation of an atmosphere throbbing with divine power. These are all necessary but there are some other factors in efficiency that must be singled out and stressed.

One is that the preacher chosen to lead, whoever he is, should be not only of deep spiritual insight, but of the type who have given themselves the highest possible mental training. It is a sad commentary on some evangelists to say that they have not measured up to the need in this respect. They have had little or no training. The wayward glow of their conversion reacted in a desire to spread the gospel, the evangelistic door was open and they entered. Should we not have an order of evangelists with a standard of efficiency? Why should any Tom, Dick, or Harry without special mental equipment or the long study of training necessary to such a task be accepted by the churches as an expert in the art of inducing men and women to yield their wills to God? Many untrained men have done good work it is true, but also they have done some poor, if not harmful work, with the result that many churches today are saying "save us from the evangelists." This is a pity, but it must be faced and remedied. If evangelists are not of this type. There are many worthy men in the work, but inefficiency is sufficiently true of them as a class to be noted and guarded against. If an evangelist of the necessary qualifications cannot be obtained then a brother minister might be called in. Or, if it is possible, let the pastor be his own evangelist.

An efficient evangelism must be one that will meet and satisfy the intellectual needs of our day. This might follow if we had the properly trained evangelist. But whether it be the pastor or the itinerant preacher, it is essential that the evangelistic appeal be one that will give due consideration to the intellectual religious problems of our times. It will not do to denounce such problems and those who entertain them. The trouble is too widespread for that. The general public has manifested little interest in our special meetings. Is the public indifferent to religious questions? Scarcely that. No question is of such interest to the average man. May it not be that the indifference has grown through a lessening conviction of the truth of many aspects of the gospel preached at our revival meetings? This is a serious consideration and ought to make us pause. We are faced with this chilling indifference however it has arisen, and must try to overcome it. These are the people we wish to reach. For some reason they have grown up without making a decision for Christ or attaching themselves to the church. And if this has not been entirely because of a distaste for religion as it has been presented to them, let us at least remove that as a cause by clothing our message with intellectual conceptions in harmony with the spirit of the gospel and acceptable to the best minds of our day; freeing our message from all foreign accretions which are not essential to its effectiveness.

Another element that makes for efficiency is a convincing fervor in the presentation of the gospel message. This is liable to be absent where there is a changing emphasis in religion. However, when the intellectual adjustments are made, there is almost sure to follow new enthusiasm and fervors. We may therefore look for the coming religious revival to accompany the crystalizing of our conceptions of the Christian faith. Meantime our message should be worthy of the intellectual needs and at the same time be charged with a great spiritual passion.

Catholic Contribution to Religious Liberty in America

BY J. S. KIRTLEY

THE approval which the Catholic dignitaries in their recent eucharistic congress in Chicago seemed to give to religious liberty in our country and the claim made by some generous Protestants who publicly greeted them that they helped to plant that liberty here must have caused a lot of merriment combined with serious apprehension in the mind of every informed person.

The representative of President Coolidge said the Catholics shared with Roger Williams the distinction of establishing religious liberty here. That statement recalled a speech delivered two years ago by an eminent and honorable man in accepting the nomination of his party for a high office. He said the first instance of religious liberty in our country was in the Bill of Toleration given the people of Maryland by Lord Baltimore in 1629. Both he and the gentleman of the same name who publicly greeted the eucharistic congress were exactly right except in four respects:

First, as to time: The Bill of Toleration was given to Maryland by Lord Baltimore in April, 1649, while Roger Williams wrote the constitution of Rhode Island in which he recognized the right of every one to religious liberty in March, 1638, eleven years before Lord Baltimore's bill was written for Maryland. Second, Lord Baltimore wanted toleration to most of the citizens of Maryland while Roger Williams recognized the right of everyone to religious liberty. He did not bestow it. God had already done that and all a government could do was to recognize the fact. Roger Williams specified pagans, Jews and Christians of any name and no name as entitled to religious liberty. There is a difference between toleration and liberty. Even Lord Baltimore's toleration was not complete, for he did not grant it to other than professing Christians. His bill declared that if any one "shall deny our Saviour Jesus Christ to be the Son of God or shall deny the Holy Trinity, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, or the Godhead of any of the said three Persons of the Trinity, or the unity of the Godhead or shall use or utter any reproachful speeches, words or language concerning the Holy Trinity or any of the said three Persons thereof, he shall be punished with death or the confiscation or forfeiture of all of his or her lands and goods to the Lord Proprietary and his heirs. And be it also enacted by the authority and with the advice and assent aforesaid that whatever person or persons shall from henceforth use or utter any reproachful words or speeches concerning the blessed Virgin Mary, the mother of our Saviour, or the holy apostles or the saints or any of them, shall in such cases for the first offense forfeit to the foresaid Lord Proprietary the sum of five pounds to be levied on his goods and, if not enough, to be publicly whipped and imprisoned at the pleasure of the Lord Proprietary or his lieutenant." For the second offence the fine was ten pounds, for the third "forfeiture of all his lands and goods and he be forever banished and expelled out of this province."

From the above it will be seen that only professing Christians were given toleration.

A third difference between Lord Baltimore's Bill of Toleration and Roger Williams' declaration of liberty is that Lord Baltimore acted under compulsion and Williams under conviction. Lord Baltimore derived his authority from Charles I, a Protestant king who instructed him to found churches and to dedicate and to constitute them "according to the ecclesiastical laws of our kingdom of England," which was Protestant. And he gave Lord Baltimore the privilege of having his own way "saving always the faith and allegiance and sovereign dominion due us, our heirs and successors." From these quotations and others which could be made we see that Lord Baltimore, a Catholic, was not allowed to restrict the liberty of those who belonged to the Protestant church of England and he acted under compulsion.

A fourth difference between Lord Baltimore and Roger Williams is that the former belonged to a church that has officially claimed the right to control people in their religious lives, has never in a single instance recognized the right of any one to be free from its control, has never granted even tolerance except under compulsion and has imprisoned, tortured and murdered millions of people for claiming their God-given right to be free. As a member of that church Lord Baltimore would not have been allowed to recognize the rights of others to exercise religious liberty or even to enjoy toleration. He would have automatically ceased to be a Catholic if he had done so just as Williams would automatically have ceased to be a Baptist if he had not recognized the inherent right of any man as such to religious liberty. Lord Baltimore belonged to a church whose chief claim was the right to control people, religiously, while Williams represented a church whose glory it had been to struggle for the right of every man to religious liberty even of those who were seeking to deprive them of that right. The skill with which the Catholic leaders implied and sometimes asserted a part in giving liberty to our country is to be noted and carefully evaluated. They mean something and that meaning is so plain that any wayfaring man can see it.

Every year in Rome on Maunday Thursday a bull against all who do not obey the Pope is published and the Bishops take this oath: "To the utmost of my power I will persecute and attack heretics, schismatics and rebels against our Lord (the pope) and his aforesaid Successor." The brilliant Papini who wrote a life of Christ a few years ago protested against the work of the Protestants among the Italians thus: "Leave us under the tyranny established by Christ. We medievalists still hold to the bull Unum Sanctum which says, 'we assert, declare, define and pronounce that for every human creature to be subject to the Roman pontiff is absolutely necessary to salvation.'" The Catholic church has not abandoned its claim to have the right to control the religious life of every human being and it has never in a single instance recognized the right of any one or group to religious liberty nor has it ever bestowed even toleration upon any one.

Fraternity

BY H. F. KENDALL

MEN have been applying democracy to politics for more than a century. We have held that the people should rule through their elected representatives instead of being ruled by appointees of kings and their subordinates. We have tried to extend democracy within and without our land. We have made efforts to apply democracy to our industries to give the workers more voice in the direction of the business in which they earn their living.

Three great principles of democracy are liberty, equality and fraternity. Liberty—freedom in thought, belief and action; equality—before the law and in opportunity for expression in every phase of life; fraternity—the mingling with our kind in friendly intercourse and relationship. Possessing these things men and women may live wholesome, satisfactory lives.

Not least in importance is fraternity. The fraternal spirit developed strongly in the homes of our colonial ancestors was largely responsible for the courage and perseverance that won our independence.

The importance of the home cannot be overestimated. Early settlers endured great privation and risked their lives to establish and maintain their homes. Under the cultural, refining influence of the home the men whose names we revere developed the ability and character to establish this great democracy.

The town meeting at which the citizens gathered to conduct their public affairs could not have been successful had there not been the home influence. Their decisions rested upon their abiding faith in their homes. To protect their homes they lived and died. The same spirit has animated the pioneers who steadily marched westward until nearly the whole country has become settled.

With the growth of cities and the increase in factory production a change has come. Year by year more people are living outside the influence of home life thus losing this fireside fellowship, cultural influence and fraternal spirit. The effect of this change is clearly seen in our political, economic, social and religious life.

Believing that this lessening of home influence upon the affairs of the community, state and nation is very detrimental and that nothing else can so well promote human welfare, I urge that a specific and determined effort be made to restore the influence of the home in public affairs.

The home stands supreme as an agency to build character, mold sentiment and promote human welfare. The sacred influence of the home, the fellowship of the fireside and the fraternity spirit can develop and organize a public opinion that will control public affairs, settle correctly all national and international questions, assure world peace and establish the reign of goodwill on earth.

President Coolidge has well said, "Look well, then to the hearthstone. Therein all hope of America lies."

All the forces that center in the home should be used for the common good. The purpose of such a movement may be expressed in these words: to establish justice in all human relations. This means that love must be the directing influence. The golden rule must be the guide in all social, political and industrial affairs. Let our watchwords be: fraternity with one another; fellowship with truth; service to humanity.

Beginning in the home, the creative source of life there must go forth the new spirit of unselfish service in social, political and industrial life to establish liberty, equality and fraternity, with justice to all mankind.

The Perfect Vision

"The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding."—Prov. 15:3.

BLUE violets in the fields of spring
Toward skies above soft eyes upturning,
Song sparrows that 'mid bushes sing
Their hearts with tender bird-love burning—
All beauteous things one may discern,
Must visioned be through inward sight,
Beauty—the soul's most deep concern,
Violets of virtue—songs of right.

Made in God's image, man should see
As God his Heavenly Father sees,
Truth in clear aspects; facts that be:
Vision ne'er blurred, nor men as trees
Walking obscurely, but upright;
Nor warped, mere half-truths, at the best;
See as who said "Let there be light,"
Saw all things good and so confessed.

What must God see in violets blue?
Something we've lost like him to see?
The heavenly beauty of things true,
His lustrous glory in a tree—
What love finds in each human face,
The majesty of soul within,
Which we, his children, too, might trace
Had not our eyes been blurred through sin.

Spoiled eyes have we—power lost he gave
To look with eyes divine; his view,
His touch we need who came to save,
The Christ who healed the sightless Jew—
His finger touch by faith received,
His Spirit, freshening as the dew,
His promise given in love, believed,
"Behold, I will make all things new."

—GEORGE G. PHIPPS in Boston Transcript.

The Devotional Life

Being Our Best

BY RALPH M. JONES

WE talk a great deal about the influence of mind on matter. Books have been written about it. Religions have been built on the idea. But we talk and write little about the influence of matter on mind. The house you live in, the street down which you walk, your office—all these affect your mind for better or for worse. The pictures on your wall, the furniture that fills your house, the dishes upon your sideboard exert an insensible effect upon your mental development.

Would you change your mind, alter your tastes, modify your character? Then move into a new house, or take down the pictures on your wall and put others in place of them, or buy yourself a new suit of clothes, or stop going to your office through that dingy alley and get around to it by way of the park.

Clothes and the Man

"If I were out of a position," said a business man once, "I should not look first of all for a new position; I should look first for a new suit of clothes." It was one of the pathetic tragedies of the great war that the soldier could get little inspiration out of his uniform. When a minister goes to preach for a "call" he buys a new frock-coat, not so much for its effect upon the congregation as for its effect on his own preaching.

I once read of a certain writer consorting for a year with tramps, eating their food, wearing their clothes and living their life. Doubtless he had sufficient intellectual reserve to resist the contagion of cheap circumstances. But I should have been afraid that the clothes might have made me over more than a little into the image of the thing I copied; so subtly do material surroundings get a hold on us.

On the other hand, I think of my seminary president, living in a big house that always excited my envy, environed by the choicest pictures, the finest bindings and the best furniture, with everything as good as he could get it. Said one of my classmates to me one day, "The old Sybarite!"

Now a Sybarite means a man who revels in the good things of life just for their own sake. I knew our president was not that sort of a man, but it took me some time to think out an answer. By and by I said, "He isn't a Sybarite. Those good things are not just for him; they are for us too. Every day he comes into the classroom he brings those pictures and books and choice things with him." The pictures hung not only on the walls of prexy's house but on the walls of prexy's soul. The furniture not only filled his home but it adorned the compartments of his mind. He knew that he could be at his best only as he had the best around him; so he would not have in his home anything that would cheapen him in any way or defraud the students of their rights. He was a part of all that he lived among and so it had to be good.

This effect of matter on mind is taken into account in every system of eugenics or social reform. Pedagogy recognizes it. We are no longer content to teach our children in ugly schoolrooms; we put pictures on the walls and flowers in the windows. The walls of a schoolroom are as truly pedagogical as is the teacher who sits at the desk. Religion recognized long ago the effect of matter upon mind as Rheims and Notre Dame and Eli can testify.

And what of the church in which you may be sitting today? The aspirational pilasters, the sunlight sifting softly through colored glass, the admirably blended paints; are they not as truly devotional in their effect as prayer or hymn or sermon?

A Change of Scene

Medicine also recognizes the powerful effect of matter over mind. How many times, especially in cases of depression and nervous disorder, does the doctor advise "a change," not a change of climate merely but a change of scenery as well. Just as a flower needs now and then to have the earth stirred at its roots, so men require occasionally a readjustment of their material surroundings. The things they live among have become stale to them and the mind needs to be freshened and revitalized by new scenery. Back they come from their quest with new zest and vigor for the burdens and sorrows of life. So matter has its way with mind.

Perhaps after all it is not the influence of matter on mind at all, but the influence of mind on mind: the mind of the painter shining through the picture, the mind of the architect feeling its way out through paint and portico and pillar, the mind of God showing through the world he made.

LORD, might I be but as a saw,
A plane, a chisel, in thy hand!
No, Lord! I take it back in awe—
Such prayer for me is far too grand.

*I pray O Master, let me die
As on thy bench, the favored wood!
Thy saw, thy plane, thy chisel ply,
And work me into something good.*

—George Macdonald.

The Chimney Corner

Why Andy Ached in Summer

By MARY T. PEACOCK

"JUST look at Mrs. Mertin's mince pies! I never have seen any one who could make such good looking ones," said Mrs. Jensen. "And look at that fried chicken!"

"Well, I always have more luck with cheese pies, myself," said Mrs. Harmon, "so I stick to my specialty."

"I wish you would look at the baked beans and baked ham Mrs. Jensen has," remarked Mrs. Mertin, who was as busy seeing what the other women had as she was in spreading her own. Community spend-the-day parties were occasions of note.

Noises from the kitchen told of activities there and soon suspicions were substantiated by Mrs. Brockman's appearing with an enormous platter of fried pork chops. She disappeared to return with a bowl of the accessory brown gravy in one hand and a plate of white bread stacked high in the other. Then she brought fried potatoes, potato salad, doughnuts and coffee. Her little girl, Annie, came with butter, cake and iced water.

All this time Mrs. Greenbrier had been quietly removing the contents of her basket.

"Well, Mrs. Greenbrier, what have you?" asked Mrs. Jensen.

Mrs. Greenbrier had finished placing her contributions upon one corner of the table and she now stood erect to distribute them.

"It took me a long time to change," she said, "but when Andy got so sick I finally learned my lesson. Then when Miss Turner, the nutritionist from the Red Cross, had classes for the women in Cartersville every week for three months, I went in to them rain or shine. I know some of you women thought I was foolish to think that an unmarried girl could teach me anything about food, but the doctor said Andy wouldn't have been so sick if I'd have known more about it."

The other women had grown attentive, for of all women they placed confidence in Mrs. Greenbrier.

"Most of us think that we can eat the same in winter time and summer time, too, and be just as well off, but it isn't so," said Mrs. Greenbrier with a nod of her head. "I'll wager most of us had fried cakes and ham or eggs or pork chops for breakfast, and here we are fixing to do the same thing for dinner." She was growing almost personal but no exception was taken because they knew that she knew.

"Now mind you, Andy was working—working hard that summer and getting plenty of exercise. I thought he had to have meat three times a day to keep something on his stomach. I added fried potatoes, baked beans, eggs, doughnuts and all such things to it. It was self-poisoning (the doctor said) that Andy had from his food's staying in his body too long. He said we just can't expect to eat the same foods in summer we do the rest of the year."

Mrs. Jensen came up to Mrs. Greenbrier. "Will you tell me what you have brought?" she asked.

"Gladly," replied Mrs. Greenbrier.

"These are whole wheat bread and butter sandwiches. I brought the bean loaf with bacon strips on top instead of a meat dish. I heated it on Mrs. Brockman's stove. I made tomato sauce to go with it. These are boiled carrots. The salad is shredded cabbage on lettuce with oil dressing. There is lemonade to drink. The dessert is fresh peaches with cream and plain cookies."

By this time the other women had gathered around.

"Do you suppose," asked Mrs. Mertin, "that Sam's food could have anything to do with the headaches he has been having in the afternoons?"

"I most certainly think it could have!" said Mrs. Greenbrier emphatically. "I learned in that class that we should stay away from foods rich in fat such as pastries, cakes, sauces and gravies. We should choose a small amount of lean meat, or eggs, fish or cheese, not oftener than once a day. Vegetables should be simply cooked, such as baked potatoes, boiled onions and cabbage cooked quickly. Summer is the season of fruits and we should have them or fruit juices daily. Frozen desserts are good for warm weather, but the nutritionist said we should eat them slowly."

"Well, how much easier all that sounds!" ejaculated Mrs. Jensen. "And just think how we poor women have been sweating over the stove these hot days! I, for one, am going to quit it."

Faith, Hope and Charity

FAITH, like an anchor everywhere,
Saves souls from drifting to despair,
And, like a beacon on earth's sod,
Encourages our trust in God.

Hope, like the sunshine, cheers our way
Amid doubt's shadow, day by day,
And, like a rainbow in the sky,
It shines when storms of life pass by.

Love—Charity—is always kind,
It blesses human heart and mind,
It treasures truth and suffers long,
Rejoices not in what is wrong.

Faith, Hope and Love, a trinity—
How great and grand is charity!

—Charles Nevers Holmes in Boston Transcript.

"If that nutritionist comes back," said Mrs. Brockman, "I am going to be the first one there!"

"When I was in the city the other day," said Mrs. Mertin, "I went to one of these cafeterias. I took beans and pork and gravy and afterward I could hardly get my breath. Just think of the cooling foods I might have put my tooth in! I laughed to myself when I saw a man take a glass of orange juice; but I wouldn't again."

Mrs. Greenbrier smiled her satisfaction over their enthusiasm, but she was conscious of inward fear of the ultimate physiological effect of the accumulated food as the women called the children and the men folk to the spread.—Red Cross Courier.

Bricks

WHAT remark has caused so much expanding of chests and swelling of heads as the simple little statement, "He is a brick!" Bricks are as commonplace as green onions in the spring, and every one knows they cannot be used as complimentary epitaphs of beauty. And yet when Mr. Man hears his neighbors say, "That fellow is a brick," he struts home with his pound of sausage under his arm as proudly as ever old Sitting Bull or any other wild Indian chief surveyed the antlered deer which his trusty bow and arrow had brought down on the wild American plains. Those very plains were later covered with civilized brick buildings, from whose proved staunchness the complimentary remark has been derived.

We cannot say that the remark is subtle, because there is certainly nothing very subtle about a brick. It is simply a species of good, sound American slang—familiar to ninety million people—and it has come to be one of the kindest remarks a man can make about his neighbor.

Who wouldn't prefer to have his spirit compared to a brick than to have his eyes compared to stars?—Madge Carter in the Stephens Standard.

Some English children, after their Sunday-school lesson, were asked to put up their hands if they wanted to go to heaven. Most of them did so; but one little child of eight hesitated. "Don't you want to go to heaven?" asked the teacher.

"Did you say they were all dressed in white in heaven?" asked the child. "Yes."

The little girl shook her head and adding in explanation: "Mrs. God would have such a lot of washing to do!"

Her mother earned a living by taking in washing, and the child saw nothing but washing all day and every day.

BOYS and Girls

The Girl Who Built a Home for Cripples

(A True Story)

BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

THE name of this girl was Ida Gracey, and you must not suppose that she built the home with her own hands, or even that she stood around watching go up, directing things. For the remarkable part of this true story is that a Gracey could lie in bed in America, and build this home thousands of miles away.

It happened this way: Ida was the most cheerful person you ever knew. And this was very remarkable, because lying in bed day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year is not cheerful business in itself, and when I tell you that Ida suffered terrible pain nearly all the time you will see that being jolly and merry was a pretty tremendous job. Yet everyone loved Ida Gracey. She was so worth knowing that you aren't surprised to hear of people called her White Lilac, because she was so frail and delicate and white, like lilac blossoms. Every one loved Ida. The nurses loved her; the doctors loved her; children loved her; fathers loved her; even the window-paneer loved her, as he cleaned the windows of her room, and saw this brave girl smiling through at him.

One of the remarkably nice things about Ida was that she never talked about herself at all, and even when people tried to tell her how dreadfully sorry they were for her, she had the cleverest way of turning the conversation straight over to China. "Talking about being crippled," she would say, "did you know that in China people think cripples are deformed by evil spirits? And they often throw crippled people into a baby pond near the mission hospital in Kuikang."

Of course the more she told about these other girl cripples, the more interested she became. She used to pray for them and think about them harder than ever those difficult nights when her back hurt so much that she couldn't sleep. Then she began talking to her nurse about the special thing for which she was praying.

"If I could build a home for those crippled Chinese girls right here from my bed I'd be so happy!"

She kept on praying, and asking God to help her to build that dream home. One day the superintendent of the auditorium at Clifton Springs (where she was) came into her room holding his little girl in his arms. The baby leaned over and laid a big gold coin down before the dear white face with the lovely shining eyes.

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

That's to help build your home in China," said the doctor.

Well! Ida Gracey looked at that coin, and the coin looked back, eagerly, I think. Then a great many other people heard what Ida Gracey was praying for, and money began coming to her from all sorts of people in all sorts of places until she actually had a thousand dollars. This was enough money to buy the baby pond back of the Kuikang hospital and have it turned into a building lot for her home. But it would take at least two thousand dollars more for the home itself, and Ida kept on praying. She kept talking about it too, and writing about it, until she had her two thousand dollars.

Quite the loveliest part of this story is Tren Lien, another crippled girl, once so cross that she kicked and screamed and scratched. Even the missionary doctor at the Kuikang hospital had no good word for this upsetting child: "She is absolutely helpless and hopeless, with the most frightful temper I have ever seen. There is nothing to be done for her."

But Tren Lien had never been loved. She had been taught all her life that evil spirits had deformed her, and she had grown up disagreeable and neglected and cross. But love has the funniest, dearest, queerest way! For two solid years the nurses and doctors loved that little cripple, loved her when she was cross and whatever she did, until it was really no fun to be cross. She began to thaw out into little smiles, into happiness. All the old hate was gone. She was all love. She insisted on going to school, even though she had to be carried on the backs of the other girls. Years later a missionary in China wrote to Ida Gracey: "You, in Clifton Springs, have here in Kuikang, China, a future helper for your cripples' home. What could be more beautiful than for her to be a sort of chaplain in that home, my sweet adorable Tren Lien, an inspiration to all."

So although Ida Gracey in America had never met Tren Lien in China, both of them began praying for crippled girls in China and by and by when the home was actually built Tren Lien was one of the first teachers. There is one other thrilling thing: Ida's nurse went to China as a missionary and helped to plan and work for the Ida Gracey Home for Cripples.

Dear Miss Applegarth:

If I had a million dollars I would be dreadfully happy, I know, and I think I would like to find some place in the world which had always needed something and do something fine there, and then that place would be my place to make things right. Perhaps a million dollars would not do much in the slums of New York City, but I would love to see what I could do there for folks. Once I heard a Mr. Sears talk about what he wished Baptists could do in New York City and I have felt ever since it would be so grand to be able to sweep bad things away. I would not want much of the million for myself, because I do not want much more than I have now, except more books. It is hard to have to wait at the library for the book I want, but of course I do wait, so I could do without that money after all. I know this won't win a prize so I will sign only initials, from

Your loving friend,

B. R. H.

Dear Boys and Girls:

One of the loveliest letters the postman brings me occasionally comes from Chester, Vt., from a delightful gentleman named Henry Crocker, who writes me that he was eighty-one years old on Apr. 30; and always he encloses one of the dear gay poems you have seen occasionally on the Chimney Corner page when that page used to be for boys and girls, and which you will now find on our page. Here is a recent contribution he has sent us. It seems to me it would be a jolly thing for you to sit down and write Mr. Henry Crocker a post card, care of Box 123, Chester, Vt., telling how you like poems written by gentlemen aged eighty-one! I like them very much, and only hope when I am eighty-one I shall be doing something just as pleasant and friendly as he does to this busy person who edits your page.

M. T. A.

Why?

BY HENRY CROCKER

CLOVERS, clovers
Why so sweet?
To make hay nice
For cows to eat.

Buttercups, buttercups,
Why so yellow?
To test the taste
Of some gay fellow.

Daisies, daisies,
Why so white?
To brighten meadows
As stars do night.

Violets, violets,
Why so blue?
To make you certain
That God loves you.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for September 5

Note: All reference hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society.

If you will read from the last paragraph on page 219 to page 220 of "The Man Nobody Knows" you will see something of the "reward" which Christ received. Read also from the last paragraph on page 51 through page 52.

If you can get from your library a copy of Parlette's "Big Business," read the chapter entitled "Get Your Pay." You will enjoy reading the entire book, but this chapter is particularly applicable to this lesson. If you want to have this book in your library, you may buy it from the Publication Society.

In reading the scripture in meeting, emphasize especially the seventh and eighth verses of the lesson. In conclusion, read Matthew 25:23.

For the topic presentation, review in a brief but inclusive way the previous lessons on this series of building a Christian character, bringing out the fact that it requires constant effort and watching in order to build aright.

After this review, present this evening's topic as the climax of the series. Bring in at the end something about the riches gained in training and developing talents and the enlarged capacity which the Christian life-builder finds. Perhaps some of Ralph Parlette's thoughts could be cited.

Somewhere in your meeting you may be able to use the poem which appears on this page.

Camp Judson in Black Hills

BY BEATRICE ERICSON

"No spot is so dear to our young folk as our beloved Camp Judson in the hills." This statement can be verified by all those who attended the South Dakota Assembly. No place could be more beautiful than the camp grounds, surrounded by pine-covered hills. The clear, rapid stream trickling over the rocks adds enchantment to the scene. With these surroundings we were able to appreciate fully our camp and to be inspired by it.

The morning watch started each day with inspiration and blessing. Each group—adults, young people, juniors—had its morning prayer service. There is no better way to start a day than in fellowship with Him and other friends through the medium of the morning watch.

Ordinary classes may be a "bore" to some people, but no one could say that about the classes at Camp Judson. There were classes for old and young, ministers and laymen. Every member of the faculty was deeply interested in his subject and "put it across" in such a way that every one received the full benefit. The young people were especially fortunate in the instructional and inspirational courses offered them.

In order that no one could have a chance to get tired from sitting through four classes in a stretch, we had "setting-up" exercises and a general assembly period each day. The general assembly period was one of real fun. Peppy assembly songs were sung and announcements made. After these minutes of recreation and enjoyment, we were all ready to give ourselves whole-heartedly to our last two classes.

The afternoon of play gave us a chance to become acquainted with the faculty and our fellow classmates. One can take more from a teacher who will join with the bunch and have a good time playing. We found that the faculty members were all good sports when they played baseball against the boys of the camp. Some of them could even knock home-runs and others catch flies way out in the field!

Ever go swimming in a cold mountain stream? We all had the chance to try it. Some were more comfortable on the bank—they thought—but only those who tried it knew how great it was.

After spending the afternoon in "honest-to-goodness" play, a fine supper tasted good. "Laughing aids digestion" they say, and the truth of this was proved at our mealtime. Songs and jokes kept all in good spirits.

The vesper services were a source of inspiration. Each was different. There were held sometimes on the river bank on the hilltop—"God's sky home"—and in the auditorium with the homelike fireplace blazing. Every evening's message was helpful. Two evenings the South Dakota poet inspired us with his poem. He read some of the poetry of the Bible in such a way that it thrilled and filled each one.

Stunt night was a great occasion. Each delegation presented a stunt picture showing some phase of B. Y. P. U. work. The evening was closed with a stunt by Sioux Falls college.

Sunday was one of the biggest days of all. Visitors came from all the churches in the surrounding community to enjoy the day with us. The most impressive part of the day's program was the evening service on the river bank. The message was brought from an island in the river and a lighted cross glowed from the opposite bank.

Moonlight evenings in the hills are more wonderful than words can express. In order to get the full benefit of the day a group of us walked up the gulch and sang. Sunrise from the mountaintop was beautiful, too, as many of us who climbed up early in the morning can witness.

The total registration was 187, ninety-two of whom were regular delegates and stayed throughout the assembly. There were thirty-two credit cards, fifty-one assembly certificates, and one diploma awarded at the commencement exercises held the last evening. We feel encouraged over this report since this is our fourth assembly in the Black Hills. We hope to award more diplomas next year. We were fortunate in having our assembly leader, Rev. W. H. Bayl, our director of religious education, for there can be no other man who could work harder and do any more for the assembly than he did.

A spirit of cooperation was prevalent throughout the assembly. Every one had a good time and received inspiration. We cannot tell yet just how much was accomplished but we feel that every church in the state will be benefited by the inspired group which will return to

Rev. R. L. Van Deman has developed out of a Ph.D. thesis presented by him at Northwestern university last year a monograph on text-books for religious education which bears evidence of scholarly research. An interesting feature is an efficiency score-card which affords a valuable series of organized criteria for judging the value of text-books for religious education.

My Wage

*I bargained with Life for a penny,
And Life would pay no more,
However I begged at evening
When I counted my scanty store.*

*For Life is a just employer
He gives you what you ask,
But once you have set the wages,
Why, you must bear the task.*

*I worked for a menial's hire,
Only to learn, dismayed,
That any wage I had asked of Life,
Life would have paid.*

—JESSIE B. RITTENHOUSE.

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

PENNSYLVANIA CHURCH SENDS OUT LETTERS

The Royersford church in Pennsylvania used a form letter this year to assist in its every-member canvass. The letterhead bore a picture of the two stairways to the budget goal, with the caption "Which Stair?", and was signed by the pastor, Rev. Hammond S. Crossan, and the collector of the church.

With the letter was enclosed a statement of the financial plan of the church and a pledge card. Each member was asked to write his pledge on the card, and to have it ready for the collector when he called.

Not only were the members asked for pledges but the picture of the stairway in the letterhead was used to point a moral and adorn a plea for regularity in payment on the pledges.

WHAT BUDGET-CUTTING REALLY MEANS

When the statement is made that the budget of a mission board has had to be cut on account of reduced receipts from the churches, the average church member probably does not realize the serious implications of such cuts. Here are a few striking statements taken from a report of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, which show what has actually happened to work carried on by that society, on account of the falling off in missionary receipts:

"In 1920-21, our approved budget was $83,404. Today our working capital is $21,818. This cut means that we have eighty-six fewer missionaries on the field than were on the field in 1920-21. The dropping of these missionaries is reflected in the amounts spent for their salaries during the following years:

1920-21	$177,147.76
1921-22	164,587.00
1922-23	151,660.00
1923-24	140,436.00
1924-25	127,268.00
1925-26	121,194.13

"This cut makes it hard for us to keep and obtain workers on account of the low salaries paid. A laywoman visiting in one of our cities found four of our teachers living in one room in order to save expenses. Another missionary is unable to have proper medical attention on account of her low salary. We have found that one of our missionaries, an eastern girl whose mission field is in the West, in order to come home for vacation, travels in the day coach in the low time, and the tourist sleeper at night. These missionaries are constantly called upon by the needy on their fields and really give away no small percentage of the low salaries they receive.

"In 1920, we were making appropriations to twenty-two schools; now, we make appropriations to seven. We have withdrawn the American workers from our primary schools in Cuba. We have withdrawn the entire appropriation for one school in Linares, Mexico, and the school is discontinued. We have closed the kindergarten among the Japanese in Seattle. We have discontinued the only work among the Finnish people. We have also discontinued all work among the Portuguese. Work is withdrawn among the Italians from two cities in New York state—the entire work discontinued. Practically all evangelistic work among negroes in the South has been discontinued. In New Jersey, work among the Italians discontinued, work among the Hungarians discontinued. These are just a few instances and many more could be cited.

"Where two or more workers have been employed in mission stations we have withdrawn one or more and the work has fallen on those remaining, with the consequence of ill health and broken down workers. Among the Crow Indians where formerly we had eight missionaries, only four remain.

"General missionaries have been discontinued in North Dakota, Utah, and Idaho. These western states which are so greatly in need of a woman missionary who can go from place to place to build the work among women and children have been practically without work of any kind during the past three years.

"In California we have discontinued the Russian work in San Francisco and the Mexican work in Santa Barbara and San Diego. Mexican work has also been discontinued in two centers in Arizona. There are great opportunities for service, but the money reductions in our budget have made it impossible to take advantage of new opportunities and also to continue the work in several of the fields."

MISSIONARY CHALLENGES

Not retrenchment, but enlargement
Not retreat, but advance
Not abandonment, but consolidation
Not stagnation, but development
Not repetition, but variation
Not obstacles, but opportunities

(Reprinted from New York Metropolitan Baptist Bulletin.)

A YEAR WELL BEGUN

That the upturn in missionary receipts has indeed begun, we are encouraged to believe by the record for the first two months of the current fiscal year. For June the receipts of the Board of Missionary Cooperation from donation sources were $279,268. This sum exceeds not only last year, but the year before that, the figures having been respectively $206,019 and $239,732. This is a substantial gain, even though we have to gain a good deal more before we realize the aim of paying in one-twelfth of the total unified budget every month.

By June 30 the board had received from the churches through the state convention offices, $455,272.82. This amount equals a little over one-twelfth of the full budget for the year. However, by the end of June, the second month, two-twelfths of the budget, or $883,939.34, was actually due. This means that the climber on the budget stairway, instead of mounting two full steps in two months, only got a trifle higher than the first step. It is hoped that with the reopening of church activities in the fall, he will swing into a brisker stride.

A SUGGESTION FROM WISCONSIN

"We are in receipt of a weekly bulletin of the First church of Delavan, Wis. We note especially what Rev. John R. Estes has to say regarding the Board of Missionary Cooperation and its asking our churches to increase their contributions 15 per cent over last year. This issue of the bulletin emphasizes the need of backing the work of the board, also of sending in one-twelfth of the amount raised, monthly, in order to avoid wasting a large share of receipts from our churches in the payment of interest on borrowed money to carry on the work through eleven months of the year. This word from Mr. Estes is a sample of what others of our churches might put into their bulletins, thus inspiring their membership to contribute liberally and with regularity, not only to our missionary causes but for the support of the local work."—From the Wisconsin Baptist.

THEIR BEST YEAR

The Clinton Avenue church, Newark, N. J., reports the results of its latest every-member canvass as the best record yet; 376 members will give for current expenses during the year $12,157.56, and 318 members will give $6,904.36 to missions. The church took in a special Easter offering of $1740.40.

Among Ourselves

A British Causerie

BY FREDERIC C. SPURR
France

I AM writing in a small French village far from the beaten track and away from all letters and journals. We are in the heart of Brittany, the most Catholic part of France, the province which gives to the Roman church a greater supply of priests than any other in the country. Indeed, this is part of a strong complaint heard in the French Catholic press. The Bretons are not the most intellectual or the most cultured of the French folk and many resent the preponderant number of these in the priesthood. They have reason, for the Bretons are the most superstitious people in France and religiously the most ignorant. I attended a number of services and was impressed by the sheer paganism of the performances. There is a cult of the dead which is gruesome and ante-Christian. A finger of a saint or a hair of his head is of priceless value. Pardons are the rule in this country; several took place during our visit. They combine superstition with the spirit of fear.

The drinking habits of the people are astonishing. Every second or third shop supplies liquor of various kinds. The people are poor but they always have money for liquor.

Brittany is a fine field for evangelization but one of the most difficult. The better educated people have broken with Romanism and are awaiting a real message of the gospel. France is in a poor plight politically. During my stay here I have witnessed the fall of two governments and the creation of another. What will be the next move? Not until France is stabilized will Europe be safe.

More British Preachers.

Cynics who say there is no demand for sermons are wrong. When the right kind of sermons are published there is a large public for them. Nearly 100,000 copies of Père Sanson's "Notre Dame (1925) Sermons" have been sold in France at ten francs per volume. This is a record in sermon literature. In England a second "Annual Volume of British Preachers" has appeared, announced as "just plain sermons." Nearly half come from Anglicans, eight are from Presbyterians, two from Methodists, two from Congregationalists, one only from a Baptist, one from a Unitarian, and one from Doctor Orchard who defies all labels. This is certainly not a representative proportion. The poorest sermons in the volume are from the bishops. As it does not profess to contain great sermons but only simple, direct and sincere discourses, it must be read in that light.

There is some great preaching, however, in these pages. The first place must be given to the sermon on suffering by Dean Matthews of Sion college. It stands alone for clearness of thinking and power of expression. The poorest discourse is by one who has the largest Sunday night congregation in London. It is thin to the last degree. It cannot be a fair specimen of this man's preaching. If it is, then the congregation should be counted and not weighed. For the rest we have some real living speech on vital themes. Mr. Gossip and Dr. Wheeler Robinson speak to the heart, and are thoroughly evangelical. "Dick" Sheppard of St. Martin's gives a good specimen of sincere talk. Mr. Williams, of Menai Bridge, is the artist of the company; he adheres to the grand style of the olden days. Father Waggett has a labored discourse on the Eucharist, difficult to follow, involved and unsatisfactory. Surely our Lord never intended to tie up his church in a series of metaphysical phrases and ideas which need a special training to understand. The High Anglicans are losing themselves in a tangle of useless reasoning in order to make clear, as they think, their position. This volume is of interest as showing how some men preach. It also contains much good material which is worth perusing. There is no classic in this volume. It is a good annual, but it will not be perennial. The thing I miss is passion. Not many of these discourses would bring a man up sharp against his Saviour and wring from him a cry of penitence. The volume has interested me and I recommend it, but it has deepened the impression I have had for some years that there is something lacking in modern preaching, an Apostolic and insistent note. For sheer driving power and spiritual unction there is not one sermon in this book that can compare with the overwhelming force of the sermons I heard from Père Sanson in Paris in Holy week. I wish we in Britain had a little of the Galican touch.

Keswick.

Reports are coming in of the Keswick Convention. Friends who have attended for years tell me there is a difference in the spirit of the convention. It has been in existence for fifty years and all the old leaders have passed away. The new men speak with a different accent, and their message is conveyed in a different vocabulary. The aim remains the same, that of promoting scriptural holiness. Some of the old stagers shake their heads and speak with bated breath of the great days of Webb Peplow, Brooke, Hopkins and Elder Cumming. They incline to be critical of new men. The danger of a convention like Keswick is that it is liable to produce a new kind of Pharisaism, an attitude that says "stand aside, I am holier than thou." What future will be I dare not predict. Newer psychology has made impossible some of the old catch phrases of convention. The "newer" evangelists are not favorably impressed with words which were once sacrosanct, though they were not the words of scripture. A new vocabulary has come in vogue. Probably Keswick will have come into line with movements such as the Christian student movement. The conventions have their day and then pass; other things arise with other demands. It was so with Mildmay; it likely to be so with Keswick. But what is true and enduring in the Keswick movement will not be lost. The pursuit of holiness is not the close preserve of any body of people and no one completely possesses the secret of it more than another. The work of Keswick has been leavening work. I owe something to it although I have no connection with it and some of its terms no longer appeal to me. As one gets older, one cares less for party catchwords, and inclines more towards the fount of knowledge, the Bible itself, the truth of which "school" can exhaust nor adequately press.

A Missionary Tour in Ha

BY A. GROVES WOOD,

General Missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society.

THE baptisms which brought me to Port de Paix took place at 7 a.m. Sunday in the sea, following a short service in the attractive hall, used both chapel and schoolroom. It was sixteen years since the last baptism in Port de Paix, and great interest was manifested. The attendance was good, and the people listened attentively. At the ceremony the Sunday school gathered, and an hour later church and Sunday school went to the prison, where service is held every Sunday, in spite of repeated protests of the local Roman Catholic priest. On Sunday afternoon an open-air service was held at a place voted to cock fighting; several birds were already tied in the two pits, but they were removed during the service. The evening service was held in the mission hall followed by the communion, when the right hand of fellowship was given to the three candidates.

On Monday we went to S. Louis to the school kept by Felix Cadet. There are thirty boys on the list with an average attendance of fifteen. The brother whom we have sent as teacher-evangelist has made a good impression everywhere. He visits from house to house and holds regular services in the chapel. As a result there are five believers asking baptism. The building is in bad shape. The iron roof is so far gone that in some places it resembles lace. The wooden walls are also badly in need of repair. In some places the main timbers are rotted through. The place can be repaired at small expense if taken in hand now, but if there should be a long delay a new building would have to be erected. There are no funds in hand to do this work; contributions are invited, to add to the amount that can be raised locally.

We returned to Port de Paix to be present at the prayer meeting held Monday evening. There was a good attendance, and an earnest spirit.

On Tuesday the colporter and I started for Borgne by land. The first part of the trip was to S. Louis by car. There had been arranged for two horses to meet us, but only one was forthcoming on our arrival. We visited several houses in the hope of hiring another animal, and at last, about two p. m. one was obtained and we started on a four hours' ride along the beautiful but narrow coastal plain towards Anse-à-Fleur, our first stopping place. Anse-à-Fleur is the center of a large sugar area, but only rum is produced. Since we could not reach le Borgne before dark, we were invited to pass the night with a hospitable Jamaican family, who treated us with unusual kindness. I had heard that at this place there was the remains of a Baptist chapel, and on making inquiries, I found the site, with the foundations still standing. Wallenstein Polycarpe, grandson of the woman who gave the land, is the mayor here. He told me that the land is still at our disposal and that if we put up a chapel we can add to it if we wish. He has also offered the use of his office for meetings until a chapel can be erected. He expects to marry one of our active members at Port de Paix early in July, so it seems likely that we may have a mission here in the near future. We went round the village inviting the inhabitants to a service, and the room was packed; numbers were unable to get in, and remained standing throughout the service. I have arranged for Pluviose to visit this town once a month.

We left Anse-à-Fleur early the next morning for le Borgne. The track crosses three ranges of tree-covered mountains, and is one of the most beautibe an unhealthy place. We were well received by the principal merchant. Rosemond Pluviose has done good work here. He has visited a great deal, has distributed large numbers of tracts, and judiciously loaned books to those interested. In this way he has won the sym-

GENERAL MISSIONARY WOOD, AND FAMILY, OF HAITI, RECEIVING A GIFT FROM THE SIXTH AVENUE CHURCH, BROOKLYN, TRANSMITTED BY REV. C. S. DETWEILER. MISSIONARY ROSEMOND PLUVIOSE IS AT MR. WOOD'S LEFT

ful I have ever traveled. We crossed a number of streams and waterfalls. The coastline is lovely, as there are glimpses here and there through the trees of the sea bathed in sunlight, sparkling among the numerous small islands that dot that part of the coast. In some places the sea is shut out altogether, and one seems to be gazing on a lake of turquoise. Borgne appears far down, half hidden behind the promontory on which it is built. The town is low, and stagnant water stands in the main streets. If it were not for the almost continual heavy wind, it would pathy of the whole township. He has been holding meetings in the open air, but when I was there we rented a house in the center of the town, consisting of a large front room suitable for a mission hall, and four smaller rooms at the back in which the missionary will live. An encouraging service was held at night. Benches, and a gasoline lamp were loaned by various friends. A number of men here are believers, but they are not yet prepared to face the persecution that baptism would bring. I visited many of the leading citizens of the town, and found a welcome everywhere, and heard a good word everywhere for our missionary, Rosemond Pluviose.

After spending two days at Borgne I started for home via Bayeux, where there is a large sugar estate owned by an American company, Port Margot, and Limbe. Between Borgne and Bayeux the road is beautiful, as it keeps near the shore, sometimes climbing over a small range of hills, then along the sea shore, then through cultivations, but always with new and unexpected views of the sea. We stopped at the home of the first candidate for baptism from this area, an old man named Charles Pierre. Missionary Pluviose had stopped on one occasion to leave his bicycle at his house, as he could not ride further, and when he had a talk with Pierre he found that although he had been baptized as a Catholic he had refused to go to the "premiere communion," as he felt that the religion was not of God. He had been praying that God would send some one to him with the true light. During his first visit Pluviose had left a copy of the New

BAPTIST CHURCH, GRANDE RIVIERE, HAITI

Testament which the old man read eagerly, recognizing that at last the light for which he had been praying had come. When Pluviose returned three weeks later, he was received joyfully by Pierre, who, through the use of the Testament, and with the explanations given on the previous visit, had found the Saviour and the peace for which he had sought so long. He is now a humble believer and hopes soon to confess his faith in Jesus.

At Port Margot we found a deserted Wesleyan chapel. We asked the caretaker to let us see the interior, but he refused, saying that he had let his brother have the key. We had heard that the place was being used by the Masons, so were not unprepared for his reply. A door was open into the chapel and I noticed that the building was full of litter. The Wesleys have neglected this out of the way place for a long time, and with Pluviose at Borgne we hope to establish our cause here, as he will be able to spend a few days here each month.

The work at S. Michel is spreading in a miraculous way. A new preaching station has been opened outside of town and over 100 people gather there regularly to hear the Word of God. There are twelve candidates for baptism next month, among them another Voodoo priest who has been won by Fils Aima Guillaume whom we baptized in April. The chapel and yard are packed even when the local brother preaches. I hope to go there in July, and thence to Hinche, where several more candidates will be ready for baptism.

Preliminary Announcement of the Cooperative Committee of Evangelism of the Northern Baptist Convention

THE following communication has been received by the pastors of the Northern Baptist Convention:

My dear Brother:

You have already learned of the action of the Northern Baptist Convention at Washington following the remarkable address of Dr. J. C. Massee in which he urged that the denomination give itself preeminently to the work of evangelism. A resolution authorizing a committee to confer with existing agencies and the Board of Missionary Cooperation for the creation of an effective program was unanimously adopted.

A committee of fifteen was appointed which will be known as the "Cooperative Committee on Evangelism of the Northern Baptist Convention." The committee met in New York June 30, and organized with Dr. Frank A. Smith, chairman, Rev. W. Reid, secretary, and Dr. H. F. Stilwell, director. It was voted that we should proceed without delay to enlist every pastor in this great denominational venture.

It is not desirable that there be a uniform program, but every church should have some program. It is possible to have a denomination-wide objective, and it ought to include the following: 1. Every Christian a witness. 2. Every minister an evangelist. 3. Every church evangelistic. 4. Every convert conserved. It is planned that there shall be a series of inspirational conferences which shall be of the nature of a study and a retreat. There should be at least thirty of these to cover the field of the convention. They should be held as soon after Oct. 1 as possible. It will be of the utmost value that every pastor shall be in attendance. Every church ought to have a committee on evangelism as an aid to the pastor in this essential work.

The administrative committee of the Board of Missionary Cooperation has voted to conform its program for the year to permit the least possible conflict with the plans of the committee on evangelism. There has never been a time when the agencies of our denomination were more genuinely convinced of the desirability and the possibility of a great religious awakening. We can easily effect the necessary organization. What we most need is the impulse of a great passion in our own souls. We are asking you to devote a part of these summer days to prayerful study of how best to fit your church into this great plan. Praying that in a great unity of purpose and cooperation we shall see the greatest year of soul-winning in our history, we are Always yours,

Frank A. Smith,	W. E. Chalmers,
William H. Main,	William Reid,
Herbert F. Stilwell,	George R. Baker,
Samuel G. Neil,	H. E. Dutton,
Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall,
Edwin Phelps,	John Herget,
Earle V. Pierce,	W. C. Coleman,
J. C. Massee,	J. W. Baker,
Frank M. Goodchild.

Iowa Letter

BY JAY A. LAPHAM
Iowa Baptist Assembly

JULY 25 was the crowning day of the Iowa Assembly held at Iowa Falls, for on that day the new pavilion, built at a cost of approximately $9000 to take the place of the old one which had served for thirty-five years, was dedicated. The structure, which has a seating capacity of 1800, is ninety-six by eighty-two feet with a rostrum thirty-eight by twenty feet. In general plan the building is similar to the tabernacles used in evangelistic meetings but is more substantial

This building has been the dream of the assembly for several years and was made possible by the zeal of the convention officers and by the efforts of Mrs. Wm. Welsh of Dennison who visited the churches of the state and awakened interest in the enterprise. The money for the pavilion was pledged chiefly in small amounts from a large number of people both young people and older members. The churches. Fifty-three counties were represented at the dedication service.

Rev. R. E. Williamson of the First church, Waterloo, preached the dedication sermon then led in the campaign for funds until the last dollar of the $4800 debt had been pledged. Pres. A. W. Caul led in the responsive dedicatory service and Dr. G. P. Mitchell in the prayer of dedication.

Dr. G. A. Huntley gave an address in the afternoon in which he showed how medical missionaries are used by the Lord in soul-winning, declaring that the saving of a body frequently leads to the saving of a soul. Rev. Harold N. Geistweit of Des Moines spoke to a large audience in the evening and left his hearers with a deepened sense of the meaning of life.

The assembly was unusually successful. Rev. F. L. Carr, who is visiting eleven assemblies this year, states that Iowa is reaching the largest number of people of any one state in the Northern Convention.

Baptist Orphanage and Home for the Aged

At the assembly and in the various associations held during June there was hearty sympathy with the endeavor to establish a Baptist orphanage and home for the aged in Des Moines. Substantial gifts are coming in and the board of managers feels encouraged. Information concerning the opening of the home will be published in a few weeks.

Bates College

BY HELEN M. WHITEHOUSE

THE sixtieth annual commencement of Bates college was held June 19-21. 118 members of the senior class receiving their degrees. The Master's degree was conferred upon five candidates, who had done their work largely at the Bates summer sessions. Honorary degrees were conferred upon Dr. George C. Smith of Boston, Master of Arts; Dr. Samuel Macauley Lindsay, pastor of the First church of Brookline, Doctor of Divinity; William E. Pulsifer, president of the D. C. Heath Co. of Boston, Doctor of Letters; Dr. Josephine B. Neal, head of the meningitis division of the New York City department of health, Doctor of Science; Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts, Doctor of Laws.

The commencement dinner was held in the new Clifton Daggett Gray athletic building, which was used for the first time.

One cause for rejoicing was the laying of the corner stone of the alumni gymnasium, which has been the dream of friends of the college for the past twenty years. The old one which was burned

You are invited to attend the Dedicatory Services
of the Auditorium-Gymnasium held at

The Grand Island College
Grand Island, Nebraska

Sunday, August 15, at 3 p. m.

A check for $100.00 from 200 Baptists would be a very great blessing and help to us.

J. M. Wells, President.

ear ago was built sixty years ago and had been for many a day totally inadequate to the needs of the college.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Pres. Clifton D. Gray, who took as his text the inscription over the door of the athletic building, "And every man that contendeth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things," I Cor. 9:21.

The debating schedule has been the heaviest in years, fifteen debates in all, of which Bates lost two. Eighteen men and women took part in these intercollegiate contests, more than twice as many as in any one year heretofore. President Gray made the announcement that Prof. Ward Browning, who has been associate professor of rhetoric and argumentation for the past year, will be next year head debating coach.

Two members of the faculty, Prof. Fred E. Pomeroy and Prof. Sydney B.

Brown, have been granted a year's leave of absence for graduate study, and Prof. W. H. Sawyer will enjoy the same privilege the following year.

President Gray called attention to the fact that the endowment funds of the college are a trifle over $1,700,000.

Total enrolment for the year 1925-26 was 622 with a summer session of 231 students.

This year the summer session has 263 students and twenty-one instructors, including seven members of the regular college faculty. One hundred fifteen of these students are men, including school superintendents, high school principals and teachers who have done notable work in the field of education.

During the summer a two-story addition is being built to Hedge laboratory, which has been made necessary by the growth of the department of chemistry.

Sioux Falls, S. D., has accepted a professorship in Denison university.

REV. ELMER FRIDELL, pastor of the First church, Fresno, Calif., writes that he is having a fine trip through Europe with most rewarding programs. He will be in his own pulpit again in September.

DR. YORK A. KING, pastor of the Austin First church, Chicago, with his family, started July 26 for a month's auto trip. He is visiting Boston, Lawrence and other eastern cities and his old home in Canada. Dr. Francis Stifer, Doctor Peterson, state superintendent of missions, and Rev. A. Baker, of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, are pulpit supplies during Doctor King's absence. The Austin church plans to enter wholeheartedly into the evangelistic campaign this fall and winter. It expects to prepare plans for the erection of a new Bible-school building next year.

AUG. 1 DR. T. M. HOFMEISTER addressed a mass meeting of men, followed by a sermon to a union meeting of all of the Protestant churches of London, Ohio. In the afternoon Doctor Hofmeister spoke at the London prison farm.

REV. PAUL RILEY ALLEN was ordained to the ministry on June 27 at the Third church, St. Louis. The service included: charge to the candidate by S. E. Ewing, Bible presentation by R. B. Whiteside, ordination prayer by H. A. Porter. Mr.

Here, There and Everywhere

REV. A. W. JUDD, formerly of Wood River, Ill., has taken up his new work as pastor at Pana, Ill.

REV. MARTIN S. BRYANT, 807 S. Fourth street, Champaign, Ill., Baptist university pastor, would like sent to him, by Sept. 1, possible, the names of prospective students at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana. He plans to mail such students, before they leave home, a bulletin giving the location and hours of church services. The pastor and the church purpose to mean all in their power to these students.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, at the Columbia Street church, Bangor, Me., an informal reception was given Rev. John S. Pendleton, and family, who are leaving Bangor for Waterville, where Mr. Pendleton begins work as executive secretary of the United Baptist Convention of Maine. The church adopted resolutions of regret at his going from them and good wishes for the new endeavor.

HUGH P. ANDREWS, pastor of the First church of South Bend, Ind., is the publisher of a monthly named the Chaplain. The July issue is labeled Number 2 of Volume 1. It is well made up both so far as contents and typography are concerned.

DR. R. L. CROOK of Yachow, West China, on a five-day outstation trip this spring, vaccinated 206 patients for smallpox and attended 124 other people in need of a doctor. Many had to be turned away because of the necessity of his quick return to the work in Yachow.

THE MEDICAL UNIT being built at Sona Bata, Belgian Congo, is engaging the attention of the medical staff, who are helping Mr. B. W. Armstrong with the work of construction to their other duties. Mr. Armstrong had the foundations for the new buildings laid by July and expected at the end of the rains to burn and put into the walls the thousands of bricks which he and his helpers made and have kept under cover.

REV. CHARLES H. EYMAN has resigned as pastor of the church in Humboldt, Iowa. All the churches of Humboldt joined with the Baptist church in giving Mr. Eyman a gracious farewell reception as he left for a period of study in the University of Chicago.

HENRY H. VAN METER, a deacon of the First church, Chicago, has written and published a strong message advocating the use of the Bible in the public schools.

FRED G. BOUGHTON, for the past four years president of Sioux Falls college,

Reply to the Lambeth Appeal

(Continued from page 824)

thren, whose representative bishops have similarly acknowledged the reality of our ministry. This mutual recognition is significant and full of hope.

We believe that the time has come when the churches of Christ should unite their forces to meet the need of the world. We therefore are prepared to join the church of England in exploring the possibility of a federation of equal autonomous churches in which the several parts of the church of Christ would cooperate in bringing before men the will and the claims of our Lord.

We assure our brethren of our earnest prayer that the blessing of God may rest in the churches of the Anglican communion, and that he may continue to impart abundantly to its members the riches of his grace.

Finally, we would reaffirm our belief in the real spiritual unity of all who are united to Christ and his truth, and our earnestness to welcome every means by which, in common action for the spread of his message and the helping and healing of men, that unity may be displayed to the world.

We pray be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

The Baptist

Chicago, August 14, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 28

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Rates: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Remittances: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add exchange.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send in renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. No manuscripts returned unless accompanied by full return postage.

Want Ads

Wanted: By Mature Christian woman of experience, a position as matron of Girls' or Boys' Dormitory. Good references. Answer, X. Y. Z., care BAPTIST.

Stenographer: Young woman for permanent position. College office. Applicant must be well-trained, alert and keen for advancement. Experience not essential but candidate must have high mental and personal qualifications. College degree desirable but not essential. Address C, care of The Baptist.

Rev. Marlin Hinkle, known as the "Boy Evangelist" because of his effective ministry as a high-school boy, may be secured as a Gospel Evangelistic Singer, Soloist and Chorus Leader or Preacher for the coming Evangelistic Season. Write him at Mason, Mich., Box 624.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, your own paper, Chicago.

"Tonight we have a program about preachers and editors and your own denominational paper, THE BAPTIST. We shall first tell you what some wise boob has said about preachers.

"The preacher is a perpetual paradox," says this oracle. 'He is the most admired and the most criticized man in the community, the most discussed and the most ignored, the most overworked and the most let-alone, the most versatile and the most specialized, the most respected and the most terrorized, the most loved and the most mistreated.' He says further that if the preacher is to do more he must attempt less.

"What we would like to know is, how in the world are we going to get them to see that their work and worries would be less, very decidedly less, if they would take time to systematically enlist their people to read the denominational periodicals? If every minister would add this activity to his schedule, he could subtract a lot of things he's doing now, multiply his ministry through an informed constituency and divide responsibility and glory with his flock. Thus he would be arithmetically regulated.

"Now we come to editors. Most any one can be an editor. It is what might be called a snap. All an editor has to do is to sit at his desk eight hours a day, six days a week, four weeks a month and twelve months a year. Armed with horn-rimmed glasses, shears, gluepot and blue pencil, he hews to the line and lets the chips fall wherever they want to. He reads, and deciphers hieroglyphic manuscripts, sweats, shears, pastes, pencils, prays for grace and probably gets less appreciation than any other conscientious person in the world.

"Likewise an editor has more free advice wasted on him than he deserves. Great offense is given if he does not insert the copy as it is sent in. For instance: 'A mischievous lad of Picketown threw a stone the other day and struck Mr. Pyke in the alley.' Or this bit of church news: 'While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Saturday night, a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green several times on the public square.' But he worries along. Most editors have a sense of humor and those who have not are mostly dead. If their readers had more it would help put oil on troubled waters. Editors who see themselves as others see them are very humble men.

"Now we want to introduce two pastors and another denomination for your consideration. The first pastor is Dr. James Madison Stifler of the First church, Evanston, Ill. So far this year his church has sent in over twenty combination subscriptions to THE BAPTIST and Missions for as many young married couples that have recently united with this splendid church. What a sane investment this is. How much more the church will mean to them as they come to know the great fellowship with which it shares its life.

"The other pastor is Rev. Harold Nash Geistweit, First church, Des Moines, Iowa. He has been there less than a year and already the church has adopted a tremendous program of expansion and service. It received 100 new members the first six months this year. Plans are being worked out to erect a modern building to cost around $800,000. It will cost a million, no doubt. In his bulletin of June 27 he has one of the finest appeals for THE BAPTIST and Missions that we have seen for a long time.

"Pardon if we just cannot get to the third factor—the other denomination. We shall use that information at a later program. The office boy says that in his opinion a few folks want something for nothing, and for this class he recommends the following:

The thing that goes the farthest toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most is just a pleasant smile;
The smile that bubbles from a heart that loves its fellow men,
Will drive away the cloud of gloom and coax the sun again.
It's full of worth and goodness, too, with manly kindness blent—
It's worth a million dollars, and doesn't cost a cent."

"WCOY now signs off. Sleep tonight with a smile. Goodnight."

Allen has been pastor of the Hope Congregational church of St. Louis for several years; previously he was a Congregational pastor in Chicago. He and Mrs. Allen were received into the membership of the Third church. Mrs. Allen was formerly a Baptist. Mr. Allen was received for baptism and baptized on Sunday evening preceding his ordination. He has accepted a call to the First church, Keokuk, Iowa.

Rev. SAMUEL G. NEIL was the preacher at the opening service of the Ocean City, N. J., tabernacle association in connection with the celebration of its forty-seventh anniversary, Sunday, June 27. The historic tabernacle on the Methodist camp ground will be the scene of a full summer program of evangelistic services this summer. Doctor Neil will give four addresses at the New York state Baptist pastor's and laymen's summer conference to be held at Keuka college, Keuka Park, N. Y., Aug. 19-20. He also preached the dedication sermon at the new church building of the First church, Pleasantville, N. J., July 25.

SUBJECTS TAKEN from sign-board advertisements have been presented as mid-week service topics by Rev. David N. Boswell, First church, Rome, N. Y. The chief purpose was to spiritualize the advertisements so as to take away the paradoxical element which so appears. A few of the subjects were: "Keep that school-girl complexion," "Gabriel snubbers or Burd-Gilman shock absorbers," "Chesterfield cigarettes—they satisfy," "Supreme auto oil leaves less carbon," "Three-in-One oil."

Rev. MERLE E. CORBETT was ordained July 7 in the church of Websterville, Vt., on recommendation of a council composed of twenty-two delegates from twelve churches regularly called by the Vermont Central Association. Rev. Albert H. Gage of Brattleboro preached the sermon. Other parts were taken by Prof. F. S. Anderson, Newton Center; Rev. W. A. Davison of the state convention, and Doctor Petersen, Hardwick.

Rev. F. I. SIGMUND has begun his seventh year as pastor of the Pemberton (N. J.) church which is entering its 163rd year of continuous existence. Forty-three persons have been baptized during the past six years, sixteen during the past year. Improvements have been made on both the church and the parsonage and an organ fund has been started.

THE VACATION Bible school held by the Tabernacle church, Milwaukee, Wis., had an average attendance of seventy-five; eleven nationalities were represented. Including the parents' offering, the school was an asset rather than a liability. Little Anita Speer, twelve years old, completed her tenth church vacation school this summer. She has served as a helper in the kindergarten and primary departments and has acted as pianist for two years. During the last four years she has not missed a day of the daily vacation Bible schools.

SINCE FEB. 9, the First church of Jamestown, N. D., J. Maurice Hupp, pastor, has received eighty new members, sixty-seven by baptism. From February to June the church showed more additions than any other Baptist church in the state and now ranks third in church membership. The pastor has been with the church four years. During this time the church mortgage of

Noble Instruments, Nobly Built
HALL ORGANS
West Haven, Conn.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 16
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

Several years' standing has been paid. The North Dakota Baptist Association met with the Jamestown church June 29-30.

DURING REV. F. R. LEACH's first year as pastor of the church at Bremerton, Wash., sixty-six members were received, a 40 per cent gain. Improvements have been made in the church property. The church held a successful daily vacation Bible school with attendance of 107.

NINE PERSONS were baptized by Rev. Edward Griffith at the First church, Newark, N. J., June 27. The men's brotherhood has an attendance of sixty-five to 100. The pastor leads conferences at the Ohio assembly in Granville early in August.

THE MEMBERS of the Duaneburg and Florida church, Delanson, N. Y., gave a surprise party on the evening of July 3 for their pastor, Rev. G. J. Kneppa and Mrs. Kneppa in celebration of their eleventh wedding anniversary.

CAESAR'S CREEK CHURCH, Clinton Association, rural, celebrated its home-coming all-day meeting July 18. Rev. T. Gray of the U. P. church, Rev. N. H. Long, the pastor, and Dr. T. M. Hofmeister were the speakers.

REV. H. B. COX has entered upon his second year with the First church, Benton, Ark. The debt for current expenses has been paid and $10,000 has been paid on the building debt. Fifty members have been added to the church.

REV. W. C. HART, Cairo, Ill., was surprised by the gift of a new car from Deacon J. Keaton. Mr. and Mrs. Hart expect to take the car on their August vacation trip. The pulpit will be supplied by Rev. Howard Kneppa of South Carolina. Extensive repairs on the church building will be completed by fall.

REV. HERBERT M. RICHMOND was ordained to the work of the gospel ministry July 15 at Ansley, Neb., on recommendation of the permanent council convened for the purpose at Grand Island, July 6. Rev. E. H. Jackson of Gibbon was moderator and Rev. J. Wynne, Mason City, clerk. The sermon was preached by Rev. A. C. Hull, Grand Island; charge to the candidate and the church, Rev. Parker Smith, Broken Arrow; ordination prayer and right hand of fellowship, Rev. R. J. Wynne.

THE FIRST BAPTIST Chinese church of New York was organized July 11 in the Kingside Chinese mission, Chinatown, N. Y. There are twenty-two constituent members: Dr. Mabel Lee, superintendent of the mission, twenty young men and Miss American assistant. A kind of public recognition for the church was held Aug. 1 when the Chinese council was present and representatives of the American Baptist Mission Society and the New York Baptist Mission society. The members of the Chinese church have requested Rev.

Charles H. Sears to act as honorary pastor, administering the Lord's Supper and baptism, otherwise the work will be under the direct supervision of Dr. Mabel Lee, daughter of the former minister, Rev. Lee To.

THE WOMEN of the First church, Visalia, Calif., gave a reception for Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Featherstone on their sixtieth wedding anniversary. The renewal of the marriage vows was read by Rev. C. M. Northrup.

THE MOUNT HERMON Federate School of Missions reached an attendance record of 328 during the week July 3-10, the largest number in its history. Baptists who were prominent on the program included Rev. F. A. Agar, Mrs. C. W. Brinstead, Rev. J. C. Garth, Dr. C. W. Brinstead, Mrs. Carrie A. Robinson, Miss Winifred Rouzee, and Rev. W. E. Hopkins, a Baptist missionary from India. Mrs. A. Egli, formerly missionary among the Chinese and now eighty years old, and Mrs. Ethel Phelps Claypool, a former missionary to the Philippines, were present. A pageant portraying twenty years of service was given to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Mount Hermon.

REV. L. D. LAMKIN is in Colorado Springs, Colo., resting from his campaign of revival work. He will be available for evangelistic meetings after Sept. 1.

EVA M. PAGE, librarian of Des Moines university, Des Moines, Iowa, is completing the files of THE BAPTIST in bound volumes for the library of the institution. The following numbers are lacking: Apr. 10, July 3, 1920; Jan. 22, Apr. 9, Aug. 13, 1921; Sept. 23, 1922; Feb. 17, May 12, Dec. 15, 1923; Nov. 22, Dec. 27, 1924. Any of our readers who can supply any or all of these numbers are asked to communicate with the librarian of Des Moines university.

How ABOUT eighty-four men gathered in a Bible class on a hot Sunday morning at 9:30 in the gymnasium of a church which registers only 215 members? Such was the registration of the men's class of the Downers Grove, Ill., Baptist church, on July 18. Editor John A. Earl is teaching the class during the summer months. A. H. Carrol is the popular pastor.

THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL held during July by the Chestnut Street church, Philadelphia, Rev. Arthur C. Baldwin, pastor, had an enrolment of 115 and an average daily attendance of nearly seventy. The church unites with the Tabernacle and Walnut Presbyterian churches for community services on Sunday mornings during July and August. The pulpit of the Chestnut Street church was supplied July 25, by Rev. Frank W. Goodchild and on Aug. 1 by Rev. E. Carl Herrick of the First church, Fall River, Mass. Rev.

Clarence W. Kemper of the Baptist Temple, Charleston, W. Va., will preach Aug. 8.

REV. EARNEST A. MAIN has begun his third year at the University church, Los Angeles, Calif. During his pastorate the membership and congregation have twice doubled, the Sunday school has doubled, the finances have increased 200 per cent and the church supports a strong B. Y. P. U. Professor Reiusch, instructor in the university and a member of the church, has aided in the formation of a Baptist club known as the Roger Williams club.

A SUCCESSFUL SUMMER SCHOOL was completed at Bethel institute, July 23, when final examinations were given. The faculty and students enjoyed a fellowship hour before disbanding. The academy will open Sept. 14; the seminary and Bible and missionary training course, Sept. 21.

THE JENNERSTOWN CHURCH, Boswell, Pa., Rev. Chas. A. Weed, pastor, will celebrate its centennial Aug. 15-22. The program will open with a reminiscent service Aug.

Church Furniture

Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture
· Sunday School Seating

American Seating Company

Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1069 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukegan, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE

Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study. Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write
President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D.
1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Tuition and room-rent free. Scholarships available to approved students.
Seminary within 13 miles of Philadelphia. Seminary's relations to University of Pennsylvania warrant offer of the following courses:

1. REGULAR COURSES FOR PREACHERS AND PASTORS. Seminary Degree of B. D. or Diploma.
2. TRAINING FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE. Seminary and University. Degrees of B. D. and A. M.
3. TRAINING FOR ADVANCED SCHOLARSHIP. Seminary and University. Degree of Th. M. at Seminary, and Ph. D. at University.

For information address Rev. MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., President, Chester, Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C., "THE KERN" features from new Washington auditorium, facilities of a hotel with the atmosphere of home; 50 quiet guest rooms, each with running water; many free baths; also private dining room; excellent, inexpensive dining rooms. Garage on premises. Free map sent. Telephone, Franklin 1142.
Address, MRS. JOSIAH QUINCY KERN, 1912 "G" Street, Northwest

15 at which time a history of the church written by the pastor will be read, and will continue throughout the week with special speakers, an all-day picnic and a musical entertainment, closing with the evening service Aug. 22.

THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL held by the First church, Girard, Ohio, Rev. W. I. Barnholth, pastor, had an enrolment of 106 and a daily attendance of sixty. In addition to memory work, the children were taught as many Bible lessons during this time as they could have covered during three months in the Sunday school.

REV. AND MRS. W. S. RYDER of the First Temple, Oshkosh, Wis., are taking a motor trip through Michigan, Ontario, Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and New England. They will visit friends en route and plan to be back Sept. 1. Mr. Ryder will preach at the First church, Moncton, N. B., Aug. 8.

WHEN REV. B. M. OSGOOD left the First church, Fort Dodge, Iowa, to take up his pastorate at Washington, D. C., his former church adopted resolutions expressing regret at his departure, gratitude for the work that he and Mrs. Osgood had done in Fort Dodge, and commending him highly to the church at Washington.

PROF. M. W. CHASE, for fifty-seven years organist at College church, Hillsdale, Mich., resigns at eighty-four years of age. A letter in the church calendar expresses the church's appreciation for his service. Supplies for the College church include Rev.

A. H. Gleis of Detroit, Aug. 8; Rev. John E. Smith, Lansing, Aug. 15; Rev. Bunyan Spencer, acting-president of Denison university, Aug. 22; and Rev. P. L. Powell, acting-president of Franklin college, Aug. 29.

REV. A. P. HOWELLS of Jacksonville, Ill., has been spending the summer in Missouri and California occupying various pulpits. He has not accepted a pastorate as yet. At present he is in Los Angeles, Calif.

The Saving Sense

Employer: "You need a rest."

Clerk: "I know it and I'm going to have it. I'm sending my wife to the country today."

Neuter gender doubtless was invented to fit the man who can enjoy the conversation when ladies are discussing frocks.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Canton Press, Missouri, prints this notice: "The party who borrowed my posthole digger will please return it as I have a chance to loan it again.—Ed Miller."

Boy's Topcoats, $3.89: Smart new styles of spring that were bought to sell at far less.—Toledo Blade.

"The ideal career," remarks Dr. E. H. Lindley, "is to do what you please and get paid for it."

Is he married? Watch him enter the house through a screen door. If he shoos the flies and closes the door carefully, he's married.

Mrs. H. sent her small son to a neighbor's with the message that if it was agreeable, Mrs. H. would call in the afternoon. On his return the youngster was asked what he had said to the lady. "I told her," he replied, "that if she would make herself agreeable you would be over this afternoon."—Boston Transcript.

When a church seeks a pastor
It often wants

The strength of an eagle,
The grace of a swan,
The gentleness of a dove,
The friendliness of a sparrow,
And the night hours of an owl,
And when it catches that bird
It expects him to live
On the food of a canary.

—Record of Christian Work.

A preacher, waxing enthusiastic on the marvels of creation, proceeded to expand as follows: "And the same Creator who made the vast ocean made the dewdrop. The Creator who made the mountain made the pebble. Yes, and the same Creator who made me made a daisy!"

A son at college wrote to his father:

"No mon, no fun, your son."

The father answered:

"How sad, too bad, your dad."—Temple Advocate.

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for August 22

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS: DUTIES TO GOD

Lesson Text: Exod. 20:1-10. Golden Text: Deut. 6:5

The decalogue which is here given in organized form was in force among men long before. But at Sinai the law was codified and given to the people. Its authorship is traced to God, and it is God who speaks through Moses these commandments which have become the basis of law of mankind.

Worship

The four commandments dealing with duties to God may be summed up in the one word, worship. The first commandment imposes upon the people the duty of worshiping God exclusively. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." This commandment forbids all forms of idolatry and all kinds of polytheism. The world has always been full of gods, but the Israelites were peculiarly exposed to idolatry, for all the people around them were idolatrous. The late defections of the Hebrews throughout their history up to the time of the captivity can be easily traced to the violation of the first and second commandments. They turned away from worshiping the true God exclusively and adopted other gods and followed the evil practices that went with idolatry. Among modern civilized people there would seem to be no call for the first commandment because idolatry in its original forms is a thing of the past. But idolatry exists none the less among the most intelligent people. Whenever God is made to take a secondary place in the heart of a man or in the heart of society, that is idolatry. If the first commandment calls for the exclusive worship of God, the second insists on the spiritual worship of God. God is spirit, and attempts to visualize him by material objects is solemnly prohibited. The forms of material worship have changed in modern times and now thousands of people worship property or the things that may be purchased with money.

Worship

If God commands exclusive worship of himself it is because he is worthy of it. His name is sacred because it represents a personality that is holy. To take the name of God lightly upon the lips in expletives or in profanity is to cast discredit upon what is most sacred and worthy. The first thing Jesus taught his disciples in the Lord's prayer was reverence, and there is nothing that needs more cultivation among men than intelligent reverence for the character of God. So worthy is the exercise of spiritual worship a day has been appointed for it. One day in every seven is a ratchet in the wheel of the week to stop the revolutions for twenty-four hours in order that God may be publicly worshiped. The six days of work are to receive no less emphasis, but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord. Since Jesus came revealing the Father our worship of God should be wholly spiritual because we may appreciate the superior value of spiritual reality.

When You Make Your Will you will surely need to know the exact corporate names of your national missionary organizations.

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

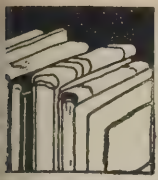

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

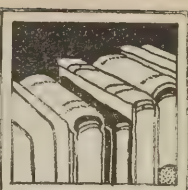

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request. "Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

New Books

Devotional Diary, arranged by J. H. Idham. New York: Doran. 60 cents.

For a record of the time spent in daily devotions. Also devotional lessons with references are given.

Set Up Your Hearts, edited by Anton T. Oisen. Boston: Pilgrim Press. $20 per 100 copies plus express.

Designed for use in hospitals and other institutions, it presents an order of service designed to meet the requirements of various faiths.

Singing and Worship Book for Young People's Conferences, edited by Sidney A. Weston. Boston: Pilgrim Press.

A handbook for young people's conferences containing favorite hymns, suggestions for topic discussions, outlines of services, and prayers.

Book of the Presbyterian Program for Young People, 1926-1927. Philadelphia: Presbyterian Board of Christian Education. 30 cents.

A program for the young people's organizations of the church based on service, instruction, recreation and devotion.

Man Created During Descent, by Morris Morris. London: Marshall Brothers, Ltd. Price 3/6.

The author ought to write with the authority of acquaintance with his subject. He holds the degree of M.Sc., was research scholar in the University of Bourne, and has written another book on a related branch of the subject. He proposes the hypothesis of continuous biological descent but denies evolution. He finds the difference between them to be in the hypothetical fact that when a new species is due it is created by special act of God communicating new characteristics to an individual germ of existing species. Thus species "descend" from previous species but are "evolved" from them. By this hypothesis he bridges the gaps of descent that trouble the regular evolutionist and argues with considerable force that such bridging is necessary. His hypothesis has difficulties, however, which he does not sufficiently clarify. He mentions only one, if at some point in the genetic life of some species a new species is due to emerge, in order to its emergence as a species with stable characteristics, the creative act must affect at least two individuals so that they shall exist contemporaneously in the same locality with the same group of new specific characteristics and of opposite sex. Of course, miracles can account for anything, but his hypothesis must provide for such a miracle. Whether it will be more satisfactory than pure evolution, or a mixture of evolution, evolutionary creation and pure creation, remains to be seen. It must be given a place in the course of life, and the manifest gaps between species must be bridged, but the last word on the subject is yet to be said.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

The Threat of Leisure, by George Barton Cutten. Yale University: New Haven, Conn. $2.

The author of this book is the president of Colgate university. What he has aimed to do is set forth in his own words:

"The result of our unlimited, unorganized, unled, and uncontrolled leisure is the gravest danger to which any nation has ever been exposed. This is the great threat of leisure which we may now see: the fruition of such conditions in the lack of self restraint as evidenced by the waves of crime with which we are now deluged. Our laws and national propaganda have been directed against overwork of people in general and certain classes in particular. We face a greater danger in underwork—or at least in under-employment, for the latter may be even more fatal."

The leisure which is discussed is that condition in which people find themselves because of the use of labor-saving machinery. There is now so much leisure that the great problem is its right use. To help society in adjusting itself to this new condition this book has been written. It is suggestive and arouses serious thought about the outcome of a civilization which makes no intelligent provision for the unoccupied hours.

—H. L. STETSON.

The Missionary Idea in Life and Religion, by J. F. McPayden, professor of New Testament literature and criticism in Queen's Theological college, Kingston, Canada. New York: Scribner's. $1.50.

It is a long time since we have read a book on the missionary problem of the interest and merit of this small volume. It is well written by a literary master. The divisions and subdivisions of the treatise are so arranged that any phase, fact, or condition of the subject can be found as if it were in a cyclopedia. As to the contents the author has every preparation to consider them. He studied at Glasgow; for twenty years he was missionary of the United Free Church of Scotland at Nagpur, India. Aside from the position of his chair in Queen's college he is also in the chair of lectureship on missions, so he writes from the viewpoint of a specialist. While the volume has a strong philosophical, religious and historical trend which makes it a rich food for a critical student, it possesses also simplicity and lucidity that bring into missionary problems a new and concrete interest. The missionary impulse in life, business and professions as well as in religion is made the opening chapter; the missionary idea of Jesus, of the four gospels, of the apostles and of the first centuries are well considered. Wrong conceptions and methods of missionary work, some failures and causes thereof; the wonderful successes of missionary efforts and the indebtedness of civilization and progress to missionary enterprises, the difficulties in the way of success—those are some of the features of this little classic on a world-wide problem. As a whole it is a storehouse of information on the subject and a veritable dynamo of inspiration.

—H. O. ROWLANDS.

There Is No Death, by Robert J. MacAlpine. New York: Revell. $1.25.

This brochure of 106 pages is full of comfort and enheartment for those whose lives have been impoverished and hearts rendered sore by the passing of loved ones from this earthly life. In a well reasoned argument and in fine literary style the author has given his confidence in the continuity of life beyond the grave and the assurance which the believer in Christ may have, "life, rest, individual recognition and eternity spent in the light and presence of God." It might well be called the Christian outlook.

—H. L. STETSON.

Preachers and Preaching in Detroit, by Ralph Milton Pierce, D.D. New York: Revell. $2.

Here we have an attractive book of sermons, "the best from the pulpits of the fourth largest city in the union," edited by the pastor of the Grand River Avenue Methodist church, Detroit, Mich. Detroit, Doctor Pierce says in his introduction, is a city of modern efficiency, a dynamic city in the sense that it is one of the world centers of trade and manufacture. To its population nearly 400 Protestant ministers are preaching every Sunday. From this number, Doctor Pierce has selected nineteen. "Standing at the head of this notable list are several preachers of national or international renown," he declares. "Perhaps no city in America holds so many outstanding preachers within her borders." The book contains a sketch of the life of each man and a sermon from each. These sermons are of a high class, full of inspiration and power.

—O. P. LOVICK.

The Mystics of the Church, by Evelyn Underhill. New York: Doran. $2 net.

This is not a discussion of the mystical philosophers or those who overemphasize ecstatic and visionary experiences or those who have withdrawn from the institutional side of religion. Rather the author treats of those creative souls whose deep experience of God has challenged the attention and stimulated the spiritual life of their fellow Christians. Necessity compels any one writing on this theme to deal with the Roman Catholic saints. This author gives space to the modern Protestant mystics such as Boehme, Silesius, the mystical poets, Fox and the Quakers, William Law, Henry Martin and the mystics of our own day. The book is both historical and interpretative. The bibliography following each chapter is of value.

—G. CLIFFORD CRESS.

The Proposal and a Suggestion

By W. A. ELLIOTT

I HAVE been thinking much of evangelism and I venture to make a suggestion: Would it not be possible for THE BAPTIST or the committee of fifteen on evangelism to prepare and give to the churches an accredited list of Baptist evangelists, men who are trusted and true and who have proven their efficiency and trustworthiness?

It seems to me that such a list would greatly aid our churches in preparing for the proposed evangelistic effort in the fall and would be a kindly thing to do for our brethren who are giving themselves to evangelism.

Some of our evangelists have had hard sledding during the past year or two when much of the emphasis in our denominational life has been placed on controversy and when our denominational machinery has creaked under the strain of raising our missionary budgets.

I find myself in fullest accord with six months of intensive evangelistic effort. Is it not possible for us to utilize all of our forces in such an undertaking? In our worthy evangelists we have spiritual resources that ought to be greatly used. They are deserving of greater recognition than the denomination has accorded them in the past. Let the committee on evangelism list these evangelists—those who have proven themselves worthy and men of good report; let the committee put its own approval upon them and encourage the churches to make large use of them. I am confident that such approval will result in fuller cooperation of the churches with these "specialists in evangelism" and will greatly aid the churches in planning for their fall and winter work. No note has been struck in many a day in our Northern Baptist Convention that is more needful and which has elicited greater response than that struck by Doctor Massee in his address at Washington. Evangelism is the power preservative of the spiritual life of our denomination. It is the one thing that will keep the fires aglow on the altar of our denominational life. And who knows but that the note was struck in this hour of crisis to save us from the strife that was slowly dimming our denominational vision and causing the fires of evangelistic passion to die down into ashes?

Can It Be Done?

By C. A. GELABERS

I HAVE been watching and observing with keen interest the details in THE BAPTIST of the progress of Baptist interest throughout the country particularly and the world generally. I have observed the occasional publishing of figures showing contributions to missionary work. The figures in the July 17 issue are before me. To say the least, their totals are a reflection on the intelligence of Baptists and an indication that as a denomination we have lost our religion, our love for the extension of God's kingdom, and our pride. It is high time we haul down our flag and admit we are a great social organization but hardly a two-footed, red-blooded, progressive, missionary, God-serving organization.

Statistics show that less than half of the population of this country are members of or are affiliated with churches. The need for missionary work in this country alone is great. If Protestantism and the Baptist denomination are to survive and to contribute their share toward keeping America free from the shackles of irreligious groups or religious organizations to whom the public are mere serfs, it must build a high missionary staff. It must entrench itself securely and every Baptist must rally to the cause and give until it hurts. In the long run it won't hurt. It will act as a boomerang to the welfare of the individual, the nation and the spiritual kingdom of God.

For years I have been wishing for a strong leader to rise in the Protestant church, especially in my own denomination, who will reinterpret the ideals of our covenant and creeds, unite us in one great spiritual body and fix in us anew a determination of spirit which will tear down the barriers between us and our neighbors so that we shall become less of a social clique and more of a tabernacle of worship for all peoples. Then our contributions for the spread of the gospel and the carrying of the light to other nations will be over and above the required amounts and necessary research work can be done unhampered by lack of funds.

The job can be done if our people will only catch the perspective. With the determination which characterized our predecessors who, departing, shed the mantle for us to carry on but which I am afraid we have let hang in the clouds and the moths have gotten into it; with a concerted renewal of determination, the job can and must be done. Let us realize that without missions we are as hopelessly lost as a business concern without salesmen or as an ocean liner without fuel.

In a missionary sermon preached by Rev. John A. Foote, Baptist missionary now on furlough in this country, at the commencement exercises of Grand Island college, Nebraska, he quoted a Chinese student leader as saying:

"You will misjudge the situation if you think your missionary effort has almost come to an end. Why, the work is at its very beginning. We are needing missionaries today perhaps more than ever before."

Doctor Foote added, "The Macedonia call today is from Christians abroad. They feel and know the need of the own countries more keenly than we; they also know what we can do, and will direct us. It is not a time for slackening our endeavors. The dayspring is at hand."

For RALLY DAY

"Go Forward"

THIS new Rally Day program of 16 pages is complete with songs, recitations, Scripture reading, and exercise. The new material in this service cannot be secured elsewhere. Start the fall and winter work right by using this bright, inspiring program.

$6.00 a hundred; $3.25 for fifty. 80 cents a dozen; single copies, 7 cents each

We also have a complete stock of all Rally Day necessities:

Invitation Cards Offering Envelopes
Promotion Certificates
Novelties and Souvenirs

Send to Our Nearest Branch for Illustrated Price-List of Rally Day Supplies

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

16 Ashburton Place, Boston
125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago
313 W. Third Street, Los Angeles

1107 McGee Street, Kansas City
439 Burke Building, Seattle
223 Church Street, Toronto

Order from Our Nearest House

Volume VII

August 21, 1926

No. 29

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

THE LIBRARY OF THE

AUG 20 1926

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

(Ed. Allinari) N.° 24000. PARIS - Notre-Dame. Vue d'ensemble.

NOTRE DAME CATHEDRAL, PARIS

Folks, Facts and Opinion

At the world congress of the Young Men's Christian Association held early in August at Helsingfors, Finland, fifty nations were represented by 1500 delegates, among them 250 Americans. Dr. John R. Mott of New York was unanimously elected to the presidency of the congress, succeeding Dr. Paul de Gouttes, who resigned because of advanced age. For the first time all of the Christian churches, including the Roman Catholic, were represented in the congress.

How many pastors share the views of the educational value of the religious newspaper expressed by W. S. Abernethy, pastor of the Calvary church, Washington, at a recent conference of the editors of denominational journals held under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches in the capital of the nation? "A minister," said Doctor Abernethy, "does not have to begin in the kindergarten stage of every question on which he talks if his people read a religious paper. He can assume an intelligent interest in his message, whatever its character. Furthermore, he has an audience that has the world vision, the big background, instead of the parochial mind. It is ready to respond to big themes, and is at home in them. Thus the preacher is freed to plunge right into his subject, assured of sympathetic comprehension."

China's problems are enumerated in the annual bulletin of Canton Christian college as follows: "The securing of an adequate revenue, the establishment of the national credit on a firm basis, and currency reform; permanent relief from famine conditions, involving the reforestation of denuded mountain slopes, the control of rivers and canals subject to frequent floods and the introduction of improved methods of agriculture especially of extensive farming, all of which will be needed to eliminate famine; the development of railroads and other means of easy transport of men and goods, which not only is related to the fundamental problem of food supply, but which also together with the telegraph and postal systems may be counted on considerably to weld the people, hitherto so separated by geographical and linguistic barriers, into an ever-increasing sense of nationhood; the Christianizing of the press of China, so influential in moulding thought, welding the people together, and inciting them to action, which should be only for the upbuilding of the nation; the moral problems of opium and gambling suppressing; the abolition of foot-binding; penal and sanitary reforms; and the industrial development, sorely needed to form the ground work of prosperity and peace."

Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Cressey of Granville, Ohio, have received word that their son, Dr. George B. Cressey of Shanghai college, while on a geology trip north of Peking was beaten by robbers and lost about $200 in money and personal belongings. This is but one indication of the state of affairs throughout most of China with no strong central government, rival generals fighting for their own ends and local authorities unable or unwilling to maintain order. These are days of great problems for the cause of Christ in that troubled land and call for strong reinforcements of our already weakened work, due to the diminished contributions of most of our churches in this richest nation on earth.

Mr. John Nevin Sayre, chairman of the committee on militarism in education, gives the following figures on compulsory training in the schools: "Last semester out of 80,520 students taking military training under the war department in civilian colleges, more than 65,000, or over 80 per cent of the 80,520, were in the eighty-three colleges where military training is compulsory for the first two years. All of these 65,000 are either enrolled in, or are drilling students in, compulsory courses. Since there were only 13,551 advanced students altogether, it means that over 50,000 students are now in courses where they do not have free choice, whether they wish to take military training or not. At least 7258 high school students are in compulsory courses."

The young church at Moanza, Belgium Congo, has its struggles against idolatry and other opposition. But there are 2000 children in the village schools and Rev. A. V. Wakeman reports twice that number in attendance at Christian services from time to time. Every two months the teachers come in to receive their pay and to be given instruction and counsel. At these times they bring in those who have asked for baptism. At a recent meeting the teachers brought in seventy-five.

Twenty years of organized accident prevention in the plants of the United States Steel Corporation has saved 46,000 men from death or serious injury, has averted accidents which would have disabled 322,000 other workmen, and has resulted in a large saving of money, it is shown in the 1926 report of the corporation's bureau of safety, sanitation and welfare, just made public. The report shows that the corporation has spent $158,000,000 for safety, sanitation and welfare in the last fourteen years, the largest item being $45,000,000 for the relief of injured employes and of the families of employes killed. From 1912 to 1926 the corporation spent $31,700,000 for sanitation, $28,000,000 for playgrounds, schools, clubs, gardens, visiting nurses, and similar activities, $15,700,000 for accident prevention, $13,000,000 in pensions, and $22,000,000 for the employes' stock subscription plan. This policy has become a necessity of modern corporation management, and the results are peace and hundreds of millions of net profits.

Perhaps the most significant fact for citizens of the United States which has developed in this matter is the open effort which has been made by Roman Catholics in the United States in response to the apostolic letter to compel the government of the United States to aid the Vatican in the accomplishment of its designs upon Mexico by demanding, not only in the press but in the congress of the United States, actual intervention in Mexico by the United States government to secure again for the church the position and power which for four centuries it so shamefully abused. The violent attacks upon the Mexican government in both houses of congress, culminating in demands for intervention, and the intemperate denunciation of President Coolidge by Archbishop Curley of Baltimore for entertaining a cabinet officer of the Mexican government are symptomatic of the tendency of the leaders of the Roman Catholic hierarchy to confuse the proper relations of church and state, and to expect the civil government to be subservient to the order of the church.

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION.....	846
EDITORIAL	849
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	851
PARIS RE-VISITED, BY WINFRED ERNEST GARRISON	852
THE CONSECRATED COOKSTOVE, BY FREDERICK W. STEWART	853
THE NEEDED DYNAMIC, BY H. L. SIETSON	854
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—"BE STILL," BY F. A. JACKSON.....	855
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	856
BOYS AND GIRLS.....	857
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM.....	858
CHURCHES AT WORK.....	859
AMONG OURSELVES.....	860
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON.....	866
NEW BOOKS	867

Special occasion of thanksgiving and substantial reason for encouragement are found in the report of Executive Secretary W. H. Bowler for the first two months of the fiscal year. He writes under date of Aug. 6: "You will be interested to note that the receipts for this period of the present fiscal year are about $5,000 in excess of the same period in the last fiscal year." In view of the fact that May and June are usually among the lean months so far as missionary reports are concerned because of the extra reports put forth during the closing weeks of the fiscal year to accelerate the action of the churches in meeting their full quota, this substantial increase is apparently an evidence of the turn of the tide. For five years the tide of missionary giving has been ebbing. Probably last year was its low-water mark. At least the indications now point to a return to normalcy.

Official announcement is made that Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park church, Chicago, has been selected professor of preaching in the divinity school of the University of Chicago. He will not sever his connection with the church. Professor Gilkey has served as university preacher at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Toronto, Stanford, and many other institutions, and last year gave the Barrows lectures in Illinois, the addresses being issued by the University of Chicago Press under the title of "Jesus and Our Generation." The selection of Doctor Gilkey completes a group of exceptional teachers of preaching in the joint faculty of the divinity school of the university and the Chicago Theological seminary—the group including, besides Doctor Gilkey, Prof. Theodore G. Soares, Prof. Carl S. Patton, and Mrs. Ozora S. Davis. Prof. W. C. Bower has been elected to the faculty of the divinity school to take the place of Prof. M. Artman, who has resigned to become the general secretary of the Religious Education Association.

Under the heading, "History in the Making," the Macon, Ga., Daily Telegraph contains the following editorial review: "The Lonsdale Company, one of the biggest cotton manufacturing companies in the world, is moving 500 looms and 20,000 spindles from its factory, near Providence, R. I., to its mill at Seneca, N. C. When the movement is completed, the Seneca mill will have 40,000 spindles and the New England mill will be ready for closing. Economically, the South has no advantage it has not possessed for at least fifty years. Its industrial growth is not the outcropping from physical and natural advantages that have accrued within recent years. It is the result of the mental stimulus that Northerners have received; the result of the awakened self-consciousness of the South, the consciousness that we here possess the economic advantages that have been the source for industrial greatness." Will the South strip New England of its factories? The West has stripped it of its farms. Something more than passing curiosity is involved for thousands of people in New England.

Nameless and unsung is the white discoverer of a wood which not only possesses remarkable insulating qualities but is about twice as light as cork and of a strength one-half as great as spruce. The balsa tree had been growing in the tropics, particularly in Ecuador and Costa Rica, ages before any white man viewed its forests. Natives knew of its unusual buoyancy. They used it in making rafts with which to float the heavier and more desirable woods, such as mahogany, to the seacoast and a market.

God's Watchful Care

By HELEN B. MONTGOMERY

NOT long ago, I received a letter from a missionary in Persia telling of her joy in reading "Prayer and Missions" and of a letter that she had received from a former student who is now studying in America that made a fresh illustration of God's fruitfulness in answering prayer.

Though Yusuf had money enough for two terms at college, unforeseen expenses depleted his funds. Part of his money was tied up in some Persian rugs which arrived late and made a further drain on his resources with the heavy custom duties. He could not sell his rugs at the school and registration day for the second semester came around with only $60 deposited with the treasurer instead of the $146 that was due. He took his perplexity to God in believing prayer, asking him to help him to sell the rugs, then went to the treasurer to ask an extension of time until he could sell them. He got as far as, "I have deposited $60 with you" when the treasurer interrupted saying, "Let me look to see if my books agree." Looking the matter up, he said, "Yes, you deposited $60 and later $100."

When the boy denied it, the treasurer told him that a friend of the missionary in Persia from whose school he came had sent the money.

Behind the scenes was the following preparation that God made for his aid. The missionary in Persia, months before, perceiving that Yusuf might need funds for the second year, had written to old friends reminding them of a promise to help made years before, and telling them of this boy. The man to whom she wrote was ill and died, but his widow mailed a check for $100 to the credit of Yusuf and promised a similar amount yearly as long as it might be needed.

So the boy Yusuf found his prayer answered in a way he had not dreamed, his bills paid, the rugs still in his possession and time in which to dispose of them.

In this true story we see God working before the prayer was offered. He inspired the missionary to write on behalf of her absent student telling his story to friends in America; he put it in the heart of the widow to respond and so timed the gift that it came just when it was most needed.

The letter that the missionary received from Yusuf bubbled over with gratitude and joy. God does answer prayer. "In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct thy paths."

We have Erik Sjostrand of the Svenska Tribunen-Nyheter, Chicago, to thank for the following correction and explanation: "In the issue of your excellent paper THE BAPTIST for July 31 you have a kind note about the crown prince of Sweden. You call him Gustavus Adolphus III and say he is a 'lineal descendant of the great Gustavus.' This statement is, however, not exactly correct. The present king of Sweden is Gustavus V. And when the present crown prince becomes king he will consequently be called Gustavus VI. His 'lineal' descendency from the great Gustavus is at least problematic. As a matter of fact he is a lineal descendant of the French marshal, Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, who in 1810 was adopted by the Swedish king, Charles XIII, as crown prince of Sweden. He succeeded to the throne as king of Sweden, 1818. And he was the great-great-grandfather to the present crown prince Gustavus Adolphus."

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the M. E. church South, who had supervision of Methodist work in Mexico for eight years sums up the present situation in these words: "The effort which has been made by Roman Catholics to link up Protestantism with its attack on the Mexican government has been so far a dismal failure. Protestantism has no faith in such pleas for 'religious liberty.' Whenever and wherever the Vatican has had the power it has permitted no freedom of worship. It did not permit it in Mexico, Cuba or in South American countries as long as it could prevent it. It endeavors today to stifle all Protestant efforts in Spain, Poland, Italy, Roumania and indeed everywhere else. It is in so doing perfectly consistent with its exclusive claims. But it cannot secure support from Protestantism in its effort to compel the Mexican government to give to the hierarchy its old position of domination over the people under threat of present pain and future damnation. It is even possible that Protestantism for the ultimate good of Mexico may decide that, although it can never agree that any human government or agency has the right to restrict the simple preaching of the gospel entirely free from political activities, it may hold that right in abeyance rather than seriously embarrass the Mexican government in its present life and death struggle to free the country from clerical domination of the people. Certainly the present-day situation in Italy, Spain, Poland and other countries is sufficient proof that nothing would be more hurtful to Protestant aims and activities and to religious liberty in Mexico than a victory for the Roman Catholic hierarchy led by the Vatican in the present conflict. Although there is no certainty that the government will be obliged to take such steps, it is possible that it may be necessary for the present distress to prohibit religious activities of any kind by the Protestant missionaries, not because the government believes those activities will be hurtful, but because Roman Catholic clamor for a technically consistent enforcement of the constitution may require it."

Out in Montana the United States government has begun the breeding of pure-bred Morgan horses for saddle horses for the ranges. For soundness of foot and limb and wind that famous breed seems to have retained through several generations all of the perfections of its famous sire.

Announcement of the opening on Aug. 27 of approximately 22,945.6 acres of public lands located in Nye County, Nevada, has been made by the general land office of the department of the interior. The opening will be under the jurisdiction of the local land office at Carson City, Nev. For ninety-one days, beginning Aug. 27, the land will be open to entry under the homestead and desert land laws by qualified ex-service men of the world war, and also to entry by those persons having a preference right superior to that of the soldiers. These persons may file their applications during the twenty-day period immediately preceding the filing of the plat, and all applications so filed will be treated as though filed simultaneously at 9 a. m. on Aug. 27, 1926. At 9 on Nov. 26, the lands remaining unentered will become subject to entry under any applicable public land law by the general public. The land is reported to be rolling bench, mountainous in the N½ Sec. 4; and the soil fourth rate. The timber consists of dwarf juniper, not valuable for lumber. No surface indications of mineral was noted. There is no living water in this township, one reservoir stores water for a large number of sheep and cattle.

For the past two years Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Marchant of Tifton, Ga., have been giving the proceeds of sales of all their "Sunday eggs" to the Oak Grove Baptist church. In addition, they have planted half an acre in corn, which also will be devoted to the church. From Easter Sunday, 1924, to Easter of 1925, the Marchants contributed 1140 "Sunday eggs" which brought $28.50 into the church plate. From the half acre of corn $18.50 has been turned over.

Where does American money not go? Foreign loans of American capital including bond investments, but not including the purchase of property directly, went in 1925 for national, state and municipal securities in Europe to the amount of $737,000,000; Latin America, $203,000,000; Asia, $66,000,000; Australasia, $75,000,000; Canada, $264,000,000. Of this amount $152,000,000 went for the refunding of previous obligations, which leaves a net foreign investment in bonds to the amount of $1,195,000,000. Estimating interest at 4 per cent, this means that American capitalists have bought in perpetuity the labor of 100,000 foreign laborers to pay interest alone on the investments of that year. Each year adds to that number about 100,000 more. And this calculation leaves out of account the labor required to pay the principal of those investments. What consequences are involved? This would be a highly interesting question for investigation in the high school.

Here are some of the modifications in the municipal laws of Vienna, Austria: Persons who talk, whistle or sing too loudly in the streets may be fined 30 cents. For repeated offenses jail terms are provided. If a person is detected reading a newspaper or book while walking along the street, thereby impeding pedestrian traffic, he may be subjected to a similar fine. Stopping a friend in the middle of a roadway, carrying packages of undue sizes and using bad or unseemly language, are among other punishable offenses.

For a short study in methology take the following clipping from the National Catholic Welfare Bulletin: "From a report made up by the executive secretary, Mr. Johnson showed at the Chicago meeting that the campaign to consolidated Catholic opinion against the Curtis-Reed educational bill had resulted in what was perhaps the most complete consolidation of Catholic opinion upon any public matter that has ever been obtained. Two hundred and thirty-nine protests against the measure were received at headquarters office from societies made up as follows: Catholic Order of Foresters, nineteen; Holy Name Society, twelve; Knights of St. George, ten; St. Vincent de Paul, five; Ancient Order of Hibernians, five; Knights of Columbus, fifty-seven; parish councils of the National Council of Catholic Men, sixty-seven; and miscellaneous societies and individuals, sixty-five.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONARY COOPERATION OF THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

CONTRIBUTIONS TO UNIFIED BUDGET

Rank	States	Amount paid to June 30 Last year	Amount paid to June 30 This year	Quota for This year	Amount of quota due to June 30
1.	Indiana	$ 100.00*	$ 17,372.24	$ 165,000.00	$ 27,500.00
2.	Dist. of Col.	85.00*	3,060.00	30,000.00	5,000.00
3.	N. Y. Metro.	8,468.27	31,801.98	290,744.00	48,457.34
4.	Colorado	2,141.43	4,690.47	95,000.00	15,833.34
5.	No. Dakota	577.61	1,241.08	21,500.00	3,583.34
6.	Michigan	8,864.13	18,944.18	200,000.00	33,333.34
7.	Wash. West	4,449.54	7,928.81	55,000.00	9,166.66
8.	So. Dakota	1,335.50	2,249.93	31,500.00	5,250.00
9.	New Jersey	28,285.98	37,069.15	303,000.00	50,500.00
10.	Connecticut	13,004.16	15,843.99	161,000.00	26,833.34
11.	Missouri	2,438.94	3,089.15	35,136.00	5,856.00
12.	Pennsylvania	45,942.63	52,531.80	527,000.00	87,833.34
13.	Rhode Island	10,216.32	10,982.80	115,000.00	19,166.66
14.	Wash. East	1,891.08	2,023.07	34,000.00	5,666.66
15.	Calif. So.	31,866.24	33,818.53	330,756.00	55,126.00
16.	Nebraska	4,523.98	4,680.42	80,500.00	13,416.66
17.	Delaware	1,033.47	1,065.10	9,500.00	1,583.34
18.	Ohio	27,205.98	27,585.81	355,500.00	59,250.00
19.	Mass.	32,054.02	32,461.20	480,500.00	80,083.34
20.	N. Y. State	58,063.78	58,336.75	609,000.00	101,500.00
21.	Kansas	10,249.47	9,940.68	175,000.00	29,166.66
22.	Wisconsin	6,201.30	5,767.73	72,000.00	12,000.00
23.	Idaho	2,255.27	2,005.07	18,000.00	3,000.00
24.	Nevada	397.99	352.07	3,800.00	633.34
25.	West Va.	10,002.43	8,579.96	140,000.00	23,333.32
26.	Maine	6,238.79	5,259.30	110,000.00	18,333.32
27.	Illinois	31,546.86	26,566.10	320,500.00	53,416.66
28.	Vermont	3,778.09	3,156.17	45,000.00	7,500.00
29.	Iowa	8,290.50	6,271.46	90,000.00	15,000.00
30.	Arizona	1,997.90	1,441.88	19,500.00	3,250.00
31.	New Hamp.	5,864.73	4,066.54	45,000.00	7,500.00
32.	Utah	484.78	288.64	5,000.00	833.34
33.	Wyoming	572.08	283.73	8,700.00	1,450.00
34.	Minnesota	8,805.30	3,858.19	125,000.00	20,833.34
35.	Calif. No.	10,716.31	4,538.98	121,000.00	20,166.66
36.	Montana	1,078.01	405.43	15,500.00	2,583.34
37.	Oregon	5,646.77	2.00*	60,000.00	10,000.00
	Miscellaneous	2,667.18	5,052.43
	Total	$399,341.82	$455,272.82	$5,303,636.00	$883,939.34

* May, June and July, 15 reports not included.
 July 15 reports not included.
The order in which the states are listed is determined by the percentage relation of amounts paid this year (Column 2) to amounts paid last year (Column 1).

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Classified as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

This Business of an Armistice

BAPTIST papers continue to discuss the practical aspects of doctrinal controversy in the denomination, with occasional reference to the position of THE BAPTIST. It seems proper therefore to go over the ground again, in order by repeated attempts to make the subject as clear as possible.

The first item is semi-personal. In the Baptist Advance of July 15 is this editorial statement:

The assistant editor of THE BAPTIST, who seems to be rather favorable to modernism, refers to the controversy between fundamentalists and modernists and says: 'Well, it does not appear that this controversy is saving anybody.' Doubtless that is true. . . . In itself controversy is not desirable and we get terribly tired of it; but when real issues are involved and eternal interests are at stake, almost traitorous towards Christ and his cause for us to abandon controversy merely because we are tired of it."

What value should be attached to the ascription of seemingly modernism to the assistant editor of THE BAPTIST is clear. But since it is inconceivable that the Baptist Advance should attempt to put a brother editor in a bad light by innuendo, the phrase "favorable to modernism" is doubtless intended as a courtesy and a compliment, for which, without knowing the content of its meaning, we are thankful. But here is good place to permit the assistant editor to say that for a determination of his orthodoxy in comparison with the most assertively orthodox Baptist anywhere, he is ready to submit his doctrinal views fully to any regular Baptist council in the United States—bar none. Moreover, he is willing to be judged by the whole range of his contributions to the religious press since the recent discussions arose. He has never expressed himself as being "tired" of controversy in its own right; but he is tired of bad manners in controversy, and he does believe that some thought should be given to the probable effect of controversy on the fraternal relations, spirituality and angelistic efficiency of the denomination.

The second item comes from the Baptist Record of Mississippi. It says: "The most foolish thing done at the Northern Baptist Convention was the resolution calling for six months' truce and a campaign of evangelism. Evangelism does not thrive in times of truce. Victories are not won by pacifists. A donkey is not the symbol of conquest. Our brethren who are pleading for peace are not on the road to victory. Whenever we lose our zeal for truth, we shall find our love for souls is passing away."

Did the Northern Baptist Convention pass such a resolution in any terms that could be interpreted as mandatory? If so we fail to recall such action. Northern Baptists know as well as anybody that no such utterance could take effect except by unanimous agreement. There was a general opinion that among Baptists the business of controversy has been overdone as to both measure and manner. But an inalienable right of every Baptist is to fight whenever and wherever he finds something that seems to him to be worth fighting about. In every such instance, however, before seizing a club, one does well to consider whether in wielding it he is likely to do more harm than good, and in the decision of such a question the best judgment of one's fellows may have some value. Of course, love for truth and love for souls go together, but when they do so both tend to become persuasive. They manifest themselves naturally more in effort to win somebody than in effort to whip somebody.

THE BAPTIST knows well that a sham peace is no peace. It is under no illusions as to the present state of mind in the denomination. It is aware that in order for two to walk together they be in some sort of agreement as to the road and the locomotion. And it is aware that the present controversy both north and south is far from the stage of complete understanding and agreement. Perhaps this lack is most apparent at present in the field of the Southern Baptist Convention, where harmony seemed to have been reached in its last meeting at Houston. No sooner had the convention adjourned than one party announced the opening of a campaign to force the full and unqualified signed personal renunciation of evolution on the part of every employe of the convention and of every institution looking to the convention for support. The reaction to such a campaign is pronounced and influential. Perhaps its most recent and clear expression is given in the following extract from an editorial in the Baptist Courier of South Carolina:

"The sham which every one knows to be in the resolution has since the convention been spreading to our boards. Board after board has passed resolutions seemingly complying with the 'request' of the convention. But have they done so? We cannot speak certainly for every one of them. But have the members of these boards individually signed anything? Has anything been presented to them to sign? And yet they are advertising in the papers that they have complied with the request of the convention! The truth is, if we have got it, they have 'got by' the nauseating dose as best they could, making faces, contenting themselves with a general action, and gone on to other business as quickly as possible. These boards know that this action was not aimed at them. They know that they were included in it simply to give the appearance of impartiality. They know, and every one else knows, or can know, that the whole thing was prepared for the embarrassment of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville.

"We have ripped the heart of this disgusting matter open that the health of a little sunlight might do its work. There are excellent brethren who know that all we have written down here is true, but they think that it should now be ignored, that the McDaniel declaration and the articles are all good and are worthy of endorsement regardless of the Tull resolution, and that we ought to 'get by' this situation as quietly as possible and get on to our work. Their motive is good. But they are missing the moral inside of this thing. When designing men came to entrap our Lord with a perfectly good question, he exposed their hypocrisy, rebuked their perfidy and defeated their evil design. There is something horrible in using a good thing for an evil purpose. We do not propose to assist this purpose. We do not propose to cover it with pious platitudes. The moral health of the denomination, as well as the dignity of our greatest institution, is involved. It might appear that this paper is practically alone in the strenuousness of its stand. But there are more with us than some think. Throughout all the South there are serious-minded men who are profoundly concerned. And the hour will come when the moral sense of the denomination will assert its rights to primacy over every other consideration. We ought not, we dare not, sacrifice these rights for a harmony that covers acquiescence in hypocrisy and injustice."

Now, it is clear that when such a careful writer as Editor Z. T. Cody releases such an editorial expression, omens are not hopeful for peace in the South. Perhaps they are no more hopeful in the North, but in the Northern Baptist Convention we have openly talked things through. Whatever may be said of our degree of agreement, we have made progress in understanding both one another and the precise field of disagreement. And THE BAPTIST is persuaded that we have defined a field of actual, not "sham," agreement sufficiently clear and large to serve as a base for the mobilization of all of our forces in united evangelism and in the united support of our general program of missionary cooperation.

THE BAPTIST yields to none in its zeal for the doctrinal, evangelistic and administrative integrity of the denomination. It believes that such integrity can best be secured by frank and full conference in a fraternal spirit, avoiding as far as possible everything that resembles "debate, deceit, malignity," and by the actual experiment of cooperation wherever not contrary to the clear will of the Lord. So believing, we pursue through whatever mazes of misunderstanding, controversy or schism, our single unvarying purpose to promote understanding, agreement, fellowship and cooperation.

Conviction Plus Tolerance

TOLERANCE is supposed by many people to be incompatible with definite and firm convictions. Indeed, men sometimes measure their loyalty to their religious or political principles by the depth and breadth of the chasm which they place between themselves and others in cooperative enterprises and by the stubbornness with which they refuse to come to an amicable understanding. On the other hand, men sometimes measure their tolerance by their lack of any definite convictions and by the intensity with which they resent the expression of convictions on the part of others. Both alike err, and any man errs so far as he tends toward either type.

Firm convictions intelligently held are compatible with broad and sympathetic tolerance. In fact, the more intelligently they are held, the more deeply they are grounded in fundamental principle, and the more perfectly they resolve themselves into a cosmic faith, the more also they tend to produce in those who hold them an appreciation of contrary convictions, a brotherly spirit toward other types of thought, a recognition of the good and the true in other forms of belief, an effort to come to a friendlier understanding and a willingness to cooperate in doing good wherever cooperation is possible. It may almost be taken as a rule that whenever any man adopts a resolute schismatic attitude and pleads in support of it his superior loyalty to principle, there is something in his creed which he has not adequately examined and which he does not thoroughly trust.

On the other hand, tolerance, rightly considered, is the very attitude of mind most favorable to the discovery of the truth and to the attainment of thoroughly grounded and unshakeable loyalty to fundamental principle. For tolerance is not merely an amiable attitude toward people but it is also a hospitable attitude toward truth and sacred reverence for the facts. It is simply a patient appeal from present opinions to ultimate discoveries, and it urges as a principle of its very life the faithful investigation, verification and revision of all opinions in the light of ultimate facts. It is both scientific and religious. He who does not care what either he or others think, provided everybody be peaceable and obliging, is not tolerant; he is merely lazy. He who is so sensitive that he regards any holding or expression of religious conviction as a violation of comity is not tolerant or liberal; he is simply a bigot under another name.

Of course this discussion leaves out of consideration the near hypocrite who parades either his orthodoxy or his tolerance as a means of securing a job, a salary or a position of leadership.

What Christianity needs today is full loyalty to religious conviction, full freedom to express it, full freedom and earnestness in the investigation of religious truth, earnest and fraternal effort to come to a common understanding and intelligent appreciation by each of the other's position, willingness to cooperate in Christian work on the basis of these principles, and a constant common endeavor to widen the field of cooperation.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

Remove the Dead Cat for the Sake of the Well

Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, a promotion magazine of the organization, ask concerning the motion picture industry: "Shall we merely endeavor to censor, to regulate, to put it into a straight jacket? Would this be discharging our full duty?" Certainly not. Who proposes any such thing as being "our full duty?" But there is one uncompromising demand for clean movies." When the motion picture producers exhibit an earnest purpose to comply with that demand, they will have no occasion to ask such questions. There are indications of progress in this direction. Let them continue. The man who is trying to take a dead cat out of a well may be awkward about it, but somehow, for the sake of the well, the cat must come out. Let the owner of the well lend a hand.

At the World View Chicago from the Angle of Betterment

Chicago has been adequately advertised and slandered with reference to its crime record, but it has never become so hard that it does not know how to blush. At one time, however, it refuses to blush. The news leader in one of the papers, by an anonymous writer, bears the headline, "What Do We Pay Reformers to Reform Us?" and laughs about it through two columns. What is the joke? It is simply the fact that there are 300 city-wide welfare, service and reform agencies of various kinds operating in the city having permanent holdings of $83,346,972, and combined annual budget of $47,752,616, of which $26,38,797 comes from private sources, and largely from the churches. Contemplate the unreformed and defiant "Us" who stand off and publicly sneer at a Christian and community spirit which registers unselfish goodwill in such magnificent measure. This is Chicago, and this is also the phase of Chicago journalism.

Does the Brown Man's View Count for Anything Here?

Rayna Raphaelson in the American Review, after showing what benefits white men have brought to Hawaii, concludes with this significant statement: "Yes, all these things that white men have brought to Hawaii—and to the other backward places of the world. Everywhere to the uncivilized, unprogressive people, they have brought the lessons of Christ, trade, and clothes. They have opened up a wider, more various world to them. And it honestly does not seem inappropriate to these white men that in exchange for these many blessings, they should claim for themselves a certain authority in the brown man's universe and certain carefully chosen places in the brown man's beautifully shining sun." If Christ were left out of the combination, the white man's claim would be natural and intelligible. But where did he learn any such claim from Christ? And after all, is the brown man entitled to any opinion on the subject?

Public Misgivings Are Turning to Something Worse

Ever since the world war the question has been raised insistently whether it is true that the guilt for the war rests chiefly upon Germany. The most competent historical students in both Europe and America have been sacking the records for an answer. They seem to have found it. The last statement of the facts has come from the hand of Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes, recognized as a thoroughly competent historian. If his book, "The Genesis of the World War," proves trustworthy, as it seems to be, then, let German guilt be great as it may, there are not maledictions enough in human language to characterize the infamy of Russian, French, British and American policy in connection with the tragedy. Contemplate president Wilson, for instance, while publicly professing neutrality, deliberately deceiving the American people and working in secret for nearly two years to drag the United States into the war at the behest of American financiers. The reader wants to shout, "No!" And the record of M. Poincare and Viscount Grey for cold, persevering, murderous mendacity, chills one's blood. One wishes to discredit and forget the whole tale. But here is the book. It invites criticism. It incites revolutionary thinking. And the author is accessible to investigation.

Where Minorities Decline Absorption

Are diversities of race, language and religion compatible with the safety of the state? To turn the question around, must the state, in order to maintain itself and achieve its legitimate purposes, subject racial, linguistic or religious minorities to the denial of rights accorded to the majority? The International Federation of League of Nations Societies has just issued a statement concerning "minorities discontented with their lot through being deprived of the full enjoyment of their own language, religion or special culture or through being subjected to treatment the effect of which is to absorb the minorities, against their will, into the nationality of the majority." With reference to the principles involved it announces the doctrine "that variety of race, language, religion or culture among citizens of a state is not inconsistent with loyalty to a state or detrimental to its solidarity and that therefore attempts at such absorption are both unwise and unjust." The problem in the United States seems to be how to absorb all varieties of whites and at the same time avoid absorbing all varieties of color—how to amalgamate pink in the top layer and to secure a complete sooty precipitate in the other layer.

Why Not Try the New Testament Way?

The Christian World, London, quotes a Baptist pastor as having said: "I am a thorough-going Protestant, but I wish that in our services we knew better how to quicken the imagination of our people and make the Divine Presence mystically real." What, then? Probably all Protestant ministers and all Catholic priests wish the same thing. Jesus and Paul tried without perfect success to make the meaning of the Lord's Supper a reality to the participants. The most impressive ritual does not seem to have surpassed their primitive simplicity. If experience counts for anything, permit one who for many years has observed or conducted the Lord's Supper in all sorts of situations from city temple to rustic chapel, to say that from all of these places alike comes the memory of simple disciples whose tearful faces testified the reality of the Divine Presence. Spiritual sincerity and simplicity find the Lord without the aid of a eucharistic congress. What has Rome that a Baptist needs for purposes of either the Lord's Supper or the communion of saints?

Paris Re-Visited

BY WINFRED ERNEST GARRISON

HAVING promised the editor some observations on some of the parts of Europe less infested by tourists and the gleanings of conversations with undistinguished persons who are not accustomed to being interviewed for the press, I found myself taking the special train from the steamer to Paris—which is perhaps not exactly an out-of-the-way corner or off the beaten path of travel. But it is hard to resist the temptation to go to Paris when it is within a three hours' ride and the train stands ready. Besides, there are many undistinguished people in Paris, and, thronged as it is with Americans and other tourists, there are parts of it where one may ramble all day without hearing a word of English and where tourists form no part of the picture.

I have had an idea that there are peaceful corners in Europe where people are not bothered much about the war and the problems growing out of it, and where life runs along much as it has done in generations past. And yet there is the new war memorial in Notre Dame in honor of "a million British dead" most of whom lie in the fields of France. There are memorial tablets in many of the churches with long columns of names, "morts pour la patrie." In quiet Carcassonne, St. Vincent's has a list of 300 dead from that parish, and the case is not exceptional. Though life goes on with some appearance of normality, one does not have to stir its waters deeply to bring up the dregs of war.

Even in France, where two years ago I found a feeling of almost panic at the thought of the danger of another German invasion—or, at least, much talk of that danger in justification of the occupation of the Ruhr—there is the beginning of a reconstruction of opinion as to war-guilt. A young Frenchman told of his home village in north-eastern France which was not reached by the Germans, though it was near the lines. Returning French soldiers looted shops and assaulted women. For purposes of propaganda, this was ascribed to the Germans. The young people knew better and held an indignation meeting at the high school, and thereafter would believe nothing that was told them about the causes of the war. They still talk about it as a case of governmental deception. The feeling grows that the politicians have perverted the truth to justify themselves. I do not know how extensive this feeling is. I can report only isolated episodes and shall not generalize upon them.

The Fluctuating Franc

It would, of course, be much easier for both Frenchmen and foreigners to forget the war if it were not for the downward course of the franc. The government may talk as it pleases about the "rise of the dollar and pound," but plain citizens know better. They know that the franc is falling. They do not care whether dollars are high or low, for they are not buying dollars. But they have a distinct interest in the fact that prices are rising faster than income, and that means a falling franc. Meanwhile, Americans in France profit outrageously by the fact that the adjustment of prices lags behind the rate of exchange. A dollar pays for a good room at a fair hotel in Paris. In the provinces the price is much less. Yesterday—an excellent dinner at the best hotel in a city of 50,000 cost me less than forty cents, including the standard 10 per cent tip to the waiter. Railroad fare, third class, is about half a cent a mile; second class, less than a cent; first class, about a cent and a quarter. I generally go third class, because I prefer to talk with the people one meets there rather than with tourists. I have gathered considerable data regarding economic conditions which I shall summarize later; I mean mere opinions and gossip, not statistics. Meanwhile, it is enough to say that the fall of the franc and the question of the war debts and inequalities of taxation and the special privileges enjoyed by the great industries are topics much in the public mind, even among the petite bourgeoisie. They are favorite topics of conversation among third-class passengers.

The care with which petty economies are practiced indicates the narrow economic margin upon which many are operating. In Paris the trams and busses have first and second class. When the second is full and the first nearly empty, nice looking people are seen standing on the platform to save the half cent difference in fare. No one is ashamed to economize. Restaurant bills are scrutinized with care, and tips are measured out with precision according to the standard scale.

Beneath (or beside) the bourgeoisie is a more or less clamorous proletariat. Driven by a sudden downpour of rain into a wine-shop of the lower order, I became a target for dark looks and threatening talks. "This aristocrat wouldn't come here to drink with us, but he thinks our saloon is good enough when he needs shelter. Why doesn't he go to one of the fine places? Let him get wet if he is too good to be with us in fair weather." That talk about "aristocrats" recalls 1792. How many are there of these whose class consciousness takes the form of hostility to all who are not obviously workers? Enough of them would make another revolution. These are the only ones I have encountered.

The Communistic Intellectuals

There are also the communistic intellectuals. I found a university student selling papers on a boulevard. His paper (translating the title) was "The International—monthly organ of the student communists." He looked me over as I bought one and said courteously, "It gives me unusual pleasure to put this into the hands of such as you." Perhaps he said that to every one. Under the circumstances it was a good line. One of the most flaming utterances in the paper was a letter from a correspondent who gave his address as a certain number in the Rue Gracieuse. It happened, by sheer chance, that I had been down in the Rue Gracieuse that morning—a squalid street on the left bank, beyond and behind the university section—a thoroughly disreputable crevice between old houses. I had gone through it because on certain mornings it is transformed into an elongated outdoor junk shop where one may buy rusty keys, worn clothing, and a million other things, sometimes old hand-wrought copper and pewter. Out of this slough came this "student communist." You can use your own imagination and picture either an ambitious youth, touched by some casual spark and kindled to eagerness for education in spite of parental indifference, flaming into a spirit of rebellion against a social order which makes possible the conditions in which he was born; or, as has happened with increasing frequency in recent years, a proletarian father catching from some of the saner socialist leaders, like Jean Jaurès, the idea that the workers can never match the masters till they are their equals in intelligence and education, urging his boy on to a university course. There are many socialists (not many communists, so far as I know) among the teachers in France, and it has come about in that way. The workingmen's clubs have been preaching the necessity of education and a great proportion of the free scholarships in the universities and normal schools have been won by young men of that class who got, or whose fathers got, the impulse from this source.

There is, as all the world knows, a strain of radicalism in the French temperament which is a (perhaps misguided) disposition to realize when conditions get unbearable and to do something about it even at the risk of blowing up the works. I visited Victor Hugo's house over in that blessed-peaceful Place des Vosges, on the skirts of the old Paris where the mansions of 200 years ago are the bakeries and warehouses and electric light plants of today. The lordly mansion of Colbert houses a commercial school; the quizzing of a concierge of a building that looked as though it had once been important, I found a room in a beer warehouse with the loveliest painted panels I ever saw, by Boucher, worth more than the land the building occupies. The Place des Vosges is not very far from all that, but it is still dignified though not fine. And there is Victor Hugo's house. On his desk, in his own handwriting, in the room in which he died, is this: "I represent a party which no longer exists, the party of revolution and civilization. This party will make the twentieth century. Out of it will come first the United States of Europe, then the United States of the World." I think he wrote that after he had been exiled by Napoleon III, when he naturally felt that a new revolution was needed to reverse the effect of the coup d'etat. But, revolution or no revolution, he spoke with a true French accent the sentiment of the millions of his fellow-countrymen who, now as well as then, are willing to pay a high price for liberty and progress.

But there is another type of university life in France besides that represented by the red revolutionist from the Rue Gracieuse; equally earnest, less intense and excited, more promising. The old University of Paris stands in a densely crowded area. There are no dormitories. The social life is such as naturally springs up in the Latin quarter (what is left of it) and in cafes and along boulevards. Hundreds of students live in various parts of Paris; some of them in places like the Rue Gracieuse. Foreign students come in large numbers, and they live wherever they can. Within the last three or four years there has been a beginning of a university residential community on the southern outskirts of the city, at the Porte d'Orleans. Here, where the old fortifications have been destroyed and an encircling boulevard built, a considerable tract of land has been acquired which was lately occupied and is in part still occupied, by squatters with disreputable shacks. Here seven dormitories have been built, one for women, in English collegiate Gothic style. The effect is that of an American college campus, with a sense of space and grass and room for athletic fields. This group is for French students. Other buildings are being erected at a little distance for foreign students. The Canadian house is nearly finished. The Argentine house is almost up to the roof. The house for Belgian students, nearing completion, is the largest and most beautiful of all. Others are in prospect. The whole is called the Cité Universitaire. It is a notable attempt to humanize and normalize student life in Paris. In some such way perhaps the young intellectuals may, without losing any of their admirable earnestness, come to realize that there is a possibility of progress and civilization without revolution. At any rate, I should rather trust a student opinion formed in the Cité Universitaire than in Rue Gracieuse.

The Consecrated Cookstove

BY FREDERICK W. STEWART

ALMOST any good thing is subject to abuse. If the chief inducement for coming to church is to get a meal at small cost, or if good food is thrown out as waste, this is wrong. Old H. C. L. has put a veto on most of this miscredited generosity. If a church relies on the proceeds of its chicken suppers to eke out the salary of its pastor, or if, in serving a "pay" supper, it gives less than good money's worth to its patrons, the matter is questionable. If women are forced to give an undue amount of time to the serving of tables, the thing is overdone or badly organized. If the church kitchen has become the regular meeting place of the scandalmongers' club, then it is the devil's business and not the Lord's. Should we padlock the church kitchen and have done with it as unworthy, as was done with the lotteries with which our fathers supported their churches 100 years ago?

For answer, let us consider more broadly this matter of living together. There may be in it something good that has been overlooked.

We are fundamentally gregarious and must have the society of our fellowmen, but as soon as we come into the presence of another, unless it is an intimate friend, most of us set up barriers to free and happy social intercourse. A surprising number of us are shy, or, as they say it today, victims of an inferiority complex. Even a loud and bold manner may be but an attempt to hide the unwelcome fact. When two of us meet we are so wrapped up in our own interests that it is with difficulty we find common ground for fellowship. It may be that there is a tinge of jealousy, or envy, or suspicion, unrecognized perhaps, yet enough to slacken the frank flow of good-will. Some of us are doubtless lazy, we won't make the effort to be interested or interesting.

Yet if there is one thing in which a church should excel, it is fellowship. When a little company of believers first began to practice it, an astonished world looked on and exclaimed, "See how these Christians love one another!" Fellowship is still in style, and a church would do well to use every legitimate effort to cultivate it. It will prevent church quarrels, increase zest for common enterprise, multiply the fruits of endeavor, give joy and comfort in united efforts for the kingdom, and increase the effectiveness of mutual worship. Without it there can be no true church.

Fellowship may be strengthened by removing the petty barriers that hinder its free expression. Eating together will help attain this end. Drinking together used to do it, and that was one of the incentives to drinking. Smoking together does it, and so men have "smokers." But if the church may not drink or smoke, let it eat. You and I meet at church; the barriers are up between us, and we make little progress in acquaintance and fellowship, beyond a few banalities. Then the call to supper comes, and we put our feet under the same table, while some ministering angel puts alluring chicken pie before us. What happens? Straightway as I begin to do my duty by the supper and find it a pleasurable occupation, I relax socially. I discover that you are at the same pleasant business and that you too have relaxed. Our enjoyment becomes mutual, heightened because it is shared, and the barriers are down. We discover a surprising amount of common interests; your best story reminds me of one; my big adventure calls out yours; we belong together to the best church in town and have a capital man for our pastor; we are mutually proud and happy; and when the hour of fellowship ends, we rise from the table, happy to have discovered each other, and inwardly vowing to cultivate each other's friendship. It was the chicken pie that did the trick. Was it worth while? Even a doughnut and a cup of coffee would have worked wonders.

This is no wild flight of the imagination, as a glance over the social history of mankind will reveal. When a distinguished visitor comes to town, why do we banquet him? To give him a square meal? He has probably had already more of them than is good for him. We do it in order to say to him, "We want you to be one with us!" When your college class has a reunion, why do you have a class dinner? Because your wives are not treating you well at home and you must take the opportunity to get something to eat? That is a slander. You do it to renew and to express the old class spirit, which is fellowship. Round the table the walls of separation which time has built between you fall as flat as the walls of Jericho, and time disappears; you are boys again together.

So deeply has the influence of food penetrated social life that the meal eaten together has become almost a sacred symbolism. Homer tells us of two ancient heroes who abandoned their mutual combat when they chanced to discover that two of their forebears had pledged unbreakable friendship by eating together as host and guest. Even among primitive people few deeper offenses could be committed than the refusal of proffered food. Food symbolized kindly feeling and good-will, to reject which was a gross insult. In the early church the bonds of fellowship were cemented by the love-feast, which was frequently held. And it is most significant that when Jesus was about to depart and would leave with his disciples an abiding symbol of fellowship and means for its perpetuation, he left a simple meal, of the ordinary things found upon the table of his day.

The kitchen will not take the place of the baptistry, but neither will it have to apologize for taking a necessary place in modern church architecture. Service on the kitchen committee may be a consecrated task, and a means of unrecorded blessing, if the abuses to which the suppers have been subjected are avoided.

Out in the hurly-burly of ordinary life, where Christians and pagans mingle in recreation, in business, in politics, and in social contacts, it is often difficult to put into practice all the Christian virtues presented in Sunday's sermon. So many of the conditions of life are fixed by those who have no ideals. One needs a robust and experienced Christian character to stand up to it all and not be overwhelmed with discouragement and defeat. No finer place exists for gaining that experience in Christian living than in those very circles which are Christian. Every committee, club, class, and organization of the church should be such a circle. And such should be the church kitchen.

Mrs. Morrissey has just joined the church. She is young and inexperienced in the Christian life, and so is not ready to be a deaconess or to serve on the devotional committee. Instead she is put on the kitchen committee. It is the night of the church's largest annual supper, and Mrs. Morrissey is on hand with the rest. What does she find? Half a dozen more capable women are serving ungrudgingly and gladly under a less experienced chairman, because it is her turn to have the place of honor. Through the more leisurely hours of preparation there is a constant flow of talk, but not a word of malice, scandal or backbiting. As the pace quickens, there is jostling of elbows, but no irritation; just a constant atmosphere of good-will. At a critical moment, some one scorches a principal dish. Every one gets angry? Not a bit of it. Some kindly genius steps forward and with a smiling countenance saves the day and every one is happy.

The newcomer has had a brand-new experience. Women she has discovered, are not all cats, as the cynic would have it. This kitchen committee is composed of Christian women who carry their religion into so commonplace a thing as getting a supper. Mrs. Morrissey has had vision, and is thoroughly ashamed of her own slandering loving tongue. For one whole day it had not wagged in its accustomed way. And her temper! How did the women keep so sweet-spirited through all the mad rush! Surely the Christian life is something more than talk and platitudes. It is the real thing, for these women not only talk about it in the prayer-meeting room, but live it in the kitchen. Mrs. Morrissey has had an experience of growing in grace, and will stand her ground the better when she serves on a supper committee away from the church.

The Needed Dynamic

BY H. L. STETSON

A COMMON belief about criminals is that defective physically and mentally, they are not entirely responsible for their acts. Not so, says Louis E. Bisch, M.D. Ph. D., in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post. In the psychopathic laboratory, established largely through his influence at police headquarters, New York City, he has examined pick-pockets, second-story men, loft thieves, safe burglars, holdup men, ordinary thieves, occasional thieves, larceny experts in several branches—all kinds and varieties of criminals, even murderers. Some he met only once. Others he saw many times and became rather intimate with them.

When he started this work he felt that criminals must have a kink somewhere. "I was convinced, indeed, that the majority are not merely just a little warped, but that they are warped and twisted to such a degree that they cannot and should not be held to strict accountability for their acts. But the laboratory told quite a different story. It made the startling discovery that not more than 5 per cent of all arrests could justifiably be considered fundamentally sick in body and mind to a degree which might render them irresponsible for the crimes they were charged with. . . . It is my firm conviction, after studying the crime problem from many angles, that the vast majority of all criminals are perfectly sound in body and mind and know exactly what they are doing."

The great question which this widely experienced alienist has found difficult to answer is the remedy for the 95 per cent of criminals who are normal in every way. Many suggestions are made, but the most vital one is ignored. They need new internal driving power, a spiritual force which will enable them not only to know the right but to choose it and steadily pursue it. Christ rightly diagnosed their need when he said: "Ye must be born again." On the divine renewal of the deeper vital forces will transform the lawless into the law-abiding. The needed dynamic regeneration.

What a call is there now to present this doctrine to all classes and conditions of people. Doctor Bisch says in the article above alluded to: "It has been estimated that at all times in this country 200,000 persons are imprisoned but that the entire criminal population—persons who at some period of their lives will become charges upon the state—is in the neighborhood of a million and a half. The cost of crime in all its phases is $10,000,000,000 every year and the worst of it is that this cost of crime and the number of criminals are both steadily mounting." Could the necessity of spiritual regeneration be more strongly presented? In religious teaching is it given the place it ought to have?

The Devotional Life

"Be Still"

"Be still, and know that I am God."—Psalm 56:10

By F. A. JACKSON

THE world that most enriches and endures is a world of stillness. Our greatest joy is not a joy we can express; our best thoughts are never uttered; our deepest grief is never told.

The world of stillness was ever more vast and mighty than the world of sound. The things that touch our life to profoundest issues are "too deep for sound and foam." When some great sorrow or some great joy calls a halt, then do we feel how infinite and invincible is the eternal stillness. Even grit and drive get their larger opportunity when they are informed by a great calm.

A Leisurely Serenity

See how it was with the Master, self-giving and serene to the last, His ministry should convince us that gigantic labor may be accomplished and the divine will be done apart from noise or strife or self-advertisement. Dr. G. H. Morrison says: "I have known three or four great men in my life, and there was one feature common to them all. They never worried and they rarely hurried. There was a leisurely serenity about them." A leisurely serenity. He has plenty of time who dwells in eternity. When things that pass are seen in relation to things that remain they take their proper place, and the still small voice comes to be more potent than the wind, the earthquake and the fire.

Ruskin reminds us of the evidence of ease in all the works of creation. "We think we are to do much with the help of iron bars and perspiration. Alas, we shall do nothing that way. We shall only waste some pounds of our weight." How this evidence of ease rebukes our unproductive strife! How quietly the sun rises; how quietly the stars shine and fulfil their course; how quietly the green corn shoots clothe the fields in the sweet spring time; how quietly the harvest ripens; how quietly the Alps carry their crowns of snow; how quietly the blessed darkness gathers down with its gift of recreating sleep.

And what are the powers in human life that make it a temple of God? Faith, hope, love, joy, peace, prayer, purpose, will, imagination, a thankful heart. And these are all quiet. And they change the face of the world. In the life of the soul as in the life of the good green earth, growth and blossoming and fruitage are always quiet. Even ferment has its fulfilment in quietness. "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace."

There is an outward calmness we can commonly assume. We can maintain a coolness when the mind is a seething cauldron. A touch of breeding will hold tumult in leash. But here is something more profound, something more than an attitude or even a philosophy. Here is a faith, a quietness which is of God, able not merely to repress but

*"Down in the human heart,
Crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore;
Touched by a loving heart,
Wakened by kindness,
Cords that were broken will vibrate once more."*

Margaret Deland sets forth this truth in "The Awakening of Helena Richie." Mrs. Richie knows the sorrow that comes from sin, she experiences the tragedy of unholy desire and she seeks in vain for the flower of happiness in the path of selfishness. At length there comes to her home an orphan boy and she is obliged to face the question of unselfish service.

Thus is her soul awakened to its sin, shame and wickedness. This opens at length the gate to a better future, a future that need not be ruined by the past, a future in which with love and courage, her soul can build for itself more stately mansions.

These are not the experiences of religious conformists, and these are not the triumphs of a duty religion.

to transmute the agitation within.

The psalm leads us by a fine sequence of thought up to this, warranting our waiting upon God in absolute repose. Realizing the Divine Presence "in the midst of us," we almost unconsciously grow calm. Then the words, "Be still" do not seem to mock our unrest, but are seen to be at the heart of life, and quietness becomes something more than an outward adornment; it comes to be the shining soul of life's dear immortal things. . . .

A Disarming Influence

A common cause of unrest is the impact of uncongenial minds upon our own. We can, if we will, encase ourselves in a coolness which refuses this impact and then it slants away. But here again is something finer. When the nature of God lifts ours up into its own it not only disarms adverse influences, but it makes for as much harmony as will be possible in this world. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." . . .

"Be still." God is there in the stillness, and in stillness comes the clearer, larger vision of him.

"Only the waters which in perfect stillness lie Give back an undisturbed image of the sky."

"Be still." Still waters run deep. There is nothing to lose of friendship, or character, or influence, or usefulness by the cultivation of a quiet mind; there is everything to gain.

"Be still." There is healing in holy calm, the assembling of forces, the spacious opportunity of the Spirit.

"Be still, and know that I am God." Here is the august background to the shifting scenes of time; the power behind and within, immeasurable, immortal, immutable. And the voice of omnipotent authority is of such a gentle stillness! "I hear it in the deep heart's core."

—Baptist Times.

The Chimney Corner

A Good Bank

BY HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHY do we save? To prepare for a rainy day. We also save to have a competence when we are old and can no longer work for a living.

You have with you a bank of which you are the governing official. It is called the health state bank. Are you depositing in this bank with the same idea in view that you deposit in your commercial bank? Are you scrimping and saving for the time when your body normally is breaking down faster than building up, when you are slowed up and nature forces retirement? Are you conserving health so that you may have a happy and comfortable old age?

In youth we prepare for later years. The wise and prudent live on so much and put away the rest. This is the wisdom of economy. If one spends all one makes, one is poor all the time. This is also true of health.

Youth is growth and in youth the savings of health lay the foundation for the mental and physical well-being that is so desirable in old age.

The health state bank gives you 100 per cent on your savings. If in the young days one works hard and then wastes the nights in fooling away time that is required for rest, that is a dissipation of health savings.

Exercise, fresh air, suitable and timely recreation add to the growing deposits in the health bank. What are you adding to your mental savings? Are you reading good books, are you interested in good music, in good pictures? Physical health is of first importance, it is true, and to live an old age, free from pain and physical discomfort, is desirable. It is the mind that helps make the body rich. There is nothing of so much worth as a mind well instructed. At seventy years a man should be at his best mentally, therefore consider that age the most efficient period of a man's life. Some great things have been done by men of sixty years and over.

The expectancy of life is increasing each decade. In 1900 a man at twenty-two years could expect to live to be about sixty-three years of age. Today he can expect to live to sixty-five years. Twenty years ago a man at forty-two years would be expected to live twenty-six years more. Today he can live a year and a half longer. Of course, this is the average.

Barring accidents, violence or sudden plague there is no reason why one who has been a careful depositor in the health bank should not live to eighty years, or even longer, in physical health, with youthful sparkle in his eye and with the capacity to enjoy life undimmed.

Added security is given the depositors by having stated examinations of their commercial banks. The health state bank also has authorities who know just what is necessary to maintain health solvency, what to do to promote health, and ways and means to live long and to enjoy mental and physical old age.

In your daily health investments, you are subject to an unsafe high rate of interest or a safe average. Living fast and spending physical energies at a great rate may yield for the time being a high percentage on an unsafe investment, but that investment is not secure and oft-times shortens life. As you yourself make it, you are either a liability or an asset from a health standpoint. Man is made or unmade by himself.

A good investment in health keeps you young and secure and keeps your arteries safe. Live within your health means. Overdrawing your health account brings health disaster. Parents should teach their children early health habits and health savings as they do saving of pennies in the coin box. Just remember this, that the health state bank is a safe place to put your savings for a "peppy" old age. If you dissipate your health early you will be poor in the end. In youth you should lay a health reserve aside for later years.

"God's Cranberries"

BY ANNA W. MCNEIL

A QUARTER-ACRE of Massachusetts land on Cape Cod is dedicated to the raising of "God's cranberries."

Rev. Charles W. Hidden, pastor of the Baptist church at Carver, decided that the people of today needed a practical demonstration of the efficacy of prayer. He announced from his pulpit that God stood just as ready to perform miracles today as he did 2000 years ago, if faith were put to the test.

Carver is in the center of the cranberry region. Cranberries need attention just as do other crops, as their growers well know. There was a certain quarter-acre which had been neglected for thirty years. For cranberry raising it was about as hopeless and unprofitable as could be, and the irony of it was that the proceeds from that particular bog had been dedicated to the church.

None knew so well as the pastor how urgently the church needed repairs. To most, the cost of materials and labor would have seemed impossible to meet, but Mr. Hidden saw no reason why this should not be made the opportunity to show what God could do.

Standing on the edge of the bog one rainy day last spring, he prayed, in perfect confidence of results, that "God would bless wonderfully the section given to him to the end that the people of Carver and of all the world might know that the Lord God lives, is all powerful, and answers prayers as of old." Some of his hearers scoffed, some smiled, perhaps one or two shared his simple faith.

As the season progressed, it became apparent that the yield of that particular bog would be good. But everybody was looking forward to a bumper crop, so if this excited any wonder, it was ascribed to the generally fine conditions.

The summer, however, brought a series of disasters. A terrific windstorm swept Cape Cod and devastated many of the cranberry bogs, but "God's bog" was spared. Then came an invasion of insect pests but they did not cross those consecrated boundaries. A drought caused further losses, and the final calamity occurred early in September, when an unexpected killing frost destroyed most of the crop that remained. Other frosts were predicted by weather experts and the only preventative known was to flood the bogs with water. This could not be done because of the lingering effects of the drought. It was then decided that the only salvation lay in picking the berries before they were ripe for harvest.

"God's bog" having been spared all these visitations, the people urged haste on their pastor before the coming of the fatal frosts. He replied that the Lord was responsible for that quarter-acre and he refused to worry or to be hurried into gathering a premature crop.

Suddenly "the rains descended and the floods came" and again the peril was averted.

The picking of cranberries ranges from thirty to forty-five barrels an acre, the latter figure being high. Thirty-five barrels is considered excellent. When the pickers finished "God's bog" they had twelve and one-half barrels which would mean fifty barrels to an acre.

The matter had by this time received wide publicity and a letter came from a New York man, enclosing a check for $5, ordering five pounds of God's cranberries at the rate of $1 a pound. He suggested the slogan: "All cranberries from God's own bog, $1 a pound." The slogan was adopted, and orders came pouring in at such a rate that the cranberries could be disposed of many times over. One dollar was sent from a man in Niagara Falls for "just one cranberry from God's own bog as a souvenir of the great prayer experiment."

Mr. Hidden estimates that if each cranberry brought a similar amount, $36,000 would be raised for the church from that quarter-acre crop. As it is, he has an offer from a Boston brokerage firm for double the market rate for all of "the Lord's berries."

BOYS and Girls

Explorers! Prepare to Go to Japan Next Week

BY PEGGY

Explorers' Club:

You never saw a family as excited as ours; Timmy is practically walking on his head all day long, Bill is whistling, and I'm grinning from ear to ear, and as for Mother, I'm wild with thrills. The delicious part of it is that you must please be just as excited and thrilled and whistling, because you too are invited to go on this trip to Japan—next week. You haven't a moment to lose, you see.

It began, as most of our nicest family events do, with Uncletim and Motherest. Motherest was sewing by the lamp, and I and I were playing dominoes, Timmy was putting together an old fire engine when Uncletim came in. He kissed everybody—he always does, even Bill, and Bill is getting too old to be kissed by anybody nowadays. Then Uncletim came down and began to talk to Motherest, quite as if we were wallpaper, or sticks of furniture, or rugs, or curtains or thin Sisterling," said he, "how about that Japanese trip? Still considering it?" "All decided," she nodded. "Going! Going! Gone!"

That was enough for us!

"Japan?" I shouted. "You?"

"Going?" gasped Bill. "You?"

"Gone?" wailed Timothy. "You?"

And he began fingering dear mother's skirt as if she too had become thin air.

But those two provoking grownups were just as quiet and reserved as if they'd been discussing the weather: "It will be great fun to plan the trip, and I'm glad you'll get the tickets and the expenses."

Said Uncletim, in a matter-of-fact way: "A curious fact, I've always felt a special liking for Japan. Great chance, this!" "Exactly!" Mother agreed.

Dear me, if ever we three young Hathaways nearly jumped out of our skins it was then and there. I'm sorry to say I looked at Uncletim and shook him like cats like kittens who've been naughty: "Look here, you terrible uncle," I cried, "you just don't dare go on being mysterious and provoking and upsetting; I've just got to tell you what you and Motherest have got up your sleeves."

"I've got a cuff and a shirt-sleeve attached, Peg o' My Heart, and that's absolutely all!"

"You've got Japan up your sleeve," I cried, "and we can't wait another single moment to know why and how it is when you and Motherest are going to take that trip. Now own up!"

Uncletim smiled more mysteriously than ever: "Peggy," said he, "are you aren't you an explorer?"

The Explorers' Club

CONDUCTED BY MARGARET T. APPELGARTH

"I am," I announced firmly.

"How about you, Bill? An explorer?"

"Aye, aye, sir!" Bill sang out, saluting.

"Timmy?"

"I should just say so," said Timmy eagerly. "I'll explore absolutely anything anywhere, Uncletim, honest injun!"

"Such a satisfactory family, you have, Sisterling! Well, you grand explorers, you can't go to Japan until you each give five facts about the country. Bill, you're oldest, you start!"

But it was no trick at all for Bill, because only a few years ago we had studied Japan in our junior society, so Bill began rattling off facts in fine style: "1. Japan is a series of islands in the Pacific ocean. 2. Japan is ruled by an emperor, called the Mikado. 3. Japan was a hermit nation for hundreds of years, refusing to let any foreigners come into any of her ports, on penalty of death. 4. Fifty years ago Japan signed treaties and admitted other nations, and even began to copy the best of the ideas other nations had. 5. Today Japan is a progressive, civilized country, one of the great powers of the earth."

"Hear, hear!" cried Uncletim, clapping his hands. "You're a regular historian, Bill. Timmy, can you do as well?"

"No," sighed Timmy. "But I know some things. 1. I know that the Japanese sit on the floor on nice clean matting. They like it, and are ever so comfortable that way. 2. So they don't need furniture in their houses, and the doors slide so that you can turn one whole floor into one room. 3. Japanese houses have paper walls, and you have to be careful not to push your elbow through the walls! 4. There's a garden in back of the house, with a fish pond and a grandfather fish and a crooked cherry tree bending over to look at itself. Sometimes there's a curved bridge over the pond. And stepping stones leading to the house. It's all jolly. And for 5, I guess I'll take their clothes, for people in Japan wear kimonos, with big floppy sleeves like butterfly wings. The sleeves are used as pockets. My, I'd like a pocket two feet long, Uncletim!"

"I dare say," said Uncletim, nodding. "You're a good explorer, Timmy. I don't believe Peg o' My Heart can do as well."

Now of course I was too proud to mention it to him, but I don't mind telling you that the boys really had told most of the things I longed to tell, so I had to do some rapid thinking. "Well, Uncletim, for number 1 there's that terrible earthquake a few years ago, which simply ruined Tokio and Yokohama.

2. There's the little jinrikisha, in which the Japanese people ride; the name means man-pull-car, for it's like a small buggy pulled by a man, and it was invented by a Baptist missionary years ago to help his invalid wife get around the streets. 3. There are the temples with their rows of turned up roofs, where the people come to worship idols and beat big gongs to wake up the idols first. 4. There are paper prayers which the worshipers chew and then throw, like spit-balls, at the idol, for if the wad of paper sticks, then the prayer will be answered, they think. 5. And of course, there are missionaries there in Japan, Uncletim—could I count them in, as number 5? For they've done important things all over, schools and kindergartens and churches, so surely they count."

"Count?" said Uncletim, softly. "Count! Why of course they count, and I think you three youngsters are the wisest young explorers I ever knew in my life." And he really seemed to mean it, so then I explained, ever so modestly:

"I'm sure Miss Applegarth's other explorers would do exactly as well, at a pinch, Uncletim, but please do tell us quick what this whole Japanese mystery is!"

"Your mother can tell better than I, Peggy."

So then we all began on mother: "What? When? Where? How? Who?"

Motherest laid down her sewing. She looked happy, the kind of happy she always looks just before Christmas when she's brimful of lovely secrets, not only for us, but for everybody everywhere. "You have a Christmas look!" I cried.

"That's exactly how I feel," she nodded. "But before I explain, tell me, is there a single Hathaway who knows what March 3 means in Japan?"

(To be continued.)

The North Lakhimpur Association, Assam, met this spring in a new village of Mundari Baptists. The village has sixty members and a new meeting house. About 400 were entertained, hardly any of the men being of the older generation. It was reported that nearly a thousand rupees (about $335) had been raised to support evangelists to the non-Christians.

The inspector general of civil hospitals for Burma and the governor have both recently visited the Baptist hospital at Namkham and both have highly praised the work being done for the border peoples. Medical work is closely linked to evangelistic. The hospital staff and preachers carry the Christian message to the bedsides of the sick. On Sundays the Shan school and the Kachin school give song services. Recently a man was baptized whose only knowledge of Christ came through the hospital ministry,

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

"Meeting Helps" on C. L. P. Topic for September 12

Note: All references hereafter made in these "Meeting Helps" will be to the following books: "Modern Discipleship and What It Means" by Woods; "Twelve Tests of Character" by Fosdick; "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton; "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" by Robinson; "How We Got Our Bible" by Smyth; "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief; "Peasant Pioneers" by Miller; "God's Dynamite" by Lerrigo. The books may be had from the American Baptist Publication Society.

The last paragraph on page 380 of "Gates and Keys to Bible Books" will help you to get an idea about this topic. The introduction will probably help too. The last two paragraphs on page 153 of "How We Got Our Bible" will be of aid, as will the material from page 109 to 126 of "How to Read the Bible" by Smyth. This last book you will probably find on your pastor's bookshelves or you may have a copy of it as it was used last year.

Before the meeting list the different uses which one might have for the Bible, such as a guide book, a yard stick, a history. Perhaps you may ask several others for suggestions as to what use the Bible might be put.

In meeting have these suggestions listed on a blackboard so that all may see them. In presenting the topic you may use as an introduction the story of the little girl who was entertaining the minister. A large Bible was lying on the table and the minister asked the girl if she knew what was in it. "Yes," replied the child, "a lock of grandma's hair, a piece of Ma's wedding dress, Pa's and Ma's wedding certificate, a rose from sister's grave, and our pictures when we were small."

Then show how some people use the Bible for wrong purposes, such as argument. Have the young people discuss in open meeting the value of the Bible to those who make the wrong use of it. Raise the question as to whether or not a person who uses the Bible for any one of the reasons mentioned in the second paragraph is getting full value out of it. The conclusion might be the resolve to read the Bible oftener and with more devotion than ever.

Michigan Baptist Summer Assembly

By ALICE CUMMINGS

Michigan, the summer playground, with its hills and valleys, its lakes, streams and groves, offers no more ideal place for a summer assembly than the beautiful campus and surroundings of our Baptist college at Kalamazoo. Kalamazoo college is one of the pioneer colleges of the state, founded ninety years ago.

Each member of the faculty was the best available in his or her line of religious work. Our state director of religious education, Rev. Morgan L. Williams, served as "Dizzy Bean" (busy dean). Twenty-eight courses were offered this year.

A few ambitious students began arriving on Sunday, July 18. Monday brought the arrival of many happy assemblyites, the reunion of old friends, the securing of room assignments and meal tickets, and the general confusion of getting settled in rooms and getting acquainted with roommates and neighbors. At 6 p. m. all were assembled for the first time in the Mary Trowbridge dining hall. Meals were served under the college management and were attractive, delicious and plentiful.

The opening meeting, as were all other evening meetings, was held in Bowen hall chapel, featuring a welcome to and response from the assembly, and an address on the assembly theme, "Adventure for Christ," by Dr. Seldon L. McCurdy, a returned missionary from Burma.

At 6:30 each morning rising signals called us to the world of action, and at 7 our hungry family was ready for breakfast. Immediately after breakfast Dean Williams gave a five minutes talk on the morning watch word, each thought centering on the theme "Adventure for Christ," the first letter of each word spelling out the word "Adventure."

Four class periods of fifty minutes each were held each morning with a half hour recess between the third and fourth periods. Nearly every one worked for credits, some taking three, and some four subjects.

The lunch hour found every one in the dining hall. As usual, the room became the clearing house for jokes on one another, and on members of the faculty, besides the usual quota of songs and yells. The hour immediately following lunch was left for rest and study.

Each afternoon was given over to recreation. Equipment for tennis, volley ball, croquet, and quoits was provided, and nearly every day a party went to a nearby lake to swim. Of course, the national game was not neglected, so the "Celery League" came into being. Kalamazoo is known as the celery city because of the quantity of celery produced around it, hence the name of our baseball league. Teams were named for Baptist colleges. These games held all the thrills that go with a ball game, but best of all was the game between faculty and students, when the assemblyites proved themselves the better players.

The annual picnic was held at the Vreeland property on Wall lake, which was deeded to the Michigan Baptist Convention. The afternoon was spent in playing group games, swimming, and boating. A picnic dinner, followed by a campfire service brought the picnic to close.

Vesper services were directly after dinner in the grove near the dining hall. Picture a hillside, at its foot a small platform for the speaker, on its side rows of benches. Watch while the rows of benches are hidden by rows of young people. A young man steps forward and leads in the song service. Listen, and you will catch the echo of the song the loved to sing in that evening hour: "Daddy is dying in the west, heaven is touching earth with rest." And then the chorus: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts, heaven and earth are praising thee, O Lord Most High." Who could not feel the spirit of reverence and worship? The leader takes his place and calls for verses of scripture that pertain to adventure and then for prayers, brief and spontaneous, simple and sincere, then the tale on some phase of the assembly theme by one who has adventured for Christ.

Evening programs were varied. A general acquainted social directed by two of the young people broke the icy reserve and did much to create the spirit of good fellowship which lasted throughout the assembly. Illustrated lectures, address pageants, and "stunt night" were the main parts of the evenings.

Bed time devotions were held in dormitory groups, each group being at liberty to choose its leader and place of meeting. Suggested texts were given by group leaders at dinner time by the vesper leader.

Three organizations meet during the assembly, the B. Y. P. U., W. W. G., and Life Service League. At the close of the assembly, the B. Y. P. U. held a two-day convention, with election of officers. The W. W. G. also had a five-lesson class and a leader who gave general talks as well as personal interviews.

Last, but by no means least, is the Michigan chapter of the Life Service League. The league is composed of young people who are planning to live their lives in the field of Christian service. This year it became necessary to organize and a constitution was drawn up, officers were elected, and Dean Williams elected as an honorary member.

It has been a privilege to attend our summer assembly and to have "hill-top" experiences.

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

THE GREATER CAMPAIGN OF EVANGELISM

The unprecedented success of the cooperative committee on evangelism last year is the cause of the movement to continue the work on a larger scale during the current year. This movement is already well under way in accordance with plans made at the Northern Baptist Convention in Washington when it was voted to undertake this greater evangelistic advance under the direction of a committee of fifteen composed of pastors, laymen, secretaries, and evangelists. This committee is known as the cooperative committee on evangelism of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Plans have already been announced for conferences early in October to be held in nearly forty of the larger cities, and local committees have been appointed and are already at work. This list of cities will include New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Denver, Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. These will be followed by other conferences in smaller cities and in associations until all the churches have been reached.

The effort will be made to bring pastors from remote churches into touch with the movement, and the objective of the conferences will be to inspire every church to begin its evangelistic work as early as possible in the fall and continue through the winter. The arrangements for the conferences have been placed in the hands of local committees composed largely of pastors, and the responses thus far received to the requests of the committee have been of such a character as to indicate that there is the greatest interest in evangelism that Northern Baptists have ever known. All of the features of the denominational program have been arranged so that evangelism may have the fullest recognition and the right of way. All the national organizations are putting their united strength behind the work to make it a success.

Following these conferences an extensive program of advance has been planned for the rest of the year. It will include the organization of states until every church has been reached. The evangelism of youth has been committed to a sub-committee which will seek to win young people in Bible classes, in young people's societies, and in colleges and schools.

The statistics of the cooperative committee on evangelism for the past year, ending Apr. 30, 1926, indicate over 100,000 baptisms. The returns from the territory within the United States, that is, covering an area of thirty-eight states, indicate 78,900. The number reported from the Latin American fields, Mexico, Porto Rico, Eastern Cuba, Haiti, Nicaragua, and San Salvador of 1321, and the number reported from the foreign mission fields in the non-Christian countries of Asia and Africa is 22,721, making a total of 102,942 within the territory served by the Northern Baptist Convention. This is considered the largest number ever reported by Northern Baptists.

FACTS FROM THE QUIZ BOOK

Baptists have a total of 805 foreign missionaries on the world fields today.

Sixty per cent of the organized churches on the foreign mission fields are self-supporting. These churches also contribute generously to missionary and benevolent enterprises in their own lands.

Evangelistic results for the past ten years clearly show a steady upward trend. Statistics show there were 11,043 brought to Christ on the foreign fields in 1914, and 19,786 in 1924.

THE STATE HONOR ROLL

Twenty states are on the two months' honor roll. All of these contributed more during May and June, 1926, than they did during the same period last year. They are: Southern California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York state, New York Metropolitan Board, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, East Washington, West Washington and Missouri.

A GOOD BEGINNING

"The Haddonfield Reminder," calendar of the First church of Haddonfield, N. J., Rev. Paul Hayne, pastor, prints the following: "We are happy to note that the people of our church are beginning the new missionary year by paying $465.34 to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, exceeding the amount due by $7.01. In the May number of the New Jersey Baptist Bulletin, we are credited with being the third church in the state in our missionary giving, being surpassed only by the North church, Orange, and the First church, Montclair."

The New Jersey bulletin in reprinting this item, adds, "Has your church a record like this—exceeding the amount due by $7.01? Pastor Hayne is a busy man, but we feel confident that if you ask him how his church keeps up he will send you a reply."

RESULTS OF CHURCH

OFFICERS' COUNCIL

The Calvary church of Schenectady sent twelve representatives to a church officers' council conducted recently by Dr. F. A. Agar. The pastor writes that as a result of the council, all the representatives were enthused along all lines; the missionary society improved materially; the spiritual life of those who attended was deepened, and they saw the whole program of the church from the right angle.

The budget of the church was increased $1000 in the face of paying off $2000 a year on a new parsonage, and the church presented the pastor with a sum sufficient to cover his expenses to the Northern Baptist Convention. The missionary objective of the church was also fully attained.

A GOOD WORKING RULE

In a recent issue of its calendar, the First church of Glens Falls, N. Y., reproduces the graph (printed in a recent issue of THE BAPTIST) which shows that in an average Baptist church of 100 members, fifty-one contribute to current expenses, and only thirty-two give to missions. Dr. Philetus H. McDowell, the pastor, does not intend to accept this as a picture of the Glens Falls church. Instead, this church has adopted as its working rule, "Every one every week."

A note in the church calendar says, "Every member and friend is welcome to a set of weekly envelopes. Our glory is the forgotten one who refuses to be forgotten and the overlooked one who refuses to be overlooked. Please speak up. Refuse to be a blank."

This church aspires to be an "honor church" by sending in one-twelfth of its mission quota each month. "Many things," says the calendar, "can wait, but Jesus Christ, the gospel, and the need of a world must not be kept waiting."

MONTHLY PAPER PUBLISHED BY SMALL CHURCH

An interesting paper is published monthly by the church of Ellenburg Depot, N. Y. It is put out by the pastor, Rev. A. Stockton, with the assistance of his wife. The paper not only contains local church news but sermons, stories, and anecdotes as well. It sells for 10 cents a copy or 75 cents for a year's subscription. The church is a small one (sixty-six members) in the mountain district of the state, and deserves much credit for its enterprise and initiative in getting out this little paper.

Among Ourselves

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON
Newton's New President.

HAVING looked at the attractive countenance of Doctor Everett Carleton Herrick, twelve years pastor of the First church, Fall River, and having noted the facts given about his origin, training, and unusual record, THE BAPTIST family may welcome some outline of his character and characteristics. Of course, we are assuming keen interest in Newton's new president whoever he may be. Newton is a Baptist tradition, associated with our leadership, scholarship and history for 100 years. Newton reminds us of Horatio Hackett, Barnas Sears, Alvah Hovey, and a multitude of Baptist scholars, preachers and missionaries. Naturally then, upon the regretted retirement of President Horr a year ago, interest had fixed itself upon several prominent names, though Doctor Herrick had attracted the trustees early in their search for a president.

A Change of Type.

This choice emphasizes a change of type in our theological presidents. The older type was the ripe and solid scholar and educator, the thinker and bookmaker such as Edwards Park and Alvah Hovey. The newer type is the active man of affairs, the leader of men, representing at once the severe discipline of our schools, and the larger and more varied leadership of new forces in church and denominational enterprise. The task seems to have changed, and a different type is sought for it, men like Charles R. Brown of Yale, and Clarence A. Barbour of Rochester, both splendidly trained men, yet both full of human feeling and suggesting human contacts. Evidently the secluded scholar may become an expert, but is not now sought as a leader and inspirer of young men in the schools. In marked degree and manner, President Horr seemed to embody both types, as if mediocrally preparing us in passing from one to the other. He had the weight and flavor of the scholar, and the disenchantment and business head of the man of action.

And now comes Doctor Herrick! The parsonage in Maine, the Hebron academy, Colby college, Newton seminary, and Harvard, all have left their mark upon him. His trained mentality is unmistakable. His educational finish for heading a school for young ministers includes his two pastorates of twelve years each, both difficult, yet ascending in success and power, and finally becoming remarkable. Newton is but the continuation of his "educational finish." A man who had become the apostle of 1000 men has been promoted to the higher task of training 100 leaders of men and shepherds of churches.

Doctor Herrick has a character that compels confidence, and characteristics that will be especially welcome to young men and to churches in a theological president. His churches have found him a man and a brother, and the seminary and the wider fellowship of churches will find him the same. His manliness wins men, and his brotherliness warms and holds them. He has quietly virile quality, clear mental grasp, and always a heart. Perhaps his two outstanding characteristics are sincerity that is open, and common sense that is golden. That combination gives a judgment that is sound, and a tactfulness that wins.

The election of Doctor Herrick is received with widespread favor. Preachers and laymen are equally happy, but the happiest of all are the people in his churches, and the most confident are those who know him closest and best, who have seen him work and worked with him. Certainly it is a goodly prospect that Newton faces at the opening of her second century, in the coming of Dr. and Mrs. Herrick. Always they are a strong team working together, and while great tasks will confront them, abundant cooperation will be at their call.

Prof. W. N. Donovan.

Now that the new president is chosen, the good word that Professor Donovan has won as chairman of the faculty and acting president, ought to be spoken. He has been admirable and painstaking in his pro tempore responsibility. Everything has been cared for, nothing overlooked, and his modest efficiency has won hearty and willing cooperation of faculty and students. In spirit and work the seminary has kept up remarkably during an interregnum that might have been embarrassing.

In Darkest August.

Ecclesiastically the gloom of mid-August grows from year to year, though it is anything but a cheerless month. Perhaps we forget that it is only a transference of our brightness to other places where it becomes brighter. One good deacon with a glance around a nearly empty church, exclaimed to the preacher, "Why, it becomes worse every year!" Of course he did not mean that the people got worse, only that they were somewhere else. And many of them are pretty good people wherever they are. There is another August besides the ecclesiastical August. It is not gloomy, but a great distributor of sunshine. Often it pervades the other months of the year, which sometimes would be gloomy without it. It is difficult to give mid-August her due when standing in a nearly empty church. Cheer up, September is coming!

Some Changes.

The expected has happened to Rev.

Harold C. Abbott of the Maplewood church, Malden. His unusual work for eight years there has attracted attention, and pulpit committees, like angels, have been "hovering around." It was only a question of time when he would be hoisted into a larger opportunity. The Fifth church, Philadelphia, draws the prize, and affords the greater field. Pastor Abbott has done at Maplewood all that a church could hope for, and more than even a church dares to expect. It was not considered a vital body when he became the leader, but it is vital now, and expanded, full of efficiency, and radiant in work and hope. Think of a prayer meeting often outnumbering the morning congregation, the evening congregation packing the house, and everything else in Sunday school and parish up to the same scale! Maplewood is too grateful, and too full of reasons for congratulating Philadelphia, for over-indulgence in mourning.

After six successful years with the church at Clinton, Rev. Ralph A. Stone goes to the strong church at Amesbury. This is the church from which Rev. W. F. Wilson came to run his strong race at the West Somerville church, and back to which he was called for a second pastorate, which was almost immediately terminated by his sudden death. In Pastor Stone, Amesbury has a good preacher, one who comes in the prime of his power, armed with rich experience, and tested qualities of leadership.

World Notes on Baptists

By DR. J. H. RUSHBROOKE
Regional Conferences.

THE ties with our Continental brethren in Europe will be strengthened during September and October by the regional conferences. Hitherto the Baptist World Alliance has held "world congresses" and "continental congresses." The new idea is sound—to gather representative Baptists from a limited region, so that smaller meetings may allow of closer acquaintance, and light may be shed upon special problems by those whose conditions are fairly alike.

In most centers—Barcelona, Budapest, Riga, Copenhagen—the "regional conference" will be international. In Poland it will be interracial. Russia is big enough to need a conference to itself.

Doctor Mullins is coming, and is expected to take part in all the gatherings. Indeed, he regards his participation as part of the world-visitation of Baptist communities which will form an outstanding feature of his presidency. The significance of the Baptist World Alliance will be brought home more closely than before to the brethren of Spain, or Hungary, or Russia, or Denmark as they fraternize with fellow-believers from other nations, including America and tain, and are visited by the president and secretary of the alliance which expresses the oneness of their faith and order throughout the earth.

It is to me a peculiar pleasure to be associated with Doctor Mullins in this situation. I expect great things from it. The president is eminent as theologian and preacher, statesman and orator; but the effect of direct contact with his rich personality can only be understood by those who have felt it. The cause of Christianity in Europe will be served by his coming.

The British Union's Part.

I am grateful to the British Council for sending Rev. M. E. Aubrey as its representative to several of the regional conferences. Hitherto there has been too little personal intercourse between British and other European Baptists. (In the countries we specially serve it often happens that I am the only Britisher acquainted with the work and workers). Continental Baptists will appreciate the interest shown by the sending of the secretary as well as myself, who am now able to speak as president of the British Union. Mr. Aubrey will inspire the brethren and will bring back reports to inform and stir the churches at home.

Meetings in London and Scotland.

At the close of the series of meetings on the Continent, Doctor Mullins will visit England and Scotland. Meetings under the auspices of the alliance and in cooperation with the Baptist Union, the Baptist Missionary Society and the London Baptist Association are to be held on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 21-22. The meeting on Thursday evening will be held under the chairmanship of Mr. Boyd George, and that on Friday evening with Rev. W. Y. Fullerton in the chair. On Oct. 26-27, Doctor Mullins and I are to visit the assembly of the Baptist Union of Scotland in Aberdeen. European Baptist Students in America and Britain.

The Baptist Times recently contained a note as to the success of an Estonian student (Mr. Wuehner) at Bristol college. It is delightful to hear that a second (Mr. Tärk) who is studying in the Newton Theological institution ranks almost at the head of his class. Doctor Anderson describes him as "a very able and fine man."

Reports of other Continental students in British and American institutions are all good.

Mr. Hugo Lueck of Poland, a student of our British seminary in Rawdon, has passed in the whole of the subjects of the intermediate arts examination at the University of Leeds.

Baptists in Holland.

On visiting the annual assembly of the Dutch Baptist Union I was sorry to find the pressure of debt resting upon so many of our communities in the land. There are districts in which economic conditions are so serious that it is with difficulty that churches maintain their pastors. A small increase of membership is reported for last year. The evangelical temper and outlook are admirable, and the union steadily maintains the de-nominal witness. Doubtless one hindrance to the numerical advance of Baptists lies in the fact—which we must thankfully recognize—that other Protestant groups manifest a strong religious life.

Baptist Visitors to Portugal.

The Rev. J. J. Oliveira of Lisbon writes me that he has changed his address to: Calçada Joao do Rio, 14. He will count it a privilege to help any Baptist visitors to Portugal.

Mr. Mornay Williams.

Mornay Williams will be missed in the Northern Baptist Convention and by many a philanthropic and Christian cause outside the denominational boundaries. He had won a multitude of friends, not only in his own country but on this side of the Atlantic, by the breadth of his outlook and the tenderness of his heart. Members of our British Union Council will recall his visits a few years ago, and members of the Baptist Missionary Society know of the interest he displayed in the spiritual welfare of Jamaica. Friends in many lands will extend their sympathy to his beloved wife, the willing partner in all his service.

Death of a Pioneer in South Africa.

The Rev. Ernest Baker of Cape Town writes me under date June 15: "Yesterday I received a telegram from our secretary telling of the death of Rev. Hugo Gutsche at the age of eighty-four. Mr. Gutsche is the one of whom I spoke in my previous letter as coming to this country in 1867 and starting the Baptist work among the Germans here. He was baptized by Oncken, and his wife, who died about nine months ago, was the daughter of one of the original seven who were associated with Oncken."

Baptist World Congress at Toronto, June, 1928.

I hope that our people everywhere are preparing to attend the next world congress. The last week of June, 1928, should see the greatest international gathering we have ever held. We anticipate that the Baptist film for which Doctor Mullins is working so hard will then be ready for exhibition. The program is gradually taking form. The British Continental Touring Club is considering special plans for bringing delegates across the Atlantic, and the Rev. J. Brown Morgan, who has the matter in hand, is one who enjoys a reputation for success in whatever he undertakes.

Extracts from a Lithuanian Evangelist's Diary.

The following passages present vivid pictures of conditions in one of the Baltic states:

"July 8, 1926. On reaching home I found several letters but I could not answer them all because there was one pressing request—to visit the sick wife of my fellow-worker, Brother V. in P. I set out at once. The journey was not long, but troublesome. There were two hours to wait in R. I made use of the time in writing a few letters and distributing our magazine. Sister V. was seriously ill, but as she saw a few friends and fellow-Christians about her she cheered up, and our visit helped her recovery. Brother V. who has often helped me with the work cannot do so now because his wife is ill and he, a gardener, has much to do in summer. He is also building his own house in which he will arrange a room to serve as a meeting-hall.

"June 13, 1926. I hastened to visit my loyal comrade, Brother Skwirblies, and found him ill. As he saw me he said in a faint voice: 'I have finished the course and am going soon to the Father, but you must work, for there is still much to do in our land.' He had labored so long that the church was about to celebrate its jubilee. But near as the feast was he could take no part in it. He participated in spirit, and on the eve of the celebration gave many instructions about it in a weak voice. The jubilee was celebrated on June 13 in a barn, since there was not room enough in the meeting house. The huge barn was beautifully decorated and looked like a fine church. Lithuanian, Lettish, and German singers rendered music. Representatives of nearby churches and people from the cities brought greetings. As I spoke of the unity of the Baptists of the world, and offered to the assembly the greetings of the World Alliance, I saw that this message aroused the special enthusiasm of all.

"June 25, 1926. I traveled on the 23rd to B. There I led a meeting in the house of a sister. Her husband, who was formerly a bitter enemy, has given leave to hold the meetings there. He came himself to our service, and was pleased with everything."

Henry C. Applegarth An Appreciation

BY MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

IT IS a rare privilege for a daughter to be invited by an editor to write an appreciation of her father, and a thousand choice memories come crowding to answer the invitation. Among the choicest is the fact that practically all the large churches he served asked him to come back for a second pastorate, and those he supplied for a period of months had a delightful fashion of approaching him about a permanent pastorate! And this, I think, speaks for itself of those deep underlying human qualities of his ministry which made even the small daughter in his home realize early that "the zeal of Thy house hath eaten me up"—an unswerving belief in his call to bring the kingdom of heaven, on earth, in the city where he lived and to the far ends of the earth; a tireless preaching of the stewardship of life and possessions; an absorbing passion for the word of God. He was the most companionable of friends and parents; generous to a fault; conspicuous throughout his years of service yet never a seeker of prominence for its own sake, placing little value on compliments and none at all on position; preferring more and more in later years the quiet of his own home, his own library. And running through it all was a keen sense of humor, a fearlessness in speaking the truth to men high or low and in righting the wrong.

That he was held in high esteem and lasting affection is testified by countless letters from those who knew him. They tell me in these letters that he was a brilliant preacher, a shining example of expository preaching rich in human and practical content. They tell me that in pastoral work he excelled, that in time of sorrow he went into the home with a message straight from God, warm-hearted, comforting, making vital the wonder of that "other room." They tell me that his messages of stewardship (in a day when nobody else dared to oppose boards of trustees by overemphasizing a subject labelled "tactless," "disturbing!") were so full of humor, of common sense, of divine inspiration, that they quickened every church he served into a new spiritual reckoning with material possessions, until the church treasurers learned to smile, and the pews were so full of "cheerful givers" that to this day those particular churches still reap the benefit. Those who went to his popular Bible lectures in Rochester, or in Northfield, write that he approached the scriptures with a power which was dynamic and refreshing, uplifting, and intensely human.

Yet in many ways it has seemed to his daughter that the most difficult and the most beautiful thing he ever did was to step aside from active work when he felt himself failing in power four years ago, quietly and unselfishly laying down his own ambitions to let younger men come in—a living exponent of the texts of his two favorite sermons: "John did no miracle, but all things that John spake of this Man were true, and many believed on him there"; and, "Adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things." I know of no lovelier tribute with which to crown his seventy-three years of devoted service as a preacher, a teacher and—a father.

Vacation Schools

THE vacation church school division of the religious education department, American Baptist Publication Society, is receiving reports from enthusiastic workers in these schools. The following are quotations from some of these reports.

Ansonia church, Ansonia, Conn., enrolment 390; average attendance 200; Rev. F. P. Freeman, pastor and principal: "The splendid discipline and keen interest on the part of so large a body of children assembled daily, seems outstanding. The loyalty of a large group of voluntary workers, who sacrificed much to make our school possible, deserves praise. Rev. S. Lo Presti, pastor of the Italian mission here, contributed service as associate principal, and his splendid spirit, and genius for story telling captivated the children as he shared with the principal the responsibility of the story periods. The experiment of uniting the Italian department with us has been a great success. The discipline and work done by the Italian children and helpers was commendable. The school became so large the first week that we were forced to conduct assembly services in the auditorium of the church instead of in the vestry as had been our purpose.

The vestry was given over entirely to the expressional work."

First church, Chester, Pa., enrolment seventy-two, average attendance sixty-seven, Mrs. Mabel W. Hutchison, principal: "A fine junior group, faithful attendance, responsive, and showing the results of fine training in the vacation schools of preceding years. The school presented the church with a beautiful Christian flag."

Fifth Avenue church, Huntington, W. Va., enrolment 192, average attendance 179, Dr. M. L. Wood, pastor, Mrs. T. F. Ellis principal: "Entire community interested in work of school. Have never taught in a school that radiated such a spirit of joy, cheerfulness, unselfishness, industry, punctuality, obedience, etc., among children, helpers, leaders and pastor."

Chestnut Street church, Philadelphia, Pa., enrolment 106, attendance sixty-five, Dr. Arthur C. Baldwin, pastor, Miss Marion L. Fretz, principal: "In our primary department one day the teacher told a habit story which emphasized the importance of cleanliness and the great danger of allowing germs to lodge in teeth. Following the habit story the children were given a ten-minute recess period. At the close of the period a number of the girls were missing from the classroom. Upon investigation the teacher found them down in the washroom, their faces lathered with soap, also trying to clean their teeth with soap. This incident was encouraging to the teacher."

Hillery mission, Danville, Ill., enrolment thirty-five, average attendance thirty, Esther Legg, principal: "Hillery is a foreign settlement mining community. The mission circles in our association contribute to expense of the school. Children are mostly French, Belgian and Slavish descent. Could have filled the church if we had had more teachers."

First church, Tacoma, Wash., enrolment fifty-one, average attendance forty, Dr. C. O. Johnson, pastor, Mrs. H. L. Kinman, principal: "The outstanding feature of our school was the development of the boys. For the first two weeks they were bashful, inattentive and seemingly indifferent, always outstripped by the girls. The last two weeks saw a remarkable change. The boys became rivals to be reckoned with and frequently excelled the girls in memory and hand work."

As to Baptism

By W. T. JORDAN

ON THE first Sunday in May, 1882, it was my privilege and pleasure to attend services at Plymouth church, Brooklyn, and hear Henry Ward Beecher preach. His subject was "The Cradle" and his text, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not."

It was his custom on that day to baptize all the babies born into the congregation during the year, or as many as might be present. This morning he baptized thirty-three. When the procession had formed in front of the rostrum, Mr. Beecher and his assistant stepped down and took their stand at one end of the line, the assistant holding a golden bowl partly filled with water. As the babies were brought past him, Mr. Beecher dipped his fingers in the water, placed his hand upon the baby's head and pronounced the formula. After they had been taken back into the room, he resumed his position on the platform and said, "The ordinance which you have just seen administered was handed down to us by the mother church which believed that it was a cure for sin, but as a saving ordinance it has lost faith in our denomination. It never saved anybody and there isn't a word of authority for it in the New Testament. It's an act of the parents and not an act of the children, an act in which they consecrate their children to the Lord. It's a beautiful service and I like to perform it. If, when these children have risen to years of accountability, they wish to be baptized again either by immersion, which is also baptism, or by sprinkling, I shall gladly perform the service again."

Years later while pastor in Dixon, Calif., Father Lally was a frequent visitor to my study and we spent many pleasant moments together. On one of these visits I said to him, "Father Lally, what in the opinion of the Catholic church was the mode of baptism in the days of Jesus?"

"Dipping, immersion," he instantly replied, "but we had authority to change the ordinance and we did it."

"That's exactly what we as Baptists claim," said I, "that you changed the ordinance, and we charge those denominations that practice sprinkling for baptism as having gotten their baptism from you but they deny it."

READING STIMULATES THOUGHT AND BUILDS CHARACTER

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."—Proverbs 23:7.

WHY NOT READ THE BEST AND BE YOUR BEST?

$2.50 per year

THE BAPTIST
2320 South Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

"They are inconsistent to deny it," he answered, "for they didn't get it anywhere else."

During my seven years' pastorate of the Calvary church in Denver, I was glad to claim among my best friends Dean H. Fastyn Hast of St. John's cathedral. One day while in his study waiting to assist him with a funeral I said, "Dean, one thing that astonishes me is the fact that an intelligent man like you will practice sprinkling for baptism and claim spiritual authority for it."

"Oh, I don't claim spiritual authority for it," he replied, "for there is none. I agree with Cannon Farrar that it is the triumph of decency and convenience over indecency and inconvenience. If there is anything settled in the scholarship of the world it is the fact that nothing is baptism except the immersion of believers in water. You may take away all the scriptures except those which refer to baptism and you will still have left a plain teaching of the fundamental doctrines of Christianity—the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus.

Jesus seems to have looked down the ages to a time when some one would arise and try to change his ordinance, and to prevent this he clothed it with a symbol; he made it symbolize belief in his death, burial and resurrection.

When a man dies the first thing we think of is to bury him. It would be a pity not to bury a man who is dead, and a horrible mistake to bury a man who is not dead. When a man dies with Christ to the reigning power of sin in his life the most natural thing to do is to show that fact by being buried with Christ in baptism. If he has not died to the reigning power of sin, if he has not been regenerated, his baptism signifies nothing. In other words, we do not baptize a man to save him, but because he is already saved, just as we bury a man because he is dead. If baptism saved a man I should baptize every fellow who would let me. Baptists are more consistent in their stand on baptism than any other denomination in the world. They accept it as Christ ordained it and leave it where he left it. They insist that nothing is baptism but the immersion of a believer in water. That is their position and there will they stand until the sun goes down the last time.

DR. A. H. HENDERSON of Taunggyi, Burma, has heard this story of an election in Prome, in lower Burma: Two candidates for city inspector were running, one a Christian, the other a Buddhist. Even the Buddhists of the city said: "Let us have the Christian inspector; it is far better to have a Christian." So he was voted in.

GRAND ISLAND COLLEGE has elected as professor of English, Mr. R. Rhodes Stabley of Dallastown, Pa. Mr. Stabley received his A.B. degree from Lebanon Valley college, did one year of graduate work at Princeton university and received his M.A. degree from Columbia university. For two years he has taught English in the University of Minnesota. He has published a number of poems and short articles in various magazines. He is a member of the United Brethren church and of the Masonic lodge.

REV. HERBERT F. STILWELL, secretary of evangelism for the Home Mission Society, has accepted a call to the chair of evangelism in Eastern Theological seminary, Philadelphia, and will begin his work with the institution at the opening of the fall term in September.

LOUIS J. SAWYER, pastor of the Hamilton Square church, San Francisco, on a recent Sunday night gave a pulpit prelude on "The Menace of the Press" in which he took the Argonaut to task for garbling the news about the kidnapping of Aimee Semple McPherson.

REV. J. W. WEDDELL has been supplying the pulpit of the First church, Keokuk, Iowa, since pastor H. R. McKee left for Everett, Wash. Doctor Weddell is deeply troubled over the fact, if fact it is, that our young people disappear in the twilight after the B. Y. P. U. meeting leaving the pastor to worry along with a depleted evening congregation.

RALLY DAY HAS BECOME a fixed institution in most of our churches. With the return of the pastor from his vacation, rallying the forces will be the first thing on the docket. Attention is called to the new rally day program issued by the Publication

Want Ads

Wanted—By a young woman, position in religious education work or as pastor's assistant. College and training school graduate. Four years' experience. Satisfactory references. Address T. E. A., The Baptist.

Win-go (soluble naphtha) mixes with soapy wash water, loosens dirt and grease, saves time and wear on clothes. Local sole distributors make steady income from satisfied users. Free sample and information from Winnebago Chemical Works, Box 1175, Rockford, Ill.

Director of religious education or church position wanted by young woman trained and experienced. Good references. Address "Ohio," care Baptist.

Needed: in a Southern Mission School, a trained, experienced bookkeeper, interested in Christian work. Apply 140 W. Lehigh Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

Washington, D. C. Mrs. Kern maintains a delightful "Home Away From Home" for travelers. Every room with running water, near detached bath. A few private baths. Inexpensive dining rooms near. Quiet, convenient location, two squares from Washington Auditorium, three squares from White House. Tel. Franklin 1142. Address: 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Here, There and Everywhere

THE SECOND CHURCH, Newport, R. I., has called Rev. L. B. Crosby, Hartford, Conn., to succeed Rev. Charles P. Christopher, resigned.

WITH ONLY TWO parishioners casting dissenting ballots, the old Grand Avenue church, New Haven, Conn., has voted to disband, the reason given being the steady decrease in attendance, due to the influence of golf and automobiles. The church edifice, one of the two oldest in New Haven, will be turned over to the state convention for use in settlement or missionary work. Rev. Sanford Fleming, the last regular pastor, has accepted a professorship in the divinity school of the University of California.

The Baptist

Chicago, August 21, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 29

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Prices: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church copies equal to 10 per cent of church membership, 100; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes to effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Subscriptions: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add change.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired, send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; 1 page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Manuscripts returned unless accompanied by return postage.

A SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCE under the auspices of the First church of Elkhart, Ind., Charles H. Heaton, pastor, is in progress during August. The speaker and teacher for the first week was Dr. W. P. Pearce of Bay City, Mich., whose ministry was in the form of a prayer institute. He departed from the subject of prayer only in two of his Sunday sermons on "The Spirit-filled Life," and "My Benediction." A wholesome atmosphere has been created for the soul-winning ministry of the men who follow Doctor Pearce; they are Dr. J. W. Hoyt of Chicago and Dean C. L. Fowler of Denver.

THERE HAVE BEEN BAPTISMS two Sundays in July and on Aug. 1 at Walnut street church, Waterloo, Iowa, Rev. Warren L. Steeves, pastor. The finances show an increase, July being the largest in money and collections for nine years.

MAY 2, HUGH P. ANDREWS, evangelist, supplied at South Bend, Wash. A week later the church asked him to supply for three months, July 1 raised his salary $300, and before the three months were over called him to the pastorate. During the summer seven of the ninety-six members were lost by letter, but seven others were gained by letter and eight by baptism. A good portion of the budget has been pledged, and the church now has a better income than at any time in many years. There is a plan to have a soul-winning campaign in October, January, and April.

DR. W. HERSEY DAVIS of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary sailed Aug. 11 from New York to spend his sabbatical year in the universities of Germany, England, France, Italy and Egypt gathering material for the Bible dictionary which he is preparing for the Sunday-school board. He will also do research work in Greek.

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, Chicago, Ill.

"The office boy was laughing the other day about a college girl who thought the Mayo brothers made such wonderful cough drops. But we reminded the boy that there was a Baptist in our church who thought Ning Po, Ong Ole and Sona Bata were such funny Filipinos and wanted to know whether we thought they were still head-hunters. Of course he didn't take THE BAPTIST or Missions. For the people who get their world view out of the newspapers aren't likely to be well informed on the kingdom interests.

"Last week we were going to tell you about another denomination that prints some good papers. In one of their areas last spring the pastors were all urged to have their churches send a weekly paper to all who were received into fellowship at Easter. They had a slogan: 'Our paper in every home from Easter to Thanksgiving.' Isn't that good sense? We take off our hats to the sagacity of these fellow-workers.

"Every month in the year our Northern Baptist churches are receiving into fellowship thousands of new members who know nothing about the faith or history of Baptists. Even among those who have been Baptists from generation to generation there is often great lack of accurate information about our faith and labors. Nothing costing so little will add so much genuine information to one's stock in trade as a good week's religious paper devoted to the ideals and tasks of the denomination. Why not get every family in your church to subscribe for your own paper, THE BAPTIST?

"Every month we meet some Baptist who says this in substance: All churches are about alike, they all have the same Bible, the same God and are trying to get to the same place, what difference does it make what church a fellow belongs to? And so there is a genuine field for cultivation among the lukewarm. Why not enlist these in some sort of stimulating reading program, using THE BAPTIST and Missions as corrective measures for waning interest?

"Why not substitute 'NOW' for 'SOMETIME?' Remember what the colored preacher said about procrastination. He said it was one of the fundamental beliefs of the Baptist faith. Why not resolve before laying this paper down to put on that intensive campaign NOW? Make a real canvass of your local field, determine how many of your people should have the paper, and then with courage and decision go into action and get the task accomplished. Always putting off until tomorrow lands one in sleepy hollow which is next to the cemetery.

"What is a grapefruit?" asked the man from the country. 'Why, it is a lemon that's been given a chance and took advantage,' was the answer. When we reflect that a cauliflower is just a cabbage that had the same chance and took it, we wonder that more people do not see the value of giving their friends a chance at THE BAPTIST.

"And now the office boy will give us a line from Philip Brooks entitled, 'Helps for the Day':

The little sharp vexation and the briars that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper who has never failed us yet?

Tell Him about the heartache, and tell Him the longings, too;
Tell Him the baffled purpose when we scarce know what to do;

Then leaving all our weakness with the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden, AND CARRY AWAY THE SONG.'

"WCOY now signs off. Faint heart never won fair subscriber."

Society and advertised in THE BAPTIST.

ASSISTANT EDITOR MCGUIRE is spending his vacation in Indiana. He sends greetings from Vincennes and writes that he is enjoying the safe, languorous, southern summer, where the corn grows tall, the sycamores big, the canteloupes sweet and the paw paws luscious.

HARRY EVANS OWINGS, pastor of the First church, Granville, Ohio, has been giving summer Sunday morning expositions of selected psalms, using as subjects "The Good Man," "The Worshiper," "The Thinker," "What Religion Gives to a Man," "How it Feels to be Forgiven," "Does it Pay to be Good?"

REV. JAMES A. BROWN of Indianapolis, who has been in the ministry for forty years, writes that during the past year he has preached for Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Dunkards, Seventh Day Adventists, Reformed and Evangelical Reformed.

PRES. ERDMANN SMITH, of Ottawa University, returned home from his vacation in British Columbia in time to assume his duties as lecturer on vocational education in the Baptist assembly. He and Mrs. Smith and children made the trip to British Columbia and return by auto.

NORTH CHURCH, PORTLAND, ORE., Rev. W. N. Ferris, pastor, reports twelve persons received into fellowship the past month, with one awaiting baptism. Prayer, stewardship and evangelism constitute the burden of the pastor's ministry, which is met with a willing response. The congregation consists chiefly of young people and there is a vigorous church school.

THE BAPTIST TEMPLE, Charleston, W. Va., completed the first quarter of its year, May 1-Aug. 1, with morning and evening congregations up to the winter attendance and offerings for that time averaging a little better than $1,000 per week. August preachers are Dr. E. L. Dakin, former pastor; Rev. Pierce S. Ellis of the First church, Union Springs, Ala.; and Dr. Harry E. Owings of the First church, Granville, Ohio. Rev. Clarence W. Kemper, the pastor, will preach one Sunday for the Chestnut Street church, Philadelphia, another for the Brooklyn Temple, and one for the First church of Granville, Ohio.

WILLINGTON HILL CHURCH, Conn., has closed a successful vacation school. Rev. Edwin E. Sundt writes: "We hired a truck to transport children from outlying districts and carried them to this old New England church, in many cases five and six miles away. Eighty-five responded and the average for two weeks was seventy-four; there were eight nationalities represented including Jewish children; 50 per cent of all enrolled were non-Protestants and the majority of

A GRATIFYING INCOME

Missionary Annuities have been attractive to hundreds of Baptists. Constant inquiries are made concerning them. Have you the facts?

When making wills please remember the corporate names of your national missionary organizations:

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re-wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

children came from European stock. The pastor acted as director, assisted by four paid workers. In the same parish another school was held later, in South Willington church where an enrolment of sixty-eight and average attendance of sixty-one was recorded for another two weeks. Both of these churches minister to a large rural field.

REV. C. J. OXLEY, on Easter Sunday, began his pastorate with the First church of Burlington, Vt., after seven years with the Park church of Utica, N. Y. Convention headquarters are in Burlington. The University of Vermont, with 1200 students, contributes to the community life. Nearly 100 members of the student body and faculty are affiliated with the Baptist church. The church edifice and parsonage were recently put into first-class condition at a cost of $10,000. This church met its missionary quota in full last year, received fifty-one new members ton street chapel and organized and developed a Sunday school at that point. The membership of First church is above 1800. There was received last year for current expenses $23,230. The church gave to missions and benevolences $36,832. Of this amount over $33,000 was given through the Northern Baptist Convention as distributable funds. Two workers were added to the church staff during the past year. There were received into the church 260 members, 107 by baptism. During July Dr. John Marvin Dean, pastor, exchanged pulpits with Dr. John Bunyan Smith of San Diego. Dr. A. C. Archibald preaches during August. The church is planning a notable year. Among the fixed items of its program is a Bible conference led by Dr. Campbell Morgan, a school of missions, a series of evangelistic meetings led by Dr. M. E. Dodd of Shreveport, La., and a conference on the by baptism; the Sunday school has increased from 150 to 700. The young people's work has grown into six unions. The Sunday school goes almost en masse to the church service, sections of seats being reserved for them. The pastor gives a short talk to the boys and girls. The Auditorium is too small for the evening congregation. The spirit of evangelism prevails in all of the services.

THE TEMPLE CHURCH, Los Angeles, Calif., on July 25 celebrated jointly the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of the church and the birthday of its first pastor, Dr. Robert J. Burdette.

THERE HAVE BEEN nine additions, two by baptism, to the church at Berwick, Ill., since E. V. Goad assumed the pastorate Mar. 1. A two-weeks' daily vacation Bible school was held with an average attendance of sixty. Summer Sunday-school attendance averages 140. The church and community are experiencing a loss in the death of Capt. John Fordyce who died recently at the age of eighty-seven.

SAYS THE BULLETIN of the First church, Terre Haute, Ind.: "Striking while the iron is hot is all right, but too many strike while the head is hot."

CALVARY CHURCH, Minneapolis, reports the celebration of "Grandma" Strout's and maintains the largest evening congregation in the city.

C. J. OXLEY

DURING THE PAST YEAR the stately new house of worship of the First church, Pasadena, was completed and dedicated. The church also dedicated the new Sunday-school unit known as the Washingdeepening of the spiritual life led by Dr. Curtis Lee Laws. The church also hopes to erect within the next twelve months a new church house.

ONE THOUSAND PERSONS attended the observance of the sixth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. C. O. Johnson with the First church of Tacoma, Wash. During his absence from the city a committee prepared a program of significant "acts" which came as a complete surprise to the pastor. The following figures were given: When Dr. Johnson came here in July, 1920, the membership was 275; it is now 1382. The budget then was $5,000; it is now $35,000. Comparisons were also given showing the growth of Sunday school, B. Y. P. U., and the women's society. A commodious church building was dedicated a year ago; the church property and equipment being valued at $350,000. During the past convention year the church received 401 members, 250

"Pews, altars and pulpits from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukegan, Wisconsin."

NEED MONEY?

Dr. A. O. Hageman has raised millions of dollars for Baptist church enterprises. He can secure the funds for your church building. Correspondence solicited. Box 852, Minneapolis.

Memorial Bells

You could obtain no more beautiful and lasting tribute to your loved ones than a Bell or Peal of Bells.

"Blymyer Bells"

(For Churches, Chapels, etc.)

The sweet, mellow, inviting tones carry their message afar and sound a call to worship and a message of welcome which really brings people to church. They excel in pure tone quality, volume of sound, carrying power and durability.

Write today for catalog and special proposition—new low prices and liberal terms.

THE JOHN B. MORRIS FOUNDRY CO.
Proprietor The Cincinnati Bell Foundry
Established 1832

Dept. 12 CINCINNATI, OHIO

Van Duzen Bells

formerly Van Duzen & Tift

Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal Bells made of Copper and Tin. Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1839 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing out its for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 11
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

Pipe-Tone Folding Organs

21 styles, School, Chapel, Chautauqua and Folding Organs. Send for catalogue and prices.

A. L. WHITE MFG. CO., Dept. B
215 Englewood Ave. Chicago, Ill.

ninety-fifth birthday on Aug. 3. Members of the church sent her individual greetings.

DR. AND MRS. AMBROSE M. BAILEY of First church, Seattle, Wash., are spending August at Little Camp, Friday Harbor, Wash. Dr. James Whitcomb Brougner supplied the pulpit Aug. 1; Dr. J. E. Dillard supplies it Aug. 8-29.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, publishers, announce that Paul Patton Faris, for many years identified with the weekly Continent, is now associated with their house in the capacity of editor.

CARMEL CHURCH, Detroit, has extended a call to Rev. H. R. Waldo of Indianapolis, Ind., who has accepted and will take up the work Sept. 1. Until then the pulpit will be filled by Mr. Fred Kelley, a lay member, who has done effective work in keeping the congregation together since the resignation of Rev. Edgar Watson took effect the first of June.

MISS LETTIE ARCHER, class of 1917, Ottawa university, has returned from her work in the Baptist mission school in Suifu, West China. Miss Archer was on the field over five years, spending a greater part of the time in the mountainous region of West China. She has returned for her year of furlough and will make her headquarters in Ottawa with her sister, Mrs. G. W. Blattler.

BIRKETT MEMORIAL CHURCH, Detroit, has a choir of thirty-five members, leader and organist, Mr. Lloyd C. Holtz. The chorus recently motored to Northville to give a musical program for the benefit of the patients at the Detroit tuberculosis hospital. The superintendent wishes another program at an early date.

ALICE M. KERN, a member of the Baptist church, is mayor of Edmonds, Wash. She may be the only Baptist woman mayor in the world. If there are others, THE BAPTIST would like to hear from them or of them. Mayor Kern is an enthusiastic subscriber for THE BAPTIST and writes that she appreciates the paper which she has taken since it was launched at Denver as well as the Standard which preceded it. "We need more praying and paying Baptists and less discussions and bitter remarks," are the closing words of a recent letter to which we echo a hearty Amen.

DR. JOHN W. WEDDELL is ad interim pastor at First church, Keokuk, Iowa, pending the coming of the new pastor, Dr. Paul Riley Allen, Sept. 5.

The Saving Sense

A word of wisdom comes from the Ft. Wayne News-Sentinel: "In preparing for your vacation, don't forget to prepare for the recuperation which always follows."

The chief trouble with the younger generation is that it has the older generation as an example, says Dr. Harris E. Kirk, rector of a Baltimore church.

Mother—Polite people don't yawn, dear. Little Daughter—But, mother, polite people don't notice."—Boston Transcript.

He rushed into the room where his wife was sitting.

"My dear," he said excitedly, "guess what's happened! Intelligence has just reached me—"

"Well, thank heaven, Harry!" she replied, rushing to embrace him.—Western Christian Advocate.

Customer: "When I put the coat on for the first time and buttoned it up, I burst the seam down the back!"

Tailor: "That shows how well our buttons are sewed on!"—Christian Evangelist.

"Mary," inquired the mistress suspiciously, "did you wash this fish carefully before you baked it?"

"Heavens, ma'am," replied Mary, "what's the use of washin' a fish that's lived all his life in the water?"—Pearson's Weekly.

A young man entered the new office of the new young lawyer. Desiring to impress the caller, the young lawyer picked up the phone and began to talk:

"Ah—indeed—3 o'clock—yes—but please be prompt; I am extremely busy—ah, yes—$300—yes; that is my fee—ah—good-by."

He hung up the receiver and turned briskly to the stranger.

"Now, my good sir, what can I do for you?"

"Nothing," said the man, "I've just come to connect your telephone."

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for August 29

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS: DUTIES TO MAN

Lesson Text, Exod. 20:12-21, Golden Text, Lev. 19:8

If the first four commandments of the decalogue head up in the obligation to worship, the last six may be condensed into the definite law of love. Certain fixed numbers have always had a kind of sanctity. Seven, twelve and ten were among the groups of numbers held to be sacred by the Israelites. This influenced the exact number of the ten commandments. It is not without significance that most of the commandments in the decalogue are directed toward social duties.

The Negations of Moses

All the commandments except the fifth are cast in a negative form. "Shalt ot" is repeated with monotonous regularity. Tabu was the system. All peoples and especially primitive peoples have been governed largely by tabu. It is much easier to issue prohibitions than to promote in a constructive way the things that ought to be done. We are unable to explain the one constructive suggestion of the decalogue. Why was the fifth commandment not cast in the usual form of the others? "Thou shalt not dishonor thy father and thy mother" would have been in line with all the other commandments. The Sabbath commandment starts out constructively but soon falls into the negative form. And yet when all is said, there is a large place for negation and prohibition in the discipline of people. "Don't" is still a necessary word in the bringing up of a family. Poison labels though positive in color are always negative in their directions. Some things will kill and so it is necessary to put up warnings against taking risks. The stop signal is just as important to the motorist and pedestrian as the go signal. The brakes are a fundamental part of an automobile. "Thou shalt not" needs to be thundered in the ears of all who are inclined to monkey with the buzz saw. The negative warnings of Moses codified in the decalogue still stand like red lights at the danger points on life's highway.

The Affirmations of Jesus

Jesus honored the negations of Moses but he filled them full of a positive content. "Thou shalt not kill," was filled with the Christlike note of "Love your enemies." "Thou shalt not lust," was intensified by "Thou shalt not look." In fact Jesus sums up the whole law in one word, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul, strength; and thy neighbor as thyself." Love in the sense of a steadfast will bent upon creating fellowship is the higher law which renders all legal prohibitions unnecessary. God is love. Love casts out selfishness. Love serves. Love is the only solvent of all social wrongs. Love is the one redeeming principle of all life. Therefore love is the fulfilling of the whole law.

Please mention "The Baptist" when writing to advertisers.

Everything for the Church and Sunday School

The Church and Sunday School Builder

A large classified, illustrated, descriptive Catalog of books and supplies of every kind for Church and Sunday School. One of the most complete catalogs of its kind published. The edition for 1926-1927 has just been issued. A copy will be sent to any address upon request. Let us furnish you with whatever you may need. Our stock is large, our service is prompt, and the prices are the best obtainable.

Write to Our Nearest House

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

16 Ashburton Place, BOSTON 125 N. Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO
1107 McGee Street, KANSAS CITY 813 W. Third Street, LOS ANGELES
489 Burke Building, SEATTLE

New Books

"Dad!" by Wallace Dunbar Vincent. New York: Revell. $1.50.

A book that scout masters, parents and others having specific interest in boys will welcome. The boys themselves will find the book a gold mine of original suggestions. It is planned upon the idea of questions and answers. The boy asks the questions which "Dad" takes time to answer graciously and intelligently. Questions added play with strikingly original answers; queries that arise in connection with school work; questions about composition and word-analysis and arithmetic and a dozen others; questions about personal habits; questions that come to boys as they grow up—all are answered with the wisdom of experience and in language that a boy can understand and appreciate. Mr. Vincent in this volume has shown himself to be a real boy's man.

—JOHN A. EARL.

The Gospel in Modern Poetry, by Hugh T. Kerr. New York: Revell. $1.50.

Here is a preacher who has the original gift of turning every good thing to homiletical uses. Doctor Kerr is first, last and all the time a preacher of the gospel. All the grist that comes to his mill is turned into sermons. The sermons glow with feeling and touch the emotions and yet the appeal is always made through the intellect. This volume of sixteen sermons is made up of messages preached to his own people in Pittsburgh, Pa., and through the microphone to distant hearers as far north as the Arctic Circle, as far south as Cuba and as far east as Wales across the Atlantic. Sixteen modern poems from as many authors are used to furnish the themes for the sermons that constitute the contents of the volume. Among the more well known poems are "The Recessional" by Kipling and "The Man with the Hoe" by Markham. But whatever poem is used, the homiletical treatment of it is always dignified, virile and spiritual.

—JOHN A. EARL.

What Does Christ Expect of Young People Today? by T. H. P. Sailer. Boston: The Pilgrim Press.

These twenty-four studies representing the new method of vitalizing a subject, of motivating conduct, and of inspiring one to discover the Jesus way of living for himself and rejoicing in the discovery, are practical studies which grew out of the problems confronting boys and girls from thirteen to sixteen years of age in their daily life. The method is threefold: first, analysis of the moral and religious problem; second, a discovery of that light the spirit and teaching of Jesus can throw upon the problem; third, the resulting application in conduct of the Jesus principle in living. Doctor Sailer, one of the faculty of the teachers' college of Columbia university, gave this course to a group of early and middle teen age boys and girls in his Sunday school. His method of teaching, however, requires special training and ability. The author gives a few brief suggestions to teachers on the method of conducting such a class.

—W. C. DEER.

Hope Victoria at the Helm, by George Ezra Huntley. New York: Revell. $1.50.

Books dealing with church school methods are usually dry-as-dust. Not so in this case. Hope Victoria is a wonder, she is a go-getter and resourceful. Projects and problems are presented and worked out in such a way that it all seems quite simple after it is done. The superintendent's election, her installation, opening services, records, equipment, and community and Christian service are interwoven with a charming love story. The methods presented are essential for the church school today. The chapter dealing with the adult class is especially stimulating and full of suggestions for adult classes that think they have served their day.

—EDWARD H. KOSTER.

The Leaven of the Sadducees, by Ernest Gordon. Chicago: Bible Institute Colportage Association. $1.50 net.

Liberalism in its various forms would do well to give attention to such a book as this, for here is an assault that cannot be turned aside by a gesture of contempt. It sets out to show that modernism has captured and perverted from genuine Christianity both the religious organizations and educational institutions of North America. The author supports the thesis with abundant, apt and specific quotation and mention of names, schools, schemes and accomplishments. It is not enough that the discriminating reader can discover many a fallacy in the reasoning and many an instance of finding fault where none exists. After making full allowance for all such flaws—and most readers will neither observe the flaws nor make the allowance—the total impression is one of real and extensive peril to the faith. Such a book is a symptom not merely of an excited state of mind in a fanatical group, but of an elemental religious need that modernism has not yet found a way to supply in satisfying measure. It is the common need of the people for a simple, direct, warm, saving gospel message, borne by preachers whose hearts are aflame with Christly passion. If the Pentateuchal alphabet, and a correct analysis of the evidence of the virgin birth, and a scientific hypothesis of evolution can be coupled up with such a message borne by such preachers, they may hope to endure, but if not—well, a careful reading of such a book as this is advised, for it says something.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

The Old Gospel at the Heart of the Metropolis, sermons by John Roach Straton. New York: Doran. $2.

A volume of eighteen sermons stenographically reported. They are well-prepared, clothed in good literary diction and in subject and treatment they are fresh and interesting—not a dull one in the group. There are a few personal but not discourteous criticisms. The subjects treated are of the "old gospel" type; a strong "fundamental" flavor is at once recognized; but there is nothing stale in the substance or in the manner of presenting the message.

—H. O. ROWLANDS.

The Spell of French Canada, by Frank Oliver Call. Boston: Page. $3.75.

The next thing to making the tour for oneself is to have another make it and write about it in a way that visualizes it for the reader. Mr. Call has succeeded in making French Canada live again. The rivers, the hills, the shrines, the people, the history, the changes, the folklore, the weather, the beauty of French Canada are all woven in a mosaic of words and pictures which gives to the volume a bona fide guarantee of the truth of the title. The book is bound in ornamental cloth and the contents are illustrated with more than fifty excellent photographs. It is one of "The Spell Series" which now numbers twenty-six volumes. As one travels with the author down the St. Lawrence from Montreal to the gulf, often taking detours up unfrequented tributaries, he is constantly enchanted with descriptions of landscapes and waterscapes which possess a beauty and charm all their own. No one can read the book without falling in love with French Canada.

—JOHN A. EARL.

The Unknown Bible, by Conrad Henry Moehlman. New York: Doran. $2.

Everybody who knows the distinguished professor of the history of Christianity in Rochester Theological seminary, knows that he does nothing by halves, and that he could not help being interesting even if he were sound asleep in a darkened room. But this book is a surprise. The wealth of its material, the familiarity with almost endless detail, the grasp on the whole range of biblical introduction and interpretation, the linguistic lore, the sure tread of scholarship, the boldness of thought where most men nowadays hunt cover and dodge, the caustic exposure of fantastic theories about the Bible—but why continue the enumeration? It is a surprising book, and as interesting as it is surprising. Some will read it with curiosity, some with hot indignation, some with delight. But it will be read; and it ought to be read if for no other purpose than to find out how interesting the study of the Bible can be.

—U. M. McGUIRE.

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

Board of Missionary Cooperation

The purpose of this Board is to promote and obtain support for every denominational activity, as provided in the united program of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Literature or special information concerning any phase of the work will be promptly furnished on request.

W. H. BOWLER

Executive Secretary

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

Partnership Opportunities

The 800 missionaries of The American Baptist Home Mission Society are to be found in nearly every State in the Union, and in Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Haiti and Jamaica. They serve as missionary pastors, teachers, colporteur-missionaries, chapel-car and auto chapel-car directors, evangelists and Christian center workers.

In the making of your will and in the purchase of annuity agreements you may have a share in the home mission tasks of your denomination.

For annuity booklet and samples of single and survivorship agreements, please address

CHARLES L. WHITE

23 East Twenty-sixth St., New York City
The American Baptist Home Mission Society

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society (Corporate Name)

Address all communications to
276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Last year 23,047 converts were baptized on mission fields in the non-Christian world. This is the largest total ever reported in a single year in the history of the Society.

When you make a will be sure that the full corporate name of the Society is used. Correspondence concerning gifts on the Annuity Plan with income ranging from 4 to 9% should be addressed to the Home Secretary.

C. E. Milliken, President

Frederick L. Anderson, Ch'm'n of the Board

James H. Franklin, Foreign Secretary

Joseph C. Robbins, Foreign Secretary

P. H. J. Lerrigo, Home Secretary

George B. Huntington, Treasurer

Why Not Increase Your Income and at the same time

Help Some One Else?

The Board of Education of
The Northern Baptist Convention
(Legal name)

Will write you an annuity contract assuring you a good income for life and enabling you to perpetuate your influence for a long time to come. For information address—

Frank W. Padelford, Secretary

276 Fifth Ave. New York City

News Notes

Our missionaries in the Belgian Congo are not always sure of their bread. It takes long for flour to reach them and often it has to be thrown out, and must always be carefully picked over because of weevils and worms. Flour is high, costing $4.65 for twenty-five pounds and Rev. P. C. Metzger figures that this price is doubled by the fact that usually one half must be thrown out.

During the summer Dr. George A. Huntley, field worker of the Board of Missionary Cooperation, has attended the Baptist young people's assemblies in Mount Carroll, Ill.; Storrs, Conn.; and Iowa Falls, Iowa, where he taught Mr. Lipphard's new book, "The second century of Baptist Foreign Missions." He also delivered addresses at Lake Geneva, Wis., and Peddie institute in New Jersey.

About sixty lepers have formed a colony in Kangpokpi, Assam, and are being treated by one of the Baptist medical workers. Dr. and Mrs. G. G. Crozier go over on Sundays with a gramophone to attend the outdoor services. One member of the group who formerly taught school and is a Christian teaches on week days and on Sundays holds regular meetings. Another convert preaches eloquently of what Christ has done for him. Eighteen of the lepers are Christians.

Rev. T. V. Witter sends encouraging reports from Podili, South India. Recently he wrote: "On Sunday afternoon during the Easter festival we had the joy of giving baptism to Mala and Madiga converts and a Sudra caste convert from a village close to Podili. This Sudra caste convert is an active evangelist. He has brought his own relatives and others of different caste with him to Podili that we may get in touch with them and influence them. Recently at Munajapad we gave baptism to a fine Yenadi (Sudra caste) family consisting of father and mother, two married sons and their wives, and one unmarried son. Since then these Yenadies have had to undergo petty persecution from the caste people of their village."

The Mexican Baptist Mission of Denver headed the list of churches in Colorado in per capita giving toward the united missionary budget of the Northern Baptist Convention. The pastor, Rev. J. Jimenez, who is the joint appointee of the Colorado State Convention and the Home Mission Society, has educated his people in the delights and privileges of giving. Recently one crippled Mexican laborer on a sugar beet ranch, after his season's work was over, contracted for an additional acreage, after listening to a missionary address by his pastor, and gave one-half the proceeds to missions. At a recent all-day meeting of this Mexican church attended by Mexicans from several communities within a radius of fifty miles of Denver, $77.06 was collected for missions. Last year the state convention asked this church for $100 for missions; it contributed $267.

Our Societies and How to Reach Them.

WHEN YOUR WILL IS READY Will it contain a bequest for The Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board

of the Northern Baptist Convention

276 Fifth Avenue, New York

If it does it will help the Board help worthy aged Baptist Ministers & Missionaries, the Widows and Orphan Children.

If you prefer or need the income while you live we shall be glad to have you take an

ANNUITY BOND (Gift Agreement) whereby you will receive a high and safe return on your gift throughout your lifetime. At your decease the income only will be used in the work. Your gift may be made a memorial to yourself or others.

Write for Information.

FOR ANNUITIES AND WILLS

Use the corporate name

Woman's American Baptist
Home Mission Society

Consult Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer.

276 Fifth Avenue New York City

A SIMPLE PLAN:

You send to us:

1. Your check as an annuity gift
2. Date of your birth.
3. Address in full.

We send to you:

1. A receipt for your check.
2. An annuity agreement.
3. Annuity payments every six months.

For full particulars regarding our annuity plan—Write to

Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer

Woman's American Bapt. Foreign Mission Society
276 Fifth Ave. New York City

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

The denominational publishing house for the extension of the kingdom through the printed Word, Colportage; Religious Education, and Sunday school development.

FOR OTHERS

Put THE BAPTIST into your Public Library. Do it Today.

Annual Subscription, $2.50

THE BAPTIST

2320 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the National Baptist Convention

Mountains at dusk in the Philippines. What appears to be a tiny stream is the Agno river, two thousand feet below the level of the camera.

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Albert, king of the Belgians, preaches economy to his subjects—more, he practices it. Black bread now is exclusively served at the royal table, and none of the king's three motor cars has been seen on the streets since the economy campaign began. Two gendarmes spotted a lone motor cyclist racing toward Brussels from Laeken the other day and halted the speeder, demanding his papers. When they read the driver's permit, they nearly fainted, it was made out to "Albert of Belgium." The king shook hands with the gendarmes and reassured them by saying: "You did right. It is your duty—but I am a little late for work," and he sped away.

In suggesting a call for a conference to deal with the question of modernism in English Free churches, the following prayer has been suggested as a preliminary approach to the conference: "O God of all truth, who by thy Holy Spirit canst lead us into all truth, graciously help us to find the truth, and to make it known to others. The times are difficult for us, because a flood of knowledge has poured in on all sides, and many of the old landmarks are submerged. Things which we must surely believe, and which we cannot surrender, are entangled with things which we cannot believe, and which we know that we should surrender. But it is very difficult for us to discriminate, and to separate between the permanent and the transitory. We fear to pluck up the tares, lest we pluck up the wheat also. We pray, therefore, that thy church may receive wisdom from on high. Enable thy faithful people who have understanding of the times to meet together, and to bring out with clear relief the truth of the gospel. Give us leaders, scholars, students, men and women filled with the Holy Ghost, who can show convincingly how the faith once for all delivered to the saints harmonizes with the knowledge of the universe, of history, of the human mind, which has poured in upon us in our time."

To tip or not to tip, is not one of the questions over which Europeans parley. They tip perforce. Thus writes Negley Farson in the Chicago News: "In Vienna you split a dinner tip three ways; so much for the waiter, so much for the wine waiter and a tiny dole for the 'bus' boy who brings in your food—and does all the work. In Paris they usually add the tip to your bill—10 per cent—but they expect more. In Rome they do likewise, except that in Rome they add 15 per cent or 20, depending upon where you eat and the boldness of the waiter. They expect more, but show no rancor if they do not get it. In Germany they add 10 per cent. They expect no more. In Constantinople they add 10 per cent

The Last Hurdle!

By ELIZABETH TILTON

The fact is, prohibition has now reached the last hurdle—the hurdle that all reforms of the country will have to take—the hurdle of the big city. The big city lacks the backbone of reform, a preponderating middle class. The problem of prohibition is this: that the middle class everywhere, the small towns, the rural communities, the women, shall hold fast the vision of the betterment to mankind that can come only through prohibition enforced until the big city shall be converted; in short, until the big city shall bow to the mandate of the backbone of the nation.

and if you are unwise enough to think that enough the waiters suddenly become deaf. The inclusion of the tip in the bill is a deception. Nobody believes that the waiter ever gets it—it is just the proprietor's graft. So you have to tip again in self-protection. In Bukharest you do not have to worry about tips because the Roumanians come up and ask for them. But in Simpson's, the roast beef treasure trove of old London, tipping has reached a fine art. Here, when one of the white-suited servitors wheels before your eager eyes a huge silver salver, bearing the red glory of a steer killed in his prime, here you give the tip first. You reach over and place six pence in the honest man's hand. 'A large, thick slab, please—with some fat. Ah, yes—and just another cut from, say, there.' Then you lean back and sigh contentedly."

The 1926 student annual of Shanghai college, Shanghai, China, has reached the office of THE BAPTIST. The book, bound in ornamental cloth, containing 200 pages, profusely illustrated and printed in both English and Chinese will not suffer in comparison with the annuals of the best colleges in America. It is a bit disappointing, however, to find that it follows rather slavishly the fashion of college annuals set up by the educational institutions of America. None the less, the volume has an originality of its own. One is impressed by the advertisements which indicate that the East and West have met and mingled almost to a point of amalgamation. American enterprise is seen in the display advertisements sandwiched between the lithographs and reading matter. Here we find the ubiquitous kodak, the gas engine, the correspondence school, optical instruments and the irrepressible saxophone. One of the familiar objects lacking on the pages given to advertisements is the automobile. Evidently Shanghai college students do not sport as many motor cars per capita as the students of an American university. The Voice, a semi-monthly magazine, published by the students of Shanghai college, issued a special issue in June to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the journal.

Would you like to recall what happened to you when you were six months old? Dr. E. Pickworth Farrow, English psychologist, speaking at the recent meeting at Oxford, England, of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, suggests this process: "Briefly the method consists in writing down a list of events, absolutely any and every thought which occurs to one for periods of one or two hours at a time and continuing this over a number of periods. What happens, apparently, that the memories of recent happenings become gradually worked out and the mind gradually goes back farther and farther into the remembrance of incidents in one's early life. In many cases subsequent verifications of the circumstances may be obtained from one's parents. The results obtained in this process of self-analysis confirm Professor Freud's results concerning the mode of working of the human mind, except that they rather suggest that Professor Freud may perhaps not have given due or proportionate weight to the egotistic or self-preservative group of instincts. This method of psychological research needs no apparatus of any kind—only patience, a pen and some paper—and thus anybody can follow it and test the ultimate definite recollection of extremely early incidents for himself."

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION....	870
LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE, 1926..	872
EDITORIAL	873
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	875
THE TROUBLE IN MEXICO, BY H. L. STETSON	876
THE CHURCH, THE CONSCIENCE OF SOCIETY, BY JOHN A. HUTTON	877
AMBASSADORSHIP FOR CHRIST, BY THOMAS H. SPRAGUE	878
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE—LIFE WITHOUT PROBLEMS, BY GEORGE EVANS	879
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	880
WITH THE CHURCHES.....	881
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	882
BOYS AND GIRLS	883
AMONG OURSELVES	884
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON..	890
NEW BOOKS	891

The discovery of large mounds west and south of New Orleans on the marshy coast of Louisiana by Ethnologist Henry B. Collins, Jr., of the Smithsonian institute adds a definite contribution to our knowledge of prehistoric Indian life. Mr. Collins thinks it probable that the builders of these mounds, one of which is forty-five feet above the level of the surrounding country, were the ancestors of the Chitimacha Indians, a highly cultured tribe known to have occupied nearby territory; previous to Mr. Collins' discovery it was supposed that the Attacopa tribe of nomadic Indians, cannibals, had been the only inhabitants of this area.

People will observe with interest the New York housing experiment. A state board of housing is to serve without salary. Public limited-dividend corporations will put up houses to rent at a price sufficient to cover cost and 6 per cent. Such corporations have the power of eminent domain to acquire land by condemnation, and they are to be exempt from the payment "of any and all franchise, organization, income, mortgage, recording, and other taxes to the state, and also from all fees to the state or its officers." The bonds and mortgages of such corporations, together with the interest thereon and the dividends on the stock, are exempt from state taxation.

The last annual report of the Philadelphia society (Christian association) of Princeton university contains the following statement concerning the college students' attitude toward the Christian religion: "Christianity in the past ten years has been taken out of the realm of authority and convention, and with the present generation has been subjected to criticism from the outside. This has been due to a variety of causes, a few of which are: 1—The growth of knowledge in biology, geology and evolution, and the consequent intellectual revulsion against a literal interpretation of the Old Testament; 2—The breakdown of the church as a social center, interest in moving pictures, community dances, and other social functions; 3—The church has weakened its influence by holding up to the delinquent and derelict members of the younger generation the shameful way in which they are neglecting the religion of their fathers; 4—The methods which the 'church-in-transition' has used of enticing by alluring socials and 'Please come to our' measures, have incurred the suspicion rather than the respect of the young; 5—The war and its aftermath have shown to young people at first hand the great forces in the world were guns and battleships but the things of the spirit; 6—Among undergraduates there is a genuine hunger for reality and sincerity. When Christians talk of conversion and surrender and the power of the word, undergraduates want to see those things cut deep. When they do not, they look for reality in gratifying those things which seem to them most real. They find that they are immoral. They do the same in the whole gamut of flagrant commandment breaking, and exult in it."

One of the brightest auguries for world peace is a world power conference to be held in Basle, Switzerland, during the first two weeks in September. Delegates from forty-four nations will participate and will consider the subject broadly in its technical and international aspects. The development and utilization of power through the combination of water-driven dynamos and electricity is an enterprise to which peace is essential, and the distribution of electrical energy can no more be regulated by political boundary lines than can the tides of the sea.

Because of increasing inadequacy of railway facilities between Matadi and Kinshasa, a great engineering project has been proposed for Belgian Congo which will result in a mighty social transformation throughout the entire region. It is proposed to construct a canal along the entire section of the Congo river where on account of the many rapids which break its course it is not now navigable. Complete plans have been prepared and presented to King Albert. It is anticipated that the carrying out of this plan will develop hydro-electric energy to the amount of a hundred million horse-power, which may be used to furnish power throughout large areas of West Africa. This project should be of particular interest to Baptists inasmuch as it will contribute greatly to the economic and social development of the entire colony, and especially because their oldest work in Congo is carried out in the area traversed by that part of the river now closed.

From the magazine Asia we get this interesting information: "To increase the water supply of Jerusalem British engineers have harnessed the spring in the Ain Farah gorge, which lies 1200 feet below the city in a wild ravine among the hills of Judea eight or ten miles northeast of the holy city. The first task of the engineers was the construction of a roadway down the gorge. On account of its steepness and wild character it called for a great deal of blasting and the construction of many hairpin bends. The spring was then enclosed, tanks erected and a pumping plant installed. Halfway up the ravine a second pumping station has been built, and a third at Anothoth at the head of the gorge, which in Old Testament days was the home of Jeremias. From here the water passes to the main tank erected on the highest point of Mount Scopus, overlooking the holy city. This tank will have a capacity of 200,000 gallons, equal to a day's flow of the spring. From time immemorial the Ain Farah gorge has been the gathering place of the shepherds of Palestine, and is associated with the twenty-third psalm, for here David is said to have spent his boyhood days tending the sheep and it was the experience he gained here that led him to pen the psalm, 'The Lord is my shepherd.' As the engineers have arranged for water still to flow through the gorge the shepherds will continue to gather here to water and rest their flocks as they have done since David's day."

(Continued on page 872)

RALLY-DAY PROGRAM

Rally-Day comes once a year,

A glad assembling of the clans;

Looking forward without fear,—

Lighting fires and making plans.

Yet, no schedule is complete,

Drawn without "THE BAPTIST" in it.

Aren't you going to do the feat?

Yes. Set subscription goal AND WIN IT.

Every church in the Northern Baptist Convention should include the presentation of the denominational paper, together with a subscription goal to be reached and an agent or committee to secure it, as a part of its Rally-Day Program.

Send at once for Free Sample Copies

Single subscriptions $2.50 per year; in clubs of 10% of resident membership, $2.00; with Missions $3.00 per year. Trial subscription, Six Months for $1.00

THE BAPTIST

2320 South Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

Labor Sunday Message, 1926

WE URGE upon the members of our churches throughout the country a continuous and earnest interest in all forward-looking industrial experiments, to the end that a body of energized and enlightened public opinion may be prepared to support every reasonable effort for larger justice. Labor is taking its long hard road of evolution from non-representation in industrial relations to a genuine and responsible sharing of power. This industrial evolution is moving through the various forms of employe representation to the fullest measure of self-expression through the labor union. Labor and capital should work together in the fullest mutual understanding, insuring to all toilers the largest measure of personal dignity and democratic participation, insuring to management cooperation and genuine partnership in common endeavor, insuring to the public the orderly production of needed goods and the maintenance of stable and just economic conditions. In saying this, we are not unmindful that there are distinct areas in which the interests of labor and capital are divergent, as well as areas in which there is a common interest, but we hold that all of the problems involved can be approached and their solutions worked out in the same spirit of intelligent and constructive cooperation.

Workers' Education

We find hope in the impetus of the movement for workers' education. On the side of management, we find an increasing disposition to deal with frankness and to make the workers acquainted with relevant facts of the business; on the side of labor, a growing disposition to push the study of economics and other subjects to secure a more intelligent background and a more effective equipment to participate in industrial management. The workers' education movements are developing leadership of high quality. We urge upon the churches the fullest study of these plans and the largest cooperation in making them thoroughly effective.

We find hope in the accelerated interest in the problem of waste. The secretary of commerce and the engineers associated with him, the engineering societies of the country, the scientific management groups, the leaders of organized labor, all these are grappling with the problem. We are aware that but a beginning has been made in the elimination of the wastes that are inherent in our industrial structure. We are aware of the unwise destruction of our natural resources, the tragic volume of involuntary idleness, the wasteful production of useless and anti-social commodities, the wastes of war and militarism, the failure to apply known scientific machinery to the productive process, the wastes involved in the abnormal multiplication of models and designs, the loss entailed by conflicting rules and jurisdictional labor disputes. These are the evils loosed by conflicting interests. They will never be cured save by the recognition of a wider community of interest and by increasing the area of cooperative effort.

We would emphasize the necessity and the fundamental ethical significance of good management. There can be good-will and much charity; there can be faith in good works, and hope abounding; but if there is not good management, even good-will comes to naught. The implications of this are far-reaching. It means a reasoned and persistent effort to understand not only the technique of scientific methods of production, but also the economics and the spirit of each of the parties to industry. For labor, it means a clear recognition of the psychological effects of everything suggesting the threat of violence. For the employer, it means an intelligent understanding of the worker, and the recognition that every attempt to force decisions in labor relations without recourse to a genuinely democratic method cannot win that sympathetic assent which must underlie any lasting industrial peace. It should mean a clear and honest analysis of the psychological effects of all open-shop drives in their many forms. For the public, it means an intelligent and sustained concern for the welfare of the nation, coupled with the recognition that America cannot come to social health until it attains industrial health. For all three parties, it must mean a new sense of fair play, a new faith in the power of good-will and intelligence to gain the mastery over rebellious ill-will, faith in the possibility of a new scientific control over the economic factors of our common life, the larger application of the Christian insistence upon the supremacy of human values, to the end that energy may be set free which will make possible an invincible spirit of cooperation between the men and women of labor, management and the public.

Re-appraising the Task

We appeal to the rank and file of the labor movement of America that they make a re-appraisal of their task, seek a new understanding of the motives and mind of the men of other groups. We rejoice in the words of the president of the American Federation of Labor: "Conditions and states of mind . . . stand in the way of the cooperation which labor leaders and progressive managers desire to bring about. But it is our belief that such conditions and states of mind will gradually disappear as the benefits of cooperation to both parties appear."

We appeal to the directors of industry, to all who through stock ownership or other participation have a voice in determining the conduct of management, that they give new thought to the human factors involved in their particular business. We appeal for a new emphasis upon the need of understanding the feelings and the hopes of men; that the day when human beings are considered simply as cost-units in production may end.

We appeal to the public for new thought and study of the human issue which lie behind our industrial struggles. We appeal for a study of the question of coal and its human cost, of the human costs involved in every commodity which we require. We appeal for study of all legislation which bears upon the social welfare of the nation, that our legislators may have intelligent backing in every legitimate effort to secure justice through law.

We appeal to the rank and file of the membership of our churches throughout America for consistent and earnest study of the implications of the gospel of Jesus in its bearings upon economic and industrial welfare. The church has a moral stake in industrial relations with their promise of good or their threat of ill. We appeal for a larger study of the social statements which have been adopted by our American churches, and particularly for first-hand studies of the results of actual experiments in the application of these principles in industrial relations.

(The full message, from which the above paragraphs are taken, can be had upon request to the Federal Council's Commission on the church and social service.)

Folks, Facts and Opinion

(Continued from page 871)

Cape Cod canal is a financial failure

Its owners want to sell it to the government. But if it had been financially profitable to its private owners, its ownership and operation by the government would have been represented as dangerous to civilization. The conclusion would seem to be that government ownership is applicable only to those enterprises that cannot be made financially profitable. When a business fails, unload it upon the government. When there is money in it for profiteers let the government keep its hands off.

According to the Christian Statesman "When fighting for his bill for movie regulation before the house Education Committee, Congressman Upshaw rendered the following ten point indictment of 25 per cent of the motion picture now exhibited: Long drawn-out kisses; insidious and lascivious embraces; the shocking, voluptuous absence of clothing; the unholy sexual appeal; bedroom scenes as the ante-chamber of immorality; swapping wives as a social habit making heroines of harlots and heroes of libertines; Sodom modernized on American soil; gilding of sin by the 'scofflaw'; drinking of illicit liquor. Our observation of the movies, and we guess occasionally, is that Upshaw is right. We try to choose the best, but within the last two years we have been disgusted more than once by every one of these ten vicious characteristics. Of course, many films are free of all these, but our memory would say that 75 per cent of them have at least one or more of these faults."

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

A Moratorium on Money-Raising

THE Standard Dictionary has this to say about a moratorium: "An emergency act of legislation authorizing a debtor to suspend payments for a given period." As applied to the benevolences of churches which annually make up the budgets of missionary, educational and philanthropic work of a denomination, a moratorium simply means a temporary suspension of all definite and aggressive efforts to raise the money needed to finance the work of the denomination carried on through its fifty-eight missionary, educational and philanthropic organizations. Of course, no one takes seriously the rhetorical gesture involved in such a catchy phrase, "A moratorium on money-raising." Even the author of the phrase does not press it literally. A pastor would be willing to vote and work for a moratorium on the payment of his salary. And if a moratorium were suggested to the janitor whereby he would receive his deferred pay after next Christmas, provided it could be raised, the church building would suddenly be on the appearance of a house when mother is away on a vacation for a month.

Who ever heard of a moratorium on the prompt payment of grocery bills or of taxes or of the interest on a mortgage when it is due? It is true, some tardy subscribers insist on to act upon the assumption that a moratorium exists whereby their subscriptions to the religious paper may be deferred indefinitely. But even here most of the subscribers pay in advance. It is only when it comes to offerings for missionary work and the support of Christian education and the adequate care of aged ministers and missionaries that a moratorium can be suggested without a loud and effective protest. If such a thing as a moratorium on raising the benevolence budgets of the denomination could be made effective for a few months, as has been suggested for the Board of Christian Operation, it is the conviction of every man and woman officially connected with the responsibility of raising the missionary budgets that the moratorium would turn out to be a mausoleum in which are buried the hope of resurrection all the normal expectations upon which denominational missionary budgets are predicated.

Why then is a moratorium proposed? It is proposed in the interest of clearing the way for an intensive evangelistic effort and in the hope that if a revival of religion should break out among the churches the deferred benevolences would begin to flow like a spring freshet, more than making up for the dry financial, moratorium months. Is it not a strange attitude of mind that proposes to side-track the stewardship of money in any program of evangelism? Is there not something wrong with the logic of an evangelistic effort that banishes the collection plates and refuses to let the people say it with silver dollars, bank bills and checks? We heard Gypsy Smith say, and we applauded his good sense, that he never preached without first taking up a collection. The collection taken nightly in his meetings was not for him personally but for the expenses of the meetings. But even if there had been no money needed for defraying the overhead expense Gypsy Smith would still have insisted on taking a collection in every service for some good object because nothing helps more in promoting an evangelistic spirit and creating an atmosphere of revival interest. Does the Salvation Army, which is nothing if not evangelistic, have any use for a moratorium on money-raising? If the ubiquitous tambourine as a collection plate or the drum-head as a receptacle for coin should disappear from the street meetings or halls of the Salvation Army, we believe the army would go out of business. No, the raising of money for the kingdom and the saving of souls for the kingdom must go on simultaneously. What would Zaccheus have done if Jesus had smothered his first spontaneous impulse to give the half of his goods to feed the poor by saying, "No, Zaccheus, you can't do that just yet, because there is a moratorium on money matters until this revival effort is over"?

We stand for the preferential treatment of evangelism in the program of our churches but not at the expense of the collection. In fact, we strongly believe that the giving of money to the Lord's cause is a vital part of evangelism. Evangelism or any organized effort to promote evangelism is futile and false if it leaves out of the program definite instructions with regard to material possessions in the hands of Christians and those who will become Christians through special evangelistic effort or otherwise, and if it makes no provision for the means whereby the consciousness of new stewardship responsibilities may be discharged without delay. Let's forget the moratorium on money-raising. There has been enough of the funeral in our giving already without capitalizing it and giving it official sanction. Evangelism cannot be helped along this route. It is vain to hope by a segregation of the pocketbook to keep safe from the demands of the kingdom of God and from the clear directions of our Lord and his apostles that a great denominational drive for the saving of souls will be accelerated. Souls first of all and last of all must be saved from selfishness, and selfishness finds its greatest obstinacy to surrender to grace in the love of money.

Baptists and the Mexican Situation

THE Mexican situation with reference to organized religion has been stated so often in the columns of THE BAPTIST and through the public press in other journals that it seems superfluous to state it again. And yet for the sake of clearness it may be well to give a brief review of the situation. The Mexican government under the leadership of President Calles is making a definite and sustained effort to enforce the laws which apply to all ecclesiastical organizations; to all church property, to all the clergy and to all religious activities which come under the statutes. These laws among other things require the official registration of every clergyman in charge of a church building or of other property used for religious purposes. The necessity for this registration lies in the fact that the Mexican government claims the ownership of all ecclesiastical property and requires that all the priests and the non-Catholic clergy shall be natives of Mexico. The laws forbid clergymen, nuns or others engaged in strictly religious work to wear a uniform indicative of their office. There are many other provisions in the laws governing religion but the above are sufficient to indicate the drastic character of the attempt on the part of the present administration in Mexico to pry loose the strangle-hold which the Roman Catholic hierarchy has had upon the freedom of Mexico for 300 years.

In order to appreciate the resistance of the Roman Catholic hierarchy and its sympathizers to the enforcement of these laws one must visualize the deportation from Mexico of all imported bishops, priests and nuns and the unfrocking of all the native clergy and nuns who remain. When the Mexican government attempts to carry out such an unprecedented policy it is running head-on against the established tradition of Roman Catholicism which for hundreds of years has ruled the church from a final center of authority in Rome. Should Rome yield to Mexico City in this crisis it would mean a departure from the established policy of the Catholic church equivalent to a reformation. The very genius of Romanism is Rome as the center and source of all religious authority. Without this central and supreme authority the unity of the Roman church would be imperiled. One might illustrate what the situation would be for the Roman Catholic church in Mexico should the present attempt of the government to control the church succeed, by imagining a state of the United States succeeding in passing and enforcing laws to forbid the federal government the exercise of its constitutional right to maintain federal agencies in that state for the transaction of federal business. Rome is the center of a great federal government ruling matters of religion three hundred million people who live in nearly all the countries of the world. Shall a single Catholic state like Mexico be permitted to rise higher than Rome and to exercise an authority which attempts to break the fundamental tradition of the church? That is the Catholic grievance against Mexico at the present time.

Now, as to Mexico. What justification does Mexico offer for what appears to be an unreasonable and unfriendly attitude toward organized religion? Mexico through her official representatives argues that her attitude is neither unreasonable nor unfair. The present administration was elected on the platform of separation of church and state. If the present situation works hardship to the Roman Catholic church and clergy it is because the church through many generations in Mexico has created conditions which require drastic measures to change. When the happy religious situation in the United States is cited to prove the unfairness of Mexico toward organized religion it is met with the statement that there is practically no parallelism between the two countries. The constitutional provisions guarding the free exercise of religion in the United States were created by Protestants in the infancy of the United States; but Mexico, a Catholic country, is compelled to arrive at constitutional separation of church and state by breaking up a system entrenched in long usage and supported by the political traditions of an ecclesiastical super-state. Mexican government officials, speaking officially, say that religious freedom in Mexico is guaranteed by law to all religions that comply with the requirements of the constitution.

The Baptist attitude toward the Mexican situation as herein described hardly needs to be defined. Baptists deplore the conditions that make it necessary for the Calles administration to enforce laws that seem to carry in their own enforcement the seeds of the ultimate failure of the complete freedom of Mexico from the domination of Rome which she so eagerly seeks. If the evolution of religious freedom had been possible in Mexico with its gradual approach to the complete separation of church and state, that would have been far better than the present civil strife which now rages and threatens another revolution. But if there was no other way to arrive at religious freedom in Mexico then Baptists sympathize with Mexico in her efforts to secure a free church in a free state. At the same time, Baptists look with disfavor upon attempts of government to regulate religion or to limit its free exercise. Mexico seems to be doing at the present time. In common with the Catholic churches in Mexico, Baptist missions are somewhat hampered by the rigid enforcement of the laws governing ecclesiastical affairs; but because of our democratic principles we recognize the right of Mexico to conduct her own affairs in her own way, and we have graciously complied with all the requirements of the government in the conduct of our home missionary work in Mexican territory. We take the same attitude toward the interference of the United States in Mexican domestic affairs. If treaties have been broken that is a matter for the department of state to handle diplomatically; but the United States will not interfere with the attempt of Mexico to manage her own internal affairs with regard to religion.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

They Can Be Swung They Need Swinging.

A prominent pastor writing to one of the Baptist exchanges, analyzing conditions among northern Baptists, comes to the following conclusion: "Were there no Baptist Bible Union, and were there no men like the self-advertised leaders of the Baptist Bible Union, meeting to corrupt the minds of the Baptists, by statements made, which are sometimes exaggerated in the extreme, it would be a comparatively easy thing to swing the Baptist hosts of the North to the conservative view, for the masses of them are conservative." Taking no account of the Baptist Bible Union as a factor in the calculation, the facility with which our people may be swung to "the conservative view," whatever that may mean, is a good deal like trying to induce water to run down hill. The swinging is already done. It is spontaneous. When you try to swing them to conservatism they beat you to it. Just stand aside and watch them.

We Treat too Lightly the Pennsylvania Case?

We grew somewhat satirical about the outcry raised throughout the country over the Pennsylvania election case. Some correspondents think we treat a serious matter too lightly. On the contrary, we were trying to show that the public concern over the case was itself a lack of seriousness. Business in politics for profit is one of the commonest of social phenomena in America. If the principle is wrong at all it is wrong always. To add to the utter comedy of the situation it seriously proposed to limit the expense of senatorial campaigns to $25,000 in order to safeguard the purity of elections! If public service is to be treated as private property, why should it not be bought and sold in the open market and go to the man with the longest purse? What is needed is a revolution in thinking and ethics. Government is in its proper nature the organization of the whole population for the common good. The state is a commonwealth. Election is a public function and its expense ought to be borne by the public. The spending of a single dollar of private money to influence an election or to pay the expenses of a candidate ought to be treated as a crime.

Protestantism Has No More Defender.

This time a new A. P. A. comes to the rescue of Protestantism. It is the American Protestant Alliance, founded by William H. Anderson, former Anti-Saloon League worker, with headquarters at 500 Fifth Avenue, New York. It is supposed to be inerrant, "immune," "bomb-proof," invincible. Its main purpose is to defend "Protestantism against 'political Romanism.'" And on your money. Perhaps no institution in the world can equal Protestantism in the amount of "defending," "protecting," and other forms of chivalrous championship it seems to require from its friends—at so much per month. Primitive Christianity, with the sword against it, was irresistible; some professed followers of modern Protestantism are jockeying it into a position in which it may seem almost indefensible. Give us rather a religion that needs neither a Catholic nor a Protestant old hen, but has sufficient vitality, spirituality and "go" to put the rest of the world on the defensive. Such quality is native to the Baptist movement. It is recommended to Protestants who suffer from the defense complex, and to those Baptists who have lost faith in the efficiency of the Holy Spirit.

Sauce for the Englishman Should Be Sauce for Everyman

World control and world service is the dual aim of an interesting society, the English-Speaking Union. Of the second item there will be no question, but the first is a challenge that will be taken up with vigor. Pan-Germanism found out what the world thought of it; pan-Anglicism is due to make the same discovery. Pan-humanism is the only thing that will work on the dual basis on this planet. But on the basis of cooperation in service, let all racial, linguistic and religious groups form world unions. Every language group represents a spirit and a traditional and cultural heritage that has value for the world. An organization for the purpose of preserving the best of that spirit and heritage may do something to enrich the human race. The notion that even a nation, in order to insure its security must eliminate different race, language and culture groups, is a false one. Welcome, for service but not domination, not only English, but also French, German, Chinese, Hindoo, Italian, and all other sorts of race and language world unions. The true civilization is a rich composite, and not a flat amalgam or an exterminator of cultures.

Why Should a Man Step on His Own Face?

Exchanges grow morally indignant over the amount of money spent in recent elections as discovered by the senate committee—over the amount, mind you, not the fact. Indeed it is seriously proposed as a great and needed reform to limit the amount that private interests shall pay for a public office. If one could laugh at a people's ruinous folly, the thing would be boisterously farcical. Having deliberately put the nation up to bargain and sale, politics and all, shall we now complain because we find that in a certain auction the bidding seems excessive? Of course the thing is morally, politically and otherwise socially pernicious, but put the blame where it belongs, on the people as a whole. One of the elementary truths of social science is that the political life of a people is controlled by its economic process. If the public service is peddled in the private market, inquire what put it there. Until the answer to that question is sought and found, the effort to stamp out corruption in the elections is like stepping on one's own face.

Piety Takes Many Turns But This One Is a Novelty.

The Kansas Record-Searchlight is a Baptist paper, organization of several denominational societies. It serves apparently a valuable purpose in the promotional activities of colored Baptists within its field. In the issue of July 9, it achieves a feat of sensational journalism. It streams across the whole first page the headline, "Dempsey Afraid to Fight Wills," and follows it up with a column of glorification of the colored champion. Everything said may be true, and such a tribute may gratify the pride of race, but as a contribution to the religious life it is original and unique.

The Trouble in Mexico

BY H. L. STETSON

RIGHTLY to understand the present trouble in Mexico it is necessary to begin with the invasion of Cortes. He and his followers, among whom were several Catholic priests, found and ruthlessly destroyed a civilization, which in many respects was not inferior to anything then prevalent in some parts of Europe. The natives of Mexico had developed a literature, a knowledge of the sciences, particularly of astronomy and architecture, that entitled them to the respect of mankind. They had established a government which served them quite as well as some of the Europeans were served by their respective governments. There was a well organized social structure which widely distinguished them from the savages of North America. In natural resources the land was rich, especially in silver and gold; certainly no other country surpassed it in these respects.

Cortes and his associates called themselves "The Conquerors" and were proud of this title. Their aim was to enrich themselves at the expense of the natives. Cortes said, "We have a disease of the heart which can be cured only by gold." It is impossible to estimate the extent of the wealth extorted from the Mexicans by the Spaniards. For this extortion, which was continued for 300 years, no adequate return was even attempted by Spain. Under her rigorous regime Mexico was impoverished and the people degraded intellectually and morally.

To some this condition became intolerable, and the revolt arose, which, led by Father Miguel Hidalgo, after eleven years of heroic struggle, resulted in political independence from Spain in 1821. This was the beginning of Mexican nationality. It was a great achievement to bring into existence under such adverse circumstances a new nation.

But political freedom did not bring deliverance from the dominance of the Roman Catholic church, which had been forced on the people by superior military power. It was the state religion, and no other was allowed. Its authority was absolute, and its hold upon the country is seen in its possession of fully one-third of its real estate. It had enormous revenues without any taxation and built great cathedrals and maintained costly, gorgeous rituals but did little for the development of the people. After 300 years of more complete absolutism than ever the Roman Catholic church had had elsewhere the people were in a lower state than they were at the coming of Cortes; 97 per cent of the people were illiterate.

In order that Mexico might have a fair chance to enjoy the rights and privileges possessed by other modern nations Benito Juraez, the "Little Indian" president, secured the adoption of the "Laws of Reform," which nationalized all church property. At once this aroused the hostility of the Roman Catholic church, and the authorities in Rome began to plot the overthrow of this legislation. The Catholic hierarchy turned to Austria and to Francis Joseph, the "eldest son of the church," for help. His brother, Maximilian, was selected to be emperor of Mexico and was foisted upon Mexico by French soldiers through the influence of the Roman Catholic church. It is noteworthy that Maximilian visited the pope on his way to Mexico and was blessed by him as the emperor of Mexico. (This outrage on Mexico terminated when President Lincoln sent his famous letter of protest to the French government.)

Though the "Laws of Reform" dispossessed the Roman Catholic church of its property they were not enforced, and the church remained in full possession of its old time power and continued much as it had for four centuries. The present contest between the state and the church is due to the determination of the government to enforce the constitution of 1857, which, restated in the constitution of 1917, and now effective, prohibits all religious organizations to own real estate, church or other buildings, to have funds invested in productive property to maintain convents or nunneries, to conduct primary schools, to administer charitable institutions, to solicit funds outside of church buildings, to hold religious ceremonies outside of church buildings, to clothe the clergy and teachers when on duty in any distinctive dress, to induce any minor to adopt any religious profession, to criticize the government, or to do anything which might impair its authority. Priests and religious teachers are required to register with the government. These are the restrictive laws; there are other laws which grant the fullest religious freedom. No country has more liberal legislation concerning religious matters than Mexico.

Some of the things which are apparent from Mexican history of the last 400 years are:

1. Foreign exploiters, especially from Spain, the United States and England, have taken from Mexico vast riches in natural resources without just recompense. It is not surprising that foreign priests, ministers and teachers should be forbidden to perform any public service since many Mexicans feel the land has suffered irreparable losses from foreign exploiters.

2. The Roman Catholic church has failed as an enlightening, elevating, ethically vitalizing force. An Italian newspaper correspondent, a Catholic, writing, after a special visit to Mexico, says: "Spiritually, Mexico is a country where at least four-fifths of the people still await conversion. The Indian masses are amorphous, and Christianity has hardly penetrated their ancestral paganism . . . The Indians are indifferent to both Christianity and politics. . . . The non-Indian population is equally indifferent to spiritual things. Religion is a superficial rather than a vital emotion, a practice rather than a conviction or a sentiment."

3. True to its history the Roman Catholic church has meddled in political affairs and has aroused thereby a deep animosity. President Calles says: "In Mexico from the time of independence to the present time the Catholic church has been a constant political problem . . . The government is attempting to end the ignorance of the Mexican working man. It is this ignorance which the clergy is attempting to use by fixing in the minds of our people the fact that the religion and the clergy are one and the same thing."

4. We are having a striking illustration of the claim of the Roman Catholic church that the state is the agent for the execution of the will of the church. Before the committee of foreign relations of the United States senate have appeared representative Catholics who have sought to have our government interfere for the relief of the people in Mexico. And the Knights of Columbus, at their recent national session in Philadelphia, adopted a resolution, calling "upon the president and the state department to put an end to this ignominious contempt which has been shown by Calles" for their religion. It is the old spirit of control of the state by the church to put in force whatever the church wants effected.

The Church, the Conscience of Society

BY JOHN A. HUTTON

"It is the very business of the church to be in conflict with the world. And every conflict of ideas sooner or later comes to be fought out on the field of human behavior. It is foolish to say that religious controversies are mere abstract discussions. Sooner or later what you believe concerning God decides what kind of man you will be, down to the last detail of your life.

The Christian religion had not been long in the world until people, especially its enemies, saw that it had come, not as a thing in the air, not as a thing which would be glad to stay in a corner, but that it had come, as the Lord himself promised, to send fire upon the earth, that it had come as a sword, cleaving through human souls and human institutions, creating darkness even, by reason of its own tremendous light. It was not long until everybody saw that Christianity proposed to have to do with everything.

People, for example, who have come to believe in God through Jesus Christ do not buy silver models of Diana of the Ephesians! As the soul of man advances toward the light certain trades must languish and die. Behold, I make all things new." Revolution is the essence of Christianity. For Christianity is the holy will of God making room for itself in the world. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that almost the first sign that Christ has come into the life of a man or into the life of a people is that a fight begins, what the Bible calls "the good fight of faith." The spirit of Christ in a man or in a people commits that man or that people to a career of dissatisfaction and amendment.

The Roman power at an early stage in the life of the church perceived that Christianity was a force with which it would have to reckon. A little later Rome perceived that Christianity was such a force that, if she did not put an end to Christianity, Christianity would put an end to her. It was not the stupid and licentious emperors of Rome who persecuted the church; it was the far-seeing emperors, the good emperors, the devout ones even, like Marcus Aurelius, it was they who cast the Christians to the wild beasts. Why? Because they saw, they felt with their whole being that Christianity was a spirit, a power, which, like the visible face of God, would one day make the whole fabric of Roman life intolerable. They fought Christianity to the death, but it was to their own death. By the year 306 the fight was over; the motto "In hoc signo, vincite," took the place of "Senatus populusque Romanus," and the cross took the place of the eagles on the banners of Imperial Rome.

We can see the beginning of all that in an incident which occurred in the church of Corinth and in St. Paul's ruling with regard to it. The fact that such a ruling could take place and could be condoned by a religious community shows us the moral corruption of those polyglot peoples to whom the gospel of the cross was first preached.

We may sometimes think that the attitude of the church of Christ toward certain things is too unbending, that it might all along have tried to hold human nature with a looser rein. We forget that the church of Christ is the only society in the world today which ever saw unqualified paganism on its own ground. The church has never forgotten what it saw, and its horror of it has found its way into every fiber of its life, into the documents of the New Testament, into its doctrines and sacraments, into its discipline and daily speech. It is this which makes Christianity almost morbidly suspicious of human nature by itself; Christianity recalls the terrible slough from which, with tears and blood, human nature in a measure was saved. Whenever a new movement arises in these latter days, which seems to encourage people to break away from the restrictions of a former time, which makes much of the mere gaiety of the senses; whenever any fashion takes hold on people which seems to pamper the body and to neglect the mind and spirit, the church of Christ, that wise old mother of the soul who has lived so long and has seen so much, cannot but be afraid, for it seems that we are once more tampering with a lock which holds down dreadful and subterranean things!

St. Paul had heard of a scandal in the church of Corinth. He had heard that the church, instead of condemning the scandalous person, had allowed him to retain his membership. How did the apostle propose to deal with the case? He had not a moment's hesitation: the man must be put out of the church! When we think for a moment we see that no other course was possible or is possible if the church is to be God's instrument in the world. The church may be small, it may be poor, it must be clean. The church is a society, and members are admitted upon terms. Every man knows that Christ stands for purity. Every man knows that if he is living in sin he has by that fact put himself out of the church. Every society reserves the right to say who and who only shall belong to it. Every society reserves the right to reject any one whose life or opinions are irreconcilable with its atmosphere and intention.

Observe the words in which the apostle announces his judgment: "In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, ye being gathered together." It is not to be an act of anger, or personal resentment. It is to be done in the name of our Lord, in the name of that holy and spotless one, that sinless humanity which the church lives to hold up as our ideal and as God's desire.

And then there follow, not reasons in support of this course (there was no other possible), but consequences which the apostle hopes will result from it.

In the first place this act of excommunication may save the man. And there St. Paul has with him the moral experience of all lands and of all times. There is no great drama in the literature of the world which does not enshrine this idea, that the only hope of saving the soul of a bad man is that he be found out. There is no great drama in the literature of the world which does not enshrine this further idea, that if a man is really sorry for his sin, if his heart is soft and sore about it, he does not care in the least that everybody should know, he prefers that it should be known; in the case of a really great soul he will insist that it shall be known. That is the unanimous insight of mankind on the psychology of moral recovery, that one who is repentant of his sin loves, for a time, the pain of exposure. That is the burden of all the great literature of the soul, through Augustine and Dante (bathing himself in the fire on the seventh terrace) down to the story of "Ned Bratts" and "The Scarlet Letter," and John Masfield's "Everlasting Mercy."

In the second place this dramatic judgment upon sin would purify the church itself. Not only would it purify the church to the extent of removing a manifest blot, but this public defence of certain final decencies would cleanse other hearts like a flame.

In the third place, by publicly condemning this open scandal, the church in Corinth would put itself in a right relation to the surrounding world. It would not be possible for outsiders to say that membership in Christ's church means nothing, that the moral code of the church is not higher than the general atmosphere of the world. On the contrary, they would be compelled to feel this rebuke by a society which is determined at all costs to hand on the hardly-won traditions of decency.

That is perhaps just what we are here for; that is what the church is, in its last and deepest idea. The church of Christ in its true idea is the intrusion and presence in this mingled world of ours of the revealed will of God with regard to man and duty. It is, in its idea and intention, the lamp of God shining in a squalid place until the day breaks and the day-star arises in all hearts.

Two great tests of scripture will confirm this ruling of St. Paul's, which at the same time will remove any feeling of hardness, severity.

Ambassadorship for Christ

BY THOMAS H. SPRAGUE

AN ambassador is the representative of a state or person, charged with a mission. He knows the mind of the one he represents, is in tune with him, carries out his behests and refrains from any course of action which might bring discredit or criticism upon him. As ambassadors of Christ it is our privilege and obligation to represent him in the world. Representing him we must be in thorough-going sympathy with him, radiant with his spirit, obedient to his commands and careful lest aught that we do bring reproach upon his name. Hence the honor, dignity and responsibility suggested by the words, "We are ambassadors therefore on behalf of Christ."

This ministry is unique. God has given "unto us the ministry of reconciliation to wit that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." Our mission is to induce the world to be reconciled to God. God is already reconciled unto the world. There is an old theory that God was angry, and would only be reconciled by administering punishment, that Jesus bore that punishment, thus reconciling God and appeasing his anger. But God loved the world before Jesus died. "He so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son." "Herein is love, not that we loved God but that he loved us and gave his son." God loves man and longs for fellowship with him. It is our responsibility to induce men to enter into that fellowship.

In seeking to reconcile men to God it is essential that we represent God aright. The world's knowledge of God comes to it through us. We are God's credentials. Therefore no stain should be upon us. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." "Let your light so shine among men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."

Professor Brewster has said, "No other living creature is one half as imitative as man." Here is a means of winning men to God more effective than our sermons, our organizations, our revival services, our mass movements—let God be seen in us. How potent is this method in the home where influence is mighty. Said a little girl, "My mother went in there," pointing to a room, "and she always

The first is the tremendous responsibility which Christ laid upon the church when he said, "Whoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven." The church of Christ is to be the conscience of the human race, casting its light or its shadow, giving its smile or its frown, its benediction or its reproof, upon human enterprises, fashions and motives.

The second test is that deep and searching saying of St. Paul's: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before into judgment; and some men they follow after." That is to say, there are open sins and there are secret sins. The open sins—such as drunkenness, licentiousness, and the like—these carry their evidence on the surface, and their punishment you can see coming even in this world. And yet these, in the sight of God, may not be the most heinous sins, for there are others, sins of the spirit—malice, envy, evil-speaking, hatred, treachery—sins for which it is harder for men to take blame, sins which do not seem to be punished in this world.

Wherefore let all our judgments be made with this qualification—that we are, when all is said, mysteries to one another; that God only can pronounce judgment and that he will.

came out with a shining face." Another said, "My mother lied to me. I shall never believe her again." Thus fellowship weal or woe the degree with which we fellowship with God will help determine the success we have in reconciling others unto him.

The field is the world. It is not confined to the walls of the church or the class in the Sunday school. Christianity is life, and all of life's activities must be dominated by the mission involved in ambassadorship. The church, the home, the school, business, politics, all should feel our influence for Christ. We must always be Christlike wherever we go. Dr. Maltbie D. Babcock said, "Society, no solitude, is the natural home of Christianity. The church is not to be built on glass posts for moral insulation but among the homes of common men for moral transformation. The place of need is the field of duty and though we are not to be of the world we are to be first and last in the world and for the world."

Choir Suggestions

BY I. H. BARTHOLOMEW

IF POSSIBLE, always be on time. The success of the work depends upon your punctuality.

If you are unable to attend the rehearsal or church service, inform the organist of your intended absence, so that proper choir arrangements can be made.

Do not make your attendance at choir rehearsal or church service a matter of convenience instead of one of the most urgent and sacred duties. Assist in maintaining a good choir attendance.

When you come to the choir room, robe in a quiet manner, select the processional, and be ready for the service. You need at least a few minutes to get warm or cool, to compose your body and mind, and breathe a prayer before the service begins.

Be devout in every attitude, and thoughtful for the comforts of others.

Under all circumstances appear serious and avoid being fussy.

All whispering should be avoided during the service.

The Devotional Life

Life without Problems

BY GEORGE EVANS

PROBLEMS are not an end in themselves. Each one is a key to an experience. A perception of that would make a great deal of difference to many sensitive people who are almost afraid to enjoy life, at any time lest by so doing they should sharpen somehow the contrast between themselves and the unhappy dispossessed. It was not so with Jesus. His personal experience of life with God was altogether joyous. It was the fact that men did not share his secret that made his sorrow. The two currents of experience are inseparable. It was necessary that he should share the wrong and sin of man and so know sorrow; it was even more necessary that he should present another and better way of life which men should come to recognize as the way of salvation, a life whose satisfactions neither hurt nor impoverished, because both acquisitions and sharings were directed by the goodness of God. With man, Jesus knew life as a problem; with God, Jesus knew life as a possession. Hence it is that he calls us to become as little children; bids us consider the birds and flowers. Jesus does not think we are as happy as we might be. He sees men so dominated by the problems of survival that they do not possess any experience worth surviving for.

The Problem of God

God was once the greatest of man's problems. He seemed an insoluble one. Primitive man could not get beyond making God in his own image. He peopled the world with spirits, and made up naive stories about them. By slow and painful stages the conception of one Creator was won. Then the prophets of Israel grasped the fact of his personality, and began to spell out his character. God had set man the problem of himself, but as the preparation to an experience. In Jesus we see God a possession. Jesus does not argue about God, he reveals him. We cannot discuss the fact of God with Jesus. No one passes into the experience of God by argument. Questions may be a preparatory discipline. Then a flash of light—and God is understood.

The One Reality

In the experience of Jesus, God is the one reality, the being in whom all the beautiful and lovable experiences of life have their origin. Fellowship with him is fellowship with them; and fellowship with them is fellowship with him. Jesus, in contrast with the learned rabbis and privileged priests about him, kept the heart of a child, and knew. God was life without a problem.

Once nature was altogether a problem to man. She was laden with wealth for him, but he did not know the simple ways of cooperation and patient work. For us, however, much of nature is now life without a problem. Unhappy are they to whom nature in her varied moods and ceaseless surprise is not a daily joy. For some the lakes and the heights, for some the seas, for some the moorland, for some the quiet spaces of the country where the birds sing unafraid, and where the hedgerows hide the wildflowers, and for all, one wishes, the joys of the garden. "All my hurts my garden spade can heal," says Emerson.

Timber and Tones

We place in the hands of children an instrument—a violin, perchance, a combination of timber, catgut, and hair—to get thence music, that is a problem. Yet for many the problem passes, and becomes a possession. We listen to Kreisler playing Bach's "Ave Maria," or to Heifetz giving Schubert's. Do we think then of timber and catgut? The notes are spirit and life. The soul has discovered an added medium of expression. Music is life without a problem. In like manner one may say that the craftsman's art and the artist's craft pass beyond the problem stage and become creative joy. And above all in the experiences of love and friendship, we know life without a problem.

If our road is through the desert, shall we refuse the oasis; if it call us to breast the steep, shall we make no halt, that we may sweep our eyes over the landscape where the corn is ripening, and flowers scent the air; if through tangled and pathless forest shall we hasten past the glade, where the sunlight dances on the green, and where the countless scents and sounds of earth mingle in the air?

Life has many phases, as a beautiful stone has many facets. To see life steadily and whole we need to pass from one to another. God is a maker of problems. He realizes his kingdom by making one aspect and another of unredeemed life a problem to the spiritually sensitive. We grow in soul only as with courage and faith we accept problems from God and share them with him. Because we are but in the making, and imperfect in body and mind, we have at periods to escape from the burden in sleep and recreation. And to these contrasted experiences, if we would be perfect, we must add another, we must share life with God in the regions where his reign is being realized.

Young People and the Kingdom

CONDUCTED BY EDWIN PHELPS, GENERAL SECRETARY, B. Y. P. U. OF A.

Meeting Helps" on C L. P. Topic for September 19

Note: The lesson for which helps appear next week concludes the 1925-26 series of the Christian Life Program topics. A new series of topics begins Oct. 3.

If you will read the chapter of "The Man Nobody Knows" by Barton, pages 89-123, you will learn briefly about what a great adventure this is which the Christian people have had. Read also the conclusion of "A Short History of the Christian Church" by Moncrief, pages 465-467.

If your delegates have not already reported the Baptist Young People's Convention at Los Angeles, this would be ideal time to have such a report. Before the keynote of the convention was "Adventure for Christ" the report would be particularly applicable to this topic would be an actual illustration of the adventure at there is still adventure left in the Christian church.

Our society had no delegates at the convention, perhaps you would like to have a copy of the report published. You may secure this by sending $1 to the Baptist Young People's Union of America (same address as THE BAPTIST). The report will tell ways in which the young people may "adventure for Christ."

Perhaps the best way to present this would be through a miniature convention session. The seats could be arranged in sections, as in a large hall. You could escort the young people to their seats. You might have placards with the names of states and provinces and the young people seated according to place of birth.

The meeting could open as most conventions do, with an instrumental number, followed by a song service. A period of devotions (called "prayer") could follow. The "address" which is next could be the topic presentation, given by a number of young people.

Each could give briefly the substance of some of the addresses as given at Los Angeles. In conclusion, the speaker might show that in all walks of life there is adventure for young people who really love Christ; that just as often times these "adventures" may seem mediocre and dull to the uninitiated, so our present-day adventures may seem uninteresting and commonplace.

But in later years these adventures of today will take on a more keen significance, the outcome whereof may be determined by many.

It would be well to use the convention song, "Lead On, O King Eternal" as the closing number.

Weonahome

By M. MERLE HOPTON

Weonahome—on beautiful Lake Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, a wonderful sand beach, the lap of the waves upon the shore, excellent bathing, a heavily foliaged mountain rising directly back of the camp—it was here that we held our summer assembly.

The day began with morning worship always led by some young person. Classes followed, full of information and interest. We learned more about vacation church schools, missions, church work, and Bible study.

After lunch came a quiet hour, then, recreation: swimming, riding the surf board, rowing, volley ball and other sports which were planned by a committee. It was in these hours that we made new friends and renewed old friendships.

Two interesting trips were enjoyed during the assembly. One was a seven-mile trip down the lake on a barge to a proposed assembly home. The other was an afternoon picnic at Beauty Bay.

A vesper service held each evening under a canopy on Sunset Point was inspiring. The hand of God was manifest in the beautiful sunsets at the close of the perfect days.

The inspirational addresses were full of spiritual food. They were delivered by two men and a woman of whose lives all have no doubt heard.

Each night our big bonfire was lighted and stunts, impromptu speeches, stories, and songs were in order. Then every one lost all dignity and became one of the happy crowd.

Aside from the regular Sunday services the Spokane district federation held its quarterly rally at which time an interesting report of the Los Angeles convention was given by our delegate.

vention was given by our delegate.

Doctor Johnson of Berkeley Divinity school delivered the last address and made an appeal for Christian service. The young people were impressed and left with a desire to do more fully and with greater consecration the work before them.

A total registration of 350 was reported, with seventy-five present for the full ten days. Our director of religious education, Rev. H. W. Vodra, spent every effort to make our assembly a success.

Young People's and Sunday-school Workers' Assembly

THE annual Baptist young people's and Sunday-school workers' training school and assembly took place July 13-19 in Valley City, N. D. It was held on the Chautauqua grounds and all the members lived in tents for the duration of the assembly. One hundred students were registered although many visitors came for short periods.

The study courses were the special features of the program. The faculty consisted of Dr. A. M. Petty of Los Angeles, Calif.; Dr. W. E. Chalmers of the Publication Society; Miss Helen K. Wallace of the Education Board stewardship department; Miss Hattie Petheram, missionary from Burma; Miss Myrtle Dahlby, nurse, Mounds Park sanitarium, St. Paul, Minn.; Rev. A. P. Mihm, Forest Park, Ill., general secretary of the German Baptist Young People's and Sunday School Union of North America; Rev. C. A. Armstrong, secretary of the N. D. council of religious education; Rev. Ellis L. Jackson, Page, N. D., director of recreation and supervisor of grounds; Mrs. Leon B. Shorey, instructor and dean of

(Continued on page 890)

BAPTIST SUMMER ASSEMBLY HELD AT WEONAHOME

Churches at Work

If your church has developed interesting and effective methods of carrying on its work, we shall be glad to have an opportunity of telling other churches about them through the medium of this page. Material should be addressed to the Board of Missionary Cooperation, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

NINETY-SIX NEW

MEMBERS FOR DURANGO

As a result of special evangelistic meetings in Durango, Colo., there were ninety-six additions to the Baptist church there. The church life has been stimulated and the members have voted to accept the missionary quota suggested by the state office. They have conducted the first vacation Bible school ever held in Durango, and captured the interest of the entire city with the work done.

NEW LECTURES AVAILABLE

Calls are frequently made for opportunities to see the budget of the Northern Baptist Convention in concrete form. Pictures are the thing; the stereopticon department is the answer. Stereopticon lectures make the budget concrete. Moving pictures show our missions at work and the greatest need just now is for money to increase these pictures. The stereopticon department has on hand more than 25,000 negatives of Baptist mission work. Prints are constantly being made for individuals and churches for use in meetings, mission study classes, parlor conferences, etc. Pictures make the budget real better than anything else.

"Yesterday and Tomorrow in Baptist Missions"

One of the greatest mission books of the year is "The Second Century of Baptist Foreign Missions," by W. B. Lippard, sixty cents in paper and $1 in cloth. May be had from any literature depository. "Yesterday and Tomorrow in Baptist Mission Fields" is an equally strong missionary stereopticon lecture written by Mr. Lippard, and now ready for booking in the following stereopticon depositories: New York, Boston, Chicago, Des Moines, and Los Angeles. The cut in the budget made it impossible to make as many sets as are needed. Therefore book early from the nearest depository, even if there is not a set in your state.

"Around the World in Forty Minutes"

Mr. Lippard has also written the lecture on this subject and the stereopticon department has it ready for booking in New York, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and San Francisco.

This lecture is peculiarly appropriate to a theme that will hereafter be announced for next January. Use the lecture in advance, if possible, to be ready for the January program.

SUCCESSFUL VACATION

SCHOOLS IN CONNECTICUT

An item in the Connecticut Baptist says that twenty-five churches in that state conducted vacation schools this summer and all of them have been successful beyond former years. Practically all of the churches this year financed their own schools, and it is noticeable that the churches which have assumed complete financial support of their schools are more enthusiastic and are doing a better type of work than when they were liberally assisted by the state convention. Some pastors who had never had any experience with vacation school work, and hesitated to assume the additional burden, are meeting with wonderful success and declare that it is one of the most joyous and fruitful experiences of the ministry.

HOW A PASTOR

SPENDS HIS TIME

Do you ever wonder what a pastor does with his time between sermon Here is a typical record, that of John Newton Garst of the First church of Spokane, Wash.

During the three years of Doctor Garst's pastorate at the First church, he has delivered and officiated at 801 sermons, lectures, addresses, funerals, and weddings, covering a number of different churches in the West, South, and East and clubs, lodges, summer assemblies and other groups. He has answered 2271 phone calls, had 1534 office interviews, sent out 3852 pieces of mail (in addition of those of the secretary made 4006 pastoral calls, witnessed 66 conversions and church additions, served on thirty-one important boards and committees, and traveled 22,128 miles in the interest of the church and the kingdom.

A SEARCHING COMMENT

From the calendar of the Baptist church of Cedar Falls, Iowa, we clip the following: "'Don't bring the kingdom of God in too fast'—that is what we are saying when we are not doing our full share in the church and everywhere for the cause of Christ. We should realize that God is calling us through the calls that come for service, giving, leadership, helpfulness. We should learn to see God in our actual tasks and duties. If we don't find him there, we shall not be able to find him anywhere. When we refuse to work and contribute, we are saying to Christ and the church, 'We don't wait to see the kingdom of God come in too fast.'"

A LITTLE CHURCH GROWS UP

In 1902, when Secretary Goodall of New Jersey preached his first sermon there were but four persons present in the one room building of the Grace church at Westmont, N. J. This church had a small membership and the pastor's salary was $7 a week.

Six years ago, the same church called Rev. Aquila B. England as its pastor and under his leadership, it has made rapid strides. During this time its membership has grown from eighty-nine to 215, its current expenses met from $1285.42 to $4217, and its giving for missions from $225 to $651. There is a thriving Sunday school, a boys' club (now the Royal Air Cadets), three wide-awake young people's societies, and active missionary societies, and ladies' aid.

ITY, NORTH DAKOTA, JULY 13-19, 1926.

The Chimney Corner

Marty's Way

BY CAMELIA MERRIAM

TY BARCLAY had had to go to a hospital. Unexpectedly, suddenly she had been afflicted and she had hurried her away to the Y-shaped red and grey building overlooking the park, with its white corridors, its white beds, its white-garbed and its clean, pungent odors.

"White City," Marty murmured while the pain turned in her side knife.

It was a serious operation. Things did not go right the first time and there had to be a second. It was two weeks before any one except Marty's husband, her mother and father could see her. But once the word went round that Marty Barclay could have callers came by twos and threes, all through the visiting hours with fruit and flowers and books—and condolences.

He was sure Marty's usually round, rosy-cheeked face was now a small white face with hollows in the cheeks, and her eyes were thin as a little child's. But her blue eyes, shining like stars, had a gleaming expression as she listened to fat, heavily breathing, bejeweled Mrs. Rover. "I know all about operations, my dear, I've had three. They're terrible, but you have my sympathy."

"But, Mrs. Rover," said Marty, "I don't believe it's sympathy I'm in need of—I—why—really it's congratulations that are in order. Think of those great doctors being able to do such wonders! I don't sympathize with me; congratulate me!"

Then came Miss Bedell, short-skirted, faded, her shallow blue eyes in her faded face seeming almost to gloat on Marty as she presented a book and stood herself beside the white bed. "Now, Marty, tell me all about it—in detail—just what they did to you—everything—I don't want to miss anything. You see I came within an inch of a nurse—and I've had an operation myself."

Just as though Miss Bedell had said: "Share your choice bit of carrion with me and I'll share mine with you." There's only one thing I'm going to tell you, Miss Bedell," said Marty. "The doctors have made me well—I care a rap about the details and I don't even you—is going to hear anything. I'm getting well so fast I can shout for joy, but you'll not hear an organ recital from me. I think it's of you to bring me this book. I especially wanted it. Did you know this author has a new one coming out?"

Marty changed the threatened

"organ recital" into a literary discussion in which Miss Bedell took keen delight.

And then came Fanny Kemball, looking like a tall drooping lily all in white, with a turned-down-at-the-corners mouth and great sad brown eyes.

"My dear, you have my sympathy," she murmured. "I know what it is to have to stay in a hospital! The noises, the inattention of the nurses—"

"Why, Fanny, what are you saying?" cried Marty. "I think a hospital is a blessed place. It's as quiet as can be considering what all's going on under this great roof—it's a city in itself, you see. And the nurses are dears! How they have cared for me! I haven't had a private nurse since the first week, but with this entire floor to keep an eye on for hours at a time, you should see how the night nurse watches me!"

Thus it went. To every caller Marty looked for congratulations—not for sympathy. She refused to discuss her operation—"Goodness, why should I when there are a million worth-while things to talk about!"

The minister's wife said that Marty had learned in whatsoever state she was therewith to be content.

The doctors said they had never had such a quick and complete recovery for a case like Marty's and the nurses replied: "It's because she's making herself perfectly happy here and every one else around her. She's not living over that."

Mystery

I SAT on the sand by the sea one day
And I watched for the turn of the tide.

I tried to see when the ebb changed to flow

As in grandeur it swept to my side.

Though marked I each wave as it rolled and broke,

And spread wide its white lace on the sand.

Discern I could not when the magnet held

As the tidal wave rushed up the strand.

Though eyes could not tell me when the tide turned

The signs I could easily trace

For its herald rode in on the freshening wind

And blew the salt spray in my face.

But what today seems mystery

Tomorrow may make plain.

For God sets all his wonders round

To stimulate man's brain—

So that he goes in quest of truth

To bring from the unknown

The proofs that by his searching he

May reach and make his own.

And as the tide both ebbs and flows

So as men fail, they learn—

For God shrouds much in mystery

That hearts for truth may burn.

—GERTRUDE B. WALKER in Boston Transcript.

operation with every person that will listen to her. It was just a means to an end, and its only the end and not the means she'll talk about."

And Marty in her inmost heart said: "I'll never tell a soul how I've suffered. There's enough real suffering and horror in life that can't be avoided. I'll not add one iota to it. I'm just going to continue raising my paean of thanksgiving for the miracle that has been wrought and for the goodness of those who wrought it—and when I talk, talk about something that's going to do somebody some good."

Keeping Down Mental Fat

"THERE are a million books. Nobody can read more than a small fraction of them. Ten thousand subjects are treated in books and periodicals. Nobody can know much about more than a score or two of them. There is no use trying to know something about everything," writes Will Payne in the Saturday Evening Post. "It can't be done. General reading will not take you a great way in any direction. I believe there is more satisfaction in going 100 miles on one road than in going one mile on 100 roads. In my opinion so-called general reading—planless and aimless reading—is the most pleasant diversion ever invented by man. I should have to hate a man bitterly before ordering him to give it up. But usually it involves only slight mental exertion. It is fine strolling, but I doubt that it keeps down the mental fat much."

"Half an hour a day, or every other day, of genuine study, systematized, directed to a particular subject, is all that I recommend, not to win a medal, but to make you happier and better able to live with yourself. If that habit is formed early in life, so much the better. Physical instructors say middle-aged or even elderly people have no need to give up on their bodies. I doubt that we have any need to give up on our brains. As to what a capital half an hour a day for ten years will lay up, consult any savings-bank pamphlet for examples of compound interest. If not to weigh 275 is worth a great deal of effort, not to let our craniums fill up with suet must be worth some effort. There are public libraries nearly everywhere. There are hundreds of good subjects. All we need is the initial push and some perseverance."

"Generally speaking, you don't want to be fair until you are grown up," says Stanley Baldwin. No, we never want to be more than half fare until we are grown up.

BOYS and Girls

Explorers, Prepare to Go to Japan!

By PEGGY

LAST week I told you how Uncletim got our family excited about Japan, and neither Bill nor Timothy nor I had the least idea what it was all about until Mother and Uncletim began to drop certain remarks about doll messengers. When we heard the details we became enthusiastic and that's why Miss Applethorpe wants you to know all about it, so, so that every girl and boy who reads these words may begin at once to send his or her representative to Japan some time before Dec. 15.

The people of Japan have a beautiful custom called the Festival of Dolls on the third of every March. It would be a beautiful thing if American children sent thousands of dolls to join the Japanese dolls displayed on that day, to serve as messengers and ambassadors of good-will and friendship.

If you want to join in this wonderful venture write to Mrs. J. W. Emrich, 204 Fourth avenue, New York, N. Y., in a folder called "Doll Messengers of Friendship" and also for "Suggestions for Teachers, Parents and Workers." And now I'll tell you more about this Festival of Dolls.

It always falls on Mar. 3, which is the first month of cherry blossoms.

Practically every family in Japan owns a doll festival set. Those belonging to the noblest of the aristocracy are of great age farmers or simple fishermen on the coast are humble, but as complete in essential details as those of wealthy nobles. The noble families of high degree even a prince of the imperial family. Every girl must be the manager and the overseer of her doll family on this annual visit.

Would you like to look inside a Japanese home during one of these three festival days and see how the dolls and their belongings are placed?

On one side of the principal room in a Japanese house is arranged a set of five steps, covered with red cloth. On these steps the dolls are placed, with the furniture and all the belongings of the festival. The highest step are two elaborately dressed dolls, the master and the mistress in ancient imperial costume. On the second step, on either side of a ladder-like stairway, stands a square flower stand of unpainted whitewood with artificial trees in poetic imitation of the two great trees on either side of the garden steps of the palace at Kyoto. On the third step are three ladies-in-waiting. On the fourth step is a group of five attendants seated before their instruments, and the remaining step holds the most precious household articles. These are daily cleaned and cared for by the little mistress, and she learns how to handle the delicate china, how to polish lacquer, how properly to wash a rice-kettle and how to care for every household utensil.

The doll family remains for three days, and the happy little mistress is busy all the time. The daily food is planned and purchased, if not really cooked by her, and she serves it to all who call to see the beautiful room.

During this season every fish-market is stocked with tiny fish; every bake-shop has a display of wee cakes; vegetable sellers bring the smallest vegetables that can be grown. All the shops display their smallest articles, and the streets look as if waiting for a race of fairies to come and begin their buying.

What Girls Can Do

The girls may select the doll, decide on and make the clothing. The entire group, including the boys, should choose the name for the doll. It will be interesting to note when all the facts are reported to the New York office, how large a variety of names have been chosen.

What Boys Can Do

The good-will project should not be monopolized by the girls. The boys can be business and ticket agents and act as treasurers. The children might earn the money necessary for the purchase of the doll, its clothes and traveling expenses. Each group might give a child's play or pageant to help earn the money needed. Boys can help in the business arrangements, in inviting the guests and in selling tickets of admission. Photographs can be taken of the doll holding the ticket and passport when it is ready for the journey. A photograph of the class might be taken and sent to the local paper with an account of what the class had done. The New York office would be glad to have copies of these.

What Teachers and Mothers Can Do

Teachers and mothers can make the doll messenger project the occasion of valuable education. The doll's destination, Japan, and the route of travel should be studied. Talks need not be limited to material from or about Japan but might include the whole orient. Resourceful leaders can devise ways of bringing in valuable information on these matters. The main value of this doll project lies in the opportunity of educating thousands of American children and their parents in international thinking and good-will.

Doll Messenger Week

The New York office is suggesting to local doll stores that the first week in October be designated "Doll Messenger Week" and that posters be displayed in the windows calling attention to the fact and to the doll messenger movement. The local committee can secure cooperation by getting in touch with doll stores and giving them some idea as to the number of dolls that may be called for.

The Good-will Message

Each class should prepare a message of good-will to be sent with the doll. This should be not more than 150 or 200 words in length, typewritten if possible. The children who have shared in the enterprise should sign the message. It should also give the name and address of the individual to whom the thank-you letter from Japan should be sent. A copy of this message and the names and addresses of all the children should be sent to the New York office.

An Invitation

COME, Dolls of America, you're asked to go

To a festival quaint, and you'd like it, I know;

So neatly and daintily dress in your best, And start on your travels with gladness and zest.

O come by the hundreds and thousands and more,

And journey along to a far distant shore

Where dear little children, with joy and delight,

Will welcome and love you, their eyes shining bright;

The words they will speak—very strange they will be

To dolls who have travelled from over the sea.

You'll sit as their guests and watch busy girls try

To learn how to keep their homes tidy—Oh my!

To make dainty dishes that you've never seen

With bamboo and seaweed and sweet pasty bean;

To bow to their guests in a low, proper way,

And practice homemaking as though it were play.

And often the neighbors and guests who attend

The festivities gay, will all praise and commend

The lovely American dolls who have come

Over land, over sea, far away from their home.

And they'll ask why it is that you dolls have been sent,

Then for answer you'll say that your coming was meant

To tell of the friendship and interest true

Of children whose flag is the red, white and blue,

For those who are living in cherry-bloom land,

To whom they would hold out a child's friendly hand.

And the spirit of childhood shall show us the way,

To friendship that lasts, and to peace that shall stay.

Among Ourselves

West China Letter

By JOE TAYLOR

IT WOULD be well for those readers of THE BAPTIST who really wish to know and understand China to study the geography of the country. It would save them from much misunderstanding of this country and its people. Take a good atlas and look up China and get acquainted with its size. See who her neighbors are, what kind of people live near her borders. Then pick out her waterways, see what her coastline is like and the magnificent harbors scattered along the shore from Port Arthur to Hanhoi. Notice the lack of railroads in great sections of the country. (Remember that those that exist are practically in the hands of the militarists and are being ruined by them.) Put in a few pins at the chief cities—do not stop at the coast provinces, but get into the country and mark these ganglia of trade and commerce. Then draw lines around different groups of provinces and remember that these groups are no more under the control of the "Central Government" than is Tibet.

When the Boxer movement had spent its force and the powers were gathered together discussing what was to be done with China, the inhabitants themselves were dreading "partition." They wanted their country to be left as one whole. John Hay earned the gratitude of all public-minded Chinese in his enunciation of the integrity of the empire. They were to be one people in one big country. Since that time what has happened? Just what the people dreaded but in another form.

Starting in the northeast, let us endeavor to get a bird's-eye view of dismembered China as she exists today. Chang Tso Lin has staked off Manchuria for himself and no man dares to say him nay. The central government, cap in hand, awaits his decision as to what shall be done in the three eastern provinces. He is slowly trying to extend his power and preempt more territory inside the great wall. He has so far failed in this endeavor and it is not certain that he will succeed in his present venture. He received the shock of his life when one of his generals turned against him and invaded Manchuria proper. He, or his subordinates, were fortunate enough to repel the attack and slay the general and his wife. Now Chang is, under the pretext of attacking Fung Yu Shiang, extending his power up toward Kalgan and the hinterland.

Fung Yu Shiang held sway in parts of north China and dominated Peking for a time. This he did by treacherously turning upon his superior, Wu Pei Fu, near Peking. Then he extended his grasp to the north while endeavoring to control Shantung. All went well for a time and Fung dictated the policy of the Peking government and put his satellites into office. During this time the customs conference came into being and if Fung could have held what he had grabbed, he and his party would have had the spending of the money derived from added customs receipts. This was too much for the other groups, so they combined against him and drove him out of the capital up toward Kalgan. Fung resigned the leadership of the Koominchuin and made off to Urga, a place dominated by the Russians, and the last word we have of him is that he is in Moscow. He got his armies and supplies away practically intact and any one who thinks we have heard the last of the "Christian" general is mistaken.

Through the defection of Fung, Wu Pei Fu was driven out of public life for a time, but has come back. He has control of Hupeh, Honan, Chili and part of Szechuan. Now he is trying to get Hunan into his power, for if he can do so, he gets a good "hop-off" for Canton. He is meeting opposition, however, as the national army is prepared to put up a stiff resistance in order to save its bailiwick from Wu. Here a little more geography and a study of the railroad system of China will show the importance of Hunan to both Canton and Wu Pei Fu.

Down in the southwest corner of the country lie Yunnan and Kweichow, the private preserves of Tang Chi Yao. He brooks interference from no one and would like to get hold of Szechuan. If he can be led to combine with Wu Pei Fu, it will make a drive by the militarist on Canton almost a surety. Yunnan soldiers are fierce fighters and would stiffen any army they entered.

Kwangtung and Kwangshi are now in the hands of the followers of the late Sun Yat Sen, but they have changed from "pink" to "red" since the death of their leader. They have been schooled by Bolsheviks from Russia. The Cantonese are the most wide-awake and progressive of the Chinese. They are experimenting with different forms of government; but they seem to be constitutionally unable to pull together. In intrigue and jealousy have thus far prevented them from successful cooperation. There is some talk about a drive against the north. Sun Yat Sen tried that and it ended in a miserable fiasco.

Sun Chuan Fang has announced that he has taken over the control of five provinces: Kiangsu, Kiangsi, Chechiang, Anhwei and Fukien, and that he will not allow any one, north, south, east or west to interfere with him. Neither Chinese nor foreigners will be allowed to meddle in the affairs of his section of China.

Sun has the advantage of getting hold of some fat revenues so can keep up his troops and give them more or less regular wages. If he would agree to join Wu Pei Fu and Chang Tso Lin, one might expect to see China unified by force, the political doctrine of Wu.

Here and there, there are bits of China left for the lesser lights to govern, or misgovern. Szechuan is at present the cockpit of rival forces, but one hears of little real fighting. Chungking has been through another stormy period, and Yang Sen and some other leaders are trying to drive a Kweichow general out of the province.

So we have boxed the compass, and find that China has been sliced up into several portions, not by the "imperial" foreigner but by her own militarists. No central government has any authority in any of these divisions. The cabinet, or some members of it, go through the motions of governing, but their tenure of office depends on the beck and nod of men like Wu Pei Fu and Chang Tso Lin. Meantime the extraliquity commission is being fettered at certain centers and shown tomes of law and newly whitewashed jails.

California Letter

By GEORGE E. BURLINGAME

Adventures in Understanding

STATISTICIANS estimate that the world's population, now 1,850,000,000 will double in sixty years. With that prospect before the human race, it is important that we master what James Russell Lowell termed "the fine art of living together." It follows that whatever anyone who promotes mutual understanding between folk locally and nationally, is an asset to society.

In One Spirit

When Baptist ministers have been together in an intimate fellowship of confidences shared, prayers united, and ideals affirmed, a finer understanding is developed and a stronger sense of unity is created. Camp Baldy, on the shady slope of San Antonio Peak in Southern California, is the place of "retreat" each year in September where for three days Secretary Harper gathers his loyal flock of pastors, general workers, and all other Baptist ministers who accept his invitation. Expenses for travel are pooled, and living costs are moderate. Biblical exposition, intercession, informal conference, and a modicum of discussion of denominational programs, fill the hours from noon Monday to noon Wednesday. The seclusion and remoteness of Camp Baldy conspire with the heart hunger of burdened ministers to make the gathering a source of spiritual power for the year's work. The dates this year are Sept. 13-15.

Northern California and Nevada will nite for a similar conference to be held at Berkeley, easy of access from all parts of the northern section of the state, Sept. 15-17. The day sessions will be exclusively for ministers. The evening meetings are planned to interest the churches generally.

Both at Camp Baldy and at Berkeley the chief theme for discussion will be evangelism, with specific relation to the program commended to the churches by the Northern Convention at the Washington meeting. It seems reasonable to hope that in this common enterprise and united endeavor, California and Nevada Baptists will find a "common denominator" for harmonious fellowship and fraternal confidence.

Building a Brotherhood

Nearly forty years ago a courageous adventurer left Kansas to find a more alluring (because a more difficult) field, in the far West. Save for two years at Tacoma, he has been in California ever since, characterized always by the same reliable and invaluable qualities: tireless diligence in the Lord's business, kindness and courtesy, unswerving loyalty to the New Testament gospel and its divine author, and a fine measure of consideration for the peace and unity of the body of Christ. Dr. W. F. Harper, pastor in turn at San Diego, Tacoma (Wash.), Redlands, San Jose, and Pomona, has been for the past eight years executive secretary of the Southern California Baptist Convention. Building wisely on the heroic achievements of his predecessors, Doctor Harper has in these years unified, correlated, enlarged and dignified the manifold missionary and educational work of the Baptists in this wonderland of the West. The "Annual" now on the press will reveal a growth and expansion doubly amazing in the light of the general slump in Christian missionary activities in recent years. That printed record may not, however, reflect clearly the attainment which distinguishes Doctor Harper's leadership and pastoral ministry as chief shepherd of Southern California Baptists: the promotion of cordial, fraternal and general cooperation and affection. He has been building a brotherhood during these eight years; and in this achievement he has had the constant and whole-hearted support of such outstanding leaders as Selwyn W. Cummings of Pasadena and Redlands, Frank O. Belden of San Diego andakersfield, J. Whitcomb Brouger of Los Angeles, George D. Knights of Long Beach, Ernest E. Ford of Glendale, and others like-minded who are committed irrevocably to "the ministry of reconciliation" and who use their authority for building up (as Paul phrases it) and not for casting down.

The Children's Crusade

Through four weeks in July 300 people met in a church house for twenty sessions of three hours each, and spent the time in friendly and enthusiastic participation in the program provided. Included in this number were representatives from the following sects: Mormons, Volunteers of America, Church of God, Christ's Church, Spiritualists, Seventh Day Adventists, Friends, Gospel Tabernacle, Congregational, Christian Science, Christian Advent, Disciples of Christ, Episcopal, Catholic, Nazarene, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist!

The secret of the amazing episode is the fact that this was a children's crusade in favor of understanding. The First church of San Diego, whose virile and aggressive pastor is Dr. John Bunyan Smith, conducted during July the most successful daily vacation Bible school ever held in that city. Maurice B. Hodge, the director of religious education and young people's work, supervised the school, which opened with 146, and never fell below 200 thereafter. Twenty-seven teachers and helpers led the varied activities of the 297 children who were enrolled during the term. The religious affiliation is given above. There were 109 Baptists; nearly three-fourths of the total enrolment came from outside the denomination which operated the school for the entire community as an adventure in understanding.

Seeing Red As it Is

A French senator sojourning in California, protests against the widespread custom of joking about the French franc and its pitiful downfall. There is indeed much warrant for the insinuation that we Americans are becoming "loony"—given to laughter and lightness about everything, like the unlovely bird incapable of a serious attitude. The Indian question might have been less of a national problem but for the ghastly and inhuman "joke" that the only good Indian is a dead Indian. A spirit of understanding and good-will such as John Eliot and Helen Hunt Jackson manifested, would have left many pages of our history free from the record of Indian wars and massacres and Custer battles.

A century ago a vigorous and influential Indian tribe moved from Mississippi to lands west of the great river, assigned to them by agreement with the federal government. They established themselves as the "Chickasaw Nation" in the Indian territory (now Oklahoma), following the customs and practicing the arts of civilized life; and through the missionary efforts of American Christians they became Christian and promoted the institutions and ideals of that faith.

Last year a young woman of this tribe was graduated from the University of Redlands, the Princess Ataloo ("Little Song"). She is now in Columbia university majoring in religious education for a Ph.D. degree, and also acquiring an education in music. Next year she joins the faculty of Bacone college, a Baptist home mission school which for nearly fifty years has been a powerful educational and spiritual agency for the promotion of Christianity among the Indians of that historic Indian territory.

An Overseas Overture

When the steamship "President Lincoln" leaves the Golden Gate Sept. 18, among her passengers will be Dr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Skevington of the First church of Hollywood, Los Angeles, adventuring to China and Japan on a mission to promote understanding, mutual respect and confidence between the Christians of the Orient and those of America.

Doctor Skevington bears credentials from the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society as a fraternal messenger to our mission stations in China and Japan. His own interpretation of his mission is as follows: "I hope first of all to 'stiffen the morale' of the missionary force on the field through a ministry of encouragement and assurance; to interpret to the native Christians the spirit and ideals and objectives of America and especially of American Baptists; and finally to make a careful study of existing conditions, problems and tendencies in our missionary enterprises in the Orient, and report my findings and conclusions to the home churches next year."

Doctor Skevington possesses qualities which fit him for this three-fold ministry: a genial spirit, a penetrative insight, an alert mind, an intimate and sympathetic acquaintance with the inner life of the denomination and its administrative agencies, and an ardent interest in the vital truths which compose our common heritage as Baptist Christians. He and Mrs. Skevington have a big stake in the missionary enterprise in the investment of their two daughters, their only children, who are in West China, and who constitute the final goal of the journey. Missionary H. J. Openshaw of Chengtu will meet the travelers at Shanghai and escort them on the long perilous trip up the Yangtse river for their tour of the West China mission fields. They plan to reach San Francisco on their return next April.

Detroit Baptist Doings

By ALBERT H. FINN

DETROIT has recently been the victim of disturbing and unfavorable publicity. Because of its outstanding prosperity it has attracted moral and criminal vultures of world-wide society, who have thought it was easy money here. Detroit is not exactly money mad, or even degraded beyond its sister cities, from a moral standpoint. Much of its sin is foreign to its citizenship and unwelcome.

Let me tell you briefly of the real Detroit, of the aggressive campaign of summer evangelism that is being carried on by Rev. Mr. Colegrove and his team, under the auspices of the Detroit Council of Churches. This is no new thing, it is the every-year plan and program that each year is better and more effective. Mr. Colegrove was successful last year in his out-of-door appeal to the down-town crowds. This year with better equipment an even more effective work is being done, as Mayor Smith has arranged for more advantageous opportunities. Not every preacher can make an effective evangelistic appeal to the masses that congregate in the down-town areas on summer evenings. Mr. Colegrove has been successful and takes joy in the opportunity. "Dragging the Net" brings to his immediate care and attention many pathetic cases. The gospel meets the various needs as nothing else will.

Along the six mile circle to the west of Woodward avenue has been an earnest band of believers that has maintained a struggling mission church. Recently the group requested of our Baptist organization that it be recognized as the Blessed Hope church. A council recommended assistance to the Detroit Baptist Union. Doctor Gleiss had already visited the church and took an interest in the little congregation. They needed several things—financial assistance and more. To this end Doctor Gleiss gave them two weeks out of his time for a series of evangelistic meetings, and as a result there were eighteen reconsecrated lives, ten conversions, twenty additions to the church, and other helpful results. The Detroit Baptist Union has voted to take the property over and re-finance and aid the group to a more permanent work.

North of Royal Oak there has been a struggling church, for three years known as the First church of Halsey. It is a growing section but wise and aggressive leadership was needed. So "Church Invigorator" Sims was secured, and began his ministry July 1. Special meetings were started and already twelve additions have been made, ten by baptism. Tuesday, Aug. 3, the church gave a dinner which was largely attended. Pastor Sims challenged the company to rise and complete the church building at a cost of about $10,000. At the tables between $2000 and $3000 was given and subscribed and the Detroit Baptist Union enlisted in the building enterprise. Plans have already been prepared and the enlarged house of worship will probably be ready for occupancy by Christmas.

Adjoining the Baptist children's home at Thirteen-Mile and Townline roads in Royal Oak, the Detroit Baptist Union has a site for a future church—a full acre on the corner of these well-known roads. A mission under the pastoral care of Rev. M. O. Keller has been established in this rapidly growing neighborhood.

Our mission churches, especially our foreign speaking ones are having splendid gatherings this summer. The new Hungarian mission in Highland Park, under the leadership of Rev. M. Dulitz, has more than doubled its membership. Its concluding service of the daily vacation Bible school proved to be nearly three times the capacity of its store front house of worship. A new and larger building is imperative.

The Russian church has by vote and change of charter come into full fellowship with our Detroit host. Conversions and additions are crowding it out of its building, and a movement is on for a new and larger site and building.

The Third Roumanian church had the largest vacation Bible school of the thirty-five in Detroit Baptist churches—over 300. A new site and new building are imperative.

The beautiful new Dexter Boulevard church is to be dedicated the week of Sept. 12. Doctor Rittenhouse, of the First church, Columbus, Ohio, will preach the dedicatory sermon.

Building plans are under way for Fern-dale, Grand River, River Rouge and Bethel churches.

The New Hope (negro) church will take possession of its new house of worship—Bethel's home for years, Aug. 29. This places New Hope in an enviable position.

Letter from India

By W. L. FERGUSON

"ARMA VIRUMQUE CANO"—"I sing of the man and his arms," said Vergil; and so do I, but not the same sort of man the poet had in mind when he wrote the Aeneid. He wrote of warriors, feats of arms, and exploits in love and city building; I write of missionaries of the gospel and the works of God done through them. In these days when nationalism is in the fore it is seldom that a foreigner receives appreciative recognition from the non-government press for any service which he may have done in India. The other day, I came across an exception to this general experience. But the appreciation is tinged with a bit of criticism, objection that the missionary seeks to gain adherents to the Christian faith, for that is the meaning of the word "proselytizing," having converts turn from Hinduism to Christ. With this understanding of the exception made in the praise of the writer, who is the editor of the Indian Social Reformer, we read: "While we have always deprecated the proselytizing activities of Christian missionaries in India, we have seldom failed to give them their due meed of praise in their work in the social, educational and medical spheres. In fact, organized social work in India can be said to date from the advent of the Christian missionaries. In an address delivered before the East India Association, London, the Rev. C. E. Wilson of the Baptist Missionary Society made a survey of the work done by the society. Practically one-tenth, or 12,000, of the foreigners in this country are missionaries; 6000 belong to the European and American Protestant church; 3000 are Catholics, and about the same number own allegiance to other religious orders. In the linguistic sphere missionaries have been pioneers in giving literary form to numerous Indian languages, notably those of the hill tribes. Missionaries have been first in newspaper enterprise, and the starting of newspapers dates back to 1818. The fact that among the five million Indian Christians, there are 353 per thousand literates among men and 210 per thousand among women as compared with 139 per thousand and twenty-one per thousand literates among men and women throughout India, speaks much for the quality of education imparted in missionary institutions. For medical relief, the missionaries have 224 hospitals with 5000 beds; and numerous dispensaries and leper asylums. In the social and humanitarian sphere their temperance and prohibition propaganda alone entitles them to the lasting gratitude of the Indian people. This is a record of work of which any society can be proud, and it is hoped that Christian missionaries will long continue their beneficent work in India."

Good though this praise may be, as evidence that missionaries have been useful and hard-working, the part that strikes me with the greatest force is what is locked up in that word "proselytizing." That tells me that the writer, the praiseful words is willing to take all the fruitage of the gospel, but objects to Him who is the source of it, even Jesus. Indirectly the writer has testified that the missionaries have been true to Him and that the making of converts has been the main purpose of the missionary enterprise. It has been; it is; and it will continue so to be. But "the offense of Christ and the cross" has not ceased.

Let me give a glimpse of the evangelistic methods employed on the Kandukur field, that portion of the South India mission which was turned over to the Telugu Baptist Home Mission Society years ago, where the Rev. P. Abraham, one of our most faithful and successful Telugu co-workers, is in charge. Mr. Abraham writes: "I am glad to report a successful tour in this hot weather. We have had 186 baptisms, eight of whom are Malas from one village. I am hoping for a real break among these people soon. We selected chief centers and held meetings in each for three days and three nights. During the day we rested practically, but we had meetings the whole night. I stopped with the Sudras, and in every village they received us with joy. In every case they gave fodder for the bullocks, and in several cases, food to me and to those that were with me, about fifteen workers in all. It is astonishing how they sit the whole night and listen—men, women and children. People from ten to twenty villages around the center came in numbers and heard the gospel. We had an attractive program for three days—rather, nights. The first two nights we had two Christian dramas enacted, and the third night we had Christ's story sung in kalakshapam" (a continuous narrative in poetry composed in classical style, but explained in common speech by the singer, verse by verse. The method is to sing to the accompaniment of music a few lines, then stop and explain; then sing some more, stop and explain; and so on to the end of the story). "The dramas on the first two nights prepared the people for the third night when we had usually the largest crowd to hear Christ's story. Every night from 500 to 1000 people heard our message. I can tell many stories of how the gospel is appreciated by the Hindus. I left the children in Ongole, with my father-in-law, so that I might be able to tour without anxiety. God blessed the work wonderfully. We enjoyed the work although the heat was excessive (from 100 to 115 degrees in the shade daily) and there were unusual hot winds. Moreover, we were pressed for money because of no salaries for three months.

in the face of all these difficulties God carried on his work. I hope to have another occasion in the near future of coming to Madras to tell of the experiences of our tour. Pray for us and encourage people in the church to contribute for this work liberally." If that letter does not warm and stir your heart, what will?

"Bishopville," Vepery, Madras.

Open Doors in a Rural Parish

By EDWIN E. SUNDT

ONE of the problems in a rural parish is to respond adequately to all the opportunities. The man who cried: "There is nothing to do here; let's find a larger parish," did not realize how dead his vision was. We need men with enough vision and evangelistic fervor to see and to grasp the situation today.

The Gate "Beautiful": Fellowship

The average rural parish is scattered over miles of territory; its population is heterogeneous with many languages and nationalities. Racial, economic, and social boundaries complete the divisions. But men need fellowship, and they seek it. Thus, in every parish are smaller groups which minister to man's social needs. The difficulty is that this fellowship is inadequate morally and spiritually. Often it is divisive because it is exclusive.

This is the church's opportunity. Fellowship is the gate "Beautiful" through which community spirit, common interests and Christian ideals may be cultivated. No program will meet the need. Let a committee study the situation carefully before any action is taken. Be sure to take every group leader, regardless of church connections. Let the ambitious pastor-lead direct this community fellowship program from an obscure position. It may not result in increased church attendance, or membership, but it ought to create better understanding and good-will. The important fact for a church to realize is that it is the church's duty to respond to the need and lead the community in Christian fellowship. There is no organization in rural fields better equipped to do this. The rewards of such a program for young and old, Protestant and Catholic, will be rich.

The Gate "Golden": Religious Education

This is the call for Christian education. Begin with the children. The writer now conducts a Church vacation school in a church of sixty members; enrolment is eighty-five with an average attendance of seventy-five. We arranged to send a school bus and transport daily over fifty children from points ranging from three to six miles distant. Our roll call sounds like a roll call in Central Europe; there are thirteen nationalities. Many children had never entered a Christian church before; some had never seen the Bible or heard it read! What a golden opportunity to carry the message of love, forgiveness, brotherhood and Christ. Here susceptible minds absorb scripture texts and Bible stories; here friendships are created and loyalties born; here the hymns of the church are sung with enthusiasm and conviction.

The public school offers an opportunity. In many schools there is no Bible reading, no religious teaching of any kind. The example of the teacher is often unwholesome. Shall the church continue to ignore this challenge? Would it not be better to try to prevent moral breakdowns in children by teaching them Christian virtues and ideals, than to condemn them after they have committed wrongs? Most school boards would permit the minister to use the building for the purpose of teaching religion.

In rural parishes the stereopticon attracts people, especially children. The writer has carried the "lantern" into private homes, far off the beaten tracks, and there unfolded the story of Christianity. People appreciate this type of "religious education." These are fields almost untouched and unexplored in rural churches. What better project could young people undertake than this sort of work?

In the economic problems of the home the church faces another "open door." To bring to the struggling farmer better methods, new ideas and labor saving devices is a part of the modern Christian's task. Our missionaries in foreign lands have carried this on for decades. Why not at home? There are "farm bureaus" and state colleges which would furnish aid.

The Gate "Essential": Evangelism

There is no question in my mind concerning mass evangelism. As far as the rural churches of New England are concerned, it has ceased to be a charm. But there is a new evangelism which seeks to reach the identical results, namely, the conversion of individuals to Christ. It is founded upon action, rather than words; deeds rather than preaching. It is the evangelism of friendship; it seeks to love men into God's kingdom; fellowship and education are its main avenues of entrance. By actual, living contact, by personal touch, mutual interests, sharing of burdens, it seeks to win all men to a definite Christian life.

Such evangelism as this will require tact, common sense, patience and longer pastorates. The fruit will ripen slowly. There is not likely to be any mass ingathering. Those who are won will be permanent. Many men lack the stamina that such evangelism requires. It is comparatively easy to have it "all over in a month or six weeks." The new evangelism must be deeper, sincerer. The church must win souls by ministering unto them. It must make its life so essential and vital in the community that all will recognize its moral leadership and spiritual fervor. Preaching will continue to have its function, but vastly more important will be preaching by doing, before the eyes of those whom we can not get inside the church today.

It happened on Decoration day. Early in the morning a woman got on a street car with a basket of plants. The conductor helped her to her seat. At the South Side cemetery he walked back to her, picked up the basket and escorted the woman to the door and handed her the basket. He was whistling softly a little tune. Perhaps he himself would not remember it, but the editor does, for the tune whistled was, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Perhaps he was thinking of the second stanza: "Are we weak and heavy laden, cumbered with a load of care?" I don't know that conductor, but this world can use a lot more men like him.—Inner Mission Worker.

Simon the Cyrenian Speaks

By COUNTEE CULLEN, A NEGRO POET

*HE never spoke a word to me,
And yet he called my name;
He never gave a sign to me,
And yet I knew and came.*

*At first I said, "I will not bear
His cross upon my back;
He only seeks to place it there Because my skin is black."*

*But he was dying for a dream,
And he was very meek,
And in his eyes there shone a gleam
Men journey far to seek.*

*It was himself my pity bought;
I did for Christ alone
What all of Rome could not have wrought
With bruise of lash or stone.*

Want Ads

Win-go (soluble naphtha) mixes with soapy wash water, loosens dirt and grease, saves time and wear on clothes. Local sole distributors make steady income from satisfied users. Free sample and information from Winnebago Chemical Works, Box 1175, Rockford, Ill.

Wanted—By a young woman, position in religious education work or as pastor's assistant. College and training school graduate. Four years' experience. Satisfactory references. Address T. E. A., The Baptist.

Needed: in a Southern Mission School, a trained, experienced bookkeeper, interested in Christian work. Apply 140 W. Lehigh Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

Baptist minister wants pastorate. Organized, experienced, trained and married. Preferred location, Illinois or Iowa. Small churches. Write H. care The Baptist.

Church Builder—We have a man of rich experience who is capable of leading some church in need of a new building. His experience in this line has made him a specialist. He will save some church worry and expense. Write The Baptist Evangelical Bureau, South Solon, Ohio.

Here, There and Everywhere

THE PULPIT SUPPLY for the month of August at the First church, Peoria, Ill., was Rev. David Gustafson of East China. Since arriving in America Mr. Gustafson has given about fifty addresses on missions and the present situation in China.

CHARLES ENTNER, a recent graduate of the Bethel academy as well as the Bible and Missionary training school, will have charge of the church in Campbell, Minn., during the coming year while attending Fargo college, North Dakota.

PASTOR AND MRS. RUFUS KEYSER of the new West Hollywood church, Calif., have seen a remarkable growth in their young peoples' classes. Mrs. Keyser has the young

"THIS is station WCOY (We Count On You), broadcasting from the office of THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

"Our old friend Elijah Squirk from Swank Creek drifted in the other day. He had just returned from a trip and wanted to tell us about it. As we recall it, the following is the drift of his story:

'Obe Pulverizer an' me sold a carload of beef critters right off the grass early in July. I had promised Mrs. Squirk that we would take in Yellowstone park if our check reached a certain figger. Sure enuf when it comes back from the commission house, I saw where I was stuck for the trip. We drove out in the flivver so's to see the country better. Jest 'fore we gets to the park, we sure had one grand surprise.

'Right below Chico Hot Springs as we wuz a-wheezin' along up the Yellowstone Trail toward Gardner, ma says, "Lije, I bleeve we're goin' to run into a funeral." Sure enuf, there comes about fifteen cars in a string. We pulls off to a side to let 'em pass when all to onct the whole kapoodle turns off to the east and disappears into a gorge in the mountains. "Land sakes," I says to ma, "What a place fer a graveyard."

'When we gets up to the pint where the percession turns off the trail, we sees a big sign with an arrow six feet long a-pintin' up the canyon, readin': "BAPTIST SUMMER ASSEMBLY." Well, we never heerd of buryin' Baptists in sich a place. So I says to ma that we will jist step on the gas an' follow the percession. It was a fine road up the crick but the grade made the flivver boil to beat the band.

'We caught up to the last car just as it crossed a log bridge over the crick where the road ends in a park-like place with pine-covered peaks a-jabbin' into the sky all around. Instead of a graveyard, we sees eighty-five of the liveliest young people hoppin' out of them cars. They were part of the Baptist assembly that had been out to Chico for a swim in the plunge. Before we could back out we wuz surrounded an' had to stop for the nite.

'Doctor Curry, the state superintendent, an' Mrs. Curry made us welcome. We backed the car under a pine tree and were invited to supper in a great slab-covered hall that would seat 300 people. We didn't seem to notice any one whose appetite was puny. The crick was a-bilin' over the stones and the evenin' breeze made a purrin' song in the pine tops.

'We'd often heerd about Dr. A. M. Petty an' here he wuz. He says he just had a wonderful case of heelin' an' all them kids was sure strong fer him. An' here was a missionary named Curtis all the way from India an' a Miss Chapin on her way to Shanghai, China. An' a Doctor Chalmers that was joshed a-plenty about his bald head. An' there was a trained nurse from the Northwestern hospital at Saint Paul lookin' cheerful-like in her white slip an' cap.

'Well, bleeve it or not, if here wuzn't 125 of the happiest, laughenist, most serious young people we ever laid eyes on. After the evenin' program in a big tabernacle with a great roarin' log fire a-goin' in the fireplace, they all assembled around another log fire out in the open and there they said their prayers and sung the sweetest hymns ma an' me ever heerd. Then the moon came through the pines and away on the distant peaks it was a-shinin on the snow.

'Yep, we sure did. Stayed couple days. Never met a finer bunch of people in our lives. Lot of pastors there, too: Van Engelen, Shaw, Clutterbuck, Shannon, Huxly, Sumrall, Jones, Reece, Danley Longenecker, Nelson, and others. Everybody wuz fer the assembly. They had put over $5000 into improvement there in less than two years. An' every pastor an' worker there took THE BAPTIST weekly paper, and seemed proud of it.

'The mornin' when ma an' me wuz a-leavin' Mill Creek canyon, I says to ma: "Well, a graveyard is an assembly grounds fer dead ones. But these Montany Baptists is about the livest bunch I ever see. An' shure as shootin' they know what's what among Baptists even if they do live a long ways from each other." "Well Lije, what kin you expect," says ma, "when so many of them read THE BAPTIST? There ain't no effect without a cause, is they?" she says. But I had to watch the road powerful close as we wuz a comin' out and all I could say to ma wuz: "Well, you said it."

"WCOY now signs off. We've asked Lije to drop in again."

women, Mr. Keyser, the young men. Though they started these classes less than a year ago over sixty have been enrolled. Aug. 8 the pastor baptized six of his young men.

HOWARD A. VERNON, pastor of the Judson Memorial church, Minneapolis, spent part of his vacation attending the University of Chicago. While there he supplied the pulpit of the Englewood church for three Sundays. Church services and Bible school sessions during the past year have been so largely attended at Judson Memorial church that it is necessary to build the second unit of the church, plans for the addition and for financing it are under way. Mark F. Sanborn, former pastor of the church, and now pastor of First church, Detroit, Mich., spent his vacation with his family at Lake Koronis, Paynesville, Minn., and supplied the pulpit of the Judson church for the three Sundays, Aug. 15, 22 and 29.

JOHNSTON MYERS who preached two Sundays each in Mount Clair, N. J., and Brooklyn Temple was welcomed back at Immanuel church, Chicago, Aug. 22. Pastor Robert V. Meigs is on his vacation. Twenty-three new members have recently united with the church.

THE FIRST DAILY VACATION SCHOOL held in the capital of Maine was conducted by the Penney Memorial United Baptist church of Augusta July 6-23. Twenty-one officers and teachers were enrolled in the working force; enrolment of children from 4 to 12 years of age was 120. Mrs. Ralph Herrick was principal of the school, and several public schoolteachers rendered valuable service. The pastor, Dr. William R. Wood, gave illustrated Bible story talks. Mrs. Wood was principal of the primary department.

Church Furniture

Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture
· Sunday School Seating

American Seating Company

Catalogues on request.
General Offices—1069 Lytton Bldg.
CHICAGO

"Pews, altars and pulpit from the largest exclusive church furniture factory. Write for catalog and particulars. Manitowoc Church Furniture Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin."

CHURCH FURNITURE

Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1117 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

BAPTIST OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Maywood, Ill. Rev. L. T. Foreman, Ex. Sec.

Nearly a score of years of blessed service. Fifteen thousand days of kindly ministry to worthy aged people every year. Seventy-five requests yearly for rooms. Require new building for 150 people at once. Gifts gladly welcomed for our $250,000 goal.

PICK UP THE DOLLARS RIGHT AT YOUR DOOR

Right in your community are hundreds of dollars you can earn in a few weeks' time showing the New Indexed Bible—the finest Bible published. It sells on sight to ministers, teachers, students, and all who love the Bible. Nothing like it. Start now—today. Learn what others are doing and get my special offer to you. Address
G. H. Buxton, Pres., 21 W. Elm St., Chicago, Ill.

MOTHERS OF NEW ENGLAND, are you caring for your orphans? Is there a C. W. C. organization in your church? Do you realize that one of the most important duties of the Ladies' Missionary Circle is to promote and sponsor the work of the Children's World Crusade? Information regarding this work will be gladly given by Mrs. Ralph T. Andem, 72 Pecasset Avenue, Providence, R. I., C. W. C. secretary for the N. E. District.

MEMBERS of First church, El Dorado, Kan., M. O. Clemmons, pastor, have been "climbing the Galatian mountains" during the month of August. Morning and evening asked for some timothy seed. The merchant told him he had better get alfalfa because he could cut it three times a year. "No," replied the Indian, "I want timothy seed. When we cut grass, we want it stay cut." These Baptists want a little church-going to go a long way. They want one service to last a whole week.

W. R. JEWELL reports that a fine summer assembly was held at Green Lake, Wis. The total enrolment was 240 with about 150 students taking the entire course of ten days for credit. The assembly was under the management of state director Rev. C. Clayton Browne. The dean of the assembly giving their names and some information about them.

HOWARD L. VAN NESS was ordained July 24 at Lawton, Mich., on recommendation of a council composed of twenty-four members of the Kalamazoo River Association. Dr. G. S. Young of Kalamazoo was moderator and J. E. Lutell of South Haven, clerk. Parts were taken by Evangelist J. J. Payne; Dr. G. W. Taft of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary; Dr. C. C. Nilleet, and Rev. W. W. Meyer of Paw Paw.

REV. BEN L. BAKER and family of Chaowchowfu, China, will spend the re-

FIRST CHURCH, ELDORADO, KANSAS

giving the pastor has been taking them to mountain heights — Lookout Mountain, Mt. Sinai, Mt. Calvary, Mt. McKinley, Mt. Atlas, Pikes Peak, Mt. Olivet and Mt. Everest.

REV. W. R. BARBOUR, pastor of the church at Rio Grande, Ohio, has resigned. During the period of his service as pastor membership increased one-fourth and contributions three-fourths over previous years. Pastor Barbour was not only pastor of the local church but also student pastor in relation to the students in Rio Grande college.

THE UNIVERSITY of Redlands, California, at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees reaffirmed its faith in the great doctrines of the Bible as interpreted by the Baptist founders of this institution, and at the same time the committee put on record the requirement that no teacher shall be employed unless he has sympathy with the faith.

REV. D. W. HURLBURT, long associated with the work in Wisconsin, preached his last sermon Aug. 6, 1876, in Seville, Ohio. Exactly fifty years later friends in Wausau, Wis., celebrated with special "eats" and other tokens of congratulation his fifty-year ministry. Doctor Hurlburt is still preaching vigorously and has more than 100 sermons to his credit.

REV. J. S. KIRTLEY has become acting pastor of the Ashland Avenue church, Toledo, Ohio. He began his work there Aug. 15.

ARE YOU a "Timothy seed" Baptist? An African man went into a hardware store and bly was Prof. Stanley Ross of Wayland academy. Fifty-two of the students joined the Life Service League. Life service addresses were given each evening by the camp pastor, Rev. Rollo Speer of Tabernacle church, Milwaukee.

ALFRED LARSON, a Bethel student, who is preaching in Grand Marais, Minn., reports that the church is undertaking a building project. The new building will be ready this fall. Evangelistic services conducted by the pastor began Aug. 8.

GUSTAV A. FRIEDENBURG was ordained at Meriden, Conn., July 28. Rev. G. H. Schneek was moderator and Rev. J. Kaaz, secretary of the council. Prof. Otto Koenig delivered the ordination sermon. Other parts were taken by Rev. B. N. Timbrie, Rev. Berger and Rev. G. H. Schneek.

NEXT MONTH nearly 5000 students will take up their work at the Iowa State college, Ames. Fourteen hundred of them will be new students; scores of these will be Baptists. It will mean much to them and to the university pastor, R. B. Davison, Ames, if pastors and parents will write,

A GRATIFYING INCOME

Missionary Annuities have been attractive to hundreds of Baptists. Constant inquiries are made concerning them. Have you the facts?

When making wills please remember the corporate names of your national missionary organizations:

The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Rev. P. H. J. Lerrigo, M. D., Home Secretary (re annuities); George B. Huntington, Treasurer, (re wills), 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society, Charles L. White, D.D., Executive Secretary, 23 East 26th Street, New York City.

The American Baptist Publication Society, George L. Estabrook, Treasurer, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Alice M. Hudson, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board of the Northern Baptist Convention, E. T. Tomlinson, D.D., Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Board of Education of the Northern Baptist Convention, Frank W. Padelord, D.D., Executive Secretary, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Inquiries concerning ANNUITIES and WILLS addressed to any officer named will be held as confidential and will receive prompt attention.

Annuities

On one life the rate of income varies from four to nine per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

On two lives the rate of income varies from four to eight and three-tenths per cent a year, interest payable semi-annually.

Samples of these Single and Double Contracts will be sent to you on request.

"Where your heart is, there should your treasure go."

THE BAPTIST INSTITUTE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Exceptional opportunity for women in Bible study, Religious Education and in Practical Methods. For catalogue write

President, J. MILNOR WILBUR, D.D.
1425 Snyder Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Tuition and room-rent free. Scholarships available to approved students.

Seminary within 13 miles of Philadelphia. Seminary's relations to University of Pennsylvania warrant offer of the following courses:

1. REGULAR COURSES FOR PREACHERS AND PASTORS. Seminary Degree of B. D. or Diploma.
2. TRAINING FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE. Seminary and University. Degrees of B. D. and A. M.
3. TRAINING FOR ADVANCED SCHOLARSHIP. Seminary and University. Degree of Th. M. at Seminary, and Ph. D. at University.

For information address REV. MILTON G. EVANS, LL.D., President, Chester, Pa.

maining five months of their furlough at Mr. Baker's home in Kentucky. They spent the first months of their furlough in Freehold, N. J.

THE FIRST CHURCH, Anderson, Ind., S. W. Powell, pastor, held a union daily vacation Bible school, with an enrolment of 200, and a teaching staff of seven. Miss Anna Conway, chairman of the church's committee on education, was principal.

Young People's Assembly

(Continued from page 880)

women; and Rev. Leon B. Shorey, state director of religious education and dean of the assembly.

Rev. Floyd L. Carr of the Board of Education, Rev. G. Clifford Cress of THE BAPTIST, and Rev. Thomas Gales of Fargo, N. D., secretary of the state Antisaloony League, were special speakers.

The week-day assembly schedule consisted of classes in the morning, study and recreation including swimming in the afternoon, and inspirational addresses in the evening followed by vespers by the campfire, led each night on some phase of the life service theme by a group of delegates. Friday night was "stunt night."

At the morning worship service on Sunday, Dr. A. M. Petty delivered a sermon on, "Our Unlived Years," a plea for a life consecrated to the work of the Master. At the "Onward" session in the afternoon, Dr. W. E. Chalmers gave the address and made the call for life consecration. Rev. A. P. Mihm preached on "The Work of the Young People in the Church of Today," at the evening worship service. At the consecration service thirty-three young people signified their desire to follow the Lord's leading and became new members of the Life Service League of the state.

The B. Y. P. U. pennant which was offered to the group having the greatest number of mileage points and having registered previous to coming to the assembly was awarded to the Grand Forks delegation which had nine members coming 138 miles each. The largest delegation was from the Fargo First church which sent eleven. The group coming from the farthest distance was that from Van Hook which came 235 miles by nearest rail computation. All were thoroughly pleased with the assembly and plan larger delegations for next year.

DURING THE REBUILDING of the First church, Columbus, Ohio, services have been held in the city's largest downtown theater. Night audiences frequently numbered between 1200 and 1400. The church has united to hold services with the Broad Street Methodist church. Dr. D. F. Rittenhouse, pastor of First church, will occupy the pulpit during the absence of the Methodist minister. Upon his return, the two will alternate the preaching. Baptists hope to be in their new building early in the fall.

ELEVEN NATIONALITIES were represented in the enrolment of the daily vacation Bible school held during July by the South Park Baptist church, Los Angeles, Calif., which numbered nearly 200. Dr. Gordon Palmer returned from his vacation Aug. 1 and was greeted by large congregations.

EVANGELIST AND MRS. J. W. HICKERSON conducted a campaign at Donna, Texas, V. N. Hailey, pastor, which resulted in sixty additions to the church, thirty-one by baptism, and ten volunteers for special work.

TWO HUNDRED PEOPLE were registered for the Kiski summer assembly, Rev. R. G. Pierson, Pittsburgh, dean. A number of diplomas were presented at the commencement exercises which closed the assembly.

THE FIRST CHURCH, New Plymouth, Ida., Henry Jacobs, pastor, dedicated its new building June 20-27. All the excavating for the building, sand and gravel hauling and drayage was done by members of the church free of charge. The electrical wiring, with all material, was donated. During July and August, fellowship gatherings are held after the evening services.

REV. M. JOSEPH TWOMEY, for some years pastor of the Peddie Memorial church, Newark, N. J., has been unanimously called to become the pastor of the Temple church, Los Angeles, Calif. Doctor Twomey has not signified his acceptance of the call as he wishes to visit the field before giving his final answer. This church, made famous by the charter ministry of Robert Burdette and for the past fifteen years universally known through the unique ministry of J. Whitcomb Brougner, presents a great challenge and a wonderful opportunity to the pastor-elect should he accept the call.

THE VACATION SCHOOL of the First church, Melrose, Mass., Rev. Walter E. Woodbury, pastor, had an enrolment of 409. There were thirty-one Catholics enrolled. Forty volunteer helpers assisted the faculty. The average attendance was 30 per cent higher than last year.

REV. WILLIAM H. LEACH, editor of religious literature for George H. Doran Company, New York, is leaving that city in order to give more attention to the editing and promoting of Church Management, a ministers' trade journal published at Cleveland, Ohio. He will continue his relationship with George H. Doran Company as editorial adviser.

REV. H. LEE MCLENDON, pastor of First church, Centralia, Ill., preaches at Albany Park church, Chicago, during August.

Editor's Notes on the Lesson for September 5

THE TENT OF MEETING
Lesson Text: Exod. 33:16. Golden Text: Exod. 33:11

Thus far in the development of the Israelites since they left Egypt they have received the law and have been organized by Moses into groups. The present lesson concerns itself with the arrangements for worship.

The Place of Worship

As the people were on the march and lived in tents it was natural and fitting that the place of worship should also be a tent. Elaborate and minute directions are given in Exodus which were designed to guide Moses and the people in planning the architecture of the tent and in conducting the worship. The lesson which follows next week deals with this subject. But the main point in this lesson is the tent of meeting or the place of worship. It is quite true that God is spirit, as Jesus taught, and that those who worship him can worship in spirit and truth without regard to place or time or authoritative ritual. And yet so long as the family depends for its unity and perpetuation upon an established home in some definite location and in some fixed dwelling, and so long as education finds its most efficient tool in buildings equipped as classrooms, libraries and laboratories, religion will be served best by worship conducted in temples, synagogues and meeting houses where the people gather at stated times to give expression to their appreciation of spiritual things. That is the explanation of all places of worship from the primitive tent pitched under the shadow of Mount Horeb to the elaborate cathedral of St. Peter in Rome.

The Purpose of Worship

The simple purpose of worship stripped of all contributory aids and divested of all secondary objects is to enable the worshiper to express his feeling of reverence for God. Deep in the heart of humanity is the sense of reverence. Sometimes the sense of reverence is hardly distinguishable from the emotion of fear, but there it is in all men unless atrophied by disuse or perverted to wrong use. The purpose of worship or the principle of worship should always be distinguished from the practices of worship. The practices of worship are as varied as the different religions of the world. Even in Christian worship the forms of worship run all the way from the unadorned approach to God of the Quakers to the elaborate pageantry of the Roman Catholics. But both devout Quakers and Catholics who are spiritually-minded seek to realize the presence of God when they worship. The place of worship is created and sustained by the conscious need of humanity for the worship of God. Let us not forsake the house of God.

DOCTOR STILWELL, superintendent of evangelism for the Northern Baptist Convention, supplied the pulpit of First church, Doylestown, Pa., Aug. 8 and 15 in the absence of the pastor, Wiley Roy Deal.

AFTER SERVING the First church of Home-

(Continued on page 892)

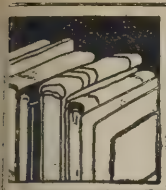

Noble Instruments, Nobly Built
HALL ORGANS
West Haven, Conn.

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 2
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO. HILLSBORO, OHIO

New Books

at the First, by John A. Hutton, D. D. New York: Doran. $1.25.

This volume of Doran's "Little Books of the Christian Life" sets a high standard for the series. Classic English and sturdy thought go hand in hand in exposition of the characteristics of those who began the day of the Christian movement. Commonplaces live again in new beauty of expression and rare thoughts have an appropriate dress of language. The prevailing abstractness of the design is illumined by striking illustrations.

—GEORGE EMERSON HAYNES.

Looking Toward the Heights, by Rev. D. C. S. Wallace. Nashville, Tenn.: Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. $1.60.

The young people of today will not be deterred to devote their lives to Christian service on the basis of transient emotional appeals. There is no question but that they are as ready as any group in former days to meet the challenge of noble ideals and worthy purposes. Here is a series of ten stirring sermons carefully written by Doctor Wallace, pastor of Eutaw Place Baptist church, Baltimore, with the foregoing thoughts in mind. They form a series which he delivered before the College of William and Mary. Each theme is attractive and deals with a great central truth in religious experience. The author exalts Christ as the guide of men and the one alone in whom is to be found the life and strength and conquering power to meet the world's present and future needs.

—C. R. OSBORN.

The Vision of High Ideals, by William George Jordan. New York: Revell. 50 cents.

Mr. Jordan has the rare faculty of being clear and epigrammatic. He takes subjects that are threadbare because so many people have handled them and with the touch of his genius reclothes them in colorful garments yet in good taste. Here are three essays that are well worth reading. The first gives title to the book, the second deals with the changing emphasis, and the third is not only a definition but a glowing description of that volatile thing called spirituality.

—JOHN A. EARL.

School Keeps Today, by Margaret Ashmun. New York: Macmillan. $1.75.

This is the story of the every-day life of a little girl who lives in the country, goes to a country school and plays with country children. There is a father who composes verses for every occasion, and another who is never too tired to plan ever surprises. The small pleasures of a child's life are brought out in a way which makes the book wholesome reading for the child from eight to ten. Family ties, mutual helpfulness and respect are stressed.

—E. R. BROWN.

China, an Analysis, by Frank J. Goodnow. Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press. $2.

The author is familiar with China from personal contact and from the study of a trained observer. In the years 1913-14 he was legal adviser of the government for the Chinese republic, and is therefore entirely friendly to China. But the book is not a plea; it is, as its title indicates, an analysis. On the basis of physical characteristics and origins, he studies the economic, intellectual, philosophical, social and political life of the Chinese people, discusses modern conditions and the future of China. The arrangement of material is orderly, the composition graceful and at the same time simple, and the assemblage of facts fairly covers the subject. One rises from the reading with an increased appreciation of the Chinese.

For a single instance among many, consider the statement that on land that has been cultivated 4000 years the Chinese farmer can beat the American farmer raising wheat.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

Two Young Arabs, by Amy E. Zwemer. West Medford, Mass.: Central Committee on the United Study of Foreign Missions.

The junior foreign mission study book for this year portrays the adventures of Jameel and his sister Noorah, who accompany their father on his pilgrimages to all the great Mohammedan shrines of the world, seeking peace for his soul. They end their search at Jerusalem by finding that peace in Jesus Christ.

—ELMER KIRKPATRICK.

Influencing Human Behavior, by H. A. Overstreet. New York: The People's Institute Publishing Company.

Professor Overstreet gave a course of lectures in the New School for Social Research in New York City. A rather miscellaneous group of people came to him with a "desire to utilize as a part of our everyday technique of action such knowledge as modern psychology can furnish us," and requested him to show them how. The lectures were his answer and the book contains the lectures. They are simply rich—rich in conception, rich in originality, rich in suggestiveness and stimulation. The intellectual dead-line, social pietism, clichés, "the son of a sloganeer," "the amours of a high-powered sheik"; criticisms of the home, the church, the school; all these and a thousand more must have made these lectures a constant delight to hear as they are to read. And the book is not a mere string of smart sayings. It is an exposition of the latest and most mature psychology in terms of everyday life. There is hardly a page that will not be, not only in relation to the whole discussion but also in and of itself, both highly interesting and highly useful to the person who has to deal with other persons in situations where influence counts.

—U. M. MCGUIRE.

"Quit Your Worrying," by George Wharton James. Boston: Page. $1.50.

Another of the many books which assail worrying as a bad habit and point out the remedy for it. The reader is almost led to worry over the amount of space given to the subject. The book is written in a popular style and bears the marks of having been delivered many times as lectures to Chautauqua audiences. Causes and characteristics of worry are described at great length and all the relationships in which worrying plays a disastrous part are held up as a horrible example of wasted energy. But on the whole the message of the book is wholesome and exposes with pitiless frankness the morbid attitude of mind which too many people cultivate.

—JOHN A. EARL.

Sermons in Action, by Henry T. Sell. New York: Revell. $1.25.

These fifty quick-action stories of interesting happenings, each introduced by a verse of scripture, afford the keenest enjoyment, at the same time inciting to the best action. These five-minute story-sermons show that right action, even under adverse conditions, brings gain. Each story is rich in its every-day application. Practical hints are given as to how the stories might be illustrated with black-board and with objects. Pastors, teachers, parents, will find the book helpful as an aid in the preparation of junior sermons, Bible-school lessons, or as a story-book.

—F. H. FAHRINGER.

The Baptist

Chicago, August 28, 1926

Vol. VII

No. 30

THE BAPTIST is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Rates: Single subscription $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage $1.04 extra; in Canada 52 cents.

Change of address: Old and new addresses should be in our hand two weeks before a change goes into effect. Give key number as it appears on label. Remittances: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment is through change of label date. If check on local bank is sent, add exchange.

Renewal notice will be sent previous to date to which subscription is paid. Subscriber should send in renewal promptly or, if paper is not desired send discontinuance order.

Advertising: Display: Per agate line, 30 cents; full page, $125. No time or space discounts. Classified: 6 cents per word. Obituaries: 100 words free; 4 cents per word for additional; resolutions printed verbatim, 4 cents per word; cash to accompany order.

Correspondence should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, 2320 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No manuscripts returned unless accompanied by full return postage.

Please mention "The Baptist" when writing to advertisers.

Here, There and Everywhere

(Continued from page 890)

stead, Pa., as interim pastor for three months, Rev. H. E. Shade has accepted the unanimous call of the church to become its pastor. For several years Mr. Shade has been successfully engaged in evangelistic work, making his home in Pittsburgh.

ON AUG. 2, John R. Estes, pastor of First church, Delavan, Wis., with his family, started on a tour through northern Wisconsin and around Lake Michigan to Muskegon, where he preached on Aug. 15; thence to Winona, Ind., for a few days. Rev. Ralph Hobbs of Lansing, Mich., supplied the pulpit at Delavan Aug. 8 and 15. July 8 two adults were baptized.

THE HAMILTON SQUARE CHURCH of San Francisco has installed one of the largest electric church signs on the Pacific coast. A successful vacation school has closed in which the women of the church rendered substantial assistance. A unique feature of the school was the electric map of Palestine which said "Yes" or "No" as the localities were pointed out. Twenty-one of the young people were present at the Asilomar conference at which Brother Laurel I. Sweitzer was elected president of Northern California B. Y. P. U. The church has been greatly prospered and looks forward to a profitable season of evangelization.

THE SUMMER ASSEMBLY of Montana Baptists was held July 20-30. The number taking courses was greater than the attendance at the state convention gathering in May, and approximately 50 per cent greater than last year. Ninety-six registered for and finished the courses. The total registration was 128, with more than 200 present on Sunday, July 25. Dr. E. R. Curry gave the coronation address and forty-six new recruits were added to the Life Service League. The faculty was an outstanding one, consisting of visitors and local pastors. This assembly is the only one in the Northern Convention conducted by volunteer help. Other states have a director of religious education to lead, but the assembly commission, consisting of Rev. Robert W. Shaw, president; Rev. E. Clutterbuck, dean; Rev. T. L. Huxley, business manager; and Miss Berna Brown, secretary-treasurer, has charge of the assembly in this state. It was voted to name the assembly grounds "Templed Hills," a significant name.

H. A. HALVERSON, 2734 N. Artesian avenue, Chicago, reports himself available for pulpit supply, without charge if necessary. He also has a free popular lecture which he will give for the benefit of the church.

THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY of the coming of Dr. E. W. Clark into the Naga Hills of Assam was celebrated at Impur Apr. 1-4. A tabernacle was erected by Impur school boys to accommodate 3000. Since the first convert to Christianity there have been 8973 baptisms recorded and there are now churches in fifty-three villages. On one evening school boys gave a pageant setting forth the history of the mission. On Sunday morning a lesson was taught to a class of 2000, and 3400 gathered for the mid-day meal. The question as to how Ao Christians can increase the kingdom of God and prayers for the conversion of nearby tribes had an important part in the discussions. The winning of the whole Ao tribe has been set as an objective.

ALTHOUGH THE WOMEN are hard to reach and in many villages do not hear the gospel by coming to meet it but by having it brought to them by evangelistic groups, Mrs. A. V. Wakemans, wife of many strong and noble Christians, in the Moanza church, Belgian Congo. One woman came in recently, a day's journey, with five girls whom she had previously won to Christ and a new convert who wished to be baptized.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN IMRIE, evangelistic singers of Springfield, Mo., have been engaged in successful tent meetings this summer at Gideon, Hornersville, and Holcomb, Mo. They are now making their slate for the fall and winter.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Pleasantville, N. J., recently dedicated its new church house, considered one of the finest buildings in the city. It is of Gothic structure and built of Foxcroft stone. Rev. Samuel G. Neil preached both morning and evening of dedication Sunday. Rev. Thomas Cross and Rev. Vincent B. Howlett, of Atlantic City, and Rev. R. B. Mahoney, pastor of the Seaview church, with Rev. G. Woodvine Ball, pastor of the church, assisted in the dedication services. Mr. Ball came to this church in April, 1924, from the First church of Attica, N. Y.

The Saving Sense

"What does the word 'furlough' mean, Jane?" asked a school teacher.

"A mule. I have a book at home that says so."

"Well," said the teacher, interested. "You bring the book to school and we'll see about it."

The next day Jane brought the book and displayed a picture of a soldier standing beside a mule.

Below the picture were the words: "Going home on his furlough."

Genuine Leather Footballs, $1 each. They won't last long.—Ad in Marietta Register.

A candidate hurrying to address a political meeting ran into a friend who asked, "What do you think of the political situation now?"

"Don't bother me!" replied the politician. "This is no time to think! I've got to make a speech!"

Mr. Levy took little Abie to the movies and purchased only one ticket.

"You must have a ticket for your son," said the doorman.

"Mister," said Levy, "I gif you my woid as a gentleman he von't look!"

For RALLY DAY

"Go Forward"

THIS new Rally Day program of 16 pages is complete with songs, recitations, Scripture reading, and exercise. The new material in this service cannot be secured elsewhere. Start the fall and winter work right by using this bright, inspiring program.

$6.00 a hundred; $3.25 for fifty. 80 cents a dozen; single copies, 7 cents each

We also have a complete stock of all Rally Day necessities:

Invitation Cards Offering Envelopes
Promotion Certificates
Novelties and Souvenirs

Send to Our Nearest Branch for Illustrated Price-List of Rally Day Supplies

The American Baptist Publication Society

1701-1703 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

16 Ashburton Place, Boston
125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago
313 W. Third Street, Los Angeles

1107 McGee Street, Kansas City
439 Burke Building, Seattle
223 Church Street, Toronto

Order from Our Nearest House

Volume VII

September 4, 1926

No. 31

The Baptist

III
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
LIBRARY

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

SEP 2 1926

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

CHAPULTEPEC CASTLE—THE HOME OF MEXICO'S PRESIDENTS

Folks, Facts and Opinion

Rev. W. M. Walker, one of the most highly esteemed ministers of Canada, passed away at London, Ont., Aug. 9, in his seventy-fourth year. He was a notable scholar, an unusually successful pastor and a leader in Baptist affairs in Canada.

Pres. Jeremiah W. Jenks of Alexander Hamilton institute has an article in the Japan Advertiser in which he places a high value upon the Institute of Pacific Relations held in Honolulu last July. He thinks that its discussion of race relations and particularly of the immigration policy of the United States contributed much toward a better understanding. A permanent organization was formed and regular meetings will be held for further research and discussion.

The League of Nations is going after war in the first thorough-going effort in history to find out the actual causes of international conflict. It has called an international economic conference, to be composed not of political representatives but of experts. The range of investigation is practically limited only by the range of available subject matter for investigation. It will include population, resources, production, distribution, markets, labor conditions, legislation as affecting economic conditions, all with widely ramifying subdivisions. A specific object of the studies is to find the economic road to international peace.

The Baptist Record of Iowa has a piece of wise advice to churches that, dissatisfied with certain action of the Northern Baptist Convention, resolve to discontinue missionary support. It reminds them that the way to express their convictions is through representatives on the floor of the convention rather than a financial scuttling of the missionary work of the denomination. It says: "The heathen world is still strong and we cannot afford to harass from the rear the few outposts of Christianity that are now facing it." Concerning the loyalty of our missionaries, it remarks with fine insight: "There can be little doubt that the great majority of the consecrated men and women who are devoting their lives to carrying the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth are untainted by the teachings objected to by the strictest of the Baptist brotherhood. If some of them, by chance during their period of study, are led to substitute the philosophies of men for the doctrine of the Word, they are certain to find, if they are in reality children of God, that the foreign field is not the place for the application of these philosophies. We, at least, have never heard one who has spent a few years in heathen lands who was able to put his trust in anything else than the power of God."

The federal government in cooperation with states affected is developing a movement to reclaim and settle arid, cut over and swamp lands. It is now seeking to locate tracts available for the purpose. The plan of development is not yet announced.

One place has been discovered in the world where the inhabitants are not said to hate the United States. It is Guam. Eleven congressmen visited the place last year, spent three fine days looking around, behaved themselves well, and it is reported the natives desire to become citizens of the United States.

The prospect of the entrance of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice may be judged by the fact that up to date five nations have accepted the American reservations, namely: Cuba, Liberia, Greece, Albania and Uruguay. Why those five did so has not yet been ascertained.

"What is to become of the colored churches of America is a problem pressing with unwelcome insistence upon thinking men and women," declares the Storer Record. "The reports from theological seminaries indicate that there is a constantly decreasing number of men entering seminaries; that the percentage of men now occupying pulpits whose educational attainments include a bachelor's degree from a reputable college, is amazingly small and that the additions to the clerics of the day are increasingly ill prepared for the sacred calling. There must be an about face and that at once."

A phase of the Catholic boycott in Mexico is noted in the New York Times by Arturo M. Elias, consul general in Mexico in the United States. He quotes the following language of the boycott order: "Refuse to pay rent, light and telephone bills and stop all classes of payments until this brings serious danger."

Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Axling, Baptist missionaries in Tokyo, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary May 21. The services were held in Misaki Tabernacle with Mr. Tota Fujii presiding. Though Dr. Yugoro Chiba of the Baptist church they received an appropriate gift. Misses S. Saski and Y. Fuzawa provided music. Speeches of felicitation were delivered by Mr. S. Saito, Baron Yoshiro Sakatani, Prof. Masaharu Anezaki and Rev. Moto Watanabe.

Dr. C. Judson Herrick, professor of neurology in the University of Chicago says in a new book: "No metaphysical postulate of necessity in the theological sense of foreordination, no fatalistic mythology of a bygone age which envisages man as a puppet all of whose acts are determined from without his own personality, no mechanistic scheme which recognizes no patterns of vital energy different from those of physical chemistry as manifested in semi-permeable membranes and fat-soluble vitamins—none of these favorite devices of an oversimplified physiology measures up to the requirements of an adequate statement of the problem of human life." That ought to settle it.

Rev. S. D. Bawden, missionary at Kavalu, has an idea for the solution of a highly difficult problem. He may state it. He says: "What I should like to be able to do, would be to have money enough to purchase a block of some hundreds of acres, or to pay the taxes on a block of that kind if it could be secured from the government, and then money enough to work through a cooperative society in financing a group of people who were willing to leave their own villages and form a new village under my direction and advice, and then make it possible for the man who really wanted to work and make good for himself and his family, to acquire a portion of it for his own. The plan is full of difficulties and you are almost sure to sink money in it that you will never get out again, but my experience in the settlement work ought to be of some value in working out such a plan. I would not limit it to Christians, but to needy ones who had character enough to make the experiment and to make good on the land. I believe we could win the non-Christians who entered such an experiment to become Christians, but I should not want to try the experiment on a half-hearted scale."

Index

	Page
FOLKS, FACTS AND OPINION...	894
BAPTISTS AND THE WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER, BY ROBERT A. ASHWORTH	896
EDITORIAL	897
THE WORLD IN TRANSIT, BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR	899
AT LOURDES, BY WINFRED ERNEST GARRISON	900
IS THERE RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN MEXICO? BY GONZALO BAEZ CAMARGO	901
DEVOTIONAL LIFE—THE LIGHT THAT IS DARKNESS, BY J. C. CARLISLE	903
THE CHIMNEY CORNER	904
BOYS AND GIRLS	905
YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE KINGDOM	905
CHURCHES AT WORK	907
AMONG OURSELVES	903
NEW BOOKS	912
EDITOR'S NOTES ON THE LESSON ..	914

It would seem queer not to be asking on Easter comes, but it is announced that the plan of the League of Nations to fix a fixed date set for Easter has met with almost universal approval from the nations who replied to the league's questionnaire, according to copies of the league's official journal which have just been received at the department of state.

For real newsy news of foreign mission work, one of the most interesting of current periodicals is the Congo News Letter, a pamphlet of forty pages published quarterly by the fifty missionaries of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society at work in the Congo country. Give it a free advertisement unsolicited. Send twenty-five cents to Editor, Congo News Letter, Banza Manteke, via Kinshasa, Congo Belge, W. C. Africa, and give it for a year.

A two-day ministers' conference for laymen of all denominations will be held at the Hartford seminary Sept. 13-14, in this institution's new buildings in Hartford. The leader will be Dr. John Timmer Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, and his general theme will be the vital mission of the church. In the five sessions to be held will treat the theme in relation to the preacher, the pastor, the membership, the community, the nation and the world. Addressing will be provided at the seminary facilities.

Perhaps one of the most significant of signs of the new development of missions is Shanghai college. Founded by northern and southern Baptists jointly, it opened in 1908 with four students. Now it has 400. Its present plant cost $1,164,000, and it is dreaming of donations and endowment to the amount of $1,500,000 in the near future. "The college now includes over eighty members, at one-third foreign and two-thirds Chinese, nine of the latter being returned students." It has already graduated over 100 students and given partial training to more than 1000.

A public conference on education and industry at which leaders of some of the nation's greatest industries will discuss the outlook for 1927, will be held Oct. 27 at the University of Chicago under the auspices of the university and the Institute of American Meat Packers, the National Trade and Research Association of the American meat packing industry, and with the cooperation of the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Commercial Club of Chicago, the Industrial Club, and committees from leading industries of Chicago. Dwight W. Brown, a member of J. P. Morgan and Company, New York, will discuss the "Outlook for Finance" at the conference. Discussions are being extended to other nationally known executives to discuss the outlook for 1927 of the oil, metal, communication, printing and publishing, automobile industries, and also the outlook for science and industry generally. It is expected that leading business and industrial executives, bankers, and others from various parts of the country will attend.

Japan has recently enacted a law, it is said, which will provide for the compulsory military training on R. O. T. C. lines of 475,000 pupils in the schools, and will also give some training annually to one million and one-half young Japanese who are not in the schools.

Bahaism claims one million followers in Persia, Turkestan, India, Burma, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, France and the United States. It is an eclectic religion holding that there is some degree of the true light of God in each of the great religions. In Persia its adherents are at present suffering persecution on the supposition that it encourages revolution.

A closed season for mussels is proposed by the bureau of fisheries, and the proposal is already in force in several states.

Representatives of the Disciples of Christ have been investigating complaints and criticisms of the missionary policy of the denomination in China, Japan and the Philippines. They report that co-operative educational and hospital work where it is now practiced is necessary and ought to continue, that open membership is not practiced in the churches on those fields and that affiliated student membership is discontinued.

(Continued on page 906)

A Most Vital Factor

in Church School training and in preparing the youth for their duties as Baptists is the sort of Lesson Helps and Periodicals used in your Sunday School.

The big denominational task is an educational one and it will not receive proper whole-hearted support where non-Baptist literature is used. Baptist conscience and loyalty do not thrive on non-denominational teaching. Baptist literature is essential in all Baptist Sunday Schools if we would have the next generation of our young people grow into world-visioned, missionary-minded, denominational-supporting Baptist men and women.

There is a reason for a Baptist Church, association, state and national conventions, for Baptist missionary societies, colleges, seminaries and other institutions, and there is the same fundamental reason for Baptist Sunday School Literature.

We discredit no reputable non-denominational publisher of Sunday School helps, but we do insist that Baptist Sunday Schools using Baptist publications get the best results in increased church membership and loyal supporters of denominational enterprises.

There are four main objectives in the Sunday School publications issued by the Publication Society:

- First, Individual Life Choices.
- Second, Christian Living.
- Third, Evangelism.
- Fourth, Missions.

We stand squarely against any teaching that questions the spiritual authority of the Bible or the deity and atoning ministry of Christ.

Not one dollar made by the Society is used for private gain.

Lesson Helps and Periodicals for all departments of the Church School are issued by the Publication Society including Uniform, Group Uniform, and Closely Graded Lessons. Every need of every Sunday School, large or small, can be properly filled.

If your Sunday School is not using Baptist literature in all of its work, let us send you our new Illustrated Prospectus fully describing our publications. Better still, send for samples of our literature and let us tell you just how it can be adapted to your own particular requirements.

The American Baptist Publication Society
1701-1703 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

16 Ashburton Place, Boston
125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago
313 W. Third Street, Los Angeles

1107 McGee Street, Kansas City
439 Burke Building, Seattle
223 Church Street, Toronto

Order from Our Nearest House.

Baptists and the World Conference on Faith and Order

By ROBERT A. ASHWORTH

THERE is to meet in Lausanne next summer the World Conference on Faith and Order. There will be gathered in Switzerland representatives of practically every communion in Christendom, except the Roman Catholic, to discuss together for an entire month questions of doctrine and polity which are at issue among the disciples of our Lord. The Universal Conference at Stockholm last summer dealt with practical questions of life and work and found them to be of a sufficiently tough fiber; the conference at Lausanne will concern itself with the still more difficult and prickly problems of faith and order.

Since the project was initiated more than sixteen years ago by the Protestant Episcopal church of our own country, much has been done to further it by the discussion and definition of its object and the enlistment of the support of other bodies of Christians. With a patient and persistent devotion which is beyond praise, in the face of apathy and opposition, the Episcopal commission charged with the task of the promotion of the conference has been pressing upon the conscience of Christendom the duty of facing intelligently and bravely the nature and causes of its unhappy divisions, which grievously weaken the witness and influence of the church in our day.

The Object of the Conference

The avowed object of the conference is to discover what are "the next steps toward unity." It will not be authorized to take these steps, only to study and to report what, in its judgment, these steps may be. It can commit no communion to any statement or course of action. It may report findings but not pass resolutions—a real if somewhat delicate distinction.

It is at once a stupendous and a noble enterprise, a great venture of faith, fraught with enormous possibilities of weal to the cause of the kingdom of God. Conceived upon a wide scale, already assured of the cooperation of every major Protestant communion and of the Eastern Orthodox churches, it will undoubtedly constitute one of the great spiritual events of the century. It is difficult to see how anything but good can come of it.

What ought to be the attitude of the Baptist churches toward this undertaking?

In general we are committed to participation in it. It is true that the Southern Baptist Convention will send no delegates, the only Protestant denomination of size to take this attitude, but Baptists from the Northern Convention, from Great Britain, Canada and elsewhere will be there and must assume their share of responsibility for what takes place at Lausanne.

It may be said that since the professed object of the conference is to discover the next steps toward unity, that is, organic union, Baptists are at a peculiar disadvantage, because of their polity and principles, and can hardly hope to make any valuable contribution. They share that disability, perhaps, with all congregational bodies. The very conception of organic union, it may be said, is foreign to the Baptist genius. We recall the report of a distinguished commission presented to the Northern Baptist Convention at Denver, and received with applause by the delegates, which recommended that we refuse even to join in a conference called, if I recall rightly, by the Presbyterians, to discuss the question of organic union with other bodies of Christians on the ground that "Baptist churches do not have organic union among themselves." Nevertheless we are to send delegates to Lausanne.

The executive committee of the Baptist World Alliance for a time evidently viewed the World Conference with disquietude and nervous trepidation, and in a letter to the secretariat expressed its unwillingness to recommend to the various Baptist bodies throughout the world that they appoint delegates until assured "that any statement which Baptist delegates might be impelled to draw up should have a definite place among any findings of the conference." However, the opportunity for "the clear statement and full consideration of those things in which we differ" was definitely provided beforehand by the original resolution of 1910, which announced the call for the conference, and this statement without question will meet the condition laid down by the World Alliance.

A Cross Section of Christianity

It goes without saying that if Baptists have definitely adopted a negative attitude toward organic union on any basis, if they have finally determined the question, and agree with Professor Machen that Protestant reunion is a "wicked and hateful dream," their usefulness at Lausanne will be to that extent limited. But if they can go not devoid of predilections, indeed, but with an open mind, their point of view will be not only a valuable but an indispensable contribution to the common store of Christian idealism assembled there. Lausanne should be a cross section of Christendom and no communion should be absent except that, if there be such, which has no convictions firmly held which it counts to be worth sharing.

It may be that organic union is not feasible for the present, or that it would be undesirable if practicable—that there is a better road to Christian brotherhood and progress. If either of these possibilities be true it were well that we should know it, and no company of men has ever yet gathered more competent to explore and determine them.

Baptists have stood aloof from the proposed conference thus far more than most communions, because of the suspicion that it will be dominated by a doctrine of the church with which they have as little sympathy as any other body of Christians on earth.

It is true that much of the literature that has thus far been circulated by the secretariat responsible for the promotion of the conference, has been strongly colored by the so-called "catholic" conception of the church. To those who hold it the church is an institution founded by Jesus Christ and authorized by him to represent him for all time and in all the world. Its authority to administer the sacraments, through which divine grace is imparted, comes directly from Jesus himself through the first apostles whom he ordained and those whom these ordained as their successors and so on through the ages, an unbroken line of bishops throughout the years from the first century to the present day. To these bishops, thus in the apostolic succession, the authority to appoint the ministers of the church and to endow them with sacramental powers exclusively belongs. This raises, of course, the whole question of the basis of the validity of orders of the ministry of the church.

Two Conceptions Poles Apart

It is a far cry from this conception to the radically low churchmanship of Baptists who recognize no clerical order whatsoever in the strict sense, and who would be content, I suppose, with Dr. T. R. Glover's definition of the church as "simply the voluntary association for the mutual help and service of the world by those who have been saved." It is difficult to see how there can be any reconciliation or compromise between the two conceptions. They are poles apart. Undoubtedly the doctrine of the church, and questions of sacrament and ordination and church order which flow from it constitutes the crux of the question of Christian union. This was the rock upon which the negotiations between the Lambeth bishops and the British Free Church Council foundered, and there was little salvage.

Nevertheless, two things ought to be said. In the first place, our Episcopal brethren, who thus far have wielded the laboring oar in preparation for the conference, ought not to be blamed that so elevated an ecclesiastical tone has characterized the literature which they have set forth. It was inevitable and right that it should be colored by their own sincere convictions. Other denominations with different convictions have given little time, thought, effort or money to the cause of the conference, and need not complain if their point of view has been inadequately expressed. And, in the second place, we need not take for granted that in the World Conference there will not be abundant time and

(Continued on page 916)

The Baptist

EDITOR: JOHN A. EARL
FIELD EDITOR: G. CLIFFORD CRESS

ASSISTANT EDITOR: U. M. McGUIRE
OFFICE EDITOR: JANET T. VAN OSDEL

Entered as second-class matter, February 4, 1920, at the postoffice at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION AT 2320 MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Single Subscription, $2.50 a year. Clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries, postage is $1.04; in Canada, 52 cents.

Giving Evangelism Preferred Treatment

WHEN it is proposed that evangelism shall have preference over other vital things in the program of church activities and the proposal not only goes without challenge but is received with more than ordinary enthusiasm, there must be a reason. Among the various subjects of dispute among evangelical believers these days, evangelism is happily excluded. All parties seem to agree in giving the primary place to evangelism in the work of the church and in the organized service of evangelical agencies. Methods of evangelism leave room for much difference of opinion, but upon the principle of evangelism there is a significant unity of agreement. It is next to impossible to get up an argument against the primacy of evangelism in the specific tasks of the church. Of course, when we get away from the simple proposition of bringing men to God which is the very heart of evangelism and begin to discuss how it shall be done and the terms in which the gospel message shall be preached and the things which shall be asked to believe and do in coming to God, the tests that shall be applied to prove that a soul has come to God, then we get on disputed territory and controversy is likely to ensue. Fortunately, however, there is a wide latitude among evangelical believers in these things and they are willing to make the end of bringing men to God, in whatever way they may be brought, the adequate test of all the means used.

In making the bringing of men to God its primary task, in its continuous inspiration, any religious organization, whether it be a local congregation, a down town mission, a home or foreign missionary society, or a denomination, uses its wisdom. There are organizations outside of the religious forces for everything else; but no fraternal order, no commercial club, no welfare association, no group of any kind except the churches and such institutions are auxiliary to the churches, specializes in bringing men to God. Evangelism is the undisputed work of the churches. In dispensing charity, in promoting community welfare, in fostering free education, in advancing causes filled with high moral value, the churches naturally share with other organizations the responsibility of bearing the burdens of social progress. But in the service of evangelism, as that word is understood by evangelical believers, the churches and their direct auxiliaries bear the burden alone. If men are not brought to God by the churches that most important task will remain undone.

It is the superlative importance of the task that gives it primary and unchallenged place in the building up of the kingdom of God. The high ideal of the brotherhood of man can be increasingly realized only as individuals are brought to see and accept their proper filial relation to the Father. To make men sober, to provide better environment, to secure for workers a living wage, to break down race prejudice, to work for the abolition of war, to oppose every form of unorganized and organized evil, are tasks that require more than human wisdom and courage; but all will be abortive without the spirit that is born in men when they take Jesus Christ seriously and demonstrate by their daily conduct that they have become sons of God. But in addition to the basic place that evangelism occupies in social betterment, it is necessary to recognize the superlative importance of bringing men to God on the ground of maintaining evangelical forces at their highest numbers and efficiency. Race suicide ultimately means the extinction of the race. So a church that merely holds its own will soon have none of its own to hold. Every local congregation must grow in moral character and in spiritual power in order to propagate the species. The very life of the churches depends upon the new lives that are born again. This argument for the unchallenged preference of evangelism in all the tasks of the church is fundamental.

After all, does not the peculiar emphasis on evangelism go unchallenged because it is the one heaven-ordained means of bringing souls into the life of the Spirit? This may be said in 100 other terms. One evangelist may stress sin and the sense of guilt until the soul hungers for the assurance of forgiveness; another may appeal to the idealism that every soul cherishes until his hearers find in Jesus the incarnation of their ideal and begin to realize it in their own lives; a third may call the people to Christ-like service and get an enthusiastic and sincere response to his call; but whatever the motive which actuates a soul to come to God, the results are the same, and we prefer to define the results in terms of life. Apart from the life which finds its source and sustenance in the personal knowledge of the true God and of Jesus Christ who reveals the true God, the soul, if it functions at all, functions without the consciousness of spiritual reality. Evangelism vitalized by the Holy Spirit is the unique means provided by our Lord for bringing the souls of men into conscious and intelligent contact with the life of God. Lacking this energizing touch, the soul, in New Testament phrase, is "dead in trespasses and in sins."

These are some of the reasons why evangelism always has been and always will be the first and most fundamental task of the Christian religion.

"Resolving" and "Signing"

THE caption is borrowed and so is the editorial. Baptist readers have become so thoroughly acquainted with the general trend of discussion in the Southern Baptist Convention that they will appreciate a fresh presentation of the current doctrinal situation from another point of view, as set forth in the following clipping from the Religious Herald, of Richmond, Va.:

"We do not wish to reopen any settled question or to revive any controversy, but we do wish to say once more, as we have said 100 times before, that the best disposition which Baptist people can make of these doctrinal matters is to leave them, where in Baptist history they have usually been left, with the churches and the district associations. Of course it is recognized that in such a policy there may be room for an occasional irregularity. Nothing in this imperfect world works perfectly. We should far better deal with such irregularities, as they may occur, in the usual way than to bring all these disturbing questions into our popular cooperative organizations. This latter policy, now adopted in a measure by both Northern and Southern Baptist Conventions, holds in it the possibilities of endless strife and division.

"Out of the recent wordy warfare there emerged two facts which would be ludicrous, if they were not so pathetic. The first is that there should be found any considerable body of intelligent people who in the stress of discussion bring themselves to believe that great questions in the realm of natural science are to be set at rest by the adoption of resolutions by a Baptist mass meeting, or, for that matter, by any other sort of mass meeting. The truth or falsity of any theory of natural science is to be determined finally by the facts of nature and their rational interpretation. The other fact that challenges us is the prevalent notion that we shall cure our heresies, real or imaginary, by having everybody 'sign up.' We do not know which is the more striking, the insistent demand on the part of certain groups that their brethren should sign elaborate articles of faith, or the intense eagerness on the part of other groups to sign whatever is offered them. We wonder what Baptists of twenty-five years hence will think of all these things!"

A Million Copies a Week

NO, THE caption of this editorial does not refer to THE BAPTIST. We should go wild with enthusiasm if we could trustfully use a headline announcing the fact in capital letters that THE BAPTIST had a circulation of even 10 per cent of a million copies. But that golden day is long deferred. The million copies we refer to consist of the weekly circulation of the ninety periodicals issued by the American Baptist Publication Society. Can we visualize a million copies? Is there any way we can keep a million copies of ninety periodicals from being a mere blur before our vision? Here is an interesting task for some word-puzzle fan to work out in terms of miles the lines of type in a million copies, or to build up a kind of a Babel's tower from so many printed pages laid one on top of the other. A million a week means fifty-two million a year. What does that mean to Uncle Sam's post office department? What revenue do the railroads get out of hauling such a weight of papers? Who can estimate the moral and spiritual power and the educational value of such a volume of religious literature flowing steadily from week to week through the years into all the churches of the Northern Convention? The American Baptist Publication Society is another Northern States Power Company with this difference, that while the latter deals in electrical energy, the former deals in spiritual energy.

Among all the purchasers of advertising space on the pages of THE BAPTIST there is none more liberal or wider awake than our own publishing agency. The managers of the society believe in letting the people know what they have for sale. Everything for the educational work of the church school in the form of series of lessons including text books, and quarterly, monthly and weekly periodicals is furnished by the publication society at prices as low as any in the market considering quality. The society does not sell its publications on the basis of an appeal to loyalty but strictly on the basis of value. The publishing business must meet competition and no maudlin appeal to denominational sympathy or pride will make up for poor management or inferior products. Our own publication society makes no such appeal. It is in the open market buying its supplies at the lowest possible price, producing its goods with a conscience and selling them at fair market value. After the overhead expenses are paid all profits go into the missionary work of the denomination.

The old signs on the grass of city parks used to read "Keep off the grass." But now the signs read, "Citizens take care of your own property." When it gets into the system of a citizen that the parks belong to him in common with all the other citizens, his patriotic pride is awakened, his personal interest is accelerated and he no longer growls about that part of his tax which goes to the extension and beautifying of the parks. In a similar spirit a Baptist should look upon his own publication society. Its management, its property, its products and its yearly turn-over should all be of interest to him, and above all on the Christian basis of cooperation he should see to it that the church of which he is a member does not go elsewhere to buy its Sunday-school supplies.

Our Dream Cities

JOHN saw the perfect city coming down out of the skies. Modern men seem to have taken a fancy to conjure it out of the ground by the magic of scientific and artistic city building. Parks, boulevards, shore lines, sky lines, towers, water fronts, fountains, scenic vistas, subways, public buildings that combine classical architecture with structural steel are springing into being in modern cities almost in a night. Maybe the spiritual mold of that perfect city is all that is coming out of heaven while the art of man and earthly materials will supply its physical body. If so, those who specialize in things of the spirit may well speed up, for the body of the city is in danger of outgrowing its soul. Bootleggers occupy its boulevards.

The World in Transit

BY THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

The Tragedy of Waste Is the Tragedy of Debt

Stuart Chase places the public in his debt for a series of economic studies in things really fundamental. First, he published a book, reviewed in THE BAPTIST some months ago, on "The Tragedy of Waste." More recently he published in the New York Times a study of the foreign investments and loans of the United States in which he confirms and even surpasses estimates repeatedly made on this page. He shows that according to the latest available figures, May 16, 1925, foreign governments owed the United States treasury more than $12,000,000,000. That sum has been considerably reduced since that date by scaling down the debts in settlement. Private American loans to foreign governments amounted to $3,859,000,000, and the amount has since increased to unknown figures. Finally, American money invested in private business undertakings in foreign countries had reached a total of $5,250,000,000. Bringing estimates down to date, Mr. Chase makes the total about $25,000,000,000. The tragedy is in the fact that here are twenty-five billion obstacles to an effective international organization for peace—twenty-five billion pin pricks to excite international ill will.

A Noble Army of Martyrs Praise Thee

The Alabama Baptist quotes Lloyd George, moralizes the effect and tells an interesting piece of history all in one paragraph. Here it is: "Lloyd George, speaking in a Baptist church in London on the coal strike in England, said in part: 'If Christ had appeared in London during a general strike the governmental newspaper would have been obliged to publish his doctrines. Winston Churchill, as a laborer, would have emasculated Christ's sermon on the mount. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, in charge of the police, would have had him watched because of his subversive activities, and the gospel, instead of being finished by the disciples, would have been read from policemen's notes.' The ex-premier of Britain is a politician and may have been playing for popularity; yet he spoke a parable all the time. In times of all war, whether of the political or industrial variety, governments (by censorship) take over the gospel. Not many people know that in time of the war the Alabama Baptist was suppressed and its editor put in jail."

What We May Learn from Those Whom We Refuse To Follow

The National Catholic Welfare Bulletin for July has an article showing how the Catholics operated to combat the social school legislation in Oregon. The story is too long to tell here, but for a lesson in efficiency a study of it is highly recommended. General features of the campaign were the printing and distribution of literature, paid advertising in the newspapers, personal correspondence, public lectures and the radio. One paragraph will give a hint of the method: "For more than three years our paid articles and advertisements have been appearing regularly in some of the great secular papers in the northwest. Portland's largest daily newspaper, various farm publications, some with more than 100,000 paid subscriptions, were the principal mediums employed. Most of these articles were two columns wide by from six to eight inches high, containing approximately 500 words each. Smaller advertisements were also inserted. But rarely was our advertisement a mere announcement of the distribution of free literature and an invitation to the public to write for information. It has been our fixed policy to have every one of these 'ads' or articles carry a definite message, conveying specific information regarding the teachings of the church, refuting erroneous notions about it, etc. In this way, no week has passed within nearly four years, during which we have not sent out from 100,000 to 200,000 printed newspaper messages to the public." Whether such "messages" were marked as advertisements in the papers, the Bulletin does not say.

Salute the Flag and Flout the Constitution

Lawlessness on the part of the American people, deliberate, respectable, prevalent lawlessness, justified on principle by leading organs of public opinion, is the chief peril to the United States. The doctrine is that a dissenting minority has the right to disobey either the laws or the constitution at will, with the corollary that enforcement of the law against a group organized for the purpose and engaged in the act of disobedience is a tyranny which ought to be resisted by every necessary means including fraud and violence. This doctrine repudiates every fundamental principle of American democracy. It leaves the United States without a settled government, subject to the uncertain whims of disaffected groups and exposed to the evils of anarchy. There is a type of patriotism which salutes the flag and kicks the constitution down stairs. If government by the people is ultimately overthrown in this country, patriots of this type will be its destroyers.

One Law Is No More Sacred than Another

Under a constitution freely formed by the people, and subject to orderly amendment by the people, all laws alike are sacred agreements which all citizens are under the most solemn pledge to support. Differences in the moral quality and the social value of laws make no difference in the obligation to obey and enforce them. The legitimate way to get rid of a law that is morally or socially objectionable is to seek its orderly repeal by constitutional and lawful methods. All violators of the law are alike criminals of precisely the grade designated by the law itself, and are enemies of society. They are of the same class morally as the man who for his own profit or at his own pleasure violates a solemn contract. They are lacking in personal honor. They cannot be trusted. He who cannot be trusted to keep faith with his country, cannot be trusted to keep faith with anybody. He who boasts of his integrity and flouts the law is a plain, cheap hypocrite. The man of honor who finds the law for any reason objectionable, obeys the law, announces his objection and proceeds honorably to urge its repeal.

We Are Clearly in but How Shall We Get Out?

William P. Helms, Jr., is running a series of articles of more than ordinary interest in the Chicago Journal of Commerce, showing the amount and economic significance of the indebtedness of the people of the United States. Total indebtedness he shows to be about $122,000,000,000. Annual interest requirements are $7,500,000,000, a sum sufficient to give steady employment to five million workers. He does not seem to have discovered, however, that both principal and interest must be paid out of the earnings of the workers who are employed. That is, he belongs to the class of investigators who are able to pursue inquiries to the point where a problem arises and then suffer intellectual collapse.

At Lourdes

By WINFRED ERNEST GARRISON

A MILLION people every year make a pilgrimage to Lourdes, and yet to most Protestants it seems a place remote and improbable as a point on a travel-itinerary in Europe. It is not remote or inaccessible, except that one feels here that he has slipped abruptly into another century and that its whole atmosphere represents an attitude which is not easily accessible to Protestants. But as to getting to the town of Lourdes, there is no difficulty at all—otherwise a million pilgrims would not come annually. A twelve-hour ride from Paris to Toulouse and an hour or two farther southwest into the fringe of the Pyrenees is all that is necessary. Or if one is following the Route des Pyrenees, which runs from Cerbere at the French-Spanish line on the Mediterranean to Biarritz at the French-Spanish line on the Atlantic, keeping as near as possible to the crest of the range all the way, it is easier still, for Lourdes is on it. It is on it not because it is in the higher Pyrenees, but because the great Pyrenees road winds and diverges considerably to take in important places. So, after crossing the highest pass in these mountains at the Col de Tourmalet, at nearly 7000 feet, it drops in dizzy sweeps into the valley of the Paw and, after digressing into a side-canyon to Cauterets—where Margaret of Navarre and her court once rusticated and amused themselves disreputably by telling the tales of the Heptameron as they were weather-bound on their way home—it comes down a few miles farther to Lourdes before climbing back toward the heights. The snowy range is in sight. Rounded little green mountains are all about. The Paw runs white with rapids, and beside a sharp crook in the stream is a castle-crowned crag which Charlemagne once stormed when it was held by the Moors. The old town grew up under the shelter of the castle and at the foot of the crag.

Of Recent Origin

The fame of Lourdes began in 1858. In that year the young peasant girl, Bernadette Subirons, saw eighteen appearances of the Virgin Mary in a grotto under a hill across the river from the town, and heard the apparition say, "I am the Immaculate Conception," and received the command to tell the priests to build a chapel there and to visit the grotto with processions. Only three years before, Pope Pius IX, by what seems like an experimental use of the infallibility which was not formally claimed until later, had promulgated the dogma of the immaculate conception. The statement of the apparition was, in the words of Georges Bertrin, "the definition of heaven after the definition of earth." Neighbors flocked to see the place of the vision. A spring burst forth. A blind peasant whose eyes had been destroyed by an explosion in a mine had his sight restored by application of the water. Four years later, after about thirty other cures had been reported, the Bishop of Tarbes attested the authenticity of the appearance of the Virgin and approved the pilgrimages. Papal approval followed. Bernadette took the veil, died at the age of thirty-four, and was beatified. And Lourdes became the greatest healing shrine and place of pilgrimage in the Catholic world.

The striking thing is that it is all so new. In a region where half the towns have a history dating from the time of the Romans and the other half have towers or churches of the twelfth or thirteenth century, here is a record of miracles beginning less than seventy years ago and coming down to right now. It is hard to appreciate the contemporary character of the events until one sees a shop for the sale of rosaries, crucifixes and souvenirs, one of hundreds, with the sign, "Pierré Subirons, son of J. M. Subirons, brother of Bernadette."

LOURDES

From the old town one crosses a bridge and enters the broad Esplanade des Processions, a double boulevard 400 yards long. At the end, beyond a small plaza, rise the two churches, one over the other. The lower church, Byzantine in style, is at the foot of the hill. Two ramps, like curved arms embracing the open square before the church lead to a broad terrace on its roof which forms a platform before the Gothic upper church, the basilica. Every stone in the interior of the lower church is inscribed with the name of the donor in memory of benefits received from Our Lady of Lourdes. Most of the benefits are cures but others have to do with the conversion of friends, the solution of domestic difficulties, the winning of law-suits and one donor records his gratitude for the honors paid to Christopher Columbus in 1892—which seems to indicate that here at least considerable latitude is allowed in ascribing fortunate events to the influence of the Virgin. The inner walls of the upper church are covered, from floor to lofty roof, with ex votos of the most varied character.

The Heart of Lourdes

On the right side of the hill, as one faces the churches are hydrants where one may drink water piped from the miraculous spring; the piscines, or bathing places, where the sick are dipped in the healing waters; and the grotto itself. The grotto is the heart of Lourdes. Through it files an endless procession of pilgrims in reverent silence. Before it kneel scores, sometimes hundreds, with arms outstretched. The sick and the crippled are there by dozens, in wheel-chairs and on stretchers. There is no audible prayer, but lips move silently and there is an atmosphere of intense and concentrated supplication. The stretcher-bearers and attendants of the sick are counted by hundreds. They are volunteers serving without pay and living at their own expense. Nearly all of them are men and women apparently much above the average in culture and intelligence. Some are boy scouts.

The high points in the day are the procession and the blessing of the sick at four p. m. and the procession of the flambeaux in the evening. In the afternoon the procession begins with several hundred women in blue and white, followed by several hundred men, all members of organized parties of pilgrims. At present there are large pilgrimages here from England and Holland, as well as smaller ones from various parts of France and Spain. Then follow long files of clergy, and last of all the Holy Sacrament borne under a canopy. The procession moves slowly down one side of the esplanade and back the other to the square before the church. The sick on their stretchers and in their wheeled chairs—perhaps 250 of them—occupy the front places in the crowd packed about sides of the square. The Host is carried slowly before them and the blessing is given. Then follows a special litany for the sick, successive portions of it being in English, French, Dutch, Spanish, and Latin. I imagine there are few more impressive religious services in the world, and none apparently with more impassioned sincerity. Did you ever hear 5000 people, hoping for a miracle of healing, echo antiphonally to the words of a priest, saying: "Lord, that I may see. Lord, that I may see. Lord, that I may hear. Lord, that I may hear. Lord, that I may walk. Lord, that I may walk. Lord, speak but one word and my brother shall be healed"? For people do not pray for themselves alone at Lourdes, but even more for each other. I think I have never seen such a mighty intense effort in cooperative prayer devoted to specific requests. There were no cures that day, so far as I heard, after the service the sick rolled away still hopeful of a delayed answer to their prayers. The sick of the Dutch pilgrimage cheerfully had themselves wheeled into a compartment to have a group picture taken on their stretchers and hospital-chairs.

The night procession with flambeaux (tall candles with paper shades) is an even more impressive spectacle. At dusk the pilgrims gather near the grotto. A column formed, four or six abreast, which moves up one ramp, down the lower church, down the other ramp, around the square, and, when its head again reaches the square, returns back and forth until its whole length has been entered into a compact mass of twinkling candles. I do not know how many people were in the procession. The word "thousands" is so freely tossed about in such occasions that it frequently stands for a few hundred. However, it took the procession twenty-seven minutes to pass my point of observation on the ramp, and I counted it passing me in one measured minute. The marching pilgrims sang a song of sixty verses and at every chorus, "Gloria, ave, ave Maria," lifted high their torches. I judge they went through the hymn three or four times.

Nothing is impressive if enough people do it, or if it is done enough times, and the cumulative effect of the procession was tremendous. The singing itself on such a march was bad. No procession a mile long can keep to a pitch. Sometimes the effect was that of a canon, sometimes mere confusion; but doubtless the angels of heaven could discern the harmony beneath the dissonance. As the procession coiled itself into a compact mass before the church, filling the plaza, and priestly song-leaders beating time with torches gave the pitch and the variety of tune and key was gradually condensed into a splendid unison. There followed a magnificent chanting of the credo to a Gregorian air by the whole assembly including other thousands of spectators who filled the ramps, the porch and the steps of the church and every available point of observation.

The effect of these processions is immensely impressive. There is something wrong with a person who can be indifferent or scornful in the presence of such faith and devotion. Whether the faith is well grounded is quite another matter. About 100 cures a year are reported out of the thousands who come for healing. No one thinks of holding the failures against Our Lady of Lourdes. She simply picks out some to be healed and passes over the others. It would be an arbitrary assertion, based on no research that I have been able to make, to say that the alleged cures are either fraudulent or imaginary. Probably there are actual cures, wonderful cures, even of acute cases. Certainly if faith and expectation, supported and sustained by the faith and prayers of a great company, can produce a healing effect, there is no likelier place for such a result than at Lourdes.

The Pyrenees are full of watering-places with springs which are exploited for their medicinal effect. Some have been visited since the days of the Romans. Most of them are described in the guide-books as being "crowded in summer." There are sixty such on the French side alone. But all together have not so many visitors and so many authenticated cures as Lourdes, whose waters are reported by chemists to have no medicinal value.

To pass from these, "crowded" as they are, to Lourdes is like passing from solitude to a convention. Lourdes is not crowded; it is jammed. The town is a collection of hotels and shops for the sale of "articles of piety" and souvenirs, the hotels are all full and the shops are all busy. I went down a long line of hotels before I found one which had a place for me. When I found it, a pleasant corner room with a balcony overlooking the river cost me about thirty cents a day; room and meals and tips, less than $1 a day. There is no profiteering in Lourdes. The majority of the pilgrims are of the poorer class. It is probably the best place to see the lower middle class from all parts of Europe. Better than Rome it gives a sense of the international character of the Catholic church and its undiminished power over the imaginations and loyalties of its adherents. One gets a new sense of the meaning of the phrase, "the non-rational factor in faith." And one wonders whether religion will not some time learn how to appeal to the ignorant and lowly by a due use of the non-rational factors without becoming irrational, and how to reach people upon the lower levels of intelligence without leaving them there after it has reached them.

The Catholic church is both a religion and a form of government. To realize its power and character as a form of government, go to Rome. To see its strength and weakness as a religion, go to Lourdes.

Is There Religious Persecution in Mexico?

GONZALO BAEZ CAMARGO, VICE-PRESIDENT AND PROFESSOR OF HISTORY, INSTITUTE AND NORMAL SCHOOL, PUEBLA, MEXICO

THE Mexican government respects the religious beliefs of everybody. No creed, rite, or sect is persecuted on account of its religious views. No individual is troubled on account of creeds. As long as their practices do not go on morality or trample the rights of a third person—Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Mormons, Mohammedans or whoever they may be, can hold whatever religious beliefs they like best and practice whatever ceremonies are best to them, without the government troubling them in the least. In this the government merely fulfills the Mexican laws, which grant, insure, and defend absolute liberty of thought and conscience. Article six of the general constitution of the republic says:

"The expression of ideas will not be subject to any judicial or administrative inquiry, except in the event it attacks morality, the rights of a third party, leads to crime, or disturbs the public order."

Article twenty-four: "Every man is free to profess the religious belief he desires and to practice the ceremonies, devotions, and other acts of his sect, either in the churches or in his private residence, when such practice does not constitute a transgression of the law."

Article 130: "Congress may not enact laws establishing or prohibiting any religion whatsoever."

According to the spirit of this law, the Mexican state is thoroughly non-sectarian. It does not forbid or protect any one religion. Whenever the Roman church in Mexico has been able to influence the Mexican legislative body, it has hastened to do so in order to secure the declaration of the Roman Catholic apostolic faith as the state religion to the exclusion of others, and to obtain the official engaging of civil power in the strengthening of that church and the prohibiting and the persecuting of any other. Article four of the constitution of 1824, for instance, reads as follows:

"The religion of the Mexican nation is and will be perpetually the Roman Catholic apostolic religion. The nation protects it by wise and just laws and prohibits the exercise of any other."

But the present constitution grants liberty of conscience, and everybody ought to know the historical fact that this liberty is a liberal conquest snatched from the Catholic clergy at the cost of blood and tremendous sacrifice.

Neither the government nor the law persecutes any religion. The only religious persecution existing in Mexico has been inaugurated by the Roman church itself against free thought, Judaism, Masonry, Protestantism, and against any community that does not think as it thinks. Any one who knows the story of the terrible inquisition in Mexico cannot honestly doubt it. Its archives are kept in the National Museum. Even in recent times, when it is no longer possible to commit such atrocities under the protection of the government, the Roman Catholic church has taken advantage of the fanaticism and ignorance it so tenaciously fosters in the masses to incite them to crime "in behalf of God and religion." Almost every time a religious mob has killed, wounded, stoned or burned, a human being, the excitement has had its root in a Catholic pulpit.

In brief, the Mexican laws nationalize ecclesiastical wealth, prescribe the number of priests and ministers, forbid the exercise of the ministry to non-Mexicans, forbid religious teaching in primary schools. In a country like the United States, where problems and conditions differ from ours, it is difficult to understand such laws as these. But the conduct and proceedings of Romanism in Mexico and in Latin countries have not been hitherto the same as in the United States. What I am saying here has reference to Mexican Romanism and not to Romanism in general.

In 400 years of Mexican history the clergy in Mexico has never resigned itself to the exercise of a merely religious or moral power. At all times it has coveted the domination of national politics and control of the government. Since the time of Father Olmedo, counselor of the conqueror Hernan Cortez, up to the present epoch, its ambition has been direct or indirect political omnipotence. To grasp this control of the government, this kind of ecclesiastical imperialism, Rome has not hesitated to form a political party and meddle directly in the national affairs; of late years, when this open attitude has not been possible, it has been ready to back with its money and its influence every political party, revolution, and coup d'état which it considered favorable to its designs.

The political juggling of the clergy in Mexico has been disastrous for the country. No honest and patriotic student can read without a heartache the bloody pages of our history written by the clerical group. So long as the clergy restricted itself to the beneficent and Christian work of evangelization, it was able to produce saintly and beloved characters like the friars Pedro de Gante and Bartolome de las Casas, the friends, teachers, and leaders of the Indians. But its political plottings have not been able to produce more than traitors and conspirators to the fatherland, such as Archbishop Pelagio Antonio de Labastida y Davalos, the instigator of the French intervention.

Of course, we have great and honored priests in our history: Hidalgo, Matamoros, and Morelos, the leaders of the war for independence. But the Roman clergy, being allies of the Spanish oppression, called Hidalgo "the great Lutheran and heretic," excommunicated him, and deprived him of his priestly vestment; the same thing was done to Matamoros and Morelos.

The fall of the empire of Maximilian was the blow that frustrated the active political intervention of the clergy in national affairs. Since then the laws have maintained the principles of 1857 and 1859, tending to disarm the political enemy of our liberty and to limit its power and its influence, which have been used against constitutional governments. Since 1859 the government of the nation has maintained its liberal and democratic stand, endangered under Diaz and Huerta, but triumphantly assumed by Madero, Carranza, Obregon, and Calles. Nevertheless, although not frankly and openly organized in a political party, the clergy has not ceased to machinate against our democratic institutions. The pulpit, the confessional, the press, and the school are its arms today. It is evident that the teaching of the history of Mexico is adulterated in its schools. The church that excommunicated Hidalgo, our Washington, and Juarez, our Lincoln, can hardly teach boys to love and honor them as the greatest men in Mexico without betraying the doctrine of the infallibility of the church.

There is no religious persecution in Mexico. Neither the government nor the laws attack the beliefs of the Mexican Catholics. The laws and the government intend only to prevent the clergy from making religion a political warfare against our liberal institutions. The better explanation of the law lies in the political history of the clergy.

Does the law nationalize ecclesiastical properties? This is because the clergy has used its money to encourage war and revolution against our liberty.

Does it deport foreign priests? That is because of the number of Spanish priests swallowing the people's bread managing the church affairs against the state, and throwing into the background the Mexican priests.

Does it restrict the number of priests by the legislature of the states? This is because there have been multitudes of them and their unnecessary numbers make for the political recovery of the fallen conservative party, which would certainly endanger our liberties.

Does it forbid religious instruction in primary schools and prevent priests from presiding over them? This is because "religious instruction" in Catholic schools in Mexico has meant hitherto, with few exceptions, to make fanatics and enemies of democracy out of the children training them to resist the liberal laws and endanger the nation's peace.

The clergy has assumed the role of a political party in the history of Mexico and must take the consequences. Its laws are against it, it is not on account of creeds or ceremonies but because of its political attitude, and the role it has played in the national tragedies of the past. I am ready to recognize that there are particular priests wholly consecrated to their ministry, without interfering in the political life of the country. Good priests there are yet of the type of beloved Father Hidalgo, sympathetic with the poor people's needs, trying to save them, to raise them to a higher intellectual, moral and spiritual level, giving true teaching and real culture and doing a fine social work. But they are members of an organization which requires absolute obedience to the pope, and they have to follow the dictates of their superiors. Thus many excellent priests are suffering now the consequences of the misdeeds of their hierarchy.

—Zion's Herald.

The Devotional Life

The Light That Is Darkness

By J. C. CARLISLE, EDITOR BRITISH BAPTIST TIMES

